VICTIMS OF SHIPWRECK ON THE PACIFIC COAST ARE RESCUED AND BROUGHT SAFELY TO EUREKA, CAL.

Ninety Passengers and Crew of Sixty-Five Removed From Ship Without Loss.

Steamer St. Paul Goes on the Rocks Near Point Gorda and Is Total Loss.

The Disaster Was Due to a Heavy Fog Which Sent the Ship Off Her Course.

Eureka, Cal., Oct. 6.—Fast upon the rocks, one and one-half miles south of Point Gorda, and beside the boilers of the old steamer Humboldt, the San Francisco & Portland company's steamer St. Paul, Capt. Randall, lies a total wreck. Its ninety passengers and crew of sixty-five men are safe. Some are on board the steamer Pomona en route to San Francisco, but the greater number are in Eureka, having arrived on the tug Ranger and the steamer Vanguard. The captain and most of the crew are in Eureka. The disaster, it is said, was due to a thick fog. The Ranger came into port last evening at 10:30 o'clock, bringing five passengers and the Vanglard docked shortly before midnight. Capt. Randall states that the disaster was due to the fog and attaches blame to no one. The vessel was on its usual course and the weather was clear until Point Gorda was approached. When the steamer ran into the fog bank, Third Officer Holmes was on the bridge. The first warning he had of danger was the roar of the surf, when he immediately changed the ship's course. A moment later it struck bow first. It now lies with its stern toward land, 200 yards from the beach, with two lines fast ashore.

Capt. Randall was just about to get up and take a look around when the ship struck the rocks. The shock awakened the passengers and the watch below. Considering the circumstances there was unusually good order preserved among all on board, says the captain, and there was no panic or unnecessary confusion.

At 7 o'clock a small boat was sent to the lightship off Blunt's reef, in order that any passing steamer might be signalled. Later a second boat was picked up by the Vanguard, which turned around and went to the rescue. The Vanguard arrived at the scene of the wreck about 2 o'clock and immediately began transferring passengers, three small boats plying between it and the St. Paul carrying passengers. The life-saving crew took off eighteen passengers and transferred them to the Ranger. When the ship was deserted the Ranger started toward Eureka and the Vanguard soon followed. The Ranger met the steamer Pomona a short distance out from the lightship and permitted all but five of the passengers to board it.

Many people were gathered at the wharf to receive any who might have been in distress. Humboldt bar was smooth and the night clear, which accounts for the Ranger being able to enter the port. Shortly before midnight the Vanguard crossed the bar and landed about fifty passengers. Capt. Randall and the ship's officers were on the Vanguard. As many pasengers as can find accommodations will continue the voyage to Portland on the steamer Alliance, which will sail from here for the north this afternoon. The Alliance cannot carry all, however, and arrangements for the remainder will be made. Capt. Randall and the masters of the Ranger and Vanguard consider the St. Paul a total wreck, both ship and cargo. It had aboard 1,100 tons of miscellaneous freight.

Statements of various passengers in regard to the disaster agree in every case where an interview was secured. The women passengers suffered much from exposure and a number of them fainted when they realized their peril.

J. F. Wickman of San Francisco who arrived on the Vanguard gave the following account of the wreck:

"I woke up about half an hour before the ship struck and felt the first bump, which was as though we were rushing over stones. There was a short interval of quiet, then a severe rumbling, throwing the boat from side to side. I jumped from my berth, opened the door. It was raining and the deck was apparently deserted. I thought we had been struck by some heavy seas. Then I heard some bells ringing and loud talk, and knew that we were in for it.

"I saw officers and members of the crew awakening the passengers. Some women were in a state of excitement. After making a poor attempt at dressing they appeared to regain control of themselves when assured by the officers that they had plenty of time. I left the ship in the second boat.

"We stood by the steamer according to instructions from the captain, when a heavy fog shut down and we put out to sea.

"Two hours later we sighted the Vanguard, and shortly after the Ranger hove in sight and some of the other boats. We got the balance of the passengers from the St. Paul and steamed away for Eureka."

SALARY OF PRESIDENT McCURDY IS UNKNOWN

MUTUAL'S EXECUTIVE CONFIDES TO NO ONE

General Manager of the Company Reveals More Facts on Commissions.

Some General Agents Received 87 1-2 Per Cent of First Year's Premiums.

New York, Oct. 6.—Robert H. McCurdy, general manager of the Mutual Life Insurance company, was again a witness today in the insurance investigation. He went on the stand immediately after Cornelius C. White, an auditor of the New York Life, had left it, after making a correction in his testimony relative to the $75,000 payments to Andrew Hamilton, the lawyer, in 1904. He said that the $141,017, received by Hamilton in 1904, included the $75,000 which was charged to state taxes.

Mr. McCurdy said that the proportion of his commission on the foreign business, paid to C. H. Raymond after he left the firm of C. H. Raymond & Co., would be presented in a statement now being typewritten.

The salaries of the Mutual Life officers, the witness said, were fixed by the finance committee. He did not know the salary of the president, nor did he know that anybody did besides the president. He did not know that the finance committee ever fixed the president's salary.

Witness said he, as general manager, made all contracts with agents. The general agents on the same plane as C. H. Raymond & Co. number seven in the United States, two in Canada, and one in Mexico. All the foreign agents are general agents. There are seventy-five salaried agents aside from those, who, besides salary, receive commissions on first year premiums, but no renewals. The highest salary paid to these is $10,000, paid to the general agent at Chicago.

Witness then detailed the changing of the agency system from that of general agents, with commissions like the Raymond firm, to that of salaried agents. The reason for these changes, he said, was that the new system was more economical to the company, productive of more business, and easier to handle.

When a general agency is changed to a salaried agency the renewal commissions called for by the contracts under a general agency are still paid to the salaried agent. The Raymond firm was not changed to a salaried agency because the contract with C. H. Raymond & Co., which expired in 1904, was continued by the witness through 1905. So far as he knew there was no reason why this agency should not have been changed to a salaried agency in 1900. He was not general manager then and was not familiar with the affairs of the company at that time. Witness' reason for extending the contract through 1905 was because for the previous five years the firm had been writing $17,000,000 insurance a year. The firm had six branch offices and he wanted in competition with the New York Life and Equitable to continue to establish branch offices. He figured the cost would be $150,000 and he could not very well ask the Raymond firm to put up that money when they had but a year's contract. Therefore he extended an agreement to have the Mutual Life pay this expense and guarantee the Raymond firm $17,000,000 business. The firm was then receiving 87½ per cent of first year premiums.

THE ADVOCATES OF RECIPROCITY ARE TURNED DOWN BY REPUBLICAN CONVENTION IN MASSACHUSETTS

Platform Simply Declares For a Revision of the Tariff When the Time Comes For Its Alteration.

Boston, Oct. 6.—A factional contest upon the question of tariff revision, especially with reference to reciprocity with Canada, which involved the nomination of a candidate for lieutenant governor, and the presence of five aspirants for the nomination for attorney general gave unusual interest to the Republican state convention in Tremont temple, here, today. Although the committee on resolutions spent yesterday afternoon and last evening in hearing arguments of the reciprocity supporters, and late last night had reached a decision to introduce a compromise plank in the convention platform, early today it seemed likely that a collision between the advocates of reciprocity and those who opposed tariff changes on the floor of the convention could not be prevented, because of the demand of the revisionists for more specific utterances than the committee was willing to make.

The reciprocity delegates, headed by Eugene N. Foss of Newton declare that they will insist on a plank demanding the removal of the duty on hides, iron ore, lumber of wood pulp. The resolutions committee is not willing to go beyond a statement favoring a revision and readjustment of the tariff and the enactment of a tariff provision which shall protect United States exports against discrimination, and secure the treatment accorded to the most favored nations in all foreign markets. The high protection wing regard this as a substantial concession to the reciprocity element, and early today, while the latter were demanding more detailed statement, with equal emphasis, the anti-revisionists were declaring that if further concessions were demanded in the convention they would oppose revision of any kind.

Lieutenant Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., was the only candidate for governor in the convention, to which office he was expected to be nominated by acclamation. For lieutenant governor the candidates were three: Eben S. Draper of Hopedale, representing the most rigid protection element; Mr. Hall and Col. A. G. Goetting of Springfield. The attorney general contest has been more notable than any in recent years for that office, and the early indications were that the question of a nominee would not be settled until after several ballots. The candidates were Dana Malone, district attorney for the Berkshire district; District Attorney George A. Sanderson of Middlesex, District Attorney Asa P. French of the Norfolk-Plymouth district, General Edgar R. Champlin of Cambridge, and Clinton Gowdy of Springfield.

For the remaining places on the ticket no contests were expected. William H. Olin was the candidate for renomination for secretary of state; Henry E. Turner for renomination for auditor, and A. B. Chapin for renomination for treasurer. Congressman John W. Weeks of Newton was the permanent chairman of the convention.

The platform was presented at the conclusion of the chairman's speech. It was adopted by a practically unanimous vote. The platform in part was as follows:

"We congratulate the president on his overwhelming triumph at the polls at the last election. Such a splendid endorsement was given by the people because it was deserved. President Roosevelt has what the lamented John Hay called the 'Three indispensables—courage, intelligence and honesty.' With all his might he has tried to do what he believes to be right. There has been no double-dealing, no temporizing. Actuated solely by love of country he has endeavored to serve the people with an absolute fidelity. We are proud of the work he has already accomplished and we welcome this opportunity to pledge to him our unswerving support."

Referring to the president's part in securing peace in the Far East, the platform says:

"It is everywhere gratefully recognized that peace so earnestly desired is due in largest measure to the untiring efforts of President Roosevelt. He has earned the gratitude of all the world. With all our hearts we rejoice in his great achievements. He has brought a great blessing to mankind and imperishable honor to his country and himself."

The president also is heartily endorsed for his "Fearless enforcement of laws enacted to prevent great corporations from oppressing the people by unjust discrimination or by the destruction of lawful competition. In such action he should receive the earnest support of all our citizens."

Such additional legislation as may be necessary to prevent all unjust discrimination in the form of railway rebates or under any device whatever, is favored.

On the subject of the tariff the platform says:

"We believe that the policy of protection to American labor and American industry should be maintained. The Republican party of Massachusetts reaffirms its devotion to the principle of protection and is opposed to tariff changes tending to depress or destroy any of our industries or to lower the wages of American labor. But we recognize the fact as declared by the national Republican convention at Chicago, that rates should be changed when conditions have so changed that the public interest demands the alteration of schedules. The time at which revision of the tariff should be undertaken must be determined by the representatives of the party from all parts of our country. We approve the position taken by our senators and representatives at the last session of congress in favor of present action, and we urge that they should continue to press upon their party associates in congress from other states the wisdom of a consideration of the tariff for the purpose of revision and readjustment.

"We further recommend for the consideration of congress the enactment of a tariff provision which shall protect our exports against discrimination and secure to the United States the treatment accorded to the most favored nations in all foreign markets."

The department of commerce and labor is urged to investigate the question of child labor with the object of its uniform prohibition on a basis not lower than that of the present Massachusetts law. Where the right of suffrage in any state "has been unconstitutionally limited, representation in congress and in the electoral college should be proportionately reduced as directed by the constitution of the United States."

The president is endorsed in his effort "to devise a just and effective method of building up a strong commercial fleet, through the commission authorized in response to his request which makes its final report to the next congress. The lack of American steamship communication with South America and our feeble share in the ocean trade of the Orient are both a peril, and reproach to the United States. The large and active merchant shipping would mean profitable employment in a congenial field for New England capital and labor. It would mean widening markets for the entire nation and the reinforcement of the navy by an indispensable reserve of auxiliary ships and seamen."

RESULTS OF TYPHOON AT MANILA PROVE TO BE VERY SERIOUS

Manila, Oct. 6.—Government reports show that the result of the recent storm is very serious. At least 200 natives and twenty-five Americans and foreigners were killed. It is impossible to identify many of the latter. The government's police work the past year in the provinces of Cavite, Batangas and the island of Samar, which made possible the largest acreage planted in the history of the islands, has been undone and it is estimated retarded development one year in the hemp provinces. In Albay, Sorsogon, Mazbate and Samar, fields have been devastated, warehouses destroyed and stocks damaged. Roads are impassable and the transportation facilities are crippled. The loss is incalculable. In Albay and Sosogon 50 per cent of the buildings, dwellings, schools and warehouses have been destroyed. The storm, in connection with the severe drought which obtained early in the year, will, it is estimated, decrease the receipts of the islands 40 per cent. The army is a heavy loser at Southern ports.

MUCH DISEASE IN ARMY DUE TO IMMORAL HABITS

Exhaustive Report Made By Surgeon O'Reilly Shows, However, That Health of Army Is Improving.

Washington, Oct. 6.—Surgeon General R. M. O'Reilly of the army has submitted an exhaustive report on the health conditions of the army to Secretary Taft. The report says that the enlisted strength of the army, as shown upon the monthly sick reports, was 58,740, and on the returns of the military secretary, 60,139, and calculations are made upon the latter figures. There were 79,586 "admissions to the sick report" during the year, 406 deaths from all causes, and 1,377 discharges for disability. The figures, he says, show a steady and progressive improvement in the health of the army. The report says that by far the most important diseases affecting the efficiency of the army during the year have been those resulting from immoral habits, which caused 16 per cent of all admissions. This class of diseases advanced from third to first place in number of admissions to the sick report. There were constantly on sick report for this class of diseases 715 men, equal to the loss for the entire year of the services of eleven full companies of infantry.

The control of these diseases, says Gen. O'Reilly, lies largely in the hands of the civil authorities, and one of the most important steps to that end would appear to be classing them with other infectious diseases, and the requirement that they shall be reported as such and controlled by health departments.

In the military service a similar course should be followed.

As to the causes of death, pneumonia advanced to first place, and tuberculosis second.

There were 266 admissions for gunshot wounds, with forty-four deaths, and 2,850 admissions for wounds other than gunshot, with fifteen deaths.

Twenty-one men were killed in action and forty-two wounded; of the killed, two were by gunshot; of the wounded, twenty-eight were by gunshot. There were forty-five soldiers drowned, eleven per cent of the total deaths from all causes, indicating how important it is that all soldiers should have systematic instruction in swimming. Twenty-seven soldiers committed suicide, ten deaths were due to homicide.

"Notwithstanding that a large part of the army was serving in the tropics, there was no admission for snake bite."

"The strength of officers was 3,421 from the medical department reports and 3,315 from the military secretary. There were 2,275 admissions, twenty-seven deaths.

Comparisons with foreign armies shows that the highest rate of admissions is in the American army and the lowest in the Russian. The highest death rate was in the American army and the lowest in the Prussian. The highest non-effective rate was in the American army and the lowest in the Prussian. Regarding these facts General O'Reilly says:

"The very high proportion for alcoholism in the army as compared with that of the British is partly due to the fact that in the latter service only admissions to hospital are counted. It is notable that while the British have less than half the American admission rate for dysentery, their death rate is practically the same, and that while their rate of admission for malaria is about the same, their death rate is nearly three times as great. The American admission rate for malaria is nearly eighty times that of the French, while the death rate is only five times as great. These facts point to difference in the method of computing admissions. The figures for measles and mumps compare very unfavorably with other armies, except the French.

"The comparatively high American death rate for tuberculosis is explained by the fact that in the United States army tuberculosis patients are sent to a sanitarium and retained in service for long periods, while in other armies they are promptly discharged. The high admission rate is no doubt due to the present defective system of medical examination of recruits. The undue prevalence of typhoid fever in the army is partly explainable by its undue prevalence in the civil communities where the troops are stationed, as a result of general failure to purify water and sewage in American municipalities. Notable is the absence of smallpox in the Prussian, Bavarian and Dutch armies. More care in vaccination would give like results in other services."

The strength of the army in the Philippines was 11,986 and there were 20,246 admissions to the sick report and 105 deaths. The strength of the Filipino troops was 4,610 and there were 6,242 admissions and 103 deaths.

RUSSIA AND BRITAIN MAY MAKE A TREATY

Marked Activity In Government Circles Give Rise to Startling Rumors.

London, Oct. 6.—Following closely upon the publication of the text of the Anglo-Japanese treaty has come considerable talk of the possibility of an understanding between Great Britain and Russia. All the newspapers are devoting columns to the discussion of the question, pointing out that if Russia is sincere in her expressions of a desire for peace in Central Asia, there is no reason why the two ancient enemies should not come to an agreement that will not only assure peace but clear away the suspicions leading to friction which have existed for years. That negotiations with this object in view are pending seem possible, though definite official confirmation is lacking. Color is lent to the rumors that have been floating about by the recent frequent visits paid to the foreign office by the Russian ambassador since his return from his holidays a fortnight ago and the fact that Foreign Secretary Lansdowne, who returned from his vacation to publish the text of the Anglo-Japanese treaty, remained at his office continually since then. Count Benkendorff, the Russian ambassador, had a long interview with Lord Lansdowne at the foreign office yesterday, and the latter left London immediately afterwards for Balmoral, Scotland, where Premier Balfour is present as minister in attendance to King Edward. Of course the visits of the Russian ambassador to the foreign office may have been connected with Emperor Nicholas' invitation to Great Britain to participate in the second peace conference at The Hague, but Great Britain had already answered his majesty's preliminary invitation. It is thought here that the present is an opportune moment for reaching a better understanding between the two countries, both the British and Russian papers having strongly advocated for the past week. The position of the British government was clearly stated in a speech delivered by Gerald Balfour, president of the local government board, yesterday, in which he said:

"Great Britain has no intention of making aggressive movements in Central Asia. Our object is defense and not defiance, and if the Russian government desires to come to an understanding with us with reference to our respective interests in that part of the world, it will not find the British government backward in readiness to consider any proposals which it might desire to put forward."

The newspaper discussion has reached a much wider range, and includes suggestions for agreements which, if carried out and lived up to, would make Europe a family in which there would be no differences. One of the suggestions which most appeals to British officialdom and the London press is that Russia, Germany and France should subscribe to the terms of the Anglo-Japanese treaty. It is pointed out that if they were sincere in their protestations of a desire for peace in Asia, there is no reason why they should not subscribe to a treaty which has this object in view. The suggestion that Great Britain should more fully recognize Russia's position in Southern Turkey has not been given much consideration in London, though possibly this may be one of the points on which the agreement, if reached, will be based, and it may be a return for Russian guarantees of her often-repeated assertion that she does not desire to advance any further towards the Indian frontier.

The public in Great Britain would welcome any understanding which would put an end to the frequent periods of unrest and consequent unfriendly relations with Russia.

MORE MYSTERY IN THE CASE OF KIDNAPED BOY

Tells Confusing Stories and the Conduct of Parents Is Very Strange.

New York, Oct. 6—The abandonment of Tony Marendino by the persons who had kidnaped and held him for ransom and the return of the little Italian boy to his parents, which occurred last night, has given the police no clue to the kidnapers. So impressed with fear of the persons who had stolen him was the boy, that he either could or would not give any other description of his captivity than a mass of confusing contradictions, out of which the police could extract nothing that would point to the identity of his captors. He had even been so schooled by them that he called them "papa and mamma," but declared upon closer questioning that they were not his real parents.

The boy, who is 6 years old, was found on a Third avenue trolley car last evening, where he had been abandoney by two men. He was turned over to the police, who recognized him as the son of an Italian contractor in Brooklyn. He had been missing twelve days and in the meantime his captors had endeavored first to extort $500 and then $5,000 in ransom from his parents.

In response to the questioning of the police the boy said he was taken from his home by two men "who shoveled dirt for my father." They took him, he said, to his cousin's house in New York, where he had a good time. Although the child told the police many things of seeming importance, he would contradict them in the next sentence. The police are also mystified by the conduct of the child's parents.

In reply to one question by the police the child said he had been at his father's home yesterday, but when his father, who was present, spoke to him angrily, he contradicted himself. The police believe he was schooled to make confusing replies.

They also believe that the manner in which he was abandoned indicates that the man who held him for ransom also had something to do with the abduction of Tony Mannino more than a year ago. The Mannino boy was abandoned on a ferry boat and could give the authorities no clue to his abductors.

ROASTNOMERS FIND NOVA AQUILLAE, NO. 2.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 6.—A new star, reaching almost the sixth magnitude, has been discovered by the Harvard observatory. The new light is in the constelation Aquilla, and takes its name—Nova Aquillae No. 2—from that fact, it being the second new star found in that group. The light from the new star is steadily decreasing. The star when first seen was of the 6.5 magnitude, but now it has a magnitude of 11.5.

JAILOR IS JAILED.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 6.—J. M. Childers, jailor of the La Crosse county jail, who was convicted Saturday of assisting in the escape of Earl Trainor and Andrew Cunningham, two members of the notorious Eddie Fay gang of post-office robbers, was sentenced to a term of fifteen months in the house of correction by United States Judge Sanborn, yesterday. The evidence showed that Childers received $800 for the release of the two prisoners.

KIDNAPED BOY IS RETURNED TO PARENTS.

New York, Oct. 6—Tony Marendino, the small Italian boy, who was kidnaped from his Brooklyn home two weeks ago and has been held captive while demands for a $5,000 ransom were made upon his parents, was found last night. The boy was brought to the East Thirty-seventh street police station by a street car inspector. He had been left on a surface car by a man he did not know. The boy seemed dazed and could give no information about himself. The police notified the Marendino boy's parents in Brooklyn. The latter arrived at the station late last night and identified their son. Several arrests of members of the so-called "black hand" organization have been made by the police in connection with the case.

CORBIN GETS A VACATION.

Manila, Oct. 6.—Maj. Gen. Corbin and wife sailed today for Australia on a two months' leave of absence.

MRS. RAND BEQUEATHS $200,000 TO FOUND SCHOOL OF SOCIALISM

New York, Oct. 6.—It was announced last night, on behalf of the New York section of the Social Democratic party, that the late Mrs. E. D. Rand, mother-in-law of Prof. George D. Herron, had bequeathed $200,000 to found a school of Socialism. Mrs. Rand, who died recently in Florence, Italy, four years ago established the chair of Christian Sociology in Iowa college, Grinnell, Iowa, which was filled by Herron. About that time he married Mrs. Rand's daughter. His views were too radical for the college, however, and he resigned. Morris Hillquist and Mrs. George Herron, Mrs. Rand's daughter, have been made trustees of the fund. The announcement includes this statement:

"The primary design of the school is to provide for an intellectual center for the Socialist movement in the United States. It is expected that a building will be provided, in which there will be libraries for special research, and in which specially prepared and valuable papers will be published. The plan also provides for reading and meeting rooms, and systematic lecture courses on socialism, popular science, and the relation of the different arts and literature to social development. The institution will be fully established by the fall of next year, and its principal field of operation will be in this city."

MANY CHARGES AGAINST DOUGHERTY

Peoria, Ills., Oct. 6.—A total of thirteen indictments have thus far been returned against Newton C. Dougherty, city superintendent of schools and president of the Peoria National bank.

Ten of them are for embezzlement and three for forgery. Forty more are being drawn by the states attorney's office. It was announced from that office, today, that the total would reach more than 200. The bail required for these thus far returned is $12,700.

Mr. Dougherty is in receipt of messages from all over the country, many of them expressing sympathy and a belief in his innocence.

According to a statement made by a member of the grand jury, today, hundreds of pieces of school scrip, which, it is alleged, have been changed after being signed by the president of the school board, are missing.

A committee appointed by the school board to continue the investigation after the jury gets through announced through its chairman, John Stevens, today, that they would go back over the books of the board for twenty years.

In some cases both stubs and vouchers are missing, representing according to the cash book, large amounts.

TRIAL NEAR CONCLUSION

Jury Now Has Fate of D. W. Riesland In Hand.

The Lindquist malpractice case against D. W. Riesland, chiropractor, was given to the jury this afternoon, the arguments being made directly following the noon recess.

During the morning session Oakley G. Smith, the expert chiropractor from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was recalled to testify in Mr. Riesland's behalf. He was under cross-examination for about two hours, after which Mr. Riesland was called to testify in his own behalf in matters not previously covered in his cros-examination under the statutes. A. J. Lindquist and Mr. Riesland were then called in rebuttal in their adverse contentions and the case was closed.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Smith said he had heard Mr. Riesland's testimony relative to the treatment accorded Lindquist and endorsed it as the proper chiropractic treatment, as described. Under cross examination this morning he admitted that presuming Mr. Lindquist's description of his treatment to be true, pounding the spine with the hands or a mallet would not be considered proper chiropractic treatment.

After all the evidence had been submitted, Mr. Jenswold moved for a direction of the verdict in Mr. Riesland's favor, on the ground that there was insufficient proof and that Lindquist had not established a case. The motion was denied by Judge Dibell, who left the jury to determine the merits of the case form the testimony offered.

Lindquist sued to recover judgment for $10,000, alleging that Mr. Riesland's treatment has caused him to become a cripple for life and to suffer great pain.

FINDS DROSICK INSANE.

Austrian Who Jumped In Bay Is Not a County Charge.

An Austrian named Drosick, who attempted suicide several days ago by jumping in the bay, was examined before Probate Judge Middlecoff yesterday afternoon, and was found to be insane. Drosick is apparently between 30 and 35 years of age and his condition, which is bad, is supposed to have been brought on by sensitiveness and worry. Before leaving Austria he married and his testimony under examination by the physicians indicated family troubles, Drosick claiming that his wife was unfaithful. He claimed that since he has been in this country at every place that he has stopped he has been charged excessive prices for board and room and for everything that he has had. He jumped in the bay after being told by a countryman that he could not pay his debts.

After jumping in the water Drosick repented and shouted for help. There happened to be persons in the vicinity and these pulled him out. For the past few days he has been detailed at the county jail for safety.

Drosick came here from Ashland about the same date that he attempted the water route to the hereafter, his previous residence having been Houghton, Mich. As he is not a resident of this state the county will not have to bear the expense caring for him. Probate Judge Middlecoff has notified the state board of control to come after him or to deputize some officer to take Drosick back to Houghton, where he will come under the care of the Michigan authorities.

ARE NOT THE ONES WANTED

Suspects Held In Chicago Not Robbers of New York Home.

New York, Oct. 6.—Capt. McCauley of the detective bureau said last night that he had been notified of the arrest of Henry Hoffman and Mrs. Schiller, in Chicago, and for a while he thought that they might be the persons wanted for the robbery of Isaac Lloyd.

"It turns out they are not wanted here at all," he declared.

"They answered the description, in a measure, of the thieving servants who robbed Mr. Lloyd last March."

Manager G. E. Webb of the Ansonia hotel said he believed that Hoffman and Mrs. Schiller were the same persons arrested at his request last year for the robbery of Mrs. William H. Hochester. He added:

"The woman, who went by the name of Elizabeth Becker, was employed as maid by Mrs. Hochster. The man, who said he was Herman Von Belden, posed as a relative. Mrs. Hochster lost jewels worth about $2,000. After the arrest we were unable to make out a case, and the two were released."

Experts Give Testimony.

Further testimony was introduced in district court this morning in the damage action, brought by Jan Ignasiak against the Jean DuLuth company. Mr. Ignasiak and his son, Walter, testified as to the damage wrought at the Ignasiak farm by forest fires last May, and James McKay and D. W. Scott gave expert testimony as to values of hardwood timber after it had been partially destroyed by fire. One of Ignasiak's contentions is that he had 140 acres of standing hardwood run over by the fire, which he alleges was started from a stump pile fire on the Jean DuLuth stock farm.

PURCHASED BY THE ELKS

Duluth Lodge Decides of Buy Site For Home.

Property Near Board of Trade Building Is Secured.

Within the course of another year or two the Duluth Elks will probably have a handsome, three story home of their own near Third avenue west and Second street, the trustees of the lodge having been instructed to purchase the site at once.

The proposition made by the agents of the property has been accepted by the lodge and at a recent meeting, the trustees were told to close the deal as soon as possible and the property will probably be transferred tomorrow. The purchase price has not been made known.

It will be impossible to begin the erection of the new building this year even if it were not so late in the season. The lodge has not enough money in its treasury just at present to pay for the structure. It has enough to pay for the site, however, without going into debt. None of the Elks is able to say just when work will be started on the building but they are all sure that another year or two will see it erected.

The site is located just behind the Board of Trade building on Third avenue and has a frontage of 40 feet on that thoroughfare and a depth of 100 feet. The lodge plans to erect a three story brick structure, the first floor to be rented as stores; the club rooms to be located on the second floor and the lodge room on the third floor. The club rooms will be handsomely fitted up and will include lounging and smoking rooms, parlors, card rooms and billiard rooms. Allowing for ante rooms and stairways, the lodge room will be about seventy-five by forty feet, which will be ample.

The lodge is growing satisfactorily and the members look upon the purchase of the property as an excellent move. The location is excellent for a lodge building and the fact that the courthouse will be located near by some day will enhance its value.

Duluth lodge, No. 133, is at present sort of overseeing the organization of a lodge at Virginia, on the range. There are about eleven Elks there now and the new lodge will probably have a charter membership of forty. The institution will take place within the next thirty days and will be conducted by Harry Rendell of Minneapolis, deputy for the Northern part of Minnesota, assisted by the members of the Duluth lodge.

"They told a good story about Harry Rendell and A. J. Mullen, secretary of the Minneapolis lodge, at Buffalo, last July," said J. T. Armstead of the local lodge, this morning. "All the members of the Buffalo lodge wore conspicuous badges just prior to and during the big convention so that visiting Elks might recognize them as members of the order. Mr. Rendell and Mr. Mullen, accompanied by their wives, arrived in Buffalo a few days before the convention and on Sunday took a long street car ride.

"When they got back to town it was suggested that they find some nice quiet place where they might take their wives with safety and secure something in the way of liquid refreshments and at the same time rest after their exertions.

"They did not know where to go, but they saw a big man wearing an Elks' badge standing near so they wondered, audibly, where they might find a suitable place. The big man moved as though he was about to volunteer the information but he did not speak, so Messrs. Rendell and Mullen asked him if he could give them some directions.

"The big man hesitated. 'Well,' he said, 'this is Sunday, and all the drinking places are closed, and as I am a police judge I don't think it would hardly be proper for me to direct you to a quiet place, but I don't mind telling you, privately, of one that I know of.'

"The mebers of the party carefully noted the directions he gave them and after a ride of several miles alighted from the car and turned to the right, as they had been told to do. They found themselves in a cemetery. Rendell and Mullen heard a good deal about that all the time they were in Buffalo. Murphy is said to be the worst practical joker in the town."

NO STRIPES FOR CONVICTS.

Oregon Prisoners Will Be Garbed In Gray Uniforms.

Salem, Or., Oct. 6.—Stripes have been abandoned as prison garb in Oregon, and as soon as the change can be effected without throwing away good clothing, practically all the convents will wear uniforms of a bluish gray. The change has been ordered in the interests of discipline and reformation, and stripes will be placed upon a prisoner only as a means of special punishment.

It is expected that the uniforms now in use will be sufficiently worn by the end of the year to justify their being discarded. Many suits have already been cast away, and all new prisoners are given suits of gray.

You miss one of the pleasures of the table unless you have the crisp, dainty brain and nerves well nourished all day.

LADIES, WE THANK YOU!

AND ASK: "WHAT HAVE WE DONE TO DESERVE THIS SPLENDID TRIBUTE OF YOURS?"

Suppose, for instance, you were running for public office in Duluth. Suppose you made your campaign with simple, straightforward honesty, and then left the rest to the voters.

Suppose then you were UNANIMOUSLY elected. You would feel grateful, would you not? A sort of lump in your throat? Hard to express your feelings? Genuinely happy all through?

That is exactly how WE feel.

True, we have not been elected to public office, but we have received an expression of confidence from the people--an expression that is stronger than a mere vote. Several days ago--maybe you remember it--we announced a preliminary opening at our new store.

We explained frankly that not all of our store was quite ready and that not all of our fall and winter stock of dry goods, millinery and ready-to-wears had arrived. We just went on to say that we didn't feel like waiting any longer to throw open our new store-house and asked the ladies of Duluth to take us as they saw us and make allowances where needed.

And the people BELIEVED us unanimously. They came and spent their money. They bought in such a way that they betrayed a full-fledged confidence in us and in our methods. This may all seem unnecessary talk and it may not interest many of our readers--but we simply had it in our minds and had to express something of our feelings.

We take this space merely to thank you--thank you ever so much and to assure you that we will do our level best to merit a lasting continuance of your good will and confidence.

If it is permissible in such an announcement as this, we would like to say that many of the new things are now arriviug daily and we believe a second visit would prove quite as interesting to you as your first one.

Gratefully yours,

AGENTS GET BIG MONEY

Manager McCurdy Tells of Commissions Paid to Raymond & Co.

Renewed Contract For 1905, Expecting Later to Change to Salary.

New York, Oct. 6.—Later in the day General Manager McCurdy of the Mutual Life told the investigating committee that Raymond & Co.'s commissions were raised to 96 per cent of the first year's premiums. In consideration of the firm's allowing certain concessions to the company in developing the agency business and with the expectation of converting this agency to a salaried one at the end of 1905, he extended the contract. Witness said above is a constant effort to reduce expenses. To reduce expenses is usually to reduce business.

In making the contract with Raymond & Co., witness said "he had not the faintest idea what Mr. Thebaud was getting from the business."

The general agency business, he said, has built up the life insurance business. "It has paid large rewards for large achievements," he said. Continuing witness said that until he saw a statement two months ago, he did not know what the disposition between Mr. Thebaud and Mr. Raymond was.

"This large reward for large achievements," said Mr. McCurdy, "has built up railroads and all other business and it justified us in adopting such a system."

Witness did not know whether general agencies of the New York Life or of the Equitable society received as much as C. H. Raymond & Co., but said that the agents that write business get just as large premiums in other companies as in the Mutual Life.

Witness said that last year the Mutual Life wrote $26,000,000 worth of business more than in the previous year, and the expenses were reduced at a ratio of 2 per cent. The total receipts for 1904 were $81,002,884, and the total expenses, $16,898,456. The usual ratio of expenses was estimated at about 25 per cent.

It was the impression of the witness that the general agency in Texas received as high compensation as C. H. Raymond & Co. Higher commissions were allowed in New York and Texas than anywhere else, because it cost more to get the business.

"Don't you think you could get Mr. Thebaud's services for $100,000?" Mr. Hughes asked.

"I suppose so, if he didn't have a contract."

"Don't you think you could get them for $50,000, instead of $147,000 that he secured from Raymond & Co. last year?" Mr. Hughes continued.

"I am not so sure of that," witness replied.

Asked to explain what conditions of competition permitted the firm of Raymond & Co. to make $247,000 last year, of which Mr. Thebaud received $147,000, witness said the company did not know what the firm was making out of the business, and that like every merchant and business man, they were in the business for what they could get out of it.

Mr. Hughes asked: "Did you inquire or learn in any way what C. H. Raymond & Company had been making?"

"No."

"Ought not a general manager to inquire if a general agent is getting more from the company than it can afford."

Witness would not discuss the question.

It was brought out that George A. Raymond, a brother of Charles H. Raymond, was the general agent for New Jersey.

Howard Lewis, of Albany, the general agent for Northern New York, witness said he believed was a cousin or second cousin of either Vice President Robert A. Grannis or of Mrs. Grannis.

Dr. Elias J. Moss, the medical director, married a sister of President McCurdy.

NORTH BUTTE RECOVERS

After Weakness Early It Rallies Quickly Toward Close.

North Butte gave another example of its splendid strength today. It opened the day at $54, sold up to $54.50, worked down to $53, with occasional reactions, and then in the final hour of the session rallied to $56. The close was at $55.50 bid, and $56 asked.

There was considerable comment this morning on the following telegram received from C. H. Paine of Boston:

"The Boston Herald has a dispatch from Pittsburg that President Corey of the Steel trust and associates of Pittsburg have just cleaned up a profit of $6,000,000 in the North Butte mine. Perhaps that is where all the stock has been coming from lately."

Naturally this excited considerable apprehension on the part of stockholders, for the so-called "steel crowd" is known to be heavily interested in the stock. Among those who know anything of the market's movements, however, the report was given little or no credence. An examination of the records of the Boston exchange's business shows that from Sept. 18, when North Butte was at about the $40-mark, until the close of business yesterday, the total transactions in that stock were about 76,800 shares. Now, had the Steel crowd sold every share of that amount—which is, of course, absurd to believe—and obtained an average of $50 a share for it, the total profits could not have been in excess of $2,750,000, instead of the reported $6,000,000.

But as said before, no one familiar with the company and the stock market movements places any reliance in the report.

The Bisbee stocks were rather dull. Calumet & Pittsburg was selling at $39 early in the day, stiffened to $40, and then fell back to $39.

Black Mountain was again in good demand, and sold at $4.50.

Anntti Kari Gets His Four and a Half Thousand For Injuries.

The judgment for $4,500 obtained in United States court during its latest term by Anntti Kari against the St. Croix Lumber company, has been paid and a satisfaction of judgment filed. The total payment, which included interest and costs was $4,819.81.

The suit was for injuries received while Kari was at work in the defendant company's mill at Winton, Minn. The company paid the judgment in order to get rid of the matter and will recover the amount from an employers' liability company involved.

BIDS FOR A BRIDGE

Commissioners Receive Proposals For Building Span.

Large Amount of Road and Routine Business Transacted.

Interest in the county board meeting this morning was centered in the bids for the construction of a steel bridge over Talmadge creek in Commissioner Kugler's district, about ten miles north of Duluth. The bridge is to be a one span structure 160 feet long, on a concrete base and with a 16-foot roadway. The bids were made on the basis of an all-steel bridge, or one with steel span, joists and hand rails, or a steel span with wooden joists and hand rails, besides the excavation and concrete foundation work.

The bids, seven in number, were opened at 11 o'clock, but no action had been taken on them up to the noon adjournment. It was the understanding at that time that the contract would be awarded this afternoon.

The contest at noon, seemed to lie between A. Y. Bayne & Company and Darst & Hughes, the latter concern being now engaged in erecting the steel bridge over the St. Louis river at Floodwood.

The bidders and their figures were as follows:

	All steel.	Wood joist and rail.
A. Y. Bayne	$2,650	$1,900
Milwaukee Bridge Co.	2,400	2,300
Minneapolis Steel Machinery Co.	2,550	2,446
Hewitt Bridge Co.	2,105	2,000
J. L. Brickels & Co.	2,287	2,141
Twin City Bridge Co.	2,584	2,310
Darst & Hughes	2,600	1,940

Bids in the concrete foundation work per cubic yard were as follows: A. Y. Bayne & Co., $50; Milwaukee Bridge Co., $30.20; Minneapolis Steel Machinery Co., $31; J. L. Brickels & Co., $9.50; Twin City Bridge Co., $9.50; Darst & Hughes, $8.50.

Certified checks and plans and specifications accompanied all the bids except that of the Twin City Bridge company.

Two bids were received for the repair of the Cloquet power bridge on the Rice Lake road. Ed Gallagher's bid was $50 and George Jaskie's, $39.50.

Several settlers on the Normanna road east of French river, appeared before the board and asked that about a quarter of a mile of the road be opened up so their children can have access to school. They claimed the road was legalized about ten years ago and that promises to open it up have not been kept. The settlers called attention to the $1,000 appropriation made for the road this season, and said that for $400 of this amount they could build the road and a small bridge. They claimed they had built a mile of road in that locality for about $100. The petition was received for action later.

The county board has been extended an invitation to participate in the annual session of the state board of corrections and charities and annual gathering of county commissioners, at St. Peter, Minn. in November.

N. M. Triplett of Floodwood appeared before the board and complained that a road recently legalized by the board, simply to overcome a legal technicality, will cross and split up his farm in 51-23 and 51-21. He said that while the intention is not to open the road, the thoroughfare has been legalized, and nobody can tell what some town board may do in the future. If the road should ever be opened he claimed his farm would be irreparably damaged, and asked the commissioners to vacate that part of the road legalized through his property.

It was the sentiment of the board that he must take it on his own responsibility in the matter that the board that he take it on his own responsibility in the matter that the board has no authority to grant any leave of absence.

CHILDREN WALK 60 MILES.

Nearly Starve While They Search For Lost Mother.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Oct. 6.—Weary and almost starved to death, two little waifs wandered into local police headquarters, a few evenings ago, and asked for something to eat.

They said they had walked from the lower end of Jackson county, about sixty miles, and were going to New Brighton, Pa., to find their mother, who had written them to come.

One child is a girl, 8 years old, and the other a boy two years her senior. They gave their name as Morgan, but said their mother had married since she left them and they did not know her name now.

The children were detained here to await information from Odaville, where they came from.

BRUTALLY HAZED.

Student Is Grossly Insulted Because of His Religion.

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 6.—Unable to withstand the hazing and persecution of fellow students because of his religion, Abraham Klein, a freshman in the Webb Naval academy, at Fordham Heights, New York City, who stood second in a class of thirty-six candidates and won a scholarship, has returned to this city. Young Klein says the other students told him that they did not want any Jews among them, and that the sooner he left the school the better it would be for him, and as he left New York his cherished ambition to become a naval architect vanished.

In the initiation last Monday, Klein says, all the other freshmen had to do was to tell jokes as they assembled in the gymnasium, while he and another Jew, from Oil City, Pa., were maltreated. Even fellow Syracusans, he says, turned against him because of his creed.

"They told me," he said, "that if I stayed in Webb there would be lots of other Jews from Syracuse who would get in. Monday evening they nicknamed me 'Rabbi,' and started in. They tried to make me ridicule the Jewish religion and make a fool of me. Then they put a cent in the bottom of a washtub full of water and made me get it out with my lips. Then they made me lie down in the middle of the floor in a great puddle of water and molasses and had me give an exhibition of swimming first on my stomach and then on my back. I was a sight when I got through. Then they made me roll a peanut around the floor with my nose, and I skinned my nose.

"Then the initiation was over for the rest, but I had no sooner got to bed than they pulled me out and made me go over to another room, where a lot of students were. I had to stand there and make a fool of myself for more than an hour. Then they gave me to understand that they didn't want me there and the quicker I got out the better."

"WON'T MARRY" CLUB

Organized By Girls Going In For Church Work.

Coudersport, Pa., Oct. 6.—A "Won't Marry" club, just formed among the young women of the best Coudersport families, has caused much speculation among the young men of the town.

The girls have announced their intention of withdrawing from social festivities of the winter, and of devoting their energies to church and charitable work.

It is said that the young men have decided to plan some especially tempting affairs for the girls, and if that plan fails, to promise not to make love if the members of the club will but continue in the social swirl.

A forfeit in the nature of a banquet to all the other members of the club will be the price of going to the altar for any member.

NOTICE OF SUSPENSION

Of Small Islands From Disposal In Public Land Matters.

The Duluth land office today received a letter from the general land office in Washington with the information that the general land office has received from the acting secretary of the interior an order directing the suspension of all action looking toward the disposal of small islands.

This is with a view to submitting to congress the question of whether some provision should not be made for the disposal of small and isolated tracts other than provided for in the regular government land laws, for the reason that they are too small to permit them to be of any use for the purposes intended. This was noted a few days ago in the dispatches from Washington.

OHIO FARMERS

Fight Snakes to Save Themselves and Their Horses.

Lancaster, Ohio, Oct. 6.—Samuel Bush and his three sons, Samuel Jr., Charles and Ernest, had one of the most exciting experiences at their home near Horn's Mill, south of this city, that they have ever had. Their shepherd dog was killed and one horse severely injured, and the four men bearely escaped with their lives.

The father and his sons went into a field to make hay. They had driven part of the way around the field when Mr. Bush was suddenly appraised of the fact that a large copperhead snake had crawled from beneath the seat of the mower on which he was riding and was in the act of striking him with its deadly fangs.

Mr. Bush jumped from the mower calling to his sons to help him.

The boys armed themselves with clubs and started to kill the snake.

They found not only one snake, but a dozen, all of unusually large size.

The dog joined in the battle and was so severely bitten that it died in a few moments.

After the party had killed four of the reptiles and finding that one of the horses had also been bitten in the leg, the men became frightened and started to run away, but found themselves surrounded by snakes.

With clubs they beat a path to the horses and while one of the men fought the snakes the others unhitched their animals.

Then they leaped to the horses' backs and rode to safety.

ENDOWMENT FUND IS CREATED BY CONFERENCE

Northern Clergymen Decide to Provide For Incapacitated Fellows.

Bishop McDowell Will Appoint Agent to Collect Money.

Eveleth, Minn., Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Northern Minnesota conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, in session here, decided today to create the endowment fund of $50,000 for conference claimants, and Bishop McDowell will appoint an agent to collect the money.

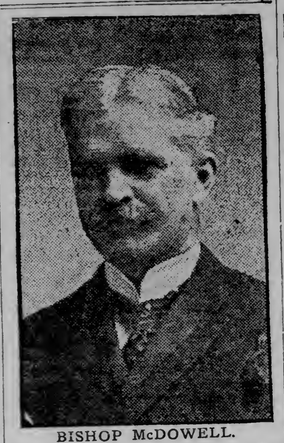

The purpose of this fund is to provide money for preachers, when they become incapacitated for work by old age or continued illness. The clergymen in the conference will be assessed to pay the salary of the agent, who will probably be named before the conference adjourns.

The creation of the endowment fund is a new move on the part of this conference, but it is looked upon as a good one by all of the members.

The conference corporation board met this afternoon and transacted some legal business. The Women's Foreign Missionary society is in session this afternoon also, being addressed by Miss Mattie Brather of Missouri.

Dr. M. S. Rice, pastor of the First church of Duluth, delivered the address at the "pastor's hour," this afternoon. He was listened to with much interest.

A cabinet meeting is being held this afternoon, and a number of appointments considered. Rev. W. S. Bradley of Barnesville was transferred to North Dakota and Rev. B. F. Koch

BISHOP McDOWELL.

Rev. E. M. Randall, D. D. of Chicago. Rev. Mr. Randall is secretary of the Epworth league.

Tomorrow evening the conference will be addressed by Oliver W. Stewart of Chicago, the well known Prohibition party leader.

Secretary Sharpe announced yesterday that he had sent a communication to Mrs. Isaac W. Joyce and Col. F. F. Joyce of condolence by the conference at the recent death of Bishop Joyce.

Rev. Mr. Kingham was appointed the conference representative of the Methodist Review.

Rev. Dr. Forbes, first corresponding secretary of the board of church extension, addressed the conference yesterday on the work he represents. Bishop McDowell spoke of the great work being done by the board of church extension all over the land in building new churches. Dr. Forbes said that his board was going to help build parsonages, and that the parsonage at Little Falls was the first to receive a grant of $200 to help the church build the parsonage.

Deaconess Salma Riekke, a graduate of the Washington, D. C., training school for deaconesses, was introduced. She is employed among the 20,000 Finns of the Duluth district, and is sustained by the Women's Home Missionary society.

Rev. J. H. Michaelson was introduced as the pastor of the Finnish church at Split Rock.

Presiding Elder Clemans presented the credentials of Rev. W. Fletcher, with a request to withdraw from the Methodist Episcopal ministry, and the request was granted by the conference.

Rev. W. E. Barker of the Baptist church was recognized as an elder, on the recommendation of the Duluth district conference. He lives in Duluth.

Rev. John Callahan of the Duluth Star of Hope Mission was introduced and well received by the conference.

On motion, several preachers were given a superannuated relationship, and others were made effective.

The Home Missionary society held its meeting in the church at 2:30, and Mrs. M. E. Roberts gave an excellent address.

Rev. Dr. Thompson of Minneapolis spoke on "Some Ministerial Essentials" in the afternoon.

REV. LAFAYETTE DODDS, Presiding Elder of the Crookston District.

was elected to the elders' order. Rev. Joseph E. Watson was left without an appointment as he is going to take a course at the Garrick Biblical institute at Evanston, Ill. Rev. R. P. Johnson goes as a missionary to the Philippines and a telegram of encouragement was sent to him by the conference. He is at San Francisco now and will sail very soon. President Bridgeman of Hamline university and Superintendent Palmer of the Anti-saloon league were introduced to the conference by the bishop.

Members of the deaconesses' board of Asbury hospital, Minneapolis, were elected. They are: Dr. William Fielder, presiding elder of the Minneapolis district; Rev. C. C. Sharp, Rev. Joseph Hogg, Rev. W. H. Jordan, Rev. S. L. Compton, Mrs. S. H. Knight, Mrs. Little, Mrs. B. F. Nelson and Mrs. Isaac W. Joyce, widow of the late bishop, who arrived in Eveleth this morning.

The last district report was made this morning by Rev. J. B. Hingeley, D. D., of Litchfield. His report showed that the Litchfield district had made great progress during the past year and was in good condition. Dr. Hingeley was presented with a purse containing $50 in gold by the clergymen of his district. The presentation speech was made by Rev. E. A. Eaton of Montevideo. Dr. Hingeley made an appropriate speech of acceptance.

The following clergymen who have been on probation were elected to full membership in the conference: T. M. Swinnerton, P. J. Chappelle, John P. Hess, J. W. Scott, and Ezra G. Stevenson. Bishop McDowell delivered a short address to the class.

This evening the member of the conference will listen to a strong address by

RELEASED ON TECHNICALITY

Albert St. Arnold Escapes Through Flaw In Complaint.

Because the complaint stated that the assault had been committed in the Clarendon hotel office, whereas the evidence showed that it took place on the stairway leading to the hotel, the case against Albert St. Arnold was dismissed this morning by Judge Cutting on a motion by C. O. Baldwin, the attorney for the prisoner.

St. Arnold was arrested for assaulting Sergt. Kenna and breaking his nose. He was bound over to the grand jury on the charge of second degree assault, but was not indicted, and his case was then taken up in the municipal court, under a charge of third degree assault.

The technicality discovered by the prisoner's attorney resulted in his release, and it is not likely that he will be again prosecuted.

The election of the Home Missionary society resulted as follows: President, Rev. F. D. Smith; vice president, William H. Sallmon; trustees, three years, William H. Laird and A. T. Anderson, to succeed themselves.

Miss Ida Vose Woodbury of Boston presented the negro problem to the conference. She stated that while the present rate of increase of four hundred every hour continued there was no hope of a solution by decadence and death, as argued by many speakers. Sending the negro to Africa is impractical. The only solution is Christianization. The race is improving wonderfully. Mrs. Woodbury made an appeal for the rights of the negro. She also spoke for the mountain whites.

Miss Honore De Busk made an address for the Congregational Educational society on the work in New Mexico, and Rev. James W. Strong of the Home Missionary society made an informal review of his presidency and also of his connection with Carleton college. Rev. H. B. Fisher spoke on the home missionary work in Northwestern Minnesota.

Offices of treasurer and auditor are yet to be supplied.

At the general session Dr. Beardsley gave his second talk on "Christ's Leading Lines of Thought," and Rev. C. E. Burton gave a brief address on "A State Minister's Retreat." He thought the ministers needed rest each year. He moved that the ministers of the Twin Cities, who have tried the plan, extend invitation to the ministers of the state to meet with them at the next retreat, and that the state be divided into four districts and four men be appointed to superintend these districts, and that the following be appointed: Rev. H. W. Johnson of West Duluth, Rev. Mr. Brown of Montevideo and Rev. Mr. Warren of Lake City. When the matter was brought up for discussion it was referred to the credential committee to consider carefully and report on later.

A study of the Sunday school conditions of the state was given by Robert P. Herrick, D. D., of Windom institute. There are 182 Congregational Sunday schools in the state, twelve branch schools, twenty-three with special methods, thirty-six with Children's day exercises, thirty-four that have an attendance of over 355. Seventy-four per cent of those attending Sunday school are under 19 years of age.

The Congregational Christian Endeavor union work was discussed by T. H. Colwell, who spoke of the benefits of the union to the young people of the church and the good which was being done by it.

The work that is being done by Carleton college at Nortfield was brought out by President William H. Sallmon, D. D., and Prof. Horace Goodhue, the latter having been connected with the college since it was instituted forty years ago. Carleton college has an attendance of 274 bona fide college students, the freshman class this year numbering 115. The attendance represents 113 towns not only in Minnesota, but other states as well, and sixteen denominations. Two hundred and twenty-two are members of churches, 130 of whom are Congregationalists, forty-seven Presyterians and the remaining number belonging to the other churches.

MEDIATOR IS BEATEN

John Pazynski Fares Badly as a Peace Maker.

Interferes In Quarrel and Has His Head Laid Open.

When he attempted to prevent one of his neighbors from beating in the head of a woman, last evening, in the West end, John Pazynski had his head laid open with a heavy beer glass.

John appeared this morning at police headquarters with his head bound up in a cotton bandage, and, pointing to it, stated, in a mixture of English and German, that he had been assaulted.

Through the medium of an interpreter, he informed the police that some of the people living in the vicinity of his place, far up on the hillside in the West end, had been having a carousal last night, several kegs of beer having been procured for the occasion.

The revelry became boisterous as the evening advanced, and he finally heard screams in his yard. Going out to see what was the trouble, he says he saw one of the men guests at the carousal attempting to hammer out the brains of one of the women who was assisting to empty the kegs.

Pazynski says he interfered and tried to pull the man away, and that during the struggle he was struck over the head with a heavy beer glass. There was a long gash in the scalp as evidence of the encounter.

The case is being investigated by the police and the assistant city attorney, and arrests will probably follow this afternoon.

MESSAGE IS A PUZZLER

Mysterious Telegram Is Received By Chief of Police.

"Wife and children killed in wreck. Come if possible. John Steiner."

The above is a copy of the telegram received this morning by the chief of police to be delivered to Mrs. Teresa Stowar, and it is puzzling the officers not a little.

The message was sent from Granite City, Ill.

There is no such name as Mrs. Teresa Stowar in the directory, and the police know of no such person. They were therefore unable to deliver the massage and they telegraphed back for further instructions.

It is not known what wreck was referred to, but as the town is an inland one, it was probably some railroad wreck.

It is thought that the mysterious Mrs. Stowar is a sister-in-law of the sender, and consequently a sister of the woman who was killed, but as they have been unable to locate any such woman in Duluth, they cannot verify their opinion.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Valise of Dimmock, Who Was Murdered, Has Been Found.

Masonville—Lying in the woods 900 feet west of the spot where the body of W. W. Dimmock, agent for the Commercial Collection agency of Milwaukee, who was murdered at Masonville July 28, was found the grip carried by the murdered man was picked up this week. It had been cut open with a sharp knife, and the contents scattered about the ground. The grip showed unmistakable evidences of having been disturbed after the first time it had been thrown away, and it is believed to but recently have been moved from its hiding place. The finding of the grip is held by the officers to be a circumstance pointing to the guilt of James Brennan, bound over to circuit court for the murder. Brennan disappeared the day that Dimmock was killed, and the theory is held that he hid the valise, then leaving the upper peninsula. He reappeared at Masonville a few weeks ago and then, it is believed, looked up the valise again and rifled its contents. When first seen at Masonville on the occasion of his second visit Brennan was observed in the woods not far from the point where the valise was found, and it is believed that he had at that time just completed the work of reinspecting it.

Menominee—The Menominee Electrical and Mechanical works, whose plant was destroyed by fire some months ago, entailing a loss of $50,000, has purchased from the Menominee County Agricultural association a fine site and will proceed with the erection of one of the largest and most complete plants of the kind in the Northwest.

The guards of the Menominee and Marinette cemeteries have been taken off since the rupture of the tombstone wrecker at Ishpeming. The men were armed with shotguns and spent fourteen nights in the cemeteries. They saw no sign of life, except on one occasion a farmer and his wife took a short cut through one of the graveyards on their way home from town, and had a narrow escape from being filled with shot.

Two experts from Chicago are at work on the books of Former City Treasurer O'Leary to find a shortage of $500. It is believed the shortage was caused by poor bookkeeping, but the matter will be sifted to the bottom.

Escanaba—Thomas Golden, formerly of Escanaba, was killed recently at Council Bluffs, Iowa, where he held the position of yardmaster. Both legs were cut off in an accident. The funeral took place at Escanaba.

George Powell, of Escanaba, a fireman on the Northwestern road, lost the little finger of his right hand in a peculiar accident. A ring worn on the finger caught on a nail on the side of the cab as Powell went to jump from the engine, and the finger was pulled off at the knuckle.

St. Ignace—On complaint of J. B. Eddy, deputy game warden, Under Sheriff John Whitwell of Mackinac county went to Garfield township and arrested James Robinson, charged with having deer meat in his possession in his logging camp. The defendant entered a plea of guilty when arraigned at St. Ignace, whereupon Justice Reagan imposed a fine of $25 and costs of suit, $23.40, or ninety days in the county jail. Mr. Robinson paid the $48.40 and was set free.

Newberry—Newberry is in the thick of a postoffice fight. Postmaster Brebner's term of office expires next April and as he has accepted the position of cashier of the Newberry bank he will not be a candidate for reappointment. In the meantime several candidates for the office have sprung up and are out hustling for endorsements. It is said that Ross Leighton has the pole in the race, but as the time is several months off the other aspirants are not discouraged by this announcement.

Full of Tragic Meaning.

Are these lines from J. H. Simmons of Casey, Iowa. Think what might have resulted from his terrible cough if he had not taken the medicine about which he writes: "I had a fearful cough, that disturbed my night's rest. I tried everything, but nothing would relieve it, until I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which completely cured me." Instantly relieves and permanently cures all throat and lung diseases; prevents grip and pneumonia. At all druggists; guaranteed; 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

RAILROADS

MEN SCARCE IN MICHIGAN

Shortage of Labor Is Felt In Railroad Circles There.

A. Brostedt Talks of Conditions In the Gogebic District.

A. Brostedt, northern passenger agent of the Great Northern railway, has returned from a trip to the Gogebic mining district, in Northern Michigan. Everything is all activity in business circles there, he says, but there is a great scarcity of labor.

"Railroad contractors are having a very hard time of it getting enough men to finish up their contracts," said Mr. Brostedt. "Laborers appear to be more scarce than they have been for years past. The mines are meeting with the same difficulty. All of them are running to their full capacity, but they are short of men, and are unable to employ as large crews as they want to.

"It looks now as if the labor situation would remain about the same through the winter. The scarcity extends into the Duluth district, and all through the Northwest. I can hardly see where an extra supply of men will come from. The woods work will be opening up from now on, making a heavy drain on the small available supply of unemployed men."

Local employment agencies report that there is little change in the labor situation, and that there is still a scarcity of men for railroads, woods and other classes of work.

EXPENDITURE AUTHORIZED.

The Canadian Pacific Will Extend $7,000,000 For Rolling Stock.

An expenditure of $7,000,000 for rolling stock was authorized at the annual meeting yesterday of the Canadian Pacific directors held at Montreal.

Resolutions were passed authorizing the construction of the Wolsley-Reston branch and the issue of 4 per cent consolidated debenture stock in aid thereof; authorizing the lease of the Nicolay, Kamloops & Samilkameon Coal & Railway company, and the issue of $4,000,000 4 per cent consolidate debenture stock to defray the cost of two new Atlantic steamships; approving the agreement with the British Columbia Electric railway for working of the Vancouver & Lulu Island railway; approving the traffic agreement with the Spokane International Railway company; authorizing the lease of the Esquimault & Nanaimo railway, and approving the acquisition of the property of the St. John Bridge & Railway Extension company.

Sir William Van Horne was re-elected chairman of the board of directors; Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president; David McNicoll, vice president.

According to the president's report the gross revenue from traffic during the fiscal year was more than $50,000,000. It is expected that even this large sum will be exceeded by a considerable amount the current year.

WEST DULUTH

INDUSTRY OF CHILDREN

Shown In Vegetable and Flower Display at Fairmont School.

Produce of Fine Quality and Shows Care and Work.

This afternoon Fairmont school at West Duluth has a vegetable and flower display on exhibition at the school. The produce and the flowers have been raised by the children of the school; they having had entire charge of it, and having developed it under guidance of elders, who have taken an interest in the matter.

This is the result of work done in one of the several market gardens established by some of the women of the city in various parts of the town. The result of the industry of the children is really remarkable, and the display would do justice to many professional produce raisers.

The Women's club will be represented at the display, and the parents of West Duluth have been invited to attend and view the result. The decorations at the school in honor of the affair are elaborate, and entertaining will take up the afternoon.

PLEASED WITH CANADA.

Two Former Minnesotans Have Prospered In New Northwest.

Two former Minnesotans, who now live in the Canadian Northwest, are visiting in West Duluth and talking the new territory in great shape. They are enthusiastic over the present conditions there, and over what seems to be a bright future. One is John Dement, who formerly lived in West Duluth, and the other is H. B. Morden, formerly of Stillwater. Mr. Dement took up land in Assiniboia, about two years ago, and since that time has met with great success in farming. He owns 320 acres, and had eighty acres under cultivation this year, the land averaging a yield of wheat of thirty bushels to the acre. He expects to have double the crop next season.

Mr. Morden now lives in Calgary, where he is in the real estate business. He says business is good and growing, and that everybody who attends to business seems to be prosperous.

AFTER FISH POACHERS.

United States Will Stop Depredations of Americans In Canadian Waters.

Cleveland, Oct. 5.—Acting on authority given him by Secretary of the Treasury Leslie M. Shaw, Charles F. Leach, collector of customs for the port of Cleveland, will take a hand in the work of putting a stop to depredations of American fishing tugs in Canadian waters, and sailed for Detroit yesterday on the United States revenue cutter Morrill for a cruise over the lake fishing grounds in search of boats carrying fish caught in Canadian waters. He will take into custody all fishermen and cargoes found to be in violation of the United States customs laws. Collector Leach's authority for the still hunt is contained in a letter, written to him in answer to one he sent to the department of the treasury asking if it were his duty to take any action in the cases of Lake Erie fishermen guilty of invading Canadian waters.

ONE BOAT EVERY FIFTEEN MINUTES

Enormous Traffic at the Soo During Month of September.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Oct. 6.—Reports of the Soo canals for September have been issued by the governments of the United States and Canada. These show the month to have been 920,000 tons of freight under the record, which was July this year, but still to have passed the enormous tonnage of 5,782,944 tons. The total business of the canals for this year to date has been 39,615,577 tons, which is more than for any preceding full year prior to 1902. That the year will exceed 1902 by a large tonnage, and will reach about 37,500,000 tons there is no question. The season is expected to end about December 10, making nearly eight months of open navigation.

The tonnage for September was made great by a few items of merchandise, of which iron ore easily led, with 4,192,441 net tons. There were also 9,325,000 bushels of grain and 72,100 tons of flour, all eastbound. In coal westbound the traffic was 382,000 tons, making the season's business in this commodity 4,617,000 tons.

A total of 2,767 ships passed through the canals during the month, making an average of one vessel every fifteen minutes day and night for the thirty days. There were no accidents to vessels or the canals in the month and no delays. September, 1904, showed 500,000 tons less freight.

FARMERS SHOOT HAWKS.

Drop Hoe and Scythe to Kill Foe of Chickens.

Westerly, R. I., Oct. 6.—Farming in this section is at a standstill. Agriculturists and every boy who can carry a gun has dropped hoe, scythe and potato hook to shoot hawks. Thousands of the birds have appeared during their migrations southward, and the sport, which is confined to a sparsely settled community of but a few hundred families, only lasts for two or three days.

Aside from the sporting side of the shooting, it has a serious feature, for the hawks wage a relentless war on the chickens. Formerly there was a bounty paid for dead hawks, but one man made so much money one season that he depleted a town treasury. He discovered that by concealing himself and throwing out a dead hawk, live ones could be decoyed to within a few feet. This method is now generally employed. There is said to be more real sport shooting hawks than game birds, as they are very wary and hard to kill.

READY FOR SERVICE!

FALL 1905

The Columbia is ready to serve you with ready-for-service apparel of the highest order at the lowest prices at which such reliable goods can be sold. Columbia prices will be found lower than Duluth people have been in the habit of paying.

"ONE PRICE TO ALL" seems to be a sadly-neglected principle with most clothing stores in this city. We shall adhere absolutely to it at this establishment. We shall always mark our goods in the first place with figures so low and just that no "ten per cent off" policy is possible, nor necessary to capture or purchase the trade of this or that class of men. We think everybody is entitled to the minimum price.

WE WANT EVERYBODY TO KNOW that the new management of this, the greatest clothing store in Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin, is not too toppy to appreciate the sale of a five-cent collar button; that we want the trade of everybody and that the policy of high prices and exclusive sales which is so common here, has been changed by us to one of small profits and lots of them; that we are just as anxious to cater to the man with the dinner pail as to the man with an automobile, and that our comprehensive stocks of merchandise will meet the wants of either.

A quarter of a million dollars worth of apparel for men and boys, carefully selected by experienced and enthusiastic buyers, is now on the shelves and counters of our two large stores at the Head of the Lakes.

THE WHOLESALE TAILORS who make Columbia clothes are recognized as among the very few who have acquired a national reputation of being creators of ready-for-service clothes, compared with which the output of the ordinary merchant tailor sinks into insignificance. The foremost business men of our day wear these masterpieces of the sartorial art, and neither in its advertising nor in its store methods need a modern clothing store be as loud and undignified as is the case with some.

AS A LIGHT IN DARKNESS will The Columbia be hailed by all those who have been sickened by unfair store methods and juggling with prices; who have been betrayed by common ready-mades, or who feel uncomfortably ill-dressed by their local tailor. We never lose sight of the importance of quality. We propose to grow greater year by year under your very eyes. We can hope to do so only by allowing none but such wearables under our roof as will be a credit to the maker and to the wearer, and by winning your confidence and lasting friendship through methods fair and above reproach.

THE BEST clothes we sell come from the shops of the STEIN-BLOCH WHOLESALE TAILORS, whose label stands for fifty-one years of knowing how, and who have demonstrated the fact that ninety-nine men out of one hundred are easy to fit, if the clothes are made rightly. When your tailor says: "You are hard to fit," he slyly trusts to cover his own shortcomings as a craftsman. We enjoy the exclusive right to the sale of Stein-Bloch clothes at the Head of the Lakes, and commend them without stint, especially to those who are partial to the custom-made garment.

Evening Story

THE MAN IN THE PORTRAIT

By Harvey Lloyd.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The sunshine had never looked so bright to Amy as on this glorious September day, as she stood on the vineclad porch of her cozy cottage and contemplated the thriving garden and the velvety lawn. The city with its distant haze of smoke blurring the sky seemed far away. The great world itself seemed to have retired an immense distance from her little Eden, and all the noise and the strife and the trouble seemed wholly away and apart from the new life into which she had come.

And all doubts and fears had vanished, for there was Fred, strong and tender and true, to stand between her and every harm. Ah, Fred, and her eyes grew tender and an ecstacy of joy filled her whole being. Of course she was still almost a bride, but the months since the springtime wedding had been so full of happiness that the entire future was rosy-hued.

While she still reveled in these delightful day dreams she glanced toward the street and was surprised to see the figure of a woman leaning against the fence. The woman was poorly clad and bore on her face the unmistakable marks of erring and marred womanhood. She leaned against the fence as though in pain and her face showed much pathetic evidence of sickness and weakness that Amy involuntarily hastened toward her.

"You are ill," she exclaimed. "Can't I help you?"

The woman turned a sullen and defiant face toward the dainty lady on the pretty lawn.

Amy did not fail to notice that beneath the hardness and badness and illness, the face had lines of beauty.

"She must have been a pretty girl once," thought Amy, "and she is yet young. She cannot be much older than I."

But covering all the lines of beauty and of youth were the lines of dissipation, of wantonness, of brazen shamelessness, and over all like a mask was the expression of pride and defiance.

"Such as you can't help such as me," she replied sullenly to Amy's proffer of help.

"But you are ill," persisted Amy, as a spasm of pain twitched the hard features and the woman leaned more heavily upon the fence.

"You'd be ill yourself if you'd gone through what I have," she replied. "I ain't slept for two nights, nor had a decent bite to eat, either. But I'll get into the city tonight, and then I reckon I'll be all right. I've been walking for two days and I'm pretty well fagged"—with an expression of apologetic weakness.

"Oh, dear, how dreadful," responded the young wife with pretty sympathy. "You must come in and rest and I'll make you a pot of strong tea. You never can walk into the city in your condition. It's a good ten miles."

"Come in there?" faltered the woman, pointing toward the house.

"Yes, indeed," replied the other, "and lie down a bit on the lounge while I make you some tea and fix you up a lunch."

"Lie down in your pretty cottage while you wait on me?" And the woman laughed harshly. But the laugh ended in a sob and she broke down completely.

"No'm, I won't do that. But I wish you'd let me just kiss your hand," and she grasped the other's hand impulsively and raised it to her lips. "It's the first kind words I've heard for many a month," she sobbed.

Mrs. Dennison gently pulled her within the gate and before the woman knew it she was lying on the comfortable lounge in the bright little sitting room.

Tired nature asserted itself and she dropped into a gentle slumber which lasted for two hours. When she awakened a dainty luncheon was on a little table by her side, and the young hostess who had been watching came forward with a warm invitation that she partake. Wonderingly she did so.

"If there were more like you there'd be fewer like me," she said.

"Perhaps it is not all your fault," suggested Mrs. Dennison gently.

"No, before heaven, it is not," replied the latter passionately. "Although I've plenty to answer for. But in the beginning I was honest. I believed him although I knew he was not of my kind, and that gentlemen were not in the habit of marrying shop girls. But he was so fair of speech and so honest of face that I believed him—and, of course, he tired of me and threw me aside like a broken plaything. I ought to have known it, but I was an ignorant young thing and I didn't know the world then. First I was broken hearted, but I was proud and—well, I simply drowned myself in wickedness. I thought I didn't care for a time, but lately I've been sick a good deal and I'm getting old and the river ain't far ahead of me. Oh, I know. Such as you don't know, and I hope and pray you may never know, but I've seen it many times. There's nothing but the river when we lose our good looks and get sick."

"And this man," suggested Mrs. Dennison.

A look of black hate, murderous in its intensity, came over the woman's face. "I heard a few weeks ago that the man was married and settled down. Married and respectable, while I was sick and hungry and an outcast and it drove me nearly mad. And that's why I walked fifty miles. I'm going to make him feel some of the things I've felt. As I loved him once I hate him, and the whimpering cliff he has married, and I'm going to ruin his life as he has ruined mine."

"Oh, that would be terrible," exclaimed Mrs. Dennison. "How do you know she is a whimpering chit? Do you know her?"

"No, but I know the tribe," replied the woman with a gesture so fierce that the other recoiled. "They draw aside their skirts when I pass. Well, I'll give this one a chance to see how it seems."

"Maybe she is not selfish and proud, only loving and trusting," suggested the bride.

"So much the worse for her luck then," replied the woman harshly. "I'll bring his face and hers to the dust."

The woman arose to go. "You are an angel," she said, "and if it's any good to you you can know that you have the blessing of a poor, wicked unfortunate every minute you live."

As she spoke she glanced toward the wall and her eyes fell on a portrait of Mrs. Dennison. "It's a fine likeness," she said.

"Do you think so," replied Mrs. Dennison. "There is a portrait of my husband—the best man in the world. What is the matter?"

For the moment the woman's eyes lighted on the man's portrait she gave a sharp cry and began to tremble from head to foot. "Only one of my attacks," she replied, sinking on the lounge. "Please let me lie here for a minute or two."

For full five minutes she lay there with her face in her hands, her whole body shaking and quivering as with some overpowering emotion. Presently she aroused herself and rose again and staggered toward the door.

"Before I go I want to say something," she said. "Will you tell your husband my story?"

"I tell my husband everything," replied the young wife proudly.

"Well," the woman answered, "you can tell him if you care to that your great kindness and sympathy so touched my heart that I have changed my mind, and I will not ruin the man and his young wife. In fact, I will pray heaven that she never finds it out. I reckon his conscience will punish him enough."

"Oh, I am so glad," replied Mrs. Dennison, "cannot I do something more for you?"

"No," replied the woman steadily, "You have done a great deal more for several persons today than you have any idea of. Good-bye and God bless you."

Then she walked steadily down the path and vanished into the great world.

EXPERIENCE OF RIP VAN WINKLE

Former New Duluthian Returns to Find Family Gone.

Like Rip Van Winkle, Frank Hollebang returned to his old home after a long and mysterious absence, only to find the house untenanted and decayed and his wife gone. Mr. Hollebang did not go to sleep in the Catskill mountains, but he left New Duluth very suddenly in 1895 and when he visited the town yesterday in search of his wife whom he deserted years before, he found himself a stranger in a strange land.

Mr. Hollebang's disapeparance was rich gossip for the residents of New Duluth ten years ago, but many of them have moved away and those who remained had almost forgotten the case. But Mr. Hollebang's persistent inquiries among the pioneers at last bore fruit and one was able to tell him that his wife was last heard from in San Diego, Cal., where she was known as Mrs. Stanley.

As Mr. Hollebang now has dollars for the pennies he had when in New Duluth, he is anxious to see his spouse and be forgiven for his long absence. It is not known whether she is married to Stanley or not, but if she is there will undoubtedly be more complications in the career of Rip Van Winkle, Jr.

When he left New Duluth, Hollebang went to San Francisco, intending to send for his wife when he secured a good position. But such were hard to find and he was finally obliged to ship as deck hand on a Chinese merchant ship. He knocked around aboard ship for several years and finally settled in a mining community in the West, where he did very well indeed. He will leave tonight for California in a final effort to reunite his scattered family.

UNION STRIKE IN STATU QUO

Nothing Radical Done By Either Side of Printers' Contest.

The strike of the printers' union for an eight-hour day in job shops is in statu quo. As a matter of fact the real contest has not yet begun for the employing printers have secured but few outside printers and are just squaring themselves away for the fight which is to come, and the strikers are doing the same. The latter have not yet put out pickets and patrolled the incoming trains or anything like that so that the real contest is yet to develop.

Both sides are issuing circulars to the trade and appealing for support. The two Typothetae shops—Merritt & Hector and G. W. Boutin of West Duluth—who were expected to sign the scale, yesterday, did not do so but may be induced to do it within the next few days. The larger shops will fight. It is claimed that some printers were procured from the ranges, yesterday, and scattered among the larger shops and put to work.

It should be understood among the public generally that the newspapers are not affected by the strike as many suppose. It is a strike solely of job printers who are demanding the eight-hour day, which the newspaper printers already have.

MOTHER CRAZY; FATHER MISSING

Infant Dies at Children's Home Under Pitiful Circumstances.

With the whereabouts of its father unknown, and with its mother in the insane asylum at Fergus Falls, the infant daughter if Mr. and Mrs. Hans Holmes died, at the Childrens Home, Thursday, and was, yesterday, buried in the Potter's field.

About a year ago the mother was adjudged insane and sent to Fergus Falls, the father remaining in the city to support the children at their home at 1017 East Ninth street. It is claimed that the neighbors contributed largely toward their support and about six weeks ago Humane Officer Withrow, at their request, placed all of the children but the youngest in the state school, the baby being sent to the Children's Home.

The father then left the city and his present whereabouts are unknown.

MAN SHOOTS WIFE AND THEN HIMSELF.

Marion, Ind., Oct. 6.—James D. Gregg, 35 years old, last night shot and fatally wounded his wife, Maud Gregg, and then shot himself and is not expected to survive.

The Greggs had separated over a year ago, and last night the husband went to the home of his wife's parents and pleaded with her to dismiss a suit for divorce, and upon her refusal he drew a revolver and fired, shooting her in the back. He then shot himself and attempted to fire a second shot at his wife but was disarmed by her father.

PUTNAM HAS RESIGNED.

The County Treasurer of Sherburne Has Finally Quit.

St. Paul, Oct. 6.—The Sherburne county incident was closed yesterday by the resignation of County Treasurer George F. Putnam. The chairman of the board of county commissioners appeared before the governor with a resolution from the board requesting the governor to remove the treasurer, but before the governor had time to take action a telegram was received stating that Putnam had resigned. Wednesday the county commissioners had asked Putnam to resign, but he refused, and they drafted another resolution asking the governor to remove him.

Putnam, it is alleged, had taken $1,700 in cash from the county treasury some time ago and had given his private check for the amount, although he had no funds to give the check any value. The check was found by the boardsmen and they asked an investigation. The examiners from the public examiner's office found, in addition to the check, irregularities amounting to $233, making a total defalcation of $1,933. The shortage has been made good, and as the treasurer has resigned, no further action will be taken.

USE COAL FOR INCINERATOR

Commissioners Find Gas Too Expensive For Garbage Crematory.

Coal will be used for fuel at the city garbage incinerator instead of gas. The board of water and light commissioners held a meeting, yesterday, and it was determined that the expense attached to the installation of gas for fuel at the incinerator would be too great to make it practicable. It will cost about $5,000 to extend the water and gas mains from Garfield avenue to Railroad street and the crematory site with no prospect of any other new consumers on the line to help increase the income. Even at the basis of 50 cents per thousand feet for gas, the price that the city pays, it was claimed that the expense would be too high.

Commissioners H. H. Phelps and L. B. Manley and Manager Case were appointed a committee to draw up the amendments to the contract between the city and the Zenith Furnace company which have been agreed on.

BmnSand etaoin shrdlu cmfwyp vbgkqj

The agreement went into effect at once and all gas bills rendered from Oct. 1 will be based on the new rate.

To prevent freezing after using, the overland auxiliary main on West First street will not be covered according to the order of the board of public works, but it will be cut out and drained after usage each time. The main has been put in to use in cases of emergency.

Judge Coburn is justice of the peace of West Lewiston precinct and is the regular police judge of this city.

Bindels, in his complaint, charges Judge Coburn with killing his dog. Judge Coburn says:

"The dog was just a nuisance. He was running over my place and would not stay at home. He was a nuisance."

"Do you think so," replied Mrs. Dennison. "There is a portrait of my husband —the best man in the world. What is the matter?"

For the moment the woman's eyes lighted on the man's portrait she gave a sharp cry and began to tremble from head to foot. "Only one of my attacks," she replied, sinking on the lounge. "Please let me lie here for a minute or two."

For full five minutes she lay there with her face in her hands, her whole body shaking and quivering as with some overpowering emotion. Presently she aroused herself and rose again and staggered toward the door.

"Before I go I want to say something," she said. "Will you tell your husband my story?"

"I tell my husband everything," replied the young wife proudly.

"Well," the woman answered, "you can tell him if you care to that your great kindness and sympathy so touched my heart that I have changed my mind, and I will not ruin the man and his young wife. In fact, I will pray heaven that she never finds it out. I reckon his conscience will punish him enough."

"Oh, I am so glad," replied Mrs. Dennison, "cannot I do something more for you?"

"No," replied the woman steadily, "You have done a great deal more for several persons today than you have any idea of. Good-bye and God bless you."

Then she walked steadily down the path and vanished into the great world.

CHIEF PAYS REWARD FOR CROWE'S ARREST.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 6.—Chief of Police Donahue yesterday sent a cashier's check for $200 to Butte, Mont., to cover the reward offered by the chief personally for the return of Pat Crowe. The check was sent to Capt. Dunn of the Omaha detective force, to be turned over to the officers at Butte who placed Crowe under arrest.—Chief Donahue expressed gratification at Crowe being in custody, and said that extra precautions would be taken to forestall any attempt Crowe might make to escape. He will be brought back handcuffed to two detectives.

EXPERIENCE OF RIP VAN WINKLE

Former New Duluthian Returns to Find Family Gone.

Like Rip Van Winkle, Frank Hollebang returned to his old home after a long and mysterious absence, only to find the house untenanted and decayed and his wife gone. Mr. Hollebang did not go to sleep in the Catskill mountains, but he left New Duluth very suddenly in 1895 and when he visited the town yesterday in search of his wife whom he deserted years before, he found himself a stranger in a strange land.

Mr. Hollebang's disapeparance was rich gossip for the residents of New Duluth ten years ago, but many of them have moved away and those who remained had almost forgotten the case. But Mr. Hollebang's persistent inquiries among the pioneers at last bore fruit and one was able to tell him that his wife was last heard from in San Diego, Cal., where she was known as Mrs. Stanley.

As Mr. Hollebang now has dollars for the pennies he had when in New Duluth, he is anxious to see his spouse and be forgiven for his long absence. It is not known whether she is married to Stanley or not, but if she is there will undoubtedly be more complications in the career of Rip Van Winkle, Jr.

When he left New Duluth, Hollebang went to San Francisco, intending to send for his wife when he secured a good position. But such were hard to find and he was finally obliged to ship as deck hand on a Chinese merchant ship. He knocked around aboard ship for several years and finally settled in a mining community in the West, where he did very well indeed. He will leave tonight for California in a final effort to reunite his scattered family.

UNION STRIKE IN STATU QUO

Nothing Radical Done By Either Side of Printers' Contest.

The strike of the printers' union for an eight-hour day in job shops is in statu quo. As a matter of fact the real contest has not yet begun for the employing printers have secured but few outside printers and are just squaring themselves away for the fight which is to come, and the strikers are doing the same. The latter have not yet put out pickets and patrolled the incoming trains or anything like that so that the real contest is yet to develop.

Both sides are issuing circulars to the trade and appealing for support. The two Typothetae shops—Merritt & Hector and G. W. Boutin of West Duluth—who were expected to sign the scale, yesterday, did not do so but may be induced to do it within the next few days. The larger shops will fight. It is claimed that some printers were procured from the ranges, yesterday, and scattered among the larger shops and put to work.

It should be understood among the public generally that the newspapers are not affected by the strike as many suppose. It is a strike solely of job printers who are demanding the eight-hour day, which the newspaper printers already have.

Infant Dies at Children's Home Under Pitiful Circumstances.

With the whereabouts of its father unknown, and with its mother in the insane asylum at Fergus Falls, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hans Holmes died, at the Childrens Home, Thursday, and was, yesterday, buried in the Potter's field.

About a year ago the mother was adjudged insane and sent to Fergus Falls, the father remaining in the city to support the children at their home at 1017 East Ninth street. It is claimed that the neighbors contributed largely toward their support, and about six weeks ago Humane Officer Withrow, at their request, placed all of the children but the youngest in the state school, the baby being sent to the Children's Home.

The father then left the city and his present whereabouts are unknown.

MAN SHOOTS WIFE AND THEN HIMSELF.

Marion, Ind., Oct. 6.—James D. Gregg, 35 years old, last night shot and fatally wounded his wife, Maud Gregg, and then shot himself and is not expected to survive.

The Greggs had separated over a year ago, and last night the husband went to the home of his wife's parents and pleaded with her to dismiss a suit for divorce, and upon her refusal he drew a revolver and fired, shooting her in the back. He then shot himself and attempted to fire a second shot at his wife but was disarmed by her father.

PUTNAM HAS RESIGNED.

The County Treasurer of Sherburne Has Finally Quit.

St. Paul, Oct. 6.—The Sherburne county incident was closed yesterday by the resignation of County Treasurer George F. Putnam. The chairman of the board of county commissioners appeared before the governor with a resolution from the board requesting the governor to remove the treasurer, but before the governor had time to take action a telegram was received stating that Putnam had resigned. Wednesday the county commissioners had asked Putnam to resign, but he refused, and they drafted another resolution asking the governor to remove him.

Putnam, it is alleged, had taken $1,700 in cash from the county treasury some time ago and had given his private check for the amount, although he had no funds to give the check any value. The check was found by the bondsmen and they asked an investigation. The examiners from the public examiner's office found, in addition to the check, irregularities amounting to $233, making a total defalcation of $1,933. The shortage has been made good, and as the treasurer has resigned, no further action will be taken.

Commissioners Find Gas Too Expensive For Garbage Crematory.

Coal will be used for fuel at the city garbage incinerator instead of gas. The board of water and light commissioners held a meeting, yesterday, and it was determined that the expense attached to the installation of gas for fuel at the incinerator would be too great to make it practicable. It will cost about $5,000 to extend the water and gas mains from Garfield avenue to Railroad street and the crematory site with no prospect of any other new consumers on the line to help increase the income. Even at the basis of 40 cents per thousand feet for gas, the price that the city pays, it was claimed that the expense would be too high.

Commissioners H. H. Phelps and L. B. Manley and Manager Case were appointed a committee to draw up the amendments to the contract between the city and the Zenith Furnace company which have been agreed on. BmSand etaoin shrdlu emfwyp vbgkqj

The agreement went into effect at once and all gas bills rendered from Oct. 1 will be based on the new rate.

To prevent freezing after using, the overland auxiliary main on West First street will not be covered according to the order of the board of public works, but it will be cut out and drained after usage each time. The main has been put in to use in cases of emergency.

WARRANT FOR JUDGE.

Citizen Demands Officer's Arrest For Killing His Dog.

Lewiston, Idaho, Oct. 6.—Because he shot "one spaniel named Dick," which belonged to Herman Bindels, a warrant was issued by Probate Judge Hanlon for the arrest of Judge C. P. Coburn on the charge of malicious mischief.

Judge Coburn is justice of the peace of West Lewiston precinct and is the regular police judge of this city.

Bindels, in his complaint, charges Judge Coburn with killing his dog. Judge Coburn says:

"The dog was just a nuisance. He was running over my place and would not stay at home. He was a nuisance."

SNAKE BITE CURE IS NEARER FATAL

To Man Than Poison But a Physician Saved Him.

Latrobe, Pa., Oct. 6.—After the unlimited use of whisky as an antidote for the bite of a copperhead snake Henry Baur, aged 60, lapsed into a state of coma and narrowly escaped being buried alive.

Baur, who is a retired business man of Pittsburg, has spent the summer in a cottage on the ridge bordering the Youghiagheny river, ten miles below Connellsville. He was bitten on the left hand by a large copperhead snake a few days ago. Being a firm believer in the efficacy of the whisky cure he at once began the treatment.

William Worme, his only companion in his isolated home, was hastily sent to Dawson for whisky. On his return, as no unfavorable symptoms had developed, the treatment was continued. Later Worme was overcome by sleep while watching at the bedside, and when he awoke, soon after midnight, he was horrified to find Baur cold and rigid.

Supposing that he was dead he washed and shaved him and prepared him for the grave, straightening him out on a board. He then waited until daybreak and started to report Baur's death.

Meanwhile a physician who had been sent for just after Baur was bitten arrived. Investigation disclosed the fact that the supposed dead man was in a comatose sleep. Antidotes were given and consciousness returned.

The cure had been thorough and no ill effects from the snake bite remained.

DR. WEBSTER IS CALLED

Testifies as to Condition of Lindquist Before Going to Riesland.

Chiropractors and Patients Cured Appear In the Defense.

When the Lindquist vs. Riesland malpractice case was resumed yesterday afternoon, Mr. Riesland, the defendant, was recalled for cross-examination by Mr. Whitely, under the statute.

Mr. Riesland described his treatment for heart disease, which was manipulation of the spine to relieve pressure on the nerves leading to decaying tissue. In the treatment of spinal curvature, witness said he had seen spines four inches out of line. He did not remember how much curvature there was in Lindquist's spine. No two spines, he said, have the same curvature. A normal back varies in different people. He claims he could have straightened Lindquist's spine had he stuck to the treatment. As it was, he did not straighten it any.

He said ankylosis takes place in animals. He never made any experiments on the spine of a cadaver, or did any dissecting. He never draws blood in his operation; never thought of doing such a thing. Asked whether his treatment had ever caused internal bleeding, he said he did not know, that the treatments had no lasting disagreeable symptoms.

Questioned as to germs, Mr. Riesland said he could not distinguish between tubercular and typhoid germs, because he never looked at any microscopically. He did not know what became of the germs when they disappear from a part. Germs, he said, go to a part when there is decayed material for food; waste tissue. Inactivity, he said, causes waste tissue.

He testified that he told Lindquist his condition was caused by a breaking down of tissue, what the medical fraternity would probably call tuberculosis.

Dr. H. E. Webster was called to the stand by Mr. Whitely. He testified as to his qualifications as a physician and surgeon. He said he first treated Lindquist about six years ago for an abscess in the rectum. He said he had seen Lindquist since, and he came to his office in the spring of 1904, and was in fairly good condition so far as getting about was concerned, but that he was far from being in robust health. He saw Lindquist in the summer of 1904, and his condition was about the same as in the spring. Lindquist said he was about to employ Mr. Riesland. He saw Lindquist frequently afterward and noted his general appearance, his power of locomotion seeming to gradually diminish. From getting about with a cane, he finally began to get around on crutches.

Dr. Webster examined Lindquist last February or March and found his leg drawn up, and a sensitive condition about the hip. He was emaciated, appeared to be suffering a great deal and his general appearance indicated tubercular trouble. He said Lindquist will never get over his hip trouble though it is possible he may improve a little from his present condition. His right leg, he said, will always remain crippled. He did not examine Lindquist's back for ankylosis because he did not suspect any.

Cross-examined Dr. Webster said he did not believe in treatment of all diseases through the spine. He had read Dr. Palmer's publication and believed himself competent to judge chiropractic. He defined chiropractic as a manipulation of the bones particularly of the spine.

Mr. Jenswold then put Dr. Webster through a course of questioning to get at his understanding of the terms.

"If you were a chiropractor and a patient came to you what would you do?" asked Mr. Jenswold.

"I would refer him to a physician," answered Dr. Webster amid general laughter that went around the court room.

Under re-direct examination, again, Dr. Webster said that when tuberculosis attacks any part of the body, as the hip, necrosis of the bone takes place. Tuberculosis may attack flesh or the tissues, besides the bones. Ankylosis, Dr. Webster said, is produced by a growing together after a tearing down of tissue, a sort of repair in which two bones become as one.

Dr. Webster was not permitted to express any views or criticisms on chiropractic theory or treatment.

Cross-examined, again, Dr. Webster said, he had been interested in the case as a physician. He denied that he was jealous of Riesland's practice or of any other chiropractor. Asked if he had made the statement to Mr. Jenswold some time ago, that if suit were brought against Mr. Riesland, witness could get all the doctors in the city to testify against Riesland, Dr. Webster admitted that he might have done so. Witness denied that he had solicited physicians to appear at the present trial.

A. J. Lindquist was recalled in his own behalf to testify as to the grounds of his claim for damages, Mr. Whitely contending that the injection of peroxide of hydrogen, and the application of salve, was included in the "treatment." The court sustained Mr. Jenswold's objection, and Lindquist rested his case.

Opening his case to the jury, Mr. Jenswold claimed but for one fact he would not put in any evidence; that the defense has been to large expense in the case, and proposes to show that the defendant is not an impostor. He said he would produce persons who had been cured of diseases by Mr. Riesland. He contended that the practice is new, and it would be necessary to prove cures, all the way from consumption to total blindness. He claimed he would bring eminent authority in the practice of chiropractic. He would show that the treatment Lindquist received at Riesland's hands was such as chiropractors follow, and that he would undoubtedly have recovered had he followed it out. The traction table, he said, would be brought in and a manipulation of the spinal vertebrae demonstrated.

George A. Bennison, a boarding house keeper on Garfield avenue, testified to receiving treatment from Mr. Riesland for diabetes for the past two years.

Objection to a description of the treatment was sustained. Mr. Jenswold said he had several other witnesses for the same purpose of evidence, and the court told him about all there was to do was to put them on the stand, so the jurors could see them.

O. G. Smith, a chiropractor, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., at the head of the American School of Chiropractic, was called to the stand. Witness claimed he is familiar with the practice and diagnosis of treatment of chiropractic. He took the practice up in January, 1899, and has followed it since, in Iowa and California. He told of different schools of chiropractic in Iowa and in California, with which he has been connected. He said the school is a comparatively new one in America. There are about 150 chiropractors in Minnesota, twenty in Iowa, twenty-five in California, ten in Washington, and a number in Michigan.

A human spine was produced and Mr. Smith was asked to explain in general the treatment. He proceeded to give an anatorical talk to the jury, demonstrating subluxation of the vertebrae. He claimed Mr. Riesland's treatment of Lindquist, as described, was entirely proper according to chiropractic teaching, and said the "traction table" was a common appliance used by chiropractors.

FARMHAND HAS TROUBLE

When He Demanded Beautiful Daughter of the Farmer.

West Newton, Pa., Oct. 6.—This part of Westmoreland county is in an uproar over developments in solving a sensational affair of the heart at the home of John Williams, one of the wealthy farmers.

George Keck, a former farmhand of Williams, came to the farm and demanded Miss Katherine, the buxom, beautiful 20-year-old daughter of the farmer.

He said he had married the girl three months ago, and Kitty confessed that she had been Mrs. Keck for that length of time.

The gun play began about this time. Who opened fire is not known, but the young wife was slightly injured by shot. Keck was finally forced to retreat without his wounded wife, but the next morning drove to the house with some friends and got away not only with his wife, but with his mother-in-law as well.

Keck lives near Butler and is twice the age of his wife.

Spring Irrigation Depends Upon Retentive Quality of Soil.

Fallacies Regarding Disastrous Floods In the Mississippi Valley.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Oct. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—With the complete use of the ordinary summer flow of the streams there has grown up the practice of what is known as spring irrigation. This has been investigated in a general way by the experts of the reclamation service, in order to determine how far it may be wise for the government, under the terms of the reclamation act, to utilize the flood flow of a river by direct irrigation during the times of flood.

It is unquestionably preferable, wherever possible, to store the floods and use the water during the summer when it is needed. There are many streams, however, in the arid region where there is not sufficient reservoir capacity, and where the flood waters go to waste because nature has not provided any place where suitable storage dams can be built. Rather than have these waters wasted, consideration has been had of the practicability of building large canals which will catch some of the flood and take the waters out on the tillable ground, giving the soil at least one thorough soaking. It has been found that, while this practice has been introduced and used successfully in a few localities, it is not always to be commended. It has been found also that many disappointments have resulted and that promoters of irrigation schemes have already gone into the matter in a way which has resulted in serious disaster.

Owing to the general stimulation of irrigation schemes following the passage of the reclamation act, a great many projects have been launched upon the public, stocks or bonds of irrigation enterprises being readily sold on the strength of glowing prospectuses. Some of these have gone into spring irrigation, and from the literature issued it has seemed as though this way of bringing water to the thirsty land is even better than where water is stored and can be had throughout the year. The promoters have pointed to certain notable examples where spring irrigation has been successful, but they have forgotten to call attention to other localities where failure has followed and where investment has been lost.

The underlying or fundamental principle to be borne in mind is that the success of flood or spring irrigation is dependent upon the retentive quality of the soil and the existence of hard-pan at a shallow depth. Where these conditions exist, the soil, when completely saturated, acts as a reservoir, and thus the spring irrigation becomes virtually summer subirrigation. In other words, the ground itself stores up the water for use of the plants throughout the growing season.

Where, however, the soil is not retentive of moisture, and there is no impervious stratum at a shallow depth beneath the surface, the water of the spring irrigation disappears quickly by percolation, and disappointment follows. There are several places in Oregon where spring irrigation has been notably successful because of the peculiar conditions existing. The same system, however, tried on lands apparently of the same quality and only a few miles away has resulted disastrously. The expensive irrigation works have practically failed because the soil did not hold the water for a sufficient time to allow crops to mature.

Among the public fallacies seriously discused in current publications is that concerning the effect of water storage in the arid region upon the floods of the Mississippi river and its tributaries. There is usually no conception of the volume of these floods, or the relative insignificance of the amount of water which comes from the Upper Missouri and from the tributaries heading in the Rocky mountain region.

The destructive floods of the Mississippi come, as a rule, from the Ohio and from rainfall in the Mississippi valley. If by any artificial barrier all of the waters west of the 100th meridian should be held back, there would be little if any appreciable effect on the disastrous floods in the Mississippi valley.

Based on this falacy of the destructive effect of floods from the arid region, arguments have been made to the effect that the people in the arid region should not pay for water stored, but that this burden should be thrown upon the whole country because of the alleged benefit to navigation and to the prevention of floods in the Mississippi valley. A careful study of the facts shows that this claim is absurd, and that 99 per cent at least of the benefits from water storage in the arid region goes directly to some one community interested and not to any person or community situated far down the river or within the humid region.

The diffusion of this fallacy is part of a general scheme initiated by interested parties in order that, later when they have had the benefits of the reclamation act, they may come to congress and endeavor to escape from the annual payments required by law. The future development of the West is dependent to a large extent upon the honest carrying out of the purposes of the law and the payment by the persons benefited of the actual cost of these benefits of water storage. These costs are to be returned to the reclamation fund without profit and without interest. The increase of land values is invariably many times this first cost. The attempt made to escape from the obligations incurred can never meet with the approval of the public when the facts are known.

A section of silvics has been established in the forest service. Silvics is that branch of forestry which deals with the habits and behavior of trees in the forest. Each kind of tree has its individual requirements upon soil, moisture and light, its characteristic form, rate of growth, and reproductive power. Some trees, such as the long-leaf pine, are intolerant of shade, some, as the beech, are tolerant; some kinds prefer a light soil, others a heavy one; some reproduce abundantly, others so sparingly as to suffer in competition for possession of the ground. Again, many of the hardwoods, such as chestnut and oak, sprout freely from stumps, while only very few of the conifers reproduce themselves in this way.

It is upon exact knowledge of these tree habits that intelligent and successful forest management is based. A great deal of detailed information in regard to the habits of forest trees is already in possession of the forest service. The work of the section of silvics will consist in compiling them, and in adding to them by field study, when necessary.

United States Will Object to Cuban Treaty With England.

Havana, Oct. 6.—Owing to the developments of opposition to the ten years' treaty of commerce and navigation between Cuba and Great Britain, the ratification of which is pending in the senate, the senate committee on foreign relations has authorized the publication by the leading government organ of the text of the treaty in order that its provisions may be understood by the public.

Since the outline of its main points Sept. 10, the treaty has been the subject of much criticism in leading newspapers here which agree with the commercial bodies that its ratification would be inimical to Cuban interests and this criticism had resulted in the publication this week of a statement by Juan Francisco O'Farrill, secretary of state, defending the provisions of the treaty in a general way.

The Associated Press last night secured an authentic copy of the treaty, an examination of which reveals various reasons for strong opposition to it interposed by the United States government, one of the principal of these being the fact that throughout the document Great Britain receives the most favored national treatment in every respect except in the matter of import duties.

The latter, owing to the reciprocity treaty between the United States and Cuba, is expressly excepted, but Great Britain by the terms of the treaty is to be included in any of the favors other than tariff provisions which Cuba might hereafter concede to the United States. The clause permitting British warships to refit and provision in Cuban ports in the event of accident or stress of weather includes the much-discussed right of "petrarche," a Spanish term, meaning the resupplying of vessels with war materials.

Secretary O'Farrill was asked to explain the latter provision and he said it would apply only in times of peace, since international law would not permit the re-fitting and re-supplying of vessel in neutral ports, notwithstanding the existence of treaties. He added that precisely similar conditions were written in treaties between the United States, Spain, Russia and Belgium.

The treaty at the outset covers the privileges to be acceded to the citizens and ships of each country in ports of the other, these being equal to the privileges enjoyed by the people of each nation except with reference to the coasting trade, in which, however, is given most favored national treatment. From the standpoint of the United States this is considered to be distinctly inimical to the project for including Cuba in the coasting trade privileges of the United States.

Some of the senators are strongly in favor of ratifying the treaty as a means of showing Cuban independence of the United States, but it is now believed that the strong opposition of President Roosevelt, combined with that of the Spanish commercial element, will prevent ratification.

Secretary O'Farrill insists that the treaty is entirely harmless either to Cuba or to the United States. He pointed out to the Associated Press that the Cuban government is entirely willing to make a similar or even a more liberal convention with the United States. Americans here, however, contend that the United States is entitled, by all reasons of friendship and commerce, to privileges which the peculiar relations of the two countries demand shall not be shared by any other power.

EXPEDITION

Failed to Reach the Top of a Himalayan Peak.

Berne, Oct. 6.—News has been received from Dr. Jacot-Guillarmod's expedition, which went to the Himalayas and endeavored to scale Kinchinjunga (28,156 feet), or, at least, to beat the record made by Mr. Graham on that mountain.

The expedition, which left Darjeeling on Aug. 8, was composed of Dr. Jacot-Guillarmod of Neuchatel, A. E. Crowley, engineer, of Ireland; Lieut. Alexis Pache of Morges and M. Charles Reymond of Neuchatel. No Swiss guides accompanied the party, and the British government supplied an escort of Goorkhas, who are capital mountaineers. The following telegram has been received from Darjeeling:

"This is dispatched from our highest camp on Sept. 1. Pache has been swept away by an avalanche and killed. Insurmountable difficulties, caused by natives, compel us to retrace our steps, and we are returning to Darjeeling."

M. Pache was a lieutenant in the Swiss cavalry; he was 31 years of age and most energetic in character. He joined the expedition chiefly in order to hunt in the Himalayas. His love of adventure led him to fight among the Boers in the late war in the Transvaal.

WAS CALLED NUISANCE

And Now She Sues Her Neighbors For $10,000 Damages.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 6.—One of the strangest stories on the records of common pleas court is told in a suit for damages filed by Mrs. Kathryn Doubler of 265 Fremont street, Friday, against Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Nowak and nine others, who are Mrs. Doubler's neighbors.

Mrs. Doubler charges that on Aug. 16 the eleven neighbors drew up and signed a compact in substance:

"We bond ourselves to see what can be done with one Mrs. A. Doubler, 265 Fremont street, to keep her from raising disturbances and otherwise annoying neighbors on and in the vicinity of Fremont street. We declare her a public nuisance, and wish her bound over to keep the peace."

Mrs. Doubler says she has always borne a good reputation, and that the compact these neighbors signed has damaged her $10,000 worth.

"It was almost a miracle. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me of a terrible breaking out all over the body. I am very grateful." Miss Julia Filbridge, West Cornwell, Con.

NORTHWESTERN TRAIN RUNS INTO AN OPEN SWITCH AT SHEBOYGAN

Sheboygan, Wis., Oct. 6.—The Chicago & Northwestern fast limited passenger train, north bound, had a narrow escape from a bad wreck late last night in the Sheboygan yards by dashing into an open switch and into the rear of a line of freight cars, and only the fact that the train had slackened speed on entering the yards prevented what would have been in all probability a terrible disaster. A number of passengers and trainmen received injuries, most of them of a minor nature.

Among those injured were:

Martin Ryan of Chicago, three ribs broken, body and head cut and bruised.

Mrs. Diestelhorst, Sheboygan, cut and bruised.

The porter and news agent, whose names were not learned, were also seriously and while twelve passengers and trainmen suffered from cuts, bruises and broken bones. Most of the injured are from Sheboygan and are being cared for at their homes.

The freight cars were smashed into splinters and the passenger engine was derailed.

A POISONING TRAGEDY REVEALS ROMANCE OF DISINHERITED SON

Chicago, Oct. 6.—Romance, followed by dissipation ending in reputed disinheritance by a wealthy father, was revealed, today, in the case of Dr. Oliver B. Hart, who, with Irene Klatow, ten years old, sister of his adopted daughter was found at the doctor's house in Rogers Park, last night, unconscious as result of poison. The girl failed to recover, dying shortly after the doctor's wife, who is only 16 years old, returned home from a shopping tour, with the adopted daughter and another sister of Irene. The house was in charge of neighbors who had been telephoned to by Dr. Hart before he lost consciousness. Hart is a son of August Hart, a millionaire of St. Louis. It is said that the doctor's marriage was the result of an elopement two years ago. The wedding is said to have taken place in St. Paul. About a year ago, according to the police, the doctor located in Rogers Park where the father had bought the doctor a home and given Dr. Hart living expenses. Dr. Hart had little or no practice here and it is claimed is a victim of a drug habit. Irene Klatow's sister was adopted by the doctor and wife a year ago from the Illinois industrial school. Yesterday Irene Klatow and her sister, Hazel, went to Rogers Park from Evanston, where they were living at the industrial school from which their sister Edith had been taken. Edith and Hazel accompanied Mrs. Hart shopping. Irene was to have gone with them, but she complained of a slight headache and remained at home.

St. Louis, Oct. 6.—Dr. Oliver B. Hart, who is under police surveillance in Chicago in connection with the death by morphine, yesterday of Irene Klatow, ten years old, and who is reported dying himself from the effect of morphine, is the son of A. B. Hart; reputed millionaire real estate man of St. Louis. Dr. Hart, who is 35 years of age, resided in St. Louis until a year ago, but decided to move to Chicago. He was well known in social circles here and had an established reputation as a physician. Dr. Hart's father and mother departed, today, for Chicago in response to a long distance call.

Time For Filing For Municipal Primaries Is Approaching.

Terms of Seven Republicans and One Democrat Expire.

Only seven weeks remain before the last day for filing for the municipal primaries, which will be held on December 19. November 30 is the last day on which candidates may declare their intentions of entering the race, and after that time the only way they can get their names on the ticket is by petition.

Seven Republicans and one Democrat will leave the council this year, and there is a good chance of a Democratic gain. The six Republicans are: Alderman Wilson in the First ward; Alderman Harker in the Second; Alderman Waugh in the Third; Alderman Trevillon in the fourth; Alderman Olson in the sixth; Alderman Haven in the seventh; and Alderman Chesney in the eighth.

The only Democrat whose term expires this year is Alderman McEwen in the Fifth ward.

Two of the eight retiring aldermen have expressed their determination not to run again. They are Alderman Harker in the second, and Alderman Olson in the sixth.

In the First ward an effort will be made to have Alderman Wilson run again this year. It is conceded that he has made a fine record in the council, and it would be very difficult to find a man in that end of the city to beat him.

Alderman Harker's retirement, leaves an opening in the Second ward, and there is a strong movement on foot there to induce some prominent, independent business man to take the nomination. The Second ward includes the largest residential district in the city, and there seems to be a sentiment among the voters there that the aldermanic position should be taken out of politics as far as possible, and that they should put up a strong independent candidate, who would represent the best interests of the ward and the city. There is talk of calling an old-fashioned town meeting for the purpose of selecting the proper man to take Alderman Harker's place in the council.

In the Third ward, Alderman Waugh will probably be a candidate another year. There is talk of opposition to him, but it has not yet centered on any one person.

In the Fourth ward Alderman Trevillion will again be a candidate, and it will be a difficult matter to oust him from the position in which he has been entrenched for so long.

It is doubtful whether or not Alderman McEwen will again be a candidate in the Fifth ward, but the chances are that he will try for another term. He has aroused some opposition during his long term in the council, and the prospects are that he will have a fight if he enters the race again.

In the Sixth, some strong, Scandinavian Republican will probably be brought out to take Alderman Olson's place. The other alderman of the ward is a Democrat and does not represent the Scandinavian vote, which is very heavy in the district.

In the Seventh ward the situation is somewhat tangled. Alderman Haven is one of the possibilities as a Republican candidate for mayor, and if he should be selected to carry the banner against Mayor Cullum, he will be out of the running. On the other hand, if he is not chosen, he will probably be in the race for aldermanic honors again.

In the Eighth ward Alderman Chesney will probably be a candidate again, but if so, he will have strong opposition both in his own party and in the opposing party.

Meanwhile the problem of selecting somebody to oppose "the level-headed mayor" is apparently no nearer solution than it was a month ago, and from five to ten candidates are mentioned as possibilities, none of them apparently being entirely satisfactory. Among the men mentioned are: Alderman R. D. Haven, E. L. Fisher, Dr. J. J. Eklund, H. H. Phelps, C. T. Fitzsimmons, B. G. Segog, E. L. Millar and Watson S. Moore.

MANY INSPECT "GRASSLAND"

Farmer's Association Car on Exhibition Here Until Saturday.

"Grassland," the car sent out by the North Wisconsin Farmers' association to advertise the fertile farm lands in Ashland, Douglas, Bayfield and Iron counties, will conclude its stay in Duluth this evening.

The car arrived in Duluth yesterday and was visited by many people in the afternoon and evening, when it was lit up with electricity. It will be similarly illuminated this evening and it is expected that many people will take advantage of the opportunity to inspect the exhibits which are to be seen on its exterior and in its interior. The car is on a track adjoining the Omaha freight depot on Fifth avenue west.

Exhibits of grain grown in Northern Wisconsin adorn the outside of the car, being behind heavy plate glass. About a ton of this is used and it is set loosely, with buffers, to prevent breakage. The jar of travel will probably break one or two of the glasses before the car returns to the Head of the Lakes after the long trip of this winter. "Grassland" will be sent to Ashland tomorrow morning and after that will probably go to the Twin Cities, the association having been invited to take it there. It will probably be on the road all this winter, traveling through Southern Minnesota, Southern Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa. As stops are made at many little towns and the car never travels at night, it will take many months to cover that territory thoroughly. Last year, the trip lasted until the first of May.

The car is the property of the association and is under the management of the members. There are 2,500 members and the dues are one dollar a year. One man has as much to say about the management of the association as another. H. S. Fairall, secretary of the association, and his assistant, H. W. Jackson, travel with the car.

Olson Punished For Contempt.

Aaron Olson of Virginia was brought before Judge Dibell this morning on an order to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court. He was fined $5 and costs, amounting to $4. Olson was ordered to appear in supplementary proceedings in a civil action to make a disclosure, but did not heed the order. He claimed he did not read the order after it was served on him.

BOY COMMITS SUICIDE.

Grand Rapids, Wis., Oct. 6.—Much excitement prevails in the town of Sherry over the suicide of John Siefert's adopted son, a lad of 11, who was found hanging from a beam in a barn.

It appears he had been playing with some dynamite caps and that a companion was injured by the explosion of one of them. The boy, it is believed, feared punishment at the hands of his adopted father and, awaiting an opportunity, went into the barn adjoining the house and hanged himself with a piece of binder twine.

An inquest was held and the jury returned a verdict that the boy came to his death by strangulation by his own hand.

GOULD SCORES ON RAMSEY

Directors of the Wabash Railroad Remove Latter From Presidency.

New York, Oct. 6.—At the meeting of the Wabash directors yesterday President Ramsey was removed from office. This gives the Goulds control. Mr. Delano is the new president.

Mr. Ramsey, after the meeting, said his removal was entirely illegal, for the reason that the meeting had not been properly called. He made a protest before the board, saying that the by-laws required five days' notice for a special meeting of the board, and that the notices for this meeting were mailed only Wednesday night. His protest was overruled, however.

President Delano took charge of his office at once. "Mr. Ramsey and I have always been friends hitherto in the railroad business," said he, "and I do not want to come into this controversy in any way.

"As to Mr. Ramsey's charge about the illegality of the meeting I can say nothing. I am not a lawyer. But there were several good lawyers on the board at the meeting, and I presume they would not attempt anything illegal. It was the general understanding that this was an adjourned meeting."

St. Louis, Oct. 6.—When shown the dispatch from New York regarding the removal of Joseph Ramsey, Jr., from the presidency of the Wabash railway, at the special meeting of the directors in New York, F. W. Lehmann, an attorney representing Ramsey in the application recently filed for a writ of temporary injunction against the holding of a meeting in Toledo, Oct. 10, said to the Associated Press:

"This is certainly news to me. All I have to say at this time is that the action in New York will not in any way affect our action here for an injunction. We will proceed just as had been decided upon."

Later in the day Mr. Lehmann served notice upon the officials of the Wabash railroad that Mr. Ramsey would ask the Ohio courts to appoint an inspector for the annual election which will be held in Toledo. The significance of this action, it is said, is that Mr. Ramsey intends to vote proxies under the privileges offered by the Ohio laws.

The only development yesterday in connection with the injunction suit of Mr. Ramsay to restrain the voting of Wabash securities by the Missouri Pacific and the Iron Mountain, which will be heard by Judge Taylor in the St. Louis circuit court, was the summoning as witnesses in Mr. Ramsey's behalf of General Solicitor Wells H. Blodgett of the Wabash railroad, and of Auditor S. B. Schuyler of the Missouri Pacific and the Iron Mountain.

Messrs. Cochran and Blodgett, as counsel for the Missouri Pacific, the Iron Mountain and the Wabash, are to conduct the defense. At the same time they are served with notices to testify for the petitioner.

Subpoenas were also served upon Assistant Secretary F. W. Ireland o fthe Missouri Pacific and the Iron Mountain, State Railroad Commissioner T. N. Bradbury, and D. S. H. Smith, local treasurer of the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain. Mr. Smith and Ireland are directed to bring into the court the books of these two companies showing the holding of these two companies in other companies and especially the Wabash.

It is estimated that the addition will cost not less than $40,000.

OCULISTS TO TEST ENGINEERS' EYES.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—For the purpose of making eye tests and studying conditions under which train signals are displayed, oculists will be placed on the engines that pull the fast trains on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. The tests will be made preliminary to a revision of the system of examining trainmen for defects of sight, and may result in a change in the present manner of displaying lights and semaphore arms.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is responsible for the proposed unique test. The roadmen have complained that their eyes are tested theoretically rather than along practical lines.

BREACH OF PROMISE

Suit Brought By Indiana Girl With No Mercenary Motive.

To Warn Other Men From Trifling With Girls' Affections.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—Having set its sister states an example in prohibiting hurry up marriages, Indiana presents Miss Frieda Albright of Crown Point, and a suit for $10,000 for breach of promise she has just instituted against Thomas C. Dougal of Chicago, general manager of the American Index company, as instructor in constancy before marriage.

So far as could be learned from an examination of court records, yesterday, nothing like the suit just instituted by Miss Albright has been known before either in Illinois or the native commonwealth of the complainant. Says the latter:

"I hope nobody will think I am actuated by mercenary motives. Should I be able through this lawsuit to prevent the blighting of other young women's lives by frightening the young men who blight them, I will be satisfied. If I collect the $10,000 I will give it to charity."

Miss Albright is not to be deterred from this determination either by Mr. McInerney or Mr. Brown or Mr. Powers, who act as her attorneys and who are scandalized by such radicalism in a case of breach of promise. Rather she has consulted them regarding the particular form of charity in which the $10,000 should be invested.

"I am not trying to prevent marriage, but to encourage it," was the retort that kept the frown company.

Dougal is not to be consulted concerning the expenditure of the money. All he is expected to do is to furnish it, and, as he is repued to be wealthy, little difficulty on that score is looked for either by Miss Albright or her attorneys.

Where Dougal made a serious tactical error, according to these persons, was in overlooking a prior claim to his affections represented by a large diamond ring on the third finger of "said plaintiff's" hand, when he married Miss Margaret Kerr of Chicago. The ceremony was performed March 1 last, and Miss Kerr is now Mrs. Dougal of 1447 North Hilpple street.

Two months and a half before that date it seemed to Miss Albright that she was to be Mrs. Dougal, same address. While visiting friends in Chicago, last October, she had met Dougal at a dance given in her honor.

Dougal is represented as having visited the Albright residence in Crown Point frequently. Finally, runs the declaration, he presented the plaintiff with exhibit "A," which is described as a "beautiful solitaire." The wedding day was set for Dec. 18, says Miss Albright, and she departed for Chicago to purchase her trousseau, stopping at the house of Thomas McCarthy, 19 Mohawk street.

"Witness the trustfulness of woman," say Miss Albright's legal representatives. On Dec. 17—the day before that set for the wedding—Dougal sent her word, they say, that he had 'changed his plans,' but she refused to believe the contents of the note were true, thinking that perhaps her fiance had written a jest, but the following day, when he did not appear at the appointed place, the heart-broken girl was compelled to tell the minister that the man she loved had deserted her.

"The shock was more than she could stand, and for three months she lingered between life and death. Her health being shattered, she is no longer the bright-faced, smiling girl who was the life of all the Crown Point dances and parties; the story of a great sadness is written on every line of her features."

All this, however, is only a synopsis of early chapters. The best part of the story, as Miss Albright figures it, is at the end. This is how she pictures the denouement:

"There was a breathless moment in the court room. On one side calm and collected, attired attractively in deep black, sat the plaintiff. On the other the defendant, with a strained, careworn face, awaited the judge's verdict.

"At last! At last! The eager listeners packed in the rear burst into wild applause. The plaintiff rises to her full height, triumphant.

"'Take the money, judge,' she says, quietly, 'and give it to charity.'"

ETHAN ALLEN'S KETTLE

To Go to United States Military Post In Vermont.

Philadelphia, Oct. 6.—When Gen. Ethan Allen charged upon Fort Ticonderoga and called upon the British garrison "to surrender in the name of the Great Jehovah and the continental congress," he left behind him that morning a pewter camp teakettle.

Until lately this same teakettle was in the possession of Mrs. D. I. Pulsifer of this city, who, through the efforts of Col. Charles E. Nelson, for a long time prominent in the Vermont National guard, has consented to send the relic to the United States military post at Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.

FOOD BUT NO WATER.

Hen Lived In Grain Car For Three Weeks.

Toledo Ohio, Oct. 6.—While unloading a car of grain at the mills of W. H. Kaskell & Co., workmen heard the cackle of a hen from some part of the car.

After the grain had been unloaded they started an investigation and found the bird between the car partitions.

It had been on the road apparently for about three weeks with plenty of food but without water, and seemed none the worse for its experience.

UP-TO-DATE MACHINERY

Supplants Hand Work In Raking and Loading Hay.

Maud Muller and Her Wooden-Toothed Rake Gone.

Ansley, Neb., Oct. 6.—Haying on the big ranches of the West is a very different proposition from the days when Maud Muller and her wooden-toothed rake caught the eye and fancy of the poet. Nowadays no one shoulders his scythe in the dewy morn and proceeds to shave the meadow; neither is there the once-familiar spectacle presented of a great rack, hauled by a pair of horses, standing in the field while two or three sun-burned gentlemen toss into it great forkfuls of new-mown grass. Gone also is the trying task of trying to bind a load of hay with a hickory boom pole that wouldn't stay fastened down.

The only harvest there is on the ranch is in haying season. During most of the summer the only harvesting done is by the teeth of the grazing cattle, but there comes a time when winter feed must be prepared, and then comes the haying crew. The ranch region of the West presents a curious topographical appearance. It is largely composed of irregular chains of hills, with broad, smooth valleys between. The hills are the grazing grounds and the valleys are reserved for winter forage. These valleys range from forty to sixty rods wide to two or three miles.

Where circumstances permit, a half dozen mowers are used, one behind the other, each drawn by three horses and cutting a 7-foot swath. Following these are giant rakes which windrow the grass and prepare it for the stacker. Three great sweeps are putting the hay to the stacker, sometimes nearly a ton at a load. The hay sweep and the stacker are two of the greatest labor-saving devices ever invented. The sweep is a great, strong rake with teeth 6 to 8 feet long, carried on low wheels and running ahead of the team. The driver guides the sweep with a lever placed at his right hand, and with it he picks up the hay from the windrows, carries to the stack and pushes it into the big teeth of the tacker. The latter is operated by a team of horses attached to a rope safely out of the way, which lift the load all at once and deposit on top of the stack, where it is shaped and made ready for the next contribution. Everything is done as by clockwork. The lead mower lays out the land to suit the stackers, and in this way the entire crew is kept busy, the stacking immediately following the cutting. A 7-foot mower with three horses will cut from fifteen to twenty acres a day, and a haying outfit as described will stack seventy-five tons in that time. On the larger ranches several of these outfits are kept going at the same time for weeks.

Stacks put up in this way will hold from five to fifteen tons of hay. The falling of the heavy loads from the stacker several feet above give a stack of well-settled hay as soon as completed. Hay put up in this way will not waste by winds and will keep for two years with little loss. No effort is made to furnish barn room for the forage crop for two reasons: One is that it would be too costly ,and the other is that it is necessary to have stacks in different parts of the ranch, so that the cattle may find food and shelter during the cold weather while on the move from one place to another.

A Box Butte county man has invented still another improvement that dispenses with the services of a stacking crew and team. Instead of horses and a man to pull the rope, he provides the latter with an iron ring and inserts a big iron hook in the center of the sweep. When he deposits a load on the stacker teeth, he drives his sweep team to the rope and hitches the ring to the hook on the sweep and driving on automatically deposits the load on the stack.

Contrary to the experience of Easterners, hay put up the same day it is cut does not rot in the stack. The old idea of curing hay while dry has been proven wrong by a thousand tests on Nebraska ranches. The curing it gets in the windrow is all that it needs, and hay heavy on the fork is not too green to stack. The one idea of the rancher is to have good hay and plenty of it, and he devotes weeks to the task.

It must not be supposed, however, that the labor-saving machinery has driven all of the Maud Mullers out of the hay-raking business. On many ranches here in Northwest Nebraska Maud Mullers raking hay with huge horse rakes or running stackers, putting up dozens of tons of hay a day may be seen any time from July until October. Only they won't give any judges a dipperful of water to drink. To stop for a moment delays the remainder of the crew, and the best she can do is to point to the jug and thus save any vain regrets.

McCLELLAN IS RENOMINATED

For the Mayor of Greater New York By Tammany.

New York, Oct. 6.—Mayor George B. McClellan, last night, was renominated for mayor of New York City for the four year term beginning January 1 next, by the Democratic city convention or Tammany Hall organization. Mr. McClellan is now rounding out his first term of two years, the state legislature having recently amended the city charter so as to provide for a four years' tenure of office for officials of Greater New York. The Democratic convention was held in Tammany hall amid much enthusiasm. The fact that the entire ticket had been decided upon before hand, did not seem to diminish the ardor of the delegates from the five boroughs of the great city. They entered on the work of ratifying the slate with much earnestness. Mr. McClellan was the only member of the present administration renominated, the ticket nominated by the convention being as follows:

For mayor, George B. McClellan of Manhattan.

For comptroller, Herman A. Metz of Brooklyn.

For president of the board of aldermen, Patrick F. McGowan of Manhattan.

Mr. Metz is named as successor to Comptroller E. M. Grout and Mr. McGowan to succeed President Charles Fornes. Mr. Fornes presided at tonight's convention. A resolution was adopted highly commending President Roosevelt for his services in bringing about peace between Russia and Japan.

Leader Charles F. Murphy of Tammany Hall, received an uproarious welcome when he walked into the convention hall, the band playing "Tammany" and the delegates cheering wildly. Senator Patrick H. McCarren, the Brooklyn leader, was also accorded an ovation.

Mayor McClellan was notified of his nomination and appeared in the hall shortly after 11 o'clock. Again there was another enthusiastic demonstration.

TO BUILD RAILROAD.

Montreal, Oct. 6.—The contract for the construction of the roadbed of the section of the Grand Trunk Pacific, from Fort William to Lake Superior Junction, about 210 miles, was awarded yesterday to Foley Bros., Larson & Co., of Winnipeg. It is stipulated that the work shall be completed so that the line may be used in handling the wheat crop of 1907. Five hundred miles of the new trans-continental line have been contracted for, and it is expected that contracts for 500 more will be let before the end of November.

MEXICAN SPORTS

Prefer the Cock Pit Now to the Bull Ring.

Philadelphia, Oct. 6.—"Bull fighting is being eschewed by the Mexican people, generally," said Dr. E. M. Porter of Tampico, Mex. "There aren't many real big fights held in the republic and haven't been for several years. The fact is that it has been a good while since the higher class of Mexicans patronized this sort with relish. Occasionally we hear of some boys at a county fair getting together with some yearling calves and having a sort of mock bull fight, but that doesn't embody many of the brutal features which have been connected with the worst class of fights. As a matter of fact, too, Mexico never produced the largest number of excellent bull fighters. They came from Spain. Of course, Mexico had some good men at this business, but that was not the rule. The bulls that were most savage and fiercest were those imported from a certain breeder in Spain.

"Instead of bull fighting the Mexicans are taking strongly to cock fighting. Of the two this latter seems to be a great deal more to their liking than does the bull fight. The Mexican doesn't like any more physical exertion in his pastime than is necessary. He can get sufficient excitement out of the chicken fights and at the same time not have so much of the exertive element in it. The Mexican is a good gambler, and therefore horse races are decidedly popular in that country."

Merchants Still Protesting Against Service on Range Roads.

Ask That Proctor and Other Towns Be Given More Trains.

Still the well meaning little hammers of protest are beating against the doors of the general offices of the Iron Range roads, and the citizens of Duluth are hoping that they will be noticed, and that the roads will give Proctor and the range towns better train service into Duluth.

The need of better service has long been felt by everyone. The residents of Proctor and the range towns have wished many times they might stay in Duluth longer, when they have come in just for a day, and the business men have wished for the same thing.

Following are the comments of some prominent business men:

W. H. Brinkman, advertising manager for I. Freimuth—To me no more important move was ever inaugurated than the present one to obtain better train accommodations between Duluth, Proctor and the iron range towns. Every Duluth merchant realizes what a benefit would result from a satisfactory train service between Duluth and these towns.

John H. Thomasson, advertising manager of Bayha & Co.—The Herald has called attention to a matter of great importance to Duluth. If the city's trade is to broaden we must make it easy and pleasant for the iron range people to visit us often.

A. Wieland of Wieland Shoe Co.—It is of the utmost importance to Duluth to have good train service to all our suburban towns.

William H. Longstreet of Metropolitan Theater—Give us better train service to Proctor and the iron range towns and see Duluth boom. The way things are now the residents of our nearby towns are denied the opportunity of attending our theaters. Now is a good time for a change.

J. J. Haley of Haley's restaurant—Let us have a change from the ways of years ago. Then the road beds of the railroads were new and trains could not run so fast as now. We should have a later train out on the Iron Range and short line trains to Proctor. What's the use of a 'White City' if we do not make it easy for the 'Iron Rangers' to get here?

Henry Abraham of Oak Hall—The railroad men at Proctor are the ones we are keeping away from Duluth and against their will. They like the town and would be here often with their families if they could come and go the same day and have a little time to look round Duluth.

David Cone of Zenith Fur company—We certainly want better train service between Duluth and tributary towns. Take Proctor, for instance, by the time residents who come to the city arrive here, it is time for lunch; another hour or so and it is train time. Duluth merchants and the residents themselves want better train service.

J. R. Swanson of Floan, Leveroos & Company—Better train service between Duluth and Proctor and the iron range towns by all means. Duluth merchants are one on this point.

G. A. Klein—Good train service from suburban towns is the making of any city. Chicago, for instance, would never be the city it is, if from the very start almost, it had not good train accommodation from all its suburban towns. Duluth should not be dilatory in this matter.

August Kellar of Oppel Grocery Company—I certainly approve of any move which will make it easier for those living just outside Duluth to come in when they desire to do their shopping. Good train accommodation, permitting them to spend most of the day here, is the first step.

M. Henricksen of M. Henricksen Jewelry Co.—I have read with interest the different expressions from fellow merchants in The Herald on the subject of making it possible for residents of nearby towns to spend the entire day in Duluth to do their shopping. The matter is a most important one and The Herald should be given the best aid of Duluth merchants and the Commercial club to bring it to a successful issue.

J. Sablotsky of New York Store—The Herald is advocating a very good move. Residents of Proctor and the range towns complain frequently of the poor train service, which does not permit them to do more than a part of their shopping in the city, and that hurriedly.

Fred Sommer of Treadwell Shoe Co.—You can never get all that is due Duluth if you build a big fence around it. We need to make it easy for every one to visit us.

D. O'Leary, grocer—It would make a world of difference with the trade of Duluth if you could bring Proctor and the iron range towns closer to us. Here is a chance for the Comemrcial club to do something for Superior street.

Robert Buchman of The Golden Rule—No efforts should be spared toward securing better service to the iron range towns. Duluth needs them and the people who come in want more time.

Joseph Oreckovsky of Duluth Consignment Co.—It is very important to Duluth to make it easy for the outside towns to get in here. Every day now we would have people in stocking up for the winter if the trains ran right and it was not made so expensive.

Wonderful Tailor-made Suits

Smart in Design—Moderate in Price.

"IF YOU can sell such beautiful Suits for so little, you'll have all Duluth coming here," said a woman yesterday. There are other reasons—we won't sell any garment that isn't good enough—isn't well enough tailored—that hasn't snap and style.

And to get such a suit, you need pay no more than $12.50 and $15.00, and at that you'll have no doubt of the fit. We are just as careful as though they cost double. Some stores slight the cheaper suits shamefully.

At $18, $20, $25, $30 and up the variety is endless and they all have CUT—which is of the utmost importance, because it means long life and constant good appearance to the suit. See the exceptionally fine suits which are sold in the $35 class elsewhere—sold by us for $25.00

You save on every garment because we are able to sell on small margins.

Time to Buy Coats.

With the first cold snap there'll be a rush that'll flood the work rooms—and while we have a very capable force, there is a limit to the amount of good work that can be done. Be prepared—it isn't too warm to buy, if by buying now you save money and have a broader choice.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Mother and Son Burned to Death In Watertown Fire.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Watertown—Mrs. Mary P. Hanson, a widow, and her son Mathew, were burned to death, Thursday, at their home on Dakota avenue.

The origin of the fire is not known. It started about 5 o'clock in the morning and before the fire department arrived on the scene the house was totally destroyed.

Pierre—Governor Elrod, on recommendation of the board of pardons, granted a pardon to George W. Jackson, who was sentenced from Custer county on a charge of murder. Jackson as a mere boy was with several older men in a robbery which resulted in the murder of their victim, and was given a sentence of twelve years which would expire in December. The pardon is principally to restore his citizenship.

Sisseton—After a quarrel with her husband, Mrs. Frank Taylor procured a livery rig and drove to Browns Valley, where she took the train for Minneapolis. The couple were married a year and a half ago, but have not lived happily together, having separated two or three times before.

Yankton—That this city will have a magnificent cement palace as an attraction, a year hence, is practically assured, the business men's club ratifying the work of a committee appointed to investigate the matter. The work of the committee was fully approved, and other committees were appointed to negotiate for a site, which at present seems likely to be at Broadway and Second streets, on a space to be cleared for a park. Much enthusiasm was shown at the meeting. In form the palace will resemble a huge convention hall and it will be large enough to house the largest gatherings the state is called upon to handle.

The county commissioners are in session attending to the final accounts of Yankton county's new courthouse, which will be turned over to the county about Nov. 1. Preparations are on foot for a great demonstration at the opening.

The city council is about to take up some old park bonds, amounting to $26,000, for which new bonds will be issued to save the difference in interest between the old 6 per cent and the new 4 per cent premiums.

This city is preparing for two celebrations, one on the 10th, when the new $25,000 Carnegie library will be dedicated, the other on Nov. 1, when the courthouse will be formally opened.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Strunk, the last surviving couple of the early '60s in this county, celebrated, on Tuesday, the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day.

Yankton's new federal building, that cost $87,000, is complete, and the government furniture is being placed in the new postoffice.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Valley City—The fall term of the state normal school began under most auspicious circumstances. Registering began immediately after chapel, and by afternoon 185 students had enrolled. The work continued all day, and at its close the total number registered was 243.

The school opens with six new instructors as follows: Giles E. Ripley, physics and chemistry, Marquette, Mich.; Wallace Craig, biology and physiology; Orla A. Barton, manual training and critic teacher; Una Brasfield Herrick, elocution and physical culture; Miss Anna L. Ayer will supply the place of Miss Amidon, absent on leave, and conduct classes in singing and reading; Miss Mabel West, a graduate of Knox college, Illinois, has been engaged as librarian and teacher of library science; Louis P. Linn, a graduate of Upper Iowa university, becomes President McFarland's secretary and assistant.

The new ladies' dormitory will be formally opened by a dedicatory reception this evening. It is already full, more than fifty-five girls being housed there; the old dormitory is being rapidly filled.

Prof. Hatch, athletic coach, has his football eleven at work, and the outlook for a good team is promising.

SEARCH ABANDONED.

Man Lost In the Woods Cannot Be Found.

Ladysmith, Wis., Oct. 6.—After more than two weeks of fruitless effort upon the part of hundreds of people to find Peter Anderson, lost in the woods, the search has been given up. The searchers are satisfied that they found tracks made by the lost man—their character corresponding with the shoes he wore when he left home, and their appearance denoting a lost and wandering man. While opinion varies somewhat, it is generally thought that the man has succumbed somewhere in the woods not far from his home. The effort made with the aid of blood hounds availed nothing. Mr. Anderson was highly esteemed by his neighbors and by business men in Ladysmith.

After a hearty meal a dose of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure will prevent an attack of Indigestion. Kodol is a thorough digestant and a guaranteed cure for Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gas on the Stomach, Weak Heart, Sour Risings, Bad Breath and all Stomach troubles. Sold by all druggists.

Col. Cody Making Money.

The Cody, Wyo., Stockgrower and Farmer of recent date says: "Some 'penny-a-liner' has been sending out statements that the Wild West show has been losing money; that Col. Cody's horses had all been shot for glanders, and that the colonel is offering all his Bighorn county property for sale. All rot. We know personally that Col. Cody has sent more money to this county during the past season than said penny-a-liner will earn by his false reports in the next 750 years if he works days, nights and Sundays. It might be added that never in the history of the Wild West show has it done a better business than it is doing right now. There was some sickness among the horses, but this is all past over, and the colonel is making money every day. None of his Bighorn county property is for sale. His heart and interests are here, and he will be at home in Cody before the holidays."

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Saturday afternoon and evening, Frank Daniels in "Sergeant Brue."

AT THE METROPOLITAN.

The finale of the opening burlesque presented at the Metropolitan by "The Washington Society Girls" is causing much favorable comment. It is a song of all nations and winds up with the waving of Old Glory, the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" and the entrance of the "Yankee Doodle Girl." The number is a pretty one. The Society Girls close their engagement here with performances this evening and tomorrow afternoon. "The Tiger Lilies" come next week.

FRANK DANIELS IN NEW FARCE.

Tomorrow afternoon and evening will come to the Lyceum the Frank Daniels Opera company in a farcial musical piece imported by Manager Charles Dillingham from England and entitled "Sergeant Brue." Frank Daniels is too well known in this city to need any introduction. His new play furnishes him with a character which is said to exactly fit his personality. He represents a London policeman who is continually endeavoring to accomplish brave deeds with a view of advancement on the force. "Sergeant Brue" was one of the summer hits in New York City, where it ran for six months.

CORNER STONE LAYING SUNDAY

Ceremony to Be Performed at New Lutheran Church.

Rev. D. W. Michael, formerly pastor of St. John's English Lutheran church, is in Duluth at present, and it has been decided to lay the corner-stone of the new house of worship which will be built on Lake avenue during his stay, that he may assist Rev. J. L. Murphy, the present pastor. The exercises will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

If the weather will permit, it is planned to have a chorus of sixty voices sing the anthem, "Ein Feste Burg," in the open air. Members of the different Lutheran congregations in the city will sing in the language which is used in their church, after which the actual ceremony of laying the cornerstone will be performed by Rev. Mr. Murphy.

Rev. Mr. Michael will deliver the principal address at the services which will be held inside the present church. Among the other pastors who will be present and who will speak briefly are Rev. S. Solomonson, Swedish Lutheran church; Rev. Mr. Sienberg of the First Norwegian Lutheran church, Rev. Mr. Ahl of the German Lutheran church, Rev. Mr. Wee of the Second Norwegian Lutheran church and Rev. W. Beck of Superior. A special confirmation service will be held Sunday evening, when three candidates will be admitted to the church.

EDITOR FALLS DEAD.

Dodge Center, Minn., Oct. 6.—O. H. Phillips, editor of the Record, died very suddenly yesterday of apoplexy. He arose about his usual time and, after dressing, dropped down upon his bed and expired. Mr. Phillips was a pioneer settler in this county and has always taken an active part in public affairs.

COMMENTS CONTINUE

Merchants Still Protesting Against Service on Range Roads.

Ask That Proctor and Other Towns Be Given More Trains.

Still the well meaning little hammers of protest are beating against the doors of the general offices of the Iron Range roads, and the citizens of Duluth are hoping that they will be noticed, and that the roads will give Proctor and the range towns better train service into Duluth.

The need of better service has long been felt by everyone. The residents of Proctor and the range towns have wished many times they might stay in Duluth longer, when they have come in just for a day, and the business men have wished for the same thing.

Following are the comments of some prominent business men:

W. H. Brinkman, advertising manager for I. Freimuth—To me no more important move was ever inaugurated than the present one to obtain better train accommodations between Duluth, Proctor and the iron range towns. Every Duluth merchant realizes what a benefit would result from a satisfactory train service between Duluth and these towns.

John H. Thomasson, advertising manager of Bayha & Co.—The Herald has called attention to a matter of great importance to Duluth. If the city's trade is to broaden we must make it easy and pleasant for the iron range people to visit us often.

A. Wieland of Wieland Shoe Co.—It is of the utmost importance to Duluth to have good train service to all our suburban towns.

William H. Longstreet of Metropolitan Theater—Give us better train service to Proctor and the iron range towns and see Duluth boom. The way things are now the residents of our nearby towns are denied the opportunity of attending our theaters. Now is a good time for a change.

J. J. Haley of Haley's restaurant—Let us have a change from the ways of years ago. Then the road beds of the railroads were new and trains could not run so fast as now. We should have a later train out on the Iron Range and short line trains to Proctor. What's the use of a 'White City' if we do not make it easy for the 'Iron Rangers' to get here?

Henry Abraham of Oak Hall—The railroad men at Proctor are the ones we are keeping away from Duluth and against their will. They like the town and would be here often with their families if they could come and go the same day and have a little time to look round Duluth.

David Cone of Zenith Fur company—We certainly want better train service between Duluth and tributary towns. Take Proctor, for instance, by the time residents who come to the city arrive here, it is time for lunch; another hour or so and it is train time. Duluth merchants and the residents themselves want better train service.

J. R. Swanson of Floan, Leveroos & Company—Better train service between Duluth and Proctor and the iron range towns by all means. Duluth merchants are one on this point.

G. A. Kiein—Good train service from suburban towns is the making of any city. Chicago, for instance, would never be the city it is, if from the very start almost, it had not good train accommodation from all its suburban towns. Duluth should not be dilatory in this matter.

August Kellar of Oppel Grocery Company—I certainly approve of any move which will make it easier for those living just outside Duluth to come in when they desire to do their shopping. Good train accommodation, permitting them to spend most of the day here, is the first step.

M. Henricksen of M. Henricksen Jewelry Co.—I have read with interest the different expressions from fellow merchants in The Herald on the subject of making it possible for residents of nearby towns to spend the entire day in Duluth to do their shopping. The matter is a most important one and The Herald should be given the best aid of Duluth merchants and the commercial club to bring it to a successful issue.

J. Sablotsky of New York Store—The Herald is advocating a very good move. Residents of Proctor and the range towns complain frequently of the poor train service, which does not permit them to do more than a part of their shopping in the city, and that hurriedly.

Fred Sommer of Treadwell Shoe Co.—You can never get all that is due Duluth if you build a big fence around it. We need to make it easy for every one to visit us.

D. O'Leary, grocer—It would make a world of difference with the trade of Duluth if you could bring Proctor and the iron range towns closer to us. Here is a chance for the Comemrcial club to do something for Superior street.

Robert Buchman of The Golden Rule—No efforts should be spared toward securing better service to the iron range towns. Duluth needs them and the people who come in want more time.

Joseph Oreckovsky of Duluth Consignment Co.—It is very important to Duluth to make it easy for the outside towns to get in here. Every day now we would have people in stocking up for the winter if the trains ran right and it was not made so expensive.

Col. Cody Making Money.

The Cody, Wyo., Stockgrower and Farmer of recent date says: "Some 'penny-a-liner' has been sending out statements that the Wild West show has been losing money; that Col. Cody's horses had all been shot for glanders, and that the colonel is offering all his Bighorn county property for sale. All rot. We know personally that Col. Cody has sent more money to this county during the past season than said penny-a-liner will earn by his false reports in the next 750 years if he works days, nights and Sundays. It might be added that never in the history of the Wild West show has it done a better business than it is doing right now. There was some sickness among the horses, but this is all past over, and the colonel is making money every day. None of his Bighorn county property is for sale. His heart and interests are here, and he will be at home in Cody before the holidays."

Smart in Design—Moderate in Price.

"IF YOU can sell such beautiful Suits for so little, you'll have all Duluth coming here," said a woman yesterday. There are other reasons—we won't sell any garment that isn't good enough—isn't well enough tailored—that hasn't snap and style.

And to get such a suit, you need pay no more than $12.50 and $15.00, and at that you'll have no doubt of the fit. We are just as careful as though they cost double. Some stores slight the cheaper suits shamefully.

At $18, $20, $25, $30 and up the variety is endless and they all have CUT—which is of the utmost importance, because it means long life and constant good appearance to the suit. See the exceptionally fine suits which are sold in the $5 class elsewhere—sold by us for $25.00

You save on every garment because we are able to sell on small margins.

Time to Buy Coats.

With the first cold snap there'll be a rush that'll flood the work rooms—and while we have a very capable force, there is a limit to the amount of good work that can be done. Be prepared—it isn't too warm to buy, if by buying now you save money and have a broader choice.

FIERCE FIRE THREATENS VILLAGE OF CARLTON

Town Narrowly Escapes Destruction and Ten Buildings are Burned.

Prompt Assistance From Cloquet and Scanlon Save the Little Town.

The village of Carlton, on the Northern Pacific, just south of Duluth, was threatened with destruction by fire at noon today, and had it not been for the prompt arrival of additional fire fighting apparatus from Cloquet and Scanlon, the entire town would probably have been a heap of smoldering ruins by nightfall.

Ten buildings were destroyed and many others were badly damaged so that the loss, roughly estimated, will probably exceed $50,000. The fire started in what is known as the old Pabst Brewing company building shortly before noon, and in a short time practically all the buildings on the main street of the village were in flames.

The Pabst building was occupied by six families. The fire is said to have started from a defective chimney, although it is not known definitely. With the rapidity that is characteristic of fierce flames, the fire spread to six nearby residences. These were soon blazing fiercely and the fire continued to spread despite the stubborn fight made by the gritty members of the Carlton volunteer fire department.

The citizens of Cloquet and Scanlon learned of the conflagration at Carlton and promptly offered to assist their neighbor. The Cloquet department was taken, intact, to the scene of the fire on a special train over the Northern Pacific. Had it not been for the timely arrival of the Cloquet firefighters and their apparatus, Dunthy's store and almost all the remaining buildings in Carlton would not have been saved.

The Scanlon department drove to Carlton and arrived in time to be of great assistance.

It was thought at one time that Duluth would be appealed to for aid and a hysterical woman did call up the Duluth fire headquarters on the telephone and asked that apparatus be sent at once. But the Duluth firemen did not want to do so without some authentic word from the officers of Carlton and, as no word was received from them no apparatus was sent from here.

The valiant efforts of the citizens of Carlton could not check the blaze after it had consumed the Pabst building and the six residences. The greedy flames reached out and licked at the walls of the Opera House although every line of hose in Carlton was brought to bear on them. The opera house was soon a roaring furnace. The seats and scenery made excellent food for the flames and in a very short time, the temple of the drama was a mass of charred debris.

The same fate was shared by the Odd Fellows' hall and the Chisholm saloon. G. Gunthy's stock of merchandise was damaged by smoke and water, but the fire fighters succeeded in saving the building and in checking the conflagration.

The Cloquet department arrived at Carlton at 1 o'clock, and at about 2 the fire was under control. But in the space of almost two hours, ten buildings had been burned and a score of families made homeless.

The loss is total. Nothing was saved. At the alarm of fire, the tenants of the Pabst building left their dinner tables and hastily repaired to the out of doors. And none too soon, for the old building was one huge mass of flames in what seemed a few seconds.

The occupants of the six residences which burned had hardly more time to get out of the way of the angry, onrushing fire. They hastily grabbed such little articles as they could and sought safety a good distance from the heat which the flames belched forth, together with choking smoke and flying cinders.

The fire department responded promptly when the alarm was sounded and the tenants of the burning buildings and other citizens gave their willing assistance.

When it was seen that to save the six residences was an impossibility, the fire fighters decided to ask aid of their neighbors. Cloquet and Scanlon responded promptly and it was not thought necessary to ask help of Duluth, although the local department was in readiness to send some apparatus upon a moment's notice. After the telephone message from the frantic woman has been received, it was thought that a call from the mayor, chief of police or fire chief of Carlton would come but it did not.

Although the smoke has not cleared away from the ruins yet, it has been announced that most of the structures destroyed by the blaze will replaced by more substantial ones.

GRISWOLD MYSTERY

"How Did This Man Die?" Asked By Two States.

Murder or Suicide of Insurance Agent In Iowa.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 6.—The Griswold murder mystery, which puzzles Iowa and Nebraska citizens, presents a number of interesting complications that even Sherlock Holmes would find difficult to explain.

A prominent business man, known by sight by hundreds, works at his office in a crowded building until 11 o'clock at night. He walks a half dozen squares to the postoffice, where he stops to talk earnestly with a friend. He walks another square to a hotel, registers and leaves a call for the 2:45 train to Omaha. Then he disappears entirely from the face of the earth, not a trace of him to be found, and no person seeing him between the moment of registering and the moment his body is recovered from the river a week later, his hands tied together behind his back, his clothing rifled, pockets turned inside out, watch pocket slashed open with a knife, several articles of value and a large sum of money missing.

Where was George Griswold, Iowa agent for the State Mutual Insurance company of Worcester, Mass., from the moment of registering at a Munger's hotel until he breathed his last in this world?

How could he pass along the principal thoroughfares of a large city, on which even at that hour walked dozens of persons, and be seen by none? Was he the victim of a murder, or did he take his own life and that without apparent cause?

To date the police of Des Moines have been completely baffled.

The detective who sets out to unravel the Griswold mystery has but little material, relevant to the case, to work upon. Griswold had been a resident of Des Moines for several years. He owned a fine home and carriage, had money in the bank, was conducting an apparently prosperous business, had a wife whom he dearly loved and who returned the affection in full, and four as pretty and lovable children as can be found anywhere in the country.

He leaves his home as usual one evening, announcing that he must go to Omaha, and settle up some insurance matters. He works at his office until 11 o'clock, registers at a hotel for three hours' rest before train time and then disappears. Was he spirited out of a window, did his double register for him, leaving him at some place unknown? There are a hundred questions that spring instantly to the lip, yet not one can be positively answered.

At 11 o'clock, George Griswold encountered his old-time friend and business associate, Steve Essex, at the postoffice and they conversed for several minutes. Griswold appeared to be in good humor and was intent on matters of business which he had in hand. The two men separated.

A few minutes later, so the clerk of Munger's hotel avers, Griswold registered at his desk and was assigned to a room, leaving a call for the 2:45 train to Omaha on the Rock Island road. When the bellboy went to awaken him, the room was empty, the bed showing no traces of having been occupied. No one had seen Griswold pass out of the hotel, although the clerk had been constantly on duty at his desk within a few feet of the elevator and stairway.

Griswold's family, believing him to be transacting important business in Omaha, did not worry, although the absence of letters caused comment, as he had always been a faithful correspondent. But business is a jealous god, they thought; he may have been too busy to write.

Then one afternoon a negro fisher caught his hook in what appeared to be a great fish, later to be a log, and last to be a "floater." Shrieking at the top of his voice, he rushed away for help and, when aid was secured, pulled to shore the body of a man closely resembling George Griswold, with Griswold's purse and papers in his pockets.

That evening Griswold's family identified the body as that of George Griswold, yet the police contend that the fact that the man's hands were tied behind him was evidence of suicide even more than of murder.

Following in the wake of every disappearance, suicide or murder, the authorities find a host of material and immaterial facts concerning the past life of the victim. The Griswold case has been no exception.

It has been shown that Griswold had recently indulged in some questionable financial deals, such as "kiting" checks, a system of banking whereby three or four persons keep personal checks moving from one bank to the other, always covering the check nearest in time by another check, yet so manipulating matters that should the endless chain suddenly end, some bank or partner would hold the sack for hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The success of the scheme lies in the integrity of the partners and the never-ending traveling of the checks from bank to bank. Griswold had been a successful party to such transactions for some time.

Had some disgruntled partner been caught short-handed and lost thousands, anger and jealousy leading him to murder, the partner who had been more fortunate?

Or had thugs been aware that but a few days before Griswold's company had sent him a draft for $25,000 to pay the note on the life of a prominent Des Moines financier? But what value would a check payable to the estate of Ben Elbert be to a "hold-up" man?

Or if Griswold had been held up, why would his captors, having robbed him, kill him and throw his body into the river? "Hold-up" men will not stop at murder if it is absolutely necessary. That Griswold was dead before his body struck the water is established by the discovery that there was no water in the lungs. Had he drowned to death, the lungs would have been filled with water.

Having slain their victim, why should "hold-up" men take the risk of discovery by dragging the body a dozen blocks to the river and throwing it from a well-lighted bridge across which men and teams pass at all hours of the night?

That George Griswold may have committed suicide is credited by the chief of detectives of Des Moines, who has shown that a man can easily tie his hands in front of him and then by stepping through his arms bring the check near position behind the back they occupied on Griswold's body. Deciding to drown himself, the man might tie his hands behind him to prevent any possible struggling once the water had been reached.

But the absence of water from the lungs seems to do away with the suicide theory.

Griswold's accounts are straight in every particular, so far no "woman in the case" has appeared to complicate matters, his home life was happy, the suicide theory is completely scouted down.

For a time the mystery was further complicated by the theory held by many that Griswold, desiring to collect the $13,000 life insurance which he carried, had endeavored to deceive everybody by disappearing, waiting until his widow had collected his insurance and then would bob up serenely in some faraway quarter of the globe and start life anew with $13,000 additional capital. But in order to do this he must have secured some body upon which to put his clothing and which would pass as his remains.

About this time the family of a Clinton man announced that Frank Callahan was missing. He had disappeared under somewhat similar circumstances as had Griswold. Was there any connection between the disappearance of the two men? Was the body found that of Callahan, dressed in Griswold's clothes to deceive the insurance officers?

This complication was short lived, as in a few days the water soaked body of Frank Callahan, his hands tied and his pockets rifled and torn inside out as in the Griswold case, was found in the river near where the Griswold body had been found.

The claim was then made that the first body found might not have been Griswold's after all. Some third man might be in the mystery. The features had been so distorted that positive identification was impossible; the mere fact that the body bore Griswold's clothing was proof of nothing. Substitution would be easy.

How was the truth ever to be known? How could positive identification ever be had?

At this juncture, Dr. Fred Knott, Griswold's dentist, came forward and announced that he could tell whether or not the body was that of Griswold by examining his teeth, several of which he had filled and crowned.

Griswold's body, after a serious clash with the coroner, was exhumed and the casket opened. Opening the mouth, Dr. Knott looked at the dead man's teeth. They were exactly as he had described George Griswold's.

At last, after almost a fortnight, Griswold had been positively identified. But the mystery in his death remains today as deep as ever.

HEARING STILL IN PROGRESS

Wisconsin Inspection Matter Continues Before Court In Superior.

Arguments purporting to prove that the milling and elevator interests were not seriously inconvenienced by the enforcement of the Wisconsin grain law were advanced by Attorneys Hudnall and Lusk for the commission in the action brought by A. D. Thomson for an injunction against the Wisconsin grain commission before Judge Vinje in Superior today.

The attorneys declared that if the milling interests would only submit to and obey the law, they would not be bothered. They said that Wisconsin had just as much right to enforce such a law as did Minnesota.

The arguments will probably end tomorrow and Judge Vinje will give his decision Monday.

COAL DEALERS MUST PAY THEIR FINES.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—Nine officers of the Retail Coal Dealers' association of Illinois and Wisconsin, who were fined $100 each on charges of conspiracy to raise the price of coal, will be obliged to pay their fines, according to a decision handed down today by Judge Henry V. Freeman of the appellate court. The indictment charged that in the formation of the Retail Coal Dealers' association the dealers had combined to destroy and prevent competition in the sale and distribution of coal to consumers. In the opinion on the case, the appellate court declares that the verdict and judgment are amply justified by the evidence and the law.

BOOTH TUG SEIZED BY GAME WARDENS.

THE CROFTERS MISREPRESENTED

Injustice Done to Rural Population of North of Scotland.

To the Editor of The Herald:

An article in yesterday's Herald—apparently a clipping from one of your foreign exchanges—does violent injustice to the rural population of the North of Scotland, more particularly to the crofters—or small farmers—in Lewis.

The articles in question have had a wide circulation in the Scotch as well as the English and Irish press, and raised a storm of indignation in the districts alluded to, which has already resulted in some lively scrimmages and threatened lawsuits, of which the end is not yet. They had their inception in the brain of a broken-down English would-be sport, who, having barely escaped a well-merited coat of tar and feathers on account of some misdeeds in Lewis, adopted the method of attacking the social conditions under the guise of a supposed authentic "report," basing his charges on the case of an old hermit who had persistently refused to be driven out of his miserable hut, but having been reported to the town council at Stornoway, was duly lodged in the poorhouse within twenty-four hours of the filing of the complaint with the board.

We believe that our remote ancestors exchanged caves with the hyena and the bear, and there may have been a time in the history of the Highlands of Scotland and of Lewis when conditions approaching those described existed; but it certainly was at a period of which the memory of any living man knoweth not. Poverty and misery are there, as elsewhere; they are everywhere; they are in Duluth; but squalor, filth, wretchedness and vice such as one encounters in Liverpool, for instance, is, I am proud to say, unknown in the Highlands of Scotland. Conditions in Lewis are the reverse of what your article described. There is nowhere, outside of Holland, perhaps, a peasantry who live under better sanitary conditions than that which has been in process of development in Lewis for many years. Nor is education, religious or secular, neglected. Out of a population of nearly 15,000, I will venture the assertion that not one young man or young woman could be found who cannot read and write the English language intelligently, which is certainly more than can be said of the "native lair" of the brainless idiot whose articles have had such uncalled for publicity. Respectfully,

D. M. MORRISON,
5 Lake avenue south.

PLANS OF YOUNG COUPLE UPSET

Well-Laid Scheme of Lovers Is Brought to Naught.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 6.—After walking five miles through the woods, crossing Green river in a small boat and riding all night in a buggy to reach a train bound for Louisville, Joe Thomas, a young farmer of Adair county, and Miss Ethel Rubarts, a 17-year-old girl of Columbia, Ky., the principals of a romantic elopement, were arrested on their arrival at the Tenth street station by Police Lieutenant Wickham, in pursuance of instructions received by telephone from the young woman's father, G. W. Rubarts. Miss Rubarts is in charge of the matron at the Jefferson county jail, while Thomas remains in the vicinity of the police headquarters, anxiously awaiting developments. Mr. Rubarts has been informed of the capture, but no further instructions have been received from him. It is thought he is on his way to Louisville.

Young Thomas was dressed in the regulation black suit, white tie and patent leather shoes of the bridegroom. The young woman is facing the situation courageously, and on the way from the station to the central police station she declared to her lover: "I will marry you or die." At the jail she inquired solicitously if Mr. Thomas was still waiting at the police station. Manifestly she was wavering between apprehension as to his fate if he and her father should meet face to face, and the hope that he would remain.

Thomas is 23 years old and lives on a farm on the north side of Green river, while Miss Rubarts lives near him on the south side.

"We have been lovers for two years," said the young man. "I called at the house frequently until a short time ago, when her father objected. She is the only child and I reckon he did not wish her to marry. Since then we have met clandestinely. We had made arrangements to go to Tennessee and get married, but Mr. Rubarts telephoned to every county seat on the border, and when we learned that we determined to come to Louisville.

"Yesterday Mr. Rubarts went across the river and I went near the house and waved my hand, which was our signal. Miss Rubarts came out and then went back into the house and got a hat and rejoined me. We crossed the river in a skiff and walked five miles through the woods to the home of one of my neighbors. We drove to Junction City, and there boarded a Louisville and Nashville train for Louisville.

"I am going to stay here and see this affair through. We are old enough to be married and I can provide for a wife. We intended returning to my home tonight, but, of course, our plans are spoiled now."

"I don't know why my father objects to our marriage," said Miss Rubarts. "Joe and I have been friends for two years and the whole neighborhood appears to accept the conclusion that we would be married, although we made no announcement. My father never objected to his calls until about two months ago. Then, I suppose, he learned we were preparing to get married and he drove Joe away. I intend to marry him just as soon as I get the chance."

TEACHERS' JOBS SOLD.

School Directors Had a Good Thing In Country Districts.

Pottsville, Pa., Oct. 6.—That graft has had as complete sway in the agricultural sections of Schuylkill as in the mining towns is shown by the progress of the investigation of the Taxpayers' association.

That money has been paid to school directors for teachers' appointments and to influence the votes of directors for the furnishing of supplies is shown by evidence already secured. Arrests are to be made soon.

Washington township is now being investigated.

MARKET IS CHANGING

Summer and Fall Fruits Being Replaced By Winter Varieties.

Roots Are Taking the Place of the Green Vegetables.

Michigan street is beginning to assume its winter appearance and one by one the features of the summer's market are dropping from the list.

The summer and early fall fruits are about out of the market, and nothing but a few stray shipments are to be found. The peach season is practically over, and has been for a week past, although peaches are still to be had on the market, and a few will probably be offered for sale for a week of two to come. There will be no more Elbertas this season, and the supply of them in the city is practically cleaned up. A few of the late Michigan peaches may be received, but about the only kind of peach now offered is the California Salway. These are selling for $1.25 per box.

The early pears are all out of the market now, and about the only kinds that are offered are the Winter Nellis pears, which come in boxes from California, and the New York Duchess pears. The latter are shipped in barrels only, and sell at between $5 and $6 per barrel. The California pears are selling for $3 per box.

Grapes are still plentiful, and there are all kinds offered. Tokay grapes from California are very plentiful this year, and are being received by several of the fruit dealers in straight carload lots directly from California. They are quoted at $1.75 per crate. Concords are being received by the car lot from both Michigan and New York, and some shipments of Delawares are also coming in.

The apple crop is not a large one, but there is a wide range of choice offered on the Duluth market.

Some consignments of the fancy, highly-flavored Western apples have been received. They are packed in boxes, and are selling at $1.75 per box, being used for eating purposes only. Among the other varieties on the market are the Wisconsin Wealthies, Hibernals and Longfields, the Illinois Jonathans, the Arkansas Ben Davis, and the Missouri Spies, Snows and Grimes Goldens. The prices range all the way from $2.75 to $5 per barrel.

The home crop of crab apples is a complete failure this year, and the supply is very limited. Some shipments of Western crab apples are being received, and are selling for $2 per box.

• • •

The end of the hot summer weather brought a greatly decreased demand for lemons, and the price has sagged to about $7 a box. The lemon market saw the most erratic season in its history this year, the price soaring at times to $9 a box, starting from about $4 a box. There was scarcely a week during the summer when a change of from $1 to $2 per box was not reported.

The Florida oranges are now in the market, the first shipments of the new crop having arrived this week. The crop is reported to be of a fine quality.

• • •

Another short crop of cranberries is reported this year. Housekeepers who remember the time when cranberries were quoted at about $4 a barrel, look askance at the present price, which is $8.50. Last season the Thanksgiving and Christmas demand, on top of a short crop, boosted the price to about $7 a barrel, at which figure the new crop went into the market this year. The price has continued its upward trend, and is firm at the new figure.

• • •

New dates and figs are just coming into the market, and the dealers are quoting reduced prices on the old stock carried over from last season.

• • •

In the vegetable market, things are getting down to a winter basis, and the fresh green vegetables are scarce, their places being taken by roots.

Rutabagas, beets and carrots are lower this week, the price having dropped to $1 per bushel.

Onions are plentiful this year, and there are all kinds on the market, from the small white pickling onion to the large Spanish variety. The price ranges all the way from $1.25 to $1.75 per bushel.

Pumpkins and squash are also plentiful and the price reasonable.

Potatoes are steady this week, with no change in the price, which is still quoted at 42 cents. There is a heavy demand for Jersey sweet potatoes this fall, the price being quite low, at $3.75 per barrel.

• • •

The butter, egg and cheese markets remain unchanged from last week. Prices on all three commodities are about the same as last week, with a slightly firmer tone on cheese and eggs, although no change in price has been reported.

• • •

Poultry receipts have been increasing steadily during the last few weeks, and the prices are slightly lower this week. Live springs are quoted at 11½ cents and hens at 10½ cents. Turkeys are selling for 16 cents, spring ducks at 12 cents. There are no geese coming in at the present time.

The lower prices have brought an increased demand and business is reported as very active by all the dealers.

• • •

There has been little change in the meat prices during the week.

• • •

The oyster season is now in full swing and the receipts are growing heavier each week. The standard oysters are quoted at 1.40 a gallon in bulk and the select at $1.70, which is a slight decrease over the prices quoted at the opening of the season a month ago.

OKLAHOMA WOMAN HAS BEEN ACCUSED

Of Killing Husband For the Love of a Chinaman.

Guthrie, O. T., Oct. 6.—The action of Probate Judge Phelps of Canadian county, in holding Mrs. Anna Rugg and a Chinaman, Sam Joy, to await the decision of the grand jury, was the result of her preliminary trial during the past week at El Reno on a charge of murdering her husband by poisoning.

The woman is in the county jail at El Reno under heavy bond, while the officers are scouring the country for Sam Joy, who escaped after learning he was wanted in connection with the crime. Joy deserted his laundry between two suns, and left a strange Chinese in charge. The outgoing steamers from San Francisco and Portland are being watched to prevent Joy's return to his native country.

Mrs. Rugg was first arrested Sept. 11, following the sudden death of her husband on the previous Saturday, Sept. 9. The funeral was held the next day after his death, and the widow went immediately to El Reno from Calumet, where she had lived for three months with her husband. She was at the home of relatives when arrested.

As Mrs. Morris, the woman was married to Rugg three months ago. He was divorced from his first wife, six months before his second marriage.

Prior to her marriage to Rugg, she lived in East El Reno and has a number of relatives also in that city.

It is stated by the police that Rugg was the woman's ninth husband, and that all his predecessors but one died.

The first wife of Rugg still lives on a farm near El Reno, with her daughter, Miss Lena Rugg, who graduated last spring from the El Reno high school with honors. They were notified of Rugg's death, and, after wiring to his relatives, they went to Calumet to attend his funeral, believing it would not be held until Monday. They arrived too late, however, for the burial service, which occurred as soon as possible after the death, in compliance with the wishes of the second wife.

Following the arrest of Mrs. Rugg the county officials ordered that Rugg's body be exhumed and an inquest held. Belladonna was found in his stomach. Five hundred persons, mostly from the Calumet neighborhood, attended her preliminary trial, and twenty-two witnesses were examined. Immediately after the trial her attorney, W. A. Maurer, gave notice that he would ask her release on habeas corpus proceedings, but thus far he has not taken that step.

Rugg was a carpenter and contractor, perhaps 45 years old, and stood well in Canadian county, where he had lived since the opening of the territory in 1889. He owned considerable property, but under the will recently made by him, at his wife's request, all of this goes to the woman now in jail, charged with his murder.

She is not good looking, but is intelligent, quick and bright in conversation. Her power over Rugg was noticeable at all times. He seemed to be willing to obey her slightest wish.

DULUTHIANS NOT AWAKE

H. W. Coffin Says They Are Overlooking Bottineau County.

Declares There Are Good Opportunities In North Dakota.

"Duluth men are overlooking some opportunities for money-making in North Dakota," said H. W. Coffin, the well-known land man, who has just returned from Bottineau county, N. D., today. "Minneapolis men and Minneapolis capital are there already, and unless Duluth men look sharp, they will lose some of the business that they should rightfully have.

"Bottineau and Williams counties are the richest in North Dakota, and their natural market is Duluth, because it is almost straight across country. The crops during the past season were splendid, and new and prosperous towns have sprung up everywhere along the extensions of the Great Northern and the Soo lines.

"Minneapolis men are building some of the elevators, and are interested in some other business ventures in these new towns, and it is time that the Duluthians got busy. The country has a great future, and money is being made there already.

"Of course, some Duluth men already have money invested in that country, but the opportunities are many, and more men ought to become interested. That part of North Dakota is going to become a great feeding spot for the Head of the Lakes, and Duluth men might just as well get some of the money that is being made there.

"Many new towns have sprung up along the Thief River Falls extension of the Soo and along the Great Northern's extension, completed this year. The roads are competing for business hotly, and this is a great industrial incentive. I tell you things are generally pretty lively when two big roads compete honestly for business.

"Both lines are getting it, too. The Great Northern is sidetracking its passengers to allow its freight trains, going both ways, the right of way. The train upon which I came back was sidetracked several times to allow freights to pass. The eastbound freights were heavily laden with wheat, and the westbound trains carried merchandise to the new and fast-growing towns.

"Most of the towns were just started this summer, but all of them have from three to six elevators, two to three banks, and from three to four lumber yards. Some of the elevators are owned by residents of the towns, some are owned by Minneapolis people, a few by Duluth people, and some are owned by local companies, in which outsiders are heavily interested.

"The banks are managed by local men, who have large interests in them, but much of the capital used in their establishment and the establishment of the lumber yards was furnished by Twin City capital.

"All of the towns seem to be growing and a great deal of business is transacted. Everyone seems to have lots of money. West Hope, on the Great Northern, has nine elevators and seems to be flourishing. Upham, Newburg and Max Bass, all on the Great Northern, are also good towns, as are Russell, Kramer and Overly, on the Soo.

"There are openings in all the towns for almost any line of business. There is a great need of hotels. Some of the towns which have perhaps three banks have no hotel. All the hostelries that are doing business are very poor, indeed. As the towns grow older, of course, better ones will be established, but men with some little money can find excellent openings there now.

"Other business houses are needed there. There are openings for drug stores, general stores, hardware and farm machinery establishments and newspapers. The entire countryside seems to be reeking with prosperity and I think that any one engaging in business there would find it profitable.

"All of the farms in Bottineau county are of 160 acres each and from four to five crops have been grown on them. The crop this year was an excellent one, the yield from twenty-five to thirty-five bushels to the acre. Threshing is almost over and the elevators are fairly bulging out, they are so full.

"There is no government land left in Bottineau county, but there is some in Williams county, which is quite as rich as its neighbor. The history of Bottineau is going to be repeated in Williams county. Crops are being raised there already and there are never any failures.

"The railroads will build extensions as fast as the country is settled and the farmers will have little trouble in getting their grain to the elevators. The pioneers in Bottineau county were obliged to haul their grain a very long way before the extensions were completed, but I don't think their hardships will be repeated in Williams county.

"The railroads are alive to the situation and are after all the business they can get. The Great Northern realizes that its territory is being invaded by the Soo and that it will have to step lively.

"This year has been a great one for Bottineau county and for the railroads. The farmers who have been there for five or six years own land worth from $3,000 to $4,000; own their own farm buildings and machinery and are raising excellent crops every year. And the roads have hauled many thousands of dollars of wheat and profit out of the region since the latter part of the summer. Practically the same thing will be seen within the course of a year or two 100 miles further west, in Williams county. There will be some excellent business opportunities there when the roads build their extensions.

"I would advise young men to secure quarter sections of that land in Williams county and in the course of a few years they will be independently rich."

Mr. Coffin spent about eight days in North Dakota and looked into conditions in Bottineau county very thoroughly. He returned to Duluth Wednesday.

The Truth About Stoves

By the Largest Makers of Stoves and Ranges in the World

MANY people have been deceived in believing that stoves were cheap because of a low price, when experience proves them the most expensive.

A small price may be paid for a stove which looks attractive in the catalogue, which has been described as "perfect," but it is liable to prove a very expensive purchase; for ten chances to one, trouble will arise from this stove in a month's time—it may not heat or cook properly, or it may consume fuel like a locomotive. Then the material in the stove itself may wear so poorly that at the end of a year or so it will have to be replaced.

You never get something for nothing in this world, and when you pay a small price for a stove, that price must cover the cost of material and labor, and include a reasonable profit, consequently inferior cast-iron and steel, and the cheapest and most inexperienced labor, must go into this seemingly low-priced stove.

CANNOT CONVICT THE BANKERS

Under the Iowa Law, Says One Prosecuting Attorney.

Sioux City, Iowa, Oct. 6.—The impossibility of convicting bankers for fraud in Iowa is exciting much discussion. Several recent cases show that it is practically impossible to secure conviction under the present statutes.

Within the past few days Judge Kennedy of the state court, has granted a continuance of the long delayed cases against F. H. Cutting, indicted for fraudulent banking, on the plea of defendant's counsel that it was tedious and wasteful of time and taxpayers' money to try the case, as precedent showed it a hopeless task to endeavor to convict a banker of fraud even after indictment.

The Cutting cases have dragged along for three years. He was in partnership with Representative Willett of this county, in the Cutting & Willett bank of Oto. No failure caused such surprise in the vicinity for several years as this.

There appears to have been a pool for the purpose of dealing on the board of trade, the bank acting as sort of financial agent. There is now pending a $200,000 suit against the Weare commission company of Chicago, brought by Cutting, who claims that if the company had sold the pool's holdings when at the high point, as instructed, this amount would have been realized and the disaster averted. But the Weare Commission company is now defunct.

Cutting is indicted on five counts. The continuance of the cases on the novel plea that it has been impossible to convict a banker of fraud has aroused quite a protest and a demand for laws that can be enforced.

Judge H. T. Reed of the federal court for the northern district of Iowa, is inclined to refute the claim made to the state court. He has therefore ordered that another jury be drawn for the October term of court in this city from names selected from the entire district.

This innovation is made in the hope that exact justice may be meted out to E. C. Brown, former president of the failed First National bank of Storm Lake, Iowa.

Brown is under indictment for embezzlement and fraudulent banking in various phases. The nominal assets of the institution when Receiver A. J. Wilson took hold were $285,000. There has been realized on this but a trifle over $35,000. The losing stockholders and depositors combined and employed T. D. Healy of Fort Dodge, Iowa, to assist United States District Attorney McMillan in prosecuting Brown. The government appears confident of securing a conviction. If it does it will doubtless encourage the pushing of numerous outstanding cases against erring bankers in Northwest Iowa.

It's poor satisfaction to have your neighbor tell you about a wonderful bargain sale—after it is all over. Of the next one, get your information in time—from the ads.

THOUGHT HERSELF FREE TO MARRY

Whom She Pleased Here, Though Married In Italy.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 6.—Mrs. Lorenzo Munaco of 619 Hospital street, is charged by her husband with bigamy.

Four years ago, in Palermo, provice of Cinci, Italy, the couple were married. Shortly afterwards Munaco migrated to this city and by his hard labor saved enough money to send for his wife and her mother. The pair came over and the man and wife lived together for four months.

Finding then that the husband could not make enough money to support the three, the husband and wife mutually agreed to separate. The woman finding it as difficult to support her mother and herself, and there being one who was willing to marry her, the ceremony was performed Sept. 15 in the First city court.

Hearing of the marriage, the husband came forward and charged the woman with the crime of bigamy. The case was before the Second City criminal court and the bond of the woman was fixed at $1,000.

In her plea the woman stated that having come to this country she was of the opinion that it being a free country, she was allowed to contract a marriage as she deemed fit, especially since she was told that the marriage in Italy, did not count here.

The aged mother was present at the arraignment, and it is possible there was never such a heart-rending scene as was enacted when the officers made known to the mother and the daughter that the latter would have to go to prison.

COST FIVE DOLLARS

For Cincinnati Man to Swear at Little Girl.

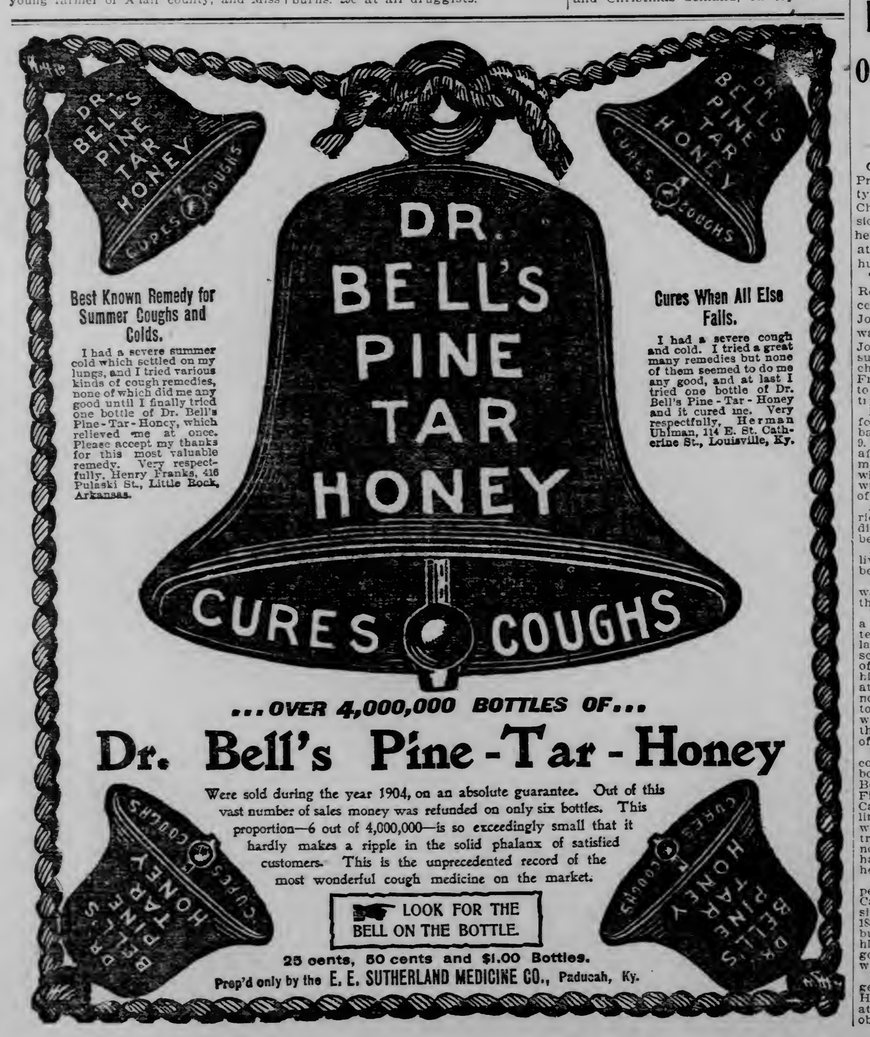

Cincinnati, Oct. 6.—Herman Scheinfluth, 45 Ellen street, Elmwood place, was fined $5 by Mayor John H. Bart and severely lectured because he swore at a little girl who was innocently playing on his front pavement.

The Elmwood place authorities say the sidewalk in front of Scheinfluth's residence is very attractive to children of the village, as a lamp post stands there which the tots find a constant source of pleasure in playing "ring-around-rosie" about and tying their jumping ropes to.

These antics of the children, it is claimed, annoy Scheinfluth, and when Anna Hildebrandt, 10, who lives next door, swung backwards and forwards on his gate he grew incensed, and, the Elmwood place police say, called the child a vile name.

There is a law in the village covering such an offense, and when little Miss Hildebrandt told her mother, the latter swore out a warrant for the arrest of Scheinfluth on the charge of using profane language.

In reply to the charges, he stated that Anna Hildebrandt had called him names first, but the evidence of others proved that she did not.

Best Known Remedy for Summer Coughs and Colds.

BAD BLOOD WEAKENS THE SYSTEM AND INVITES DISEASE

Every part of the body is dependent on the blood for nourishment and strength, and when from any cause this vital stream of life becomes impoverished or run-down, it invites disease to enter. No one can be well when the blood is impure; they lack the energy that is natural with health, the complexion becomes pale and sallow, the vital energies are at a low ebb, and they suffer from a general broken-down condition of health. The system is weakened and unable to resist the diseases and disorders that are constantly assailing it. The Liver and Kidneys, failing to receive the proper stimulation and nourishment from the blood, grow inactive and dull, and the waste matters and bodily impurities that should pass off through these channels of nature are left in the system to produce Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sores and Ulcers, Skin Diseases or some other blood disorder. When the blood is in this weakened and diseased condition it should be treated with a remedy that is not only thorough, but gentle in its action. S. S. S., a purely vegetable remedy, made of roots, herbs and barks, is just what is needed. It not only cleanses the blood of all impurities and poisons, and enriches and strengthens it, but gently builds up the entire system by its fine tonic effect. S. S. S. reinvigorates every member of the body, gives tone and vigor to the blood, and as it goes to the different parts, carries robust health and strength. S. S. S. acts more promptly and gives better results than any other medicine. It cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sores and Ulcers, Skin Diseases and all other blood disorders, and cures them permanently. Our Medical Department will be glad to give advice without charge to all suffering with blood or skin diseases. Address

THE GERMAN PIONEERS.

On Oct. 6, 1683, just 222 years ago today, the first German settlers reached this country, and the anniversary is being made the occasion, in many parts of the country, for celebrations. And it is fitting that the event should be celebrated, for among the many strains of alien blood that have flowed in to form the American nation, few have given it more strength and stability than its Teutonic blood.

Under the leadership of Franz Daniel Pastorius, this little party of German pioneers landed on the banks of the Delaware 222 years ago today. They were welcomed by Governor William Penn, who gave them several large tracts of land which later became known as Germantown, now a part of the city of Philadelphia. Others of their countrymen followed, so that today Pennsylvania has a large proportion of citizens of German blood who have tilled its land generation after generation for a couple of centuries.

Few nationalities have contributed to the population of this country people of a higher class than the Germans. They are industrious, contented, frugal, making good citizens wherever they have been. As farmers they have shown a patience and industry excelled by none, and they seem to have an unusual faculty for getting the best results out of the soil. Wherever they have settled they have given a stability and solidity to the civilization that does not exist elsewhere.

The revolution of 1848, in Germany, brought to this country some of the finest immigrants it has ever received. Strong, capable, liberty-loving patriots, driven from their native land for wishing it too well, they transferred their love and homage to the new soil, and became one of its best and strongest elements. In St. Louis, in Milwaukee, in St. Paul, and other large centers where they settled, they have ever since taken a prominent part in public affairs and in the business life, and the business directories of all such communities are full of richly rolling old German names which show how fully they have entered into the life and activities of the adopted land.

The American blood of the future will be a composite, formed of all the varying strains that have flowed in through the seaport towns. To a philosopher, trying a century or two hence to pick out the strains that have retained most of their original character, one of the first to present itself will be the Teuton blood, which is having a leading part in the formation of this new people.

A GOOD SHOWING.

Incidentally, it is a pretty good showing for Duluth that its houses and office buildings should all be well rented.

This has been shown during the week in the local columns of The Herald, when rental agents gave good reports on both these items. They said that practically all of the offices in the city are rented, and it appeared also that the outlook was excellent for the construction of a new six-story office building at Fourth avenue west and Superior street by the Massachusetts Realty company, a project that has been under consideration for some time.

Rental agents said, also, that there are very few empty houses in the city this fall, and practically none that are especially desirable. This indicates a healthy growth of the population that has kept up with the building that has been done this summer in the residence line. In fact the population manages to keep quite a bit in the lead, and there is ample room for more buildings of the proper size and rental price.

These developments regarding the situation as to office rooms and houses for rent are both straws indicating that a genial breeze of prosperity is blowing over the city.

THOUGHTLESS CRUELTIES.

Thoughtlessness about other people's feelings often works just as much cruelty as downright malice. So long as the party whose feelings are hurt believes in the intent to injure him, it matters not what the offending party's intentions are. A fancied injury meant as a joke hurts just as much as one designed to sting, if the injured one cannot distinguish the difference.

Rather a pathetic story comes from a small community in Pennsylvania, dealing with the disappearance of Thomas Mannan, aged 65 years.

Of late the new minstrel song, "Everybody Works But Father," a piece of nonsense with a catchy air, has been having one of those popular runs that are so common that nearly all the time one song or another is enjoying the experience. Mannan was an invalid, and as he had not been able to work for years, his family has had to support him.

When he heard his children singing this new song he fancied they meant to reproach him for not assisting in his own support. When they sang "Everybody Works But Father" to him he responded that he would work if he could. The children, supposing that he was entering into the spirit of the song and was joking, continued to sing, thoughtlessly, of course, and with never an idea that they were wounding him deeply.

At last, cut to the quick by what he thought to be the continual reproaches of his children for his idleness and uselessness, he disappeared, and though he has been gone a couple of weeks, as yet no trace of him has been found. Recalling his actions when the song was sung, the children now realize that they have unconsciously driven him away, perhaps to suicide, perhaps to the wandering life of a helpless cripple, forced to the alternatives of beggary or starvation.

People thus afflicted are usually hypersensitive, and those who are well and strong and optimistic cannot understand their condition of mind. Thousand of rankling barbs penetrate to the tender souls of those suffering from conditions that make them different from the normal, shot unconsciously by people who never dreamed of hurting. The feeble, the helpless, the dependent are generally sensitive about their condition, and continually fancying that those who support them are wearying of the burden and wishing them out of the way.

It is the duty of those who are healthy and whole to guard their words and actions against anything that will be thus misunderstood, for there is no cruelty more deadly and more cowardly than that of the strong toward the weak.

A HELPFUL HABIT.

The West end has acquired the Commercial club habit, which is one of the best habits a community can have. A community without a commercial club, or some organization of its live business men under another name, to keep things going, comes pretty near being a dead community.

Duluth now has three commercial clubs, one down town, one in the West end and a third in West Duluth. Some might think this was a superfluity of clubs, and that in the work of "boosting Duluth" they might get in each other's way. Not so. The West Duluth club is organized particularly for the benefit of West Duluth, but its efforts are by no means confined to that particular part of the city, and it can, upon occasion, do yeoman service for the whole city. The West end club is in the same condition; organized especially to look after things in the West end, it is still a loyal Duluth organization, and will bend its efforts toward the upbuilding of the whole city as faithfully as will any other organization.

With the two western clubs dealing particularly with things in their own locality, and yet in a general way helping to push Duluth along, this makes three commercial clubs whose aim it will be to keep Duluth moving. When all three join hands and work together, as they should, on projects designed for the glory of Duluth, something is likely to happen.

The commercial club habit is a mighty good habit, and it looks well to see Duluth getting such a hard case of it. It means that things will move.

CHEAPER FOOD PRODUCTS.

Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture is out with some news that comes decidedly under the head of important if true. He says that in the near future there will be a reduction in the cost of living, at least so far as the price of many articles of provisions are concerned.

The enormous yield of grain in the states of the Middle West will have an effect upon the retail prices of meat, dairy products, poultry and dozens of other necessary articles of food.

Unless conditions have altogether gone beyond the reach of normal impulses, the secretary's forecast should be correct. The only question is whether artificial control has not grown up to such an extent as to be able by manipulating prices to prevent the proper effects of these conditions from reaching the people.

The present high level of prices of food products was caused in a large measure by a scarcity of corn a few years ago. The prices of meat went up, and the meat men said it was because corn cost so much that to fatten stock on it made the resulting meat more expensive. The impulse toward high prices spread to practically all food products. Just how much natural conditions made this result, and just how much it was manipulated by the interests in substantial control of the provision markets, cannot now be definitely stated. But there can be no doubt that the beef trust, since grown so powerful, did much of its manipulation of prices during this natural increase in prices, and that it has since maintained the high level of prices when natural conditions no longer warranted them.

There is every natural reason why provisions of all sorts should be cheaper this winter. Corn and wheat are plentiful, and while prices are going to be high enough to make the farmer happy and contented, they are still going to be low enough to permit a general reduction in prices of food products if, as stated above, artificial control of conditions has not become so powerful as to prevent it, and so effective as to absorb for its manipulators the benefits that should go to the people themselves.

Everybody will hope that the present government campaign against the beef trust will have the effect of weakening this artificial control, and that the beneficent results of present conditions will spread to the people this winter. If it does, Duluth will profit both ways: from the good prices paid the farmers in its constituent territory, from handling the products of a large yield of grain, and from the lower prices of food products. Added to the prospect of cheaper electric light and cheaper gas, it makes the outlook for the coming winter exceptionally bright.

THE FIELD SURVEY

Last month the government's finances made a gain, the receipts being enough in excess of the expenses to reduce the deficit to $9,623,565, against $17,854,256 last year. September is always a good month, however, and there will still be a deficit for congress to talk about when it meets.

The standpatter is trying to shame the tariff revisioner by calling him "free trader." It isn't true, so he needn't mind the charge. The argument for a tariff schedule that will help instead of throttling the people is not inconsistent with a belief in protection.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Too much can not be said in favor of the drainage of swamp lands in Northern Minnesota," said J. B. Bisbee of Chicago at the St. Louis. Mr. Bisbee has for several weeks been on the Vermilion range, where he is interested in some iron properties. "The state should certainly take steps in the way of making the necessary appropriation to cover the expense of the work," he continued.

"The swamp land is really better than the other kind, so far as its adaptability for agricultural purposes is concerned. The soil in the swamp is just the right sort for farming. Once the water has been drained off, there will be thousands of acres of farm land which will readily sell for from $5 an acre up. As the territory becomes settled up the property values will increase. It would surely be a paying proposition for the state to thus expend its funds. Good returns would be received on the investment.

"There is a good deal of prospecting being done now on the Vermilion range. Some new indications of iron ore are being found, and there are liable to be some reports of good finds within the next few weeks. Several diamond drills are at work on new properties.

"I never placed much confidence in these reports concerning the probable discovery of coal in Minnesota. If there is any coal it is probably of a very poor quality. History shows that where coal and iron are in the same territory, the coal is of a very poor quality. The coal talk is dying away now, anyway, following in the wake of the gold reports. I remember there was great excitement a few years back over the reported discovery of gold in different places in the Rainy Lake region. I was up there myself one day, when they discovered a vein of quartz that looked rich enough to put all the promoters among the millionaire class. They were certain they were millionaires, all of them, but further investigation showed that they had another guess coming. The quartz looked good, but it didn't produce the right sort of metal, and the hopes of the mining men went glimmering."

"The north shore, I regard as being one of the finest places in the country to spend an outing," said A. J. Smith of Minneapolis, district attorney of Hennepin county, at the St. Louis. "I am now on my way up there, and hope to be able to shoot a bear before my return. They tell em a lot of the animals have been seen at different places, and that in one district five of them have been shot in the last two or three weeks.

"Isle Royale and the north shore are not sufficiently appreciated as places for spending one's vacation. Everyone who has visited them is delighted with the natural advantages offered, but the trouble is that these advantages are known to altogether too few people. As summer resorts' points on Upper Lake Superior will become more popular from year to year, as they become better known."

"Canada, as well as the United States, has had a bumper wheat crop this year," said F. N. McLaren of Winnipeg at the Spalding. "The crop has been estimated at 100,000,000 bushels, but I believe that estimate is a little too high.

"About 65 or 70 per cent of this will be for export. The remainder will be kept in the country for mill consumption and seed for 1906. Shipments of wheat from Port Arthur and Fort William will be heavy this fall, but the elevator capacity in the interior is ample to take care of all the surplus grain that is likely to be handled."

"It is only in recent years that much attention has been given the cut-over pine lands in Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin for agricultural purposes," said A. R. Slocum of Ashland at the McKay. "The large mining and lumber interests have been compelled to depend largely upon the East and South for their farm products in the past, while those in search of cheap farm lands have rushed to the Far Western prairies, or else into Canada, runing over and away from better opportunities than the government free lands of the West could possibly offer.

"But of late years the tide is turning. People are discovering that the prairies do not make the only, nor even the best farms, and that within a short distance of the great centers of Western population are chances for making farms and homes that are far more attractive and greatly superior to any that the prairie regions have ever afforded. This is no new discovery, however. The pioneers of this country nearly all had to hew out their farms from the timber, and the greater portion of Southern and Eastern Wisconsin, today a garden, was once heavily timbered.

"These early settlers, most of whom have become rich from their farms alone, had none of the facilities for money making that are offered the farmer of today. They were compelled to cut their timber, and at great expense of time and labor to haul it to piles and burn it. The settler today has a ready cash market for every stick of timber that grows on his land, and instances are by no means rare in which farmers, after building their houses, barns and fences, have sold the remainder of their timber for more than enough to pay for their land. The railroad companies are now doing a good deal in the way of offering inducements to settlers who will make their homes on the land which yet remains unoccupied. Much of the vacant land is controlled by the railroads, and the lumber companies still own a lot of it, while much more is in the hands of individuals and companies who bought it from the lumber concerns and railroads as a speculation."

A GRAPE CREAM OF TARTAR BAKING POWDER

It makes the most delicious and healthful hot breads, biscuit and cake

FREE FROM ALUM, LIME, OR PHOSPHATIC ACID

Alum baking powders are unhealthful. Do not use them for raising food under any circumstances. So detrimental are alum baking powders considered, that in most foreign countries their sale is prohibited. In many States in this country the law compels alum powders to be branded to show that they contain this dangerous acid, while in the District of Columbia, Congress has prohibited the sale of all food that contains alum.

Alum baking powders are sold to consumers at from 10 cents a pound to 25 ounces for 25 cents, or 25 cents a pound, and when not branded may generally be distinguished by their price.

THE WEATHER

Though the temperature remained decidedly agreeable, early this morning it looked more like a fall day than it has any morning yet. The sky was overcast with dull, glooy clouds, there was a slight chill in the air before the sun broke through, and the trees seemed suddenly more bare of leaves than they had been in the new light of these autumn-like conditions. The wind was almost entirely absent, and when the first few faint breezes came they showed a disposition to come from the northeast. Later the clouds broke, the northeasterly tendency failed to increase, and the outlook grew more promising.

With a slightly weaker hold the weather man expects present conditions to retain their grasp for a while longer. It will be partly cloudy tonight and Saturday, with but slight changes in temperature. But there will be fresh easterly winds, a dangerous element, though unofficially the weather man says the good weather will continue through Saturday.

Says he: "Showery conditions continued in the gulf states, Oregon, Washington, British Columbia and Alberta on account of the low pressure areas over those sections. It is also somewhat warmer throughout the Northwest this morning. The Minnesota high pressure area has advanced its center to Eastern Ontario, causing a drop in temperature in that district and also the eastern and southern lake region and North Atlantic states. The winds in the lake region are generally fresh northerly and easterly. It is quite certain the present good weather will continue throughout Saturday and with little change in temperature in this locality."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Red Wing News: One objection frequently urged is that we should not give congress the power to control railroad rates. The constitution gave congress that power more than a hundred years ago.

Elbert Bede in North Branch Review: Some of the editors of the Eighth congressional district are howling like a lot of Populists and tearing out their hair because they think their congressman is giving all the appointments to Duluth. The Review would like to be informed as to just how many appointments have been given to Duluth or St. Louis county. Anoka county has gotten the only one the Review has heard announced, and a Duluth gentleman has a good show to get the only other district appointment controlled by the congressman to be given out at this time.

Moose Lake Star: It looks as if Brother Hamilton will be appointed to the receivership of the United States land office at Duluth. The deep gloom in the Duluth camp of politicians is a good indication. If Congressman Bede will show his metal by turning down those Duluth politicians in this one instance, he will get a greater majority at the next election than he did a year ago.

New York Mills Journal: Hon. Odin Halden, the popular county auditor of St. Louis county, is receiving bouquets from the press of Minnesota. It may mean that in the very near future Mr. Halden will be one of the greatest of Minnesota state auditors.

Two Harbors Iron Trade Journal: For a fact, it would be a joke on the party if Joel P. Heatwole should turn in and let the Republicans of Minnesota nominate and elect him governor next summer and fall.

Wykoff Messenger: It is a good thing for the state and the nation that the time has come when the hidebound party man who went on the basis that "anyone the party nominates is good enough for me," is not so numerous as he used to be. Of course you will find them in considerable numbers, but the ranks of the independent voters and citizens who demand of the party the right man for the right place is growing. "The best is none too good" is a better motto to follow.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: The St. Paul Dispatch is busy killing off prospective candidates for governor. It wants to block the way to all comers.

Middle River Pioneer: With strikes in various industries in progress and others impending, it occurs to us that the people of this country are more directly

DULUTH AND THE HERALD.

Kansas City Journal: Duluth, Minn., complains of depredations by wild bears. No use. President Roosevelt can hardly be induced to take another vacation this season.

Mankato Free Press: The Duluth Herald wisely remarks that gossip grows with age, but it does not improve, like wine does.

Red Wing News: About five years ago The Duluth Herald remembers how they all gasped when the record was broken by a lake cargo of three thousand tons. Now a cargo of eight thousand tons has become commonplace and ships are building on lines of eleven thousand tons. The lake vessels of the future will reach from Duluth to Buffalo—just shove the cargo in one end and take it out the other and save transportation entirely.

Virginia Enterprise: The garbage grounds in that little town of Duluth, down the line, still continue to attract the smeller of Bruin. A bear must have a scent like a Duluth politician and take chances like one who bites at a bribe to be coaxed up to a back door, even in a wilderness.

Albert Lea Tribune: The Duluth Herald says Ohio is in doubt. Very true, but it is as to the size of the Republican majority.

Cambridge Press: Minneapolis proposes not to be surpassed by Duluth in any way. Our readers may have noticed that the street cars in Duluth were actually blocked a few days ago by six bears being on the track. Now Minneapolis comes to the front with the graphic account of the capture of a fierce wolf in the courthouse.

Middle River Pioneer: A small party of Duluthians are going gunning for bear. Not the Russian Bear or the board of trade variety, but the four-legged kind that has been pillaging Duluth gardens.

Brainerd Dispatch: They taxed a Chinaman $107 for selling two bottles of beer contrary to law in Duluth yesterday. At that rate the treasury of the city at the Head of the Lakes ought not to be long empty.

Our Queer Language.

When the English tongue we speak,
Why is "break" not rhymed with "freak?"
Will you tell me why it's true
We say "sew," but likewise "few,"
And the maker of a verse
Cannot cap his "horse" with "worse?"
"Beard" sounds not the same as "heard;"
"Cord" is different from "word;"
"Cow" is cow, but "low" is low;
"Shoe" is never rhymed with "foe."
Think of "hose" and "dose" and "lose;"
And of "goose"—and yet of "choose."
Think of "comb" and "tomb" and "bomb;"
"Doll" and "roll;" and "home" and "some;"
And since "pay" is rhymed with "say,"
Why not "paid" with "said," I pray?
We have "blood" and "food" and "good;"
"Mould" is not pronounced like "could."
Wherefore "done," but "gone" and "lone?"
Is there any reason known?
And, in short, it seems to me,
Sounds and letters disagree.

Philadelphia Catholic Standard: "Woman just dropped dead in the bargain crush at the ribbon counter!" cried the floor walker, excitedly.

Cleveland Leader: "Why don't McSosh take the gold cure?"

Chicago Tribune: "Do you think I could get an audience with the boss?" asked the polltical hanger-on, going in.

"Yes," snapped the disappointed office-seeker, coming out, "if you featured him in a dime museum as the 'Two-Faced Man.'"

Philadelphia Bulletin: "That man shows when he's well bored."

WEST END.

J. S. GROVER DIES ALONE

Sudden Taking Off of Master of West End A. O. U. W.

Found Dead of Heart Failure at West Duluth Reservoir Site.

The West end received a shock, last evening when news was received of the death of John Smith Grover, of 1526 West Michigan street, the end coming in a ravine near the site of the new reservoir in West Duluth, of which work he was inspector for the city engineer's department. Mr. Grover expired of heart failure and died alone. He had been at work as inspector all day and was last seen at about 3 o'clock when he went to the northwest side to inspect the ravine bed of the reservoir site.

Just about 6 o'clock, last night, two boys who were herding cattle found the body stark and stiff in the dry bottom of the creek which Mr. Grover had gone to inspect. There was an abrasion on his chin where it is supposed he struck when falling, and it is thought that death was instantaneous. It is believed that the climb proved too much for him and brought on the attack which caused his death. It seems that heart failure, from which Mr. Grover had been a sufferer, for years, was in the family, as four of the brothers of the dead man have died with heart failure within ten years. The body was taken to M. J. Filiatrault's undertaking rooms where the coroner held an autopsy and pronounced heart failure the cause of death.

The first Mrs. Grover heard of the death of her husband was shortly after 6 o'clock, about the time she was expecting him home. The shock was terrible and she was prostrated for a time. Later she gave directions not to hold the funeral before Sunday, and said that at that time the remains will be taken to Mitchell, Iowa, the old home of the dead man.

Mr. Grover was 60 years of age and was a native of Keokuk, Iowa. He and his wife had no children. They came to Duluth in 1886 and since that time has been in the employ of the city most of the time. At the time of his death he was master workman of Rice's Point lodge No. 80, A. O. U. W., and was an active and prominent member of Diamond lodge, No. 45, Knights of Pythias.

MRS. REYNOLDS DEAD.

West End Woman Expires While Visiting In Chicago.

Word has been received here that Mrs. John Reynolds, whose home has been for years in the Osborne block, here, died very suddenly of heart failure in Chicago at the home of her husband's sister on Wednesday morning. Mrs. Reynolds left Duluth about three months ago to visit in the East and later in Chicago for her health which has not been of the best for some time.

Only a few days ago Mr. Reynolds received word from her that she was feeling better and would be home soon. Then Wednesday morning he received a wire telling him of her sudden taking off. He left that night for Chicago, where the funeral will take place, as that was their former home.

Mrs. Reynolds was about 39 years of age and has lived in Duluth for quite a number of years and has many friends at the West End, who sincerely mourn her demise.

TRANSPORT HAD PASS.

Tokio, Oct. 6.—The navy department announces that the Russian transport Angan was overhauled near Cape Sirotoko, but was released on showing a pass from Capt. Shimaura, chief-of-staff of the standing squadron. It was also shown that the Angan had no contraband aboard.

STRANGER THAN FICTION.

A Remedy Which Has Revolutionized the Treatment of Stomach Troubles.

The remedy is not heralded as a wonderful discovery nor yet a secret patent medicine, neither is it claimed to cure anything except dyspepsia, indigestion and stomach troubles with which nine out of ten suffer.

The remedy is in the form of pleasant tasting tablets or lozenges, containing vegetables and fruit essences, pure aseptic pepsin (government test), golden seal and diastase. The tablets are sold by druggists under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Many interesting experiments to test the digestivo power of Stuart's Tablets show that one grain of the active principle contained in them is sufficient to thoroughly digest 3,000 grains of raw meat, eggs and other wholesome food.

Stuart's Tablets do not act upon the bowels like after dinner pills and cheap cathartics, which simply irritate and inflame the intestines without having any effect whatever in digesting food or curing indigestion.

If the stomach can be rested and assisted in the work of digestion it will very soon recover its normal vigor, as no organ is so much abused and overworked as the stomach.

This is the secret, if there is any secret, of the remarkable success of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, a remedy practically unknown a few years ago and now the most widely known of any treatment for stomach weakness.

This success has been secured entirely upon its merits as a digestive pure and simple, because there can be no stomach trouble if the food is promptly digested.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets act entirely on the food eaten, digesting it completely, so that it can be assimilated into blood, nerve and tissue. They cure dyspepsia, water brash, sour stomach, gas and bloating after meals, because they furnish the digestive power which weak stomachs lack and unless that lack is supplied it is useless to attempt to cure by the use of "tonics," "pills" and cathartics which have absolutely no digestive power.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can be found at all drug stores and the regular use of one or two of them after meals will demonstrate their merit better than any other argument.

CLUB READY TO DO WORK

West Enders Form Commercial Organization For Mutual Benefit

Elects Officers, Adopts Constitution and Now Looking For Question

The West End Commercial club organized formally last night at a meeting held in the store of R. R. Forward & Co., and the following officers were at once elected until the annual meeting, which will be held on the second Friday in January:

President, John J. Moe of Johnson & Moe.

Vice president, Thomas W. Walker of Moir & Walker.

Secretary, George M. Jensen of the West End Advertiser.

Treasurer, C. W. Elston of the St. Louis County bank.

Directors, R. R. Forward, R. D. Haven, Sever Morterud, M. A. Fedje and N. E. Nelson.

A membership committee was at once appointed, on motion of R. R. Forward, the following being named, and who are commanded to seize, bind and deliver all West enders into the club by the next meeting night, which will be on Thursday, Oct. 12: S. W. Hill, C. A. Britts and N. O. Nelson.

Besides those whose names have been mentioned as officers or on committees, the following last night signed the roster of membership and will form the nucleus of what is expected to develop into one of the largest "booster" clubs the city has yet seen: Charles Mork, P. G. Hanson, B. A. Martin, H. Hanson and C. A. Gregory.

The committee on constitution and by-laws, consisting of S. W. Hill, T. W. Walker and G. M. Jensen, appointed at a meeting a week previous, reported last night, and recommended that the constitution and by-laws, with some few amendments, of the former similar club, be adopted. This was done. The name is different, that of the former club having been "The Duluth Business Men's association." The membership fee was made $2 and the annual dues $1, the object in making the figures low being so that property holders and other reputable citizens may join. As to the matter of putting up the real expense of maintenance of the club, the business men who are forming the club figure on doing that part aside from the initiation and membership fees, and made the latter low in order that all may become interested in the proceedings of the club and take part in it.

The secretary of the club, who is Mr. Jensen, will have some things to do. He will have general supervision of the business of the club, must take care of its correspondence, and collect statistics and information likely to help the club in its object of bringing more business interests to the West end.

A committee consisting of M. A. Fedje, R. R. Forward and N. E. Nelson was appointed to look up quarters for a suitable meeting place. When this committee reports the club will decide as to whether or not club rooms will be rented and kept open, or will it merely meet at stated intervals in some room used by some lodge or other. This committee is to report at the next meeting, Oct. 12.

It was noticeable last evening that a spirit of enthusiasm in the club-forming matter is growing, and those who have interested themselves in it are doing everything in their power to make the matter a complete success.

DOUBLE TRACK OPEN.

Workmen Make Record Time In Welding Six Blocks of Track.

Record time was made yesterday afternoon in opening the double track through the West end. The south tracks from Twenty-first avenue to Garfield was still in "open order" at noon and to finish this track the rails had to be welded together for the whole six blocks. But it had been promised that the double track would be opened by evening and the track crew went at it hammer and tongs.

So rapidly did they work with their welding that at 6:12 last night the first car went over the new south track and thus opened the double track service. Excellent work was done and the men felt quite chesty over it even though they were pretty tired after the hustle and strain.

NEW FLAT BUILDING.

J. D. Howard Putting In Foundation Walls at Eighteenth and Superior.

The work on the foundation walls of the new flat building being put up at Eighteenth avenue west and Superior street by J. D. Howard, is about finished. The excavation is deep and the walls are thick so it looks as if the building will be substantial.

The building will be in the southwestern corner of the block in which the Adams school is situated and will have a good location. There will be but two stories to the structure, the lower to be used for stores and the upper for flats. There will be three stores and two flats, which will be heated. The ground plan of the foundation measures 50 by 140 feet.

BEDE MAY HAVE AN OPPONENT

Report That Culkin Will Oppose Him In the Primary.

The Minneapolis Journal says: Reports from the Eighth district indicate that J. Adam Bede will have to defend his title next year, after having a free field at the last primary. Bede has gotten into some patronage troubles that have antagonized a large section of the party in Duluth and elsewhere. He seems to have been more than usually unfortunate in running into fights which left sore spots. Bede had strong opposition when first nominated, and much of this feeling still remains. The man selected to try conclusions with the congressional humorist is said to be W. E. Culkin, formerly of Buffalo, from which village he was appointed register of the Duluth land office. Bede has let Culkin out, and the former register, now a citizen of Duluth, is said to be ready to make a contest. He is a campaigner of no ordinary ability, and may give Bede trouble.

THE FLOATING POOL ROOM FINED $500.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—A fine of $500 was imposed yesterday upon the floating pool-room, the steamer City of Traverse, by William Penn Nixon, collector of the port, because of the failure of the owners to register a transfer of the vessel from Capt. Stephen Jones to Harry Perry. The fine was paid under protest.

The imposition of the fine gave rise to a report that the license of the boat had been taken away, but Collector Nixon declared that such was not the case.

ADVANCE IN WHEAT

Higher Liverpool Market and Export Business Give Strenght.

Duluth Makes Greatest Gain Flax Fairly Active and Higher.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 6.—The wheat market opened strong and made a further advance. Higher prices at Liverpool gave the market its start, and during the morning considerable export business was done in Manitoba wheat, which was taken as bullish, though local exporters say that it is time export business in Manitoba wheat was being done in large amounts. The Northwest movement is not exceptionally heavy, due to the shortage in cars. Liverpool closed ⅝-½d higher, London ½d lower, Paris unchanged to ⅛c lower and Berlin and Budapest ⅛c higher.

The December option advanced 1c in Duluth, ⅝-¾c in Chicago, ¾-⅞c in Minneapolis, ⅝c in New York, ⅜-½c in St. Louis and ⅜c in Kansas City.

Corn closed ¼c higher for the December option in Chicago, and ⅝d higher in Liverpool. December oats in Chicago closed ⅛-¼c higher.

Bradstreet reported weekly clearances from America of 1,072,640 bus. of wheat, and 1,186,381 bus. of corn.

The Modern Miller says: "Excepting a few sections where farmers, fearing the Hessian fly, have delayed putting in their crop, winter wheat seeding is progressing favorably. Deliveries of wheat from the country remain small and will continue that way, until farmers have completed their fall work.

Car receipts of wheat were 216 against 326 last year, and at Minneapolis 60 against 501 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 885 against 910 last year. Chicago received 34 against 46 last year. Winnipeg received 431 cars of which 10 were No. 1 hard, 272 No. 1 northern and 104 No. 2 northern, against 271 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,262,000 bus, last year 1,236,000 bus. Shipments 571,000 bus, last year 481,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 223,000 bus.

Argentine shipments of wheat this week amount to 440,000 bus against 944,000 bus last week and 928,000 bus last year.

Primary receipts of corn were 282,000 bus, last year 281,000 bus. Shipments 206,000 bus, last year 331,000 bus. Clearances were 460,000 bus. Argentine shipments of corn this week have been 1,560,000 bus against 1,722,000 bus last week and 3,670,000 bus last year.

In the Duluth market wheat was a very dull proposition. The December option opened ½c higher at 80½c, and advanced to 81c at 11:55. It closed at that price, a gain of 1c for the day. May opened ½c higher at 84½c and advanced to 85c, closing there.

Cash wheat offerings were not so brisk today. Elevators paid 1¼c over Duluth December for No. 1 northern.

Flax was fairly active. The trading was quiet and steady, and though the plt was not exciting at all, considerable changed hands. Offerings were not especially large, and there was a good demand. October opened 2c lower at 98¼c, and advanced to 99¼c, falling back to 99c, and closing there, a gain of ¼c. November opened ¼c lower at 98½c, advanced to 99½c, and closed at 99¾c, an advance of ¾c. December opened ¼c lower at 98¼c, advanced to 99¾c, and closed at 99½c, a gain of ¾c. May advanced ⅜c to $1.03¾, and sold as high as $1.03½. Receipts of flax in Duluth were 39 cars, and at Minneapolis, 46. Argentine shipments of flax this week were 8,000 bus., against 512,000 bus. last week, and 96,000 bus. last year.

Coarse grains were unchanged in prices.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Higher Prices at Liverpool Give Wheat Considerable Firmness.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—Higher prices at Liverpool caused firmness in the wheat market here today. Shorts and commission houses were active bidders. Notwithstanding continued clear weather in the Northwest, offerings in the pit were quite light. December opened ¼@⅜c to ⅜c higher at 84⅜c to 84⅞@85c. After touching 86c, the price settled back to 84¾c. Minneapolis Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 919 cars, against 960 cars last week and 927 cars a year ago.

The scringth was well maintained throughout the day. On aggressive demand from commission houses the December option advanced to 85¼c. The market closed strong with December up ⅝@⅞c at 85¼c.

Sentiment in the corn pit was bullish as a result of small local receipts. The firm tone of cables helped t ostimulate demand for corn here. Decemher opened unchanged to ¼c higher at 44@44¼c and sold up to 44¾c. Local receipts were 176 cars, with 61 of contract grade.

The market closed steady with December up ¼c at 44¼c.

Oats were inactive, general demand. In consequence the market was quite strong. Receipts were smaller than the amount estimated, and cash demand was again a noticeable feature. December opened a shade to ⅛@¼c higher at 28¼@28⅜c and sold up to 28⅜c. Local receipts were 288 cars.

Provisions were steady, but the volume of trading was extremely light. January pork was up 2½c at 12.30. Lard and ribs were unchanged at $6.75@6.77½ and $6.42½ respectively.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The Argentine shipments were about 300,000 bus less than last week. Today's market started strong, and retained its strength throughout the session, practically closing at the top. The export business coming at the top as a stimulant to the marnumes to act as a stimulant to the market and coupled with it the improved tone to the cash markets tends to unsettle the confidence of the bears and invites some little increase in the outside demand. The day's market was uniformly strong, and cleaned up the primary markets pretty well for choice wheat. St. Louis wiring message received today says a prominent elevator concern got very bullish news to the effect that 45 per cent of the wheat has been marketed, and that in the Western sections, the ground is very dry and seeding delayed, with the ground already seeded also needing rain badly. This is a factor that trade must be closely watched. It has been for some time apparent that the new crop of winter wheat is not getting the required amount of moisture. We continue to feel that it is well to buy wheat on the setbacks.

Corn participated to a mild extent to a little bullish sentiment, wchih was not unnatural, considering the slowness of the market. We feel that the short interest is getting nervous and inclined to cover when opportunity presents. Ae we said a day or two ago, there seems too much company on the bull side. A sudden change in the weather would cause a stampede among this element. We feel it is still safe to buy corn on the setbacks.

Oats—The market ruled strong with a broader trade showing a net advance of ½c for the day. We would buy oats on setbacks.

Provisions were far from being a laggard in the day's movements, the distant options taking on new strength and activity. It is, however, a packer's market.

• • •

Pringle, Fitch & Rankin, Chicago: A New York authority wires us: "Germany does not use spring wheat and their mills are not adapted for its usage. Amden, Germany, takes moderate quantities of spring wheat each year. Outside of that there is no spring wheat imported into Germany, and unless there has been a universal change in their milling machinery, there won't be this year."

The Duluth exporter who has been selling the wheat to Germany says this is absurd. Only three years ago, he says, Germany was taking the larger part of the Northwest's No. 2 northern and No. 3 wheat.

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—A sharply higher Liverpool market induced by a good demand for both American and Canadian wheat, and slightly reduced Northwestern receipts, led to a higher opening and steady advance throughout the session today. The range was not wide and the trading was on a limited scale. The strong undertone in wheat was the feature of the session. Cash trade was lively and maintained its position relative to the future markets. The forecast for tomorrow is favorable for the movement of the crop. The marketing of grain at present is only limited by the capacity of railroads to handle it. This includes the coarse grains as well as wheat. For the moment the domestic supply of wheat is near such an important factor in the price movement as the foreign markets. The buoyant tone of Liverpool and the strength of the continental exchanges was the main bill card today. We favor the long side of the market for the time being, but advise investment purchases of the more deferred months on any material breaks.

The Montreal Trade says: If the New York Evening Post places any credence in the report to the effect that the Russian crop of wheat this year is 136,000,000 bushels less than that of last year, it is more than many traders can take stock in after the peculiar developments of the past few years. For instance, it must be fresh in the recollection of everyone in the grain trade that about a year ago it was currently reported that after the close of navigation the shipments from Russia would fall off and Europe would then have to look elsewhere for her supplies. It is well known instead of this being verified, that Russia, instead of reducing her shipments, increased them to such an amount as to astonish the grain trade of the whole world Official crop reports of Russia are to be on a par with her diplomacy, the chief object being to deceive.

TRADING IS MODERATE

In Amount on Stock Exchange and Closing Irregular.

Unevenness of Monetary Conditions Again the Dominant Factor.

New York, Oct. 6.—Opening prices were lower than last night with the exception of a few of the specialties including the iron and steel industrials. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo rose 2 and Sugar ⅛. Canadian Pacific, United States Rubber, and General Electric fell about a point, and Rubber Goods ¾.

Unevenness of the monetary conditions continued to be the dominant factor in the market and there was an early renewal of speculative liquidation on this account. Selling was on an extensive scale in the leading railroads and specialties, and they weakened to about the same extent. United States Rubber yielded 2½, Northern Pacific 2 and St. Paul Southern Pacific, Delaware & Hudson, Louisville & Nashville, Union Pacific, Pennsylvania, Smelting, Brooklyn Transit, Twin City Rapid Transit, North American, Republic Steel preferred and United States Realty 1 to 1¼.

Prices wavered within a narrow range, but did not go lower than the first hour. Business was unimportant. Northwestern and American Tobacco preferred gained 1, Lead and Tennessee coal lost 1, Great Northern preferred 2, American Express and Pullman 3. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Fluctuations contracted steadily until scarcely any active features varied more than ¼. Consolidated Gas fell 2 and Woolen preferred 1. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo lost its opening advance eof 2 points. Locomotive gained 1.

A rise in Reading from 122 to 123¾ caused some slight activity and prices advanced all around. While a good deal of the carly loss was effected, the average level was still a large fraction below yesterday's close. Railway Steel Spring rose 1, Locomotive 2 and Northwestern 3. Federal Mining sold off 6 on a few transactions. Pump preferred lost 1 and Consolidated Gas 3. The closing was dull and rather irregular.

Quotations furnished by Edwards-Wood Co., Room A, Torrey building.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed irregular in tone, with but a moderate amount of business. Early London prices were higher, and our market showed some tendency due to an advance demand for money around 7 per cent, but finally closed easier at ⅛ per cent. This low rate has no special significance, inasmuch as all loans were undoubtedly made at the higher rates, and loans for the day carry over until Monday. Sentiment still seems conservative. The higher borrowing rates have probably contributed to restrict business doubtedly contributed to restrict business and also induce profit-taking and short selling. Until the situation clears in the money market we doubt if any general advance can be sustained, and feel we would still take profits on the strong spots.

• • •

Waldorf to Paine, Webber & Co.: Inspired by higher money rates, the bear party in the stock market continues aggressive. Close observers agree that on this last drive there was absolutely no liquidation. Scarcity of stocks was again the overshadowing feature of the speculative situation. Substantial interests, banks, trust companies and individual investors are evidently convinced that tight money is a transitory condition occasioned by the seasonal demand, unusually large this year because of the heavy crops and great business activity, for currency. These interests bought their stocks at low prices. They can afford to wait for the bull movement which is predicted during the winter months, when money will be plentiful again.

• • •

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was rather dull, but hard at the opening. There was some selling later and prices eased off. The high money rates was the result, but stocks were very well taken. In the afternoon prices stiffened up and closed at about the best. The money rates fell to 1½ per cent, but it was only after the demand had been satisfied. The bank statement tomorrow may have some little effect, but we do not expect to see much change in prices.

New York Money.

New York, Oct. 6.—Money on call, strong, 2¾@7¼ per cent; lowest, 2¾ per cent; ruling rate, 7 per cent; closing offered at 3 per cent. Time money, firm; sixty and ninety days, 5@5¼ per cent; six months, 4¾ per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 4½@5 per cent. Sterling exchange, easy, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.85.20@25 for demand, and $4.81.80 @85 for sixty days; posted rates, $4.83@4½ and $4.86@4½; commercial bills, $4.81. Bar silver, 61½c. Mexican dollars, 47c. Government bonds, steady; railroad bonds, irregular.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 6.—The cotton market opened weak at a decline of 9@12 points and then increased the loss to a matter of 24 points under a continued liquidation and bear pressure inspired by lower cables and reports that a prominent Texas authority had predicted a crop 25 to 30 per cent in excess of popular expectations, and was advising farmers to market their crop as rapidly as possibly. Big stop orders were uncovered on the decline, and about the only demand seemed to be for profit-taking shorts and buying on a scale down by reactionists. The market in the middle of the morning was a point or two up from the lowest, but still showed nervousness.

Cotton supot closed quiet, 20 points lower; middling uplands, 10.20; middling gulf, 10.45; sales, 5,336 bales. Futures closed barely steady; October, 9.63; November, 9.76; December, 9.91; January, 9.99; February, 10.05; March, 10.11; April, 10.14; May, 10.17.

STABLE IS BROKEN INTO Horse Belonging to Henry Goodson Stolen From Its Stall.

Another Animal Standing Beside It Was Left Undisturbed.

Horse thieves are abroad in the city, and the offense which the old frontier law punished with hanging was committed in the city last night for the first time in several years.

A horse belonging to Henry Goodson, a restaurant keeper at 527½ West Superior street, was stolen last night from the stable in the alley between First and Second streets and Fifth and Sixth avenues west.

There were two horses belonging to Mr. Goodson in the stable at the time, but only one was taken.

Mr. Goodson stated to the police that the horse had been fed and the stable locked about 6 o'clock and that when he passed there late in the evening the stable was still locked and everything all right.

This morning the door was found broken open and the horse missing. None of the harness, except the halter with which the horse was tied, had been touched, and the other animal was still standing in its stall.

The horse is described as being about 13 years old, and of a bay color. It was a large, heavy animal, and was valued at about $150.

The police are making a search for the missing animal, but finding it will be a difficult matter, as the thief had several hours start, and had plenty of time to hitch it up to a wagon and drive to any part of the country surrounding Duluth. When hitched up in another barness nobody but the owner himself would be able to recognize it, and by this time it may be doing the work of some settler in the vicinity of either Duluth or Superior. A little white paint on the fetlocks will make it look like a different animal, and if the thief is as successful in covering up his tracks as he was in getting the horse away, the police have little chance of getting him.

LENA BURT

Travels Across the Continent to Free Her Brother.

Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 6.—Love in deepest and sincerest measure was shown yesterday in the action of Lena Burt, who traveled all the way from Portland, Or., to this city to secure the release of her brother, Patrick Burt, who is in jail charged with shooting with intent to kill.

Burt got mixed up with a bad gang a few weeks ago and was caught trying to rob a saloon. He was pursued by the saloonkeeper, and when nearly cornered, gave battle with a revolver. He was arrested and bound over to the grand jury in $1,000 bail, which he could not furnish.

Word of his sad plight reached the sister and she immediately collected all her belongings and started for Toledo, where she arrived yesterday. She sought a lawyer, John Dunn, and then succeeded in having the bond decreased to $500. But Lena had only $175. Nothing daunted, she started out and by interesting Councilman Gray she was able to place her diamonds in the hands of his attorney and he went the necessary bond for Burt.

Pottsville, Pa., Oct. 6.—Falling out of a second-story window at the home of Adam Luscavage, at Minersville, a 6-months-old baby escaped death as if by a miracle. WORKING BOTH ENDS.

The president of the great insurance company was very busy, says the Los Angeles Times. He had bought that morning 10,000 bonds at 47, and now he was trying to find out if there was any moral reason why he should not sell these bonds at 108 to the concern, pocketing, of course, the profit.

As he wrestled with this problem in high finance there came a knock on the door. He looked up impatiently, for he did not wish to be disturbed. There entered, however, the valet of the secretary and treasurer.

"Please, sir," the valet said, "I have here a voucher for $20,000. Will you cash it for me? The master is going off on a month's vacation, and this money is for his expenses."

"But, hang it all," said the president, "the secretary and treasurer has just gotten back from a month's vacation for which I cashed him a $15,000 voucher."

"I know, sir," said the valet calmly. "But that was the master's vacation as secretary. It is his vacation as treasurer that he is going to take now."

RAILROAD MAGNATES ARE MAKING A FIERCE FIGHT FOR THE CONTROL OF THE WABASH DIRECTORATE

GEORGE J. GOULD,
Who at Present Controls the Wabash Situation and is Fighting Hard to Continue It.

Ramsey and Gould Making Every Effort To Secure Proxies.

Inspectors May Be Called Upon To Attend Annual Meeting.

Decision In Petition For Injuction To Be Made Monday.

New York, Oct. 7.—Both sides in the Ramsey-Gould contest, says today's Times are active in their effort to get proxies for the Toledo election next Tuesday. Among the proxies procured yesterday by Ramsey were several representing blocks of stock and bonds held abroad. The owners of these securities cabled yesterday to their representatives here to place their proxies in Mr. Ramsey's hands.

In reference to the announcement that application would be made to the courts in Ohio for the appointment of inspectors to serve at the meeting, it was said that such proceedure was frequently adopted in the case of meetings at which a contest is expected. This will serve to bring the meeting under the direction of the courts. Mr. Ramsey's friends as well as the Gould adherents expect many points of difference to arise at the annual meeting. In some quarters the opinion is expressed that it is most likely that an adjournment of the meeting will be found necessary.

F. A. Delano, the newly appointed president of the Wabash, left yesterday for Chicago.

St. Louis, Oct. 7.—Judge Taylor of the St. Louis circuit court, last night, took under advisement until Monday morning the application filed by Joseph Ramsey, Jr., recently to prevent the voting at the Wabash railroad, for an injunction to prevent the voting at the Wabash annual election in Toledo, Ohio, next Tuesday, of stock held by the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain railroad companies.

The case was called, yesterday morning, and it was nearly 7 o'clock p. m. before the final argument was submitted. Immediately after the call was concluded, Judge Taylor announced that he would not render his decision before Monday and instructed the sheriff to adjourn court until 10 o'clock.

JOSEPH RAMSEY, JR.,
Who Was Deposed as President of the Wabash and Who Seeks Re-election at the Annual Meeting of Stockholders.

THREE ARE MURDERED

Triple Tragedy Occurs on Farm Near Middletown, N. Y.

Two Old Men and Young Girl Were the Victims.

Middletown, N. Y., Oct. 7.—A triple murder was revealed here today when the bodies of Willis and Fred Olney were found in the woods half a mile from their home, at which, last night, was found the murdered body of Alice Ingerick. Both brothers had been shot. Before night the crime is expected to number one more victim. Mrs. Georgia Ingerick, mother of the girl, Alice. The mother, who was found unconscious in the barn of the Olney brothers' farm last night, has not regained consciousness, and was said by physicians today to be dying with three fractures in her skull.

As soon as daylight permitted a search was made for Fred and Willis Olney, who were missing from their home last night, when Mrs. Ingerick was found unconscious and her daughter murdered, wagon tracks leading across two fields to a woods near the house were seen by the searchers. The tracks were fresh. Just beyond them in the woods were found the bodies of Fred and Willis, each lying in the same position on their backs, with one arm across the breast. All the pockets on their clothing had been turned inside out. Marks in the underbrush showed that the bodies had been dragged from the wagon to the place where they were found.

The police believe that the wagon, which evidently carried the murdered brothers to the woods, is the same vehicle which several persons yesterday noticed in the vicinity of the Olney farm. Two strangers were in this wagon, and they drove into an old backwoods road, about half a mile away from the Olney home. This same wagon was seen going up the old road about 3 p. m., when it disappeared in the woods. At 11 o'clock at night, several hours after the time when it is believed that the murder was committed, the wagon was seen on the same road going away from the vicinity of the Olney farm and toward the Shawangunk mountains.

The fact that an attempt was made to kill every person who was known to have been in the Olney house has caused the police and the entire neighborhood to declare that there were other motives than robbery for the commission of the crime, and that the rifling of the poeckts of the Olney brothers was only a ruse to mislead pursuers. As yet, however, no plausible theory for the crime has been advanced.

The four persons in the house about dark yesterday, according to Lulu Ingerick, who left the place shortly before the tragedy, were Willis Olney, 62 years; Fred Olney, 58 years old; Mrs. Ingerick, the housekeeper of the two brothers, and her small daughter, Alice. Lulu, who is 13 years old, went to Middletown, returning in time for a late supper. Finding the house empty, the girl in fright summoned neighbors, who searched the premises. Alice was found dead in the cellar, her head beaten with an iron pipe. Her mother was found in the barn, apparently beaten by the same instrument, which was picked up on the kitchen floor by the searching party.

Willis Olney was a widower, and Fred was a bachelor.

Mrs. Ingerick, who had separated from her husband, had been employed as housekeeper at the Olney brothers' house only about a month. Her husband, Martin Ingerwick, lived at Wurtzbero, a town not far from Middletown.

In the house no traces of robbery were found. The only articles of value known to have been taken from the two brothers were known to have been taken from the two silver watches. Considerable comment was excited here by the similarity of position of the two brothers found in the woods, as each had the right arm crossed over the breast in the same position. Fred Olney's body had two bullet wounds in the right side, and an odd circumstance about these wounds was that they were under the right arm in such a position that the arm must have been raised high before the shots were fired. Willis Olney was shot through the right ear.

HUGHES MAY NOT ACCEPT

Gives Republican Committee No Encouragement on Nomination.

New York, Oct. 7.—The committee sent to confer with Charles E. Hughes, examining counsel for the legislative insurance investigating committee and who was nominated for mayor by the Republican city convention, last night, left Mr. Hughes' home early this morning. The committee headed by Timothy L. Woodruff, would not discuss their conference with the nominee.

Later, Mr. Hughes summoned the waiting newspaper men and said:

"I have given no encouragement to the sub-committee and I am strongly convinced that I ought not to accept the nomination. I will say nothing further until formal notification of the nomination is given me. I am told that notification will be on Monday."

DESTINATION

Of Gold Drawn From French Bank Is Unknown.

Paris, Oct. 7.—Leading American shippers of French gold say they have not made any shipments to the United States out of the $50,000,000 recently withdrawn from the Bank of France, showing that the gold balance had fallen during the week from $592,414,434 to $587,981,323. This unusual fall of $4,433,111 attracted the attention of the bourse, where it was attributed to the needs of the monetary situation in London. When the London bankers said they had not received any French gold, the reduction was then attributed to shipments to the United States. However, Lazard, Freres, who are the chief shippers, have not shipped the amount referred to and are not aware of any other shipments to New York. They incline to the view that the amount has gone to Egypt and other points outside of the main markets London and New York. The managers of the Bank of France say they are not aware of the destination of the shipments, as they deal with bankers who make their own shipments.

The European Economist calls attention to the movement of precious metals to the United States and gives a table showing that the French export of gold to New York since Jan. 1 totals $5,070,513.

KIDNAPING AT MANKATO

Son of Real Estate Dealer Enticed Away From Home.

Was Brutally Illtreated and Left All Night In Field.

Mankato, Minn., Oct. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Desperate was the attempt made Thursday night to kidnap Ormond Kusche, the 6-year-old son of Charles Kusche, a real estate dealer. Ormond was playing with some other children. Presently a fellow, dressed like a hobo, came along, picked up the Kusche boy and carried him a short distance down the street. He set the boy down, and by giving him candy, succeeded in persuading the youngster to accompany him.

Once screened from peering eyes the man kicked and pinched the little boy, knocking him down and abusing him in a frightful manner.

As son as the father learned of his son's disappearance he notified the police, who at once started out searching.

Mr. and Mrs. Kusche and some of their friends searched all night long for him, but could not locate him, and Mrs. Kusche was nearly prostrated.

Friday morning George Kimball, while passing through some tall grass, noticed the little boy lying in the thicket. He went over and picked the boy up and found that he was Charles Kusche's son.

Kimball immediately notified Mr. Kusche. The boy was sadly mistreated. His face was scarred and there were several gashes on his head.

The police are trying to find the perpetrator of the dastardly deed.

FOSS ROASTS LODGE.

Boston, Oct. 7.—Eugene N. Foss, a leader of the reciprocity wing of the state Republican party, last night issued a statement to the press in which he severely criticised the speech of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge at yesterday's Republican state convention. In his statement, Mr. Foss classed the speech as a "direct insult to a majority of the Republican voters in the state." He declared that the speech of Senator Lodge would cost Curtis Guild, the nominee for governor, thousands of votes.

FLEE FROM FIERCE FIRE

Two City Blocks Destroyed By Flames In New York.

Two Hundred Fifty Scared Horses Loose In the Streets.

New York, Oct. 7.—Two city blocks burned over, fifteen business establishments destroyed, hundreds of tenement dwellers forced to flee for safety from their flame-threatened homes, one fireman injured, a watchman burned, 250 fear-crazed horses roaming through crowded streets, were the results of a fire which threatened destruction to a large portion of the upper East side water front shortly after midnight. The loss was $100,000.

Starting in a rag picking shop in One Hundred and Eighth street, near First avenue, the flames gained momentum so quickly that within a few minutes it was necessary to turn in four alarms and twenty-five engine companies, a fire boat and half a dozen tow boats were rushing to the scene to combat with the flames which were sweeping southward. The block between One Hundred and Eighth and One Hundred and Seventh streets composed of small buildings was swept within a few minutes and flying embers had ignited the big lumber yards of J. Rebers Sons & Co. From the lumber yards the fire threatened the entire district. Half a dozen firemen caught in a back draft, of flame and smoke when a lumber shed collapsed, were blinded and chocked but with one exception all escaped without serious injury. Pipeman O'Neil was struck by a falling timber and fell unconscious. He was rescued by his companions.

Michael Nehr and his wife, who lived on the second floor of a two-story brick building, on the north side of One Hundred and Seventh street, had a narrow escape from death and were rescued with difficulty by the firemen. Nehr lost $1,000 in cash, some jewelry and a box of rare old coins, which he valued at $500.

The coal yard of Meyer Bros., which was in the path of the flames, was swept by them. In the rear of the yards was a stable where 250 horses were quartered. They were turned loose by the police and firemen and for more than an hour the frightened animals rushed through the crowded streets. Finally all were captured.

Throughout the fire, the wind, veering around to the north, carried great showers of sparks southward, some as far as Ninetieth street. These fell on the roofs of the tenements in their course, and kept the occupants thereof in alarm for hours. When the fire reached the north side of One Hundred and Sixth street, the Italian tenants of a crowded tenement on the south side of that street became panic stricken and rushed to the street yelling in fright. The police had difficulty in saving them from injuring themselves.

It was three hours after the fire started, when the firemen controlled it. The change in the wind enabled the firemen to save from damage the line of three, four and five-story buildings on the east side of First avenue between One Hundred and Eighth and One Hundred and Seventh streets.

ROBBERS BLOW STRONG BOX

At Chagrin Falls, O., Postoffice and Make Good Haul.

Cleveland, Oct. 7.—Robbers blew the strong box in the postoffice at Chagrin Falls, a suburb, early today, and escaped after exchanging shots with Banker W. E. Rodgers, who had been aroused and was on his way to the scene with a Winchester, thinking that it was the bank which had been burglarized.

Just how much money the robbers secured is not known, but it is believed a large sum was in the safe. The big steel chest was blown to pieces and the room in which it was contained was wrecked. A posse is on the trail of the robbers.

GAYNOR AND GREENE TAKEN FROM CANADA ON AN EXTRADITION WRIT AFTER FIGHT LASTING SIX YEARS

Last Chapter of Stubborn Resistance In the Dominion.

Large Crowd of People Witness Departure of the Men.

Prisoners Left Montreal at 8:40 A. M. on Grand Trunk.

Montreal, Oct. 7.—The last chapter, as far as Canada is concerned, in the celebrated Gaynor and Greene case was closed, today, when the two men left the Bonaventure station of the Grand Trunk road on a Delaware & Hudson train at 8:40 a. m. A large crowd of people were present to see them off, but the most notable thing about the departure was the large number of United States secret service men who were around. They were in charge of W. J. Flynn, head of the secret service bureau of New York.

On behalf of the Dondinion government, Silas Carpenter, chief of the Montreal detective force, who kidnaped the two men from Quebec and Inspector McMahon, went with the party as far as Rouses Point, N. Y., the boundary line being between Rouses Point and Lacolle, Canada.

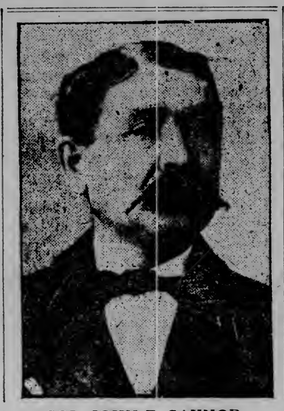

The two prisoners had been notified that they would probably be removed this morning, and were all ready when Detective Boyd of the United States service called for them in the debtors' ward of the jail.

The United States officers came with three cabs and the party left the jail a little after 7 o'clock. They drove immediately to the Bonaventure station where the prisoners ate breakfast in the station dining room. Messrs. Boyd and White, of the United States secret service remained with the prisoners, while Chief Flynn and his other men remained outside, keeping an eye on the various doors leading in and out of the station, Chief Carpenter and Inspector McMahon of the Montreal force keeping them company.

At 8:30 the prisoners went to the train.

When asked if they had anything to say before leaving, Col. Gaynor replied that they were glad to go back at last and that they would have nothing but the kindest remembrances of their treatment in Canada. Col. Gaynor's daughter-in-law was on board the train when the prisoners arrived, and his son arrived at the station just before the train left.

On arriving in New York the party will proceed straight to the Pennsylvania station.

TREATMENT FOR TUBERCULOSIS

Discovered By Dr. Behring Has Created Great Sensation In Paris.

New York, Oct. 7.—Whatever may be the practical value of Dr. Behring's new treatment of tuberculosis, the Matin's announcement of his discovery has created a sensation both in scientific circles and with the general public, says a cable dispatch to the Herald from Paris. Dr. Behring complains that the Matin has not correctly interpreted his declarations.

"The exact facts are," he says, "that I have been studying fer a long time, a new method of treating tuberculosis and think I have broken fresh ground. There are certain animals which contract this malady with grat facility and have hitherto proved refractory to all attempts at vaccination.

"I have finally succeeded in rendering them immune, as regards the baccillus, and probably can cure them when the disease is fully developed in them.

"Experiments on mankind have not yet been made, but there is ground for hope in this respect, the path I am following being totally different from those explored up to the present."

GOVERNOR JOHNSON WILL ASSIST LAWSON TO RECOVER MONEYS

Alleged to Have Been Wrongfully Used By Insurance Companies' Officers.

Will Act With Governors of Other States as a Committee to Secure Results.

Boston, Oct. 7.—Telegrams to the governors of various states from Thomas W. Lawson of Boston were sent last night in connection with a movement to form a committee, including the governors of several states and other persons of prominence, to secure restitution of funds alleged to have been wrongfully used by large insurance companies and the punishment of those guilty of criminal action in connection therewith. Mr. Lawson's telegram follows:

"Will you, with other governors and strongest representative men of the country, serve on a policy holders' "protective committee of Equitable, New York Life and Mutual companies' committee," unfettered, except it is to take possession of New York and Mutual, and select directors and controllers who shall be pledged to obtain full restitution and full punishment of wrongdoers, also obtain restitution and punishment of Equitable wrongdoers. No expense to committee, nor committee travel. Committee to represent no faction, and obligated to no one, except policy holders. It has been decided you should represent your section in this sacred duty. Kindly wire answer at my expense. This is vital. You will not be bound until other members names submitted to you."

Mr. Lawson said it was his purpose, as soon as possible, to announce the names of those who had accepted the invitation to act upon the protective committee. As soon as the personnel of the committee was decided, he said, organization would be effected and definite plan of action adopted.

St. Paul, Oct. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Gov. Johnson is in receipt of a telegram from Thomas W. Lawson asking him to be one of the governors of a protective committee of the policy holders to demand restitution of the money by the Mutual, New York Life and Equitable companies and to punish the guilty officials. Gov. Johnson replied to Mr. Lawson's telegram accepting his proposition. Gov. Johnson said, concerning his answer:

"I am more than willing to aid Mr. Lawson in any reform of which he is the head, for I believe he is in earnest."

JEALOUSY CAUSES DOUBLE TRAGEDY

St. Joseph, Mich., Oct. 7.—Driven mad over the refusal of a Kentucky young woman to marry him, Fred Frerer, chef in a local restaurant shot and fatally wounded Mrs. Violet J. Lonsdale here, today, and then killed himself in the presence of his victim. Pretending to be on an important mission, Frerer had been directed to a room occupied by Mrs. Lonsdale. Without a word of warning Frerer began shooting at the young woman as she lay in bed. One bullet hit her in the chest, while another lodged in her back.

Frerer then stepped to the side of the bed of his victim, placed the revolver to his breast, discharged it and sank to the floor. Following the tragedy Mrs. Lonsdale said she had known Frerer for a month. "He asked me to marry him," she said "which I refused to do, as I did not love him. He made the threat, 'I will give you until Saturday morning to consider my proposition. If you then refuse I will kill myself.'"

FOOTBALL PLAYER FATALLY HURT

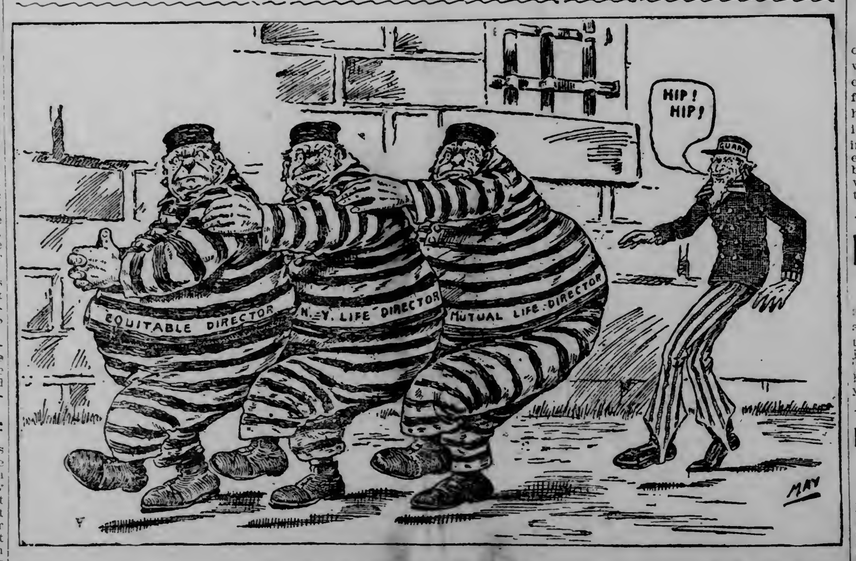

Philadelphia, Oct. 7.—F. Fugue, aged 23 years, of Pendleton, Ind., a student at Swarthmore college, is in the university hospital, seriously injured as the result of football practice. The physicians entertain little hope of his recovery. This is Fugue's first year in college. He is an enthusiastic football player, and had been practicing daily in order to qualify for a position as substitute on the Swarthmore team. Late yesterday during practice he was tackled and in the scrimmage was rendered unconscious. At the hospital an examination showed that he was suffering from hemorrhage of the brain.

LARAMIE AND REGAN INDICTED FOR MURDER.

St. Paul, Oct. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The grand jury made a partial report late yesterday, handing in seven indictments to Judge Orr, of which four were secret, the parties not being in custody.

Indictments for murder in the first degree were returned against Harry Laramie and James Regan, for the killing of Special Police Officer Raverty, last May.

Raverty went into the office of the W. W. Johnson Lumber company, on Kittson street, to telephone. The defendants were in the place on a thieving errand, and opened fire on Raverty. They were caught in a couple of days at Point Douglass, near Hastings.

RAILROAD MAGNATES ARE MAKING A FIERCE FIGHT FOR THE CONTROL OF THE WABASH DIRECTORATE

GEORGE J. GOULD,
Who at Present Controls the Wabash Situation and is Fighting Hard to Continue It.

Ramsey and Gould Making Every Effort To Secure Proxies.

Inspectors May Be Called Upon To Attend Annual Meeting.

Decision In Petition For Injuction To Be Made Monday.

New York, Oct. 7.—Both sides in the Ramsey-Gould contest, says today's Times are active in their effort to get proxies for the Toledo election next Tuesday. Among the proxies procured yesterday by Ramsey were several representing blocks of stock and bonds held abroad. The owners of these securities cabled yesterday to their representatives here to place their proxies in Mr. Ramsey's hands.

In reference to the announcement that application would be made to the courts in Ohio for the appointment of inspectors to serve at the meeting, it was said that such proceedure was frequently adopted in the case of meetings at which a contest is expected. This will serve to bring the meeting under the direction of the courts. Mr. Ramsey's friends as well as the Gould adherents expect many points of difference to arise at the annual meeting. In some quarters the opinion is expressed that it is most likely that an adjournment of the meeting will be found necessary.

F. A. Delano, the newly appointed president of the Wabash, left yesterday for Chicago.

St. Louis, Oct. 7.—Judge Taylor of the St. Louis circuit court, last night, took under advisement until Monday morning the application filed by Joseph Ramsey, Jr., recently to prevent the voting at the Wabash railroad, for an injunction to prevent the voting at the Wabash annual election in Toledo, Ohio, next Tuesday, of stock held by the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain railroad companies.

The case was called, yesterday morning, and it was nearly 7 o'clock p. m. before the final argument was submitted. Immediately after the call was concluded, Judge Taylor announced that he would not render his decision before Monday and instructed the sheriff to adjourn court until 10 o'clock.

Who Was Deposed as President of the Wabash and Who Seeks Re-election at the Annual Meeting of Stockholders.

Triple Tragedy Occurs on Farm Near Middletown, N. Y.

Two Old Men and Young Girl Were the Victims.

Middletown, N. Y., Oct. 7.—A triple murder was revealed here today when the bodies of Willis and Fred Olney were found in the woods half a mile from their home, at which, last night, was found the murdered body of Alice Ingerick. Both brothers had been shot. Before night the crime is expected to number one more victim, Mrs. Georgia Ingerick, mother of the girl, Alice. The mother, who was found unconscious in the barn of the Olney brothers' farm last night, has not regained consciousness, and was said by physicians today to be dying with three fractures in her skull.

As soon as daylight permitted a search was made for Fred and Willis Olney, who were missing from their home last night, when Mrs. Ingerick was found unconscious and her daughter murdered, wagon tracks leading across two fields to a woods near the house were seen by the searchers. The tracks were fresh. Just beyond them in the woods were found the bodies of Fred and Willis, each lying in the same position on their backs, with one urm across the breast. All the pockets on their clothing had been turned inside out. Marks in the underbrush showed that the bodies had been dragged from the wagon to the place where they were found.

The police believe that the wagon, which evidently carried the murdered brothers to the woods, is the same vehicle which several persons yesterday noticed in the vicinity of the Olney farm. Two strangers were in this wagon, and they drove into an old backwoods road, about half a mile away from the Olney home. This same wagon was seen going up the old road about 3 p. m., when it disappeared in the woods. At 11 o'clock at night, several hours after the time when it is believed that the murder was committed, the wagon was seen on the same road going away from the vicinity of the Olney farm and toward the Shawangunk mountains.

The fact that an attempt was made to kill every person who was known to have been in the Olney house has caused the police and the entire neighborhood to declare that there were other motives than robbery for the commission of the crime, and that the rifling of the pockets of the Olney brothers was only a ruse to mislead pursuers. As yet, however, no plausible theory for the crime has been advanced.

The four persons in the house about dark yesterday, according to Lulu Ingerick, who left the place shortly before the tragedy, were Willis Olney, 62 years; Fred Olney, 58 years old; Mrs. Ingerick, the housekeeper of the two brothers, and her small daughter, Alice. Lulu, who is 13 years old, went to Middletown, returning in time for a late supper. Finding the house empty, the girl in fright summoned neighbors, who searched the premises. Alice was found dead in the cellar, her head beaten with an iron pipe. Her mother was found in the barn, apparently beaten by the same instrument, which was picked up on the kitchen floor by the searching party.

Willis Olney was a widower, and Fred was a bachelor.

Mrs. Ingerick, who had separated from her husband, had been employed as housekeeper at the Olney brothers' house only about a month. Her husband, Martin Ingerwick, lived at Wurtzboro, a town not far from Middletown.

In the house no traces of robbery were found. The only articles of value known to have been taken from the two brothers were known to have been taken from the two silver watches. Considerable comment was excited here by the similarity of position of the two brothers found in the woods, as each had the right arm crossed over the breast in the same position. Fred Olney's body had two bullet wounds in the right side, and an odd circumstance about these wounds was that they were under the right arm in such a position that the arm must have been raised high before the shots were fired. Willis Olney was shot through the right ear.

HUGHES MAY NOT ACCEPT

New York, Oct. 7.—The committee sent to confer with Charles E. Hughes, examining counsel for the legislative insurance investigating committee and who was nominated for mayor by the Republican city convention, last night, left Mr. Hughes' home early this morning. The committee headed by Timothy L. Woodruff, would not discuss their conference with the nominee.

Later, Mr. Hughes summoned the waiting newspaper men and said:

"I have given no encouragement to the sub-committee and I am strongly convinced that I ought not to accept the nomination. I will say nothing further until formal notification of the nomination is given me. I am told that notification will be on Monday."

DESTINATION

Of Gold Drawn From French Bank Is Unknown.

Paris, Oct. 7.—Leading American shippers of French gold say they have not made any shipments to the United States out of the $50,000,000 recently withdrawn from the Bank of France, showing that the gold balance had fallen during the week from $592,414,434 to $587,981,323. This unusual fall of $4,433,111 attracted the attention of the bourse, where it was attributed to the needs of the monetary situation in London. When the London bankers said they had not received any French gold, the reduction was then attributed to shipments to the United States. However, Lazard, Freres, who are the chief shippers, have not shipped the amount referred to and are not aware of any other shipments to New York. They incline to the view that the amount has gone to Egypt and other points outside of the main markets London and New York. The managers of the Bank of France say they are not aware of the destination of the shipments, as they deal with bankers who make their own shipments.

The European Economist calls attention to the movement of precious metals to the United States and gives a table showing that the French export of gold to New York since Jan. 1 totals $5,070,513.

KIDNAPING AT MANKATO

Son of Real Estate Dealer Enticed Away From Home.

Was Brutally Illtreated and Left All Night In Field.

Mankato, Minn., Oct. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Desperate was the attempt made Thursday night to kidnap Ormond Kusche, the 6-year-old son of Charles Kusche, a real estate dealer. Ormond was playing with some other children. Presently a fellow, dressed like a hobo, came along, picked up the Kusche boy and carried him a short distance down the street. He set the boy down, and by giving him candy, succeeded in persuading the youngster to accompany him.

Once screened from peering eyes the man kicked and pinched the little boy, knocking him down and abusing him in a frightful manner.

As soon as the father learned of his son's disappearance he notified the police, who at once started out searching.

Mr. and Mrs. Kusche and some of their friends searched all night long for him, but could not locate him, and Mrs. Kusche was nearly prostrated.

Friday morning George Kimball, while passing through some tall grass, noticed the little boy lying in the thicket. He went over and picked the boy up and found that he was Charles Kusche's son.

Kimball immediately notified Mr. Kusche. The boy was sadly mistreated. His face was scarred and there were several gashes on his head.

The police are trying to find the perpetrator of the dastardly deed.

FOSS ROASTS LODGE.

Boston, Oct. 7.—Eugene N. Foss, a leader of the reciprocity wing of the state Republican party, last night issued a statement to the press in which he severely criticised the speech of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge at yesterday's Republican state convention. In his statement, Mr. Foss classed the speech as a "direct insult to a majority of the Republican voters in the state." He declared that the speech of Senator Lodge would cost Curtis Guild, the nominee for governor, thousands of votes.

FLEE FROM FIERCE FIRE

Two City Blocks Destroyed By Flames In New York.

Two Hundred Fifty Scared Horses Loose In the Streets.

New York, Oct. 7.—Two city blocks burned over, fifteen business establishments destroyed, hundreds of tenement dwellers forced to flee for safety from their flame-threatened homes, one fireman injured, a watchman burned, 250 fear-crazed horses reaming through crowded streets, were the results of a fire which threatened destruction to a large portion of the upper East side water front shortly after midnight. The loss was $100,000.

Starting in a rag picking shop in One Hundred and Eighth street, near First avenue, the flames gained momentum so quickly that within a few minutes it was necessary to turn in four alarms and twenty-five engine companies, a fire boat and half a dozen tow boats were rushing to the scene to combat with the flames which were sweeping southward. The block between One Hundred and Eighth and One Hundred and Seventh streets composed of small buildings was swept within a few minutes and flying embers had ignited the big lumber yards of J. Rebers Sons & Co. From the lumber yards the fire threatened the entire district. Half a dozen firemen caught in a back draft, of flame and smoke when a lumber shed collapsed, were blinded and chocked but with one exception all escaped without serious injury. Pipeman O'Neil was struck by a falling timber and fell unconscious. He was rescued by his companions.

Michael Nehr and his wife, who lived on the second floor of a two-story brick building, on the north side of One Hundred and Seventh street, had a narrow escape from death and were rescued with difficulty by the firemen. Nehr lost $1,000 in cash, some jewelry and a box of rare old coins, which he valued at $500.

The coal yard of Meyer Bros., which was in the path of the flames, was swept by them. In the rear of the yards was a stable where 250 horses were quartered. They were turned loose by the police and firemen and for more than an hour the frightened animals rushed through the crowded streets. Finally all were captured.

Throughout the fire, the wind, veering around to the north, carried great showers of sparks southward, some as far as Ninetieth street. These fell on the roofs of the tenements in their course, and kept the occupants thereof in alarm for hours. When the fire reached the north side of One Hundred and Sixth street, the Italian tenants of a crowded tenement on the south side of that street became panic stricken and rushed to the street yelling in fright. The police had difficulty in saving them from injuring themselves.

It was three hours after the fire started, when the firemen controlled it. The change in the wind enabled the firemen to save from damage the line of three, four and five-story buildings on the east side of First avenue between One Hundred and Eighth and One Hundred and Seventh streets.

GRAIN CASE NEARS END

Judge Vinje Expected to Make a Decision Soon.

Arguments Ended In Injunction Suit Brought By Grain Men.

Final arguments were made by both sides before Judge Vinje in Superior this morning in the action brought by A. D. Thomson and other grain and milling interests for an injunction restraining the Wisconsin grain commission from thrusting its inspection upon them. The court will probably decide the case Monday morning. The declarations of the attorneys in rebuttal were practically a reiteration of the arguments they have advanced since the case opened. The attorneys for Mr. Thomson appealed to the court to rid him and those interested with him in the grain business from the undesirable and high-priced inspection which the commission, they claim, is trying to thrust upon them.

Late yesterday afternoon, Attorney Hudnall for the commission made the declaration that a railroad could not lawfully change public warehouses into private ones.

Today, Attorney Dwyer, for Mr. Thomson, was most bitter in his denunciation of the Wisconsin grain law, which he declared was a dishonest one. He said that he supposed the people who voted for it were honest enough in their belief that it was a good thing, but that it was the concoction of a few men and had dishonesty written on the face of it.

The arguments in rebuttal continued late today and the court will probably return a decision Monday morning.

Announcement of this extension in the interurban service was made today by John Farson, Farson, Leach & Co., who declared his company will spend $5,000,000 in extension and improvement work, in addition to the $5,000,000 already invested.

Dr. Bugbee is still astonishing the people by the permanent results of his cures with Glasses, having many cases in Duluth and Superior that are glad to speak of the cures and benefits of their nervous troubles, such as Deafness, St. Vitas Dance, Asthma, Shaking Palsy, Head and Backache, Stomach, Liver and Kidney Troubles, Nervous Prostration, etc., and all by having the eyes properly fitted with glasses, which at once relieves the irritation from the vital brain and nerve centers. Dr. Bugbee relieves these conditions in 10 to 40 minutes by what he calls repression of waste nerve energy. Dr. Bughee explains fully how that uncorrected eye strain affects the whole nervous system, depriving the other members of the body of the vital energy, necessary to perform their work and keep in a healthy condition. When the eye strain is relieved this nerve energy goes to the relief and restoration of other diseased parts, and the patient at once begins to improve. Dr. Bughee is receiving many letters telling of the cures and relief of his patients.

RECEIVING ICE ORDERS

Big Cities Beg Duluth to Save Them From Famine.

Supply Too Small to Allow of Orders Being Filled.

Duluth stands in no danger of an ice famine, while in Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Ashland and various other cities through the country an alarming shortage in the supply is noticeable, and telegraphic and telephone inquiries are being received in this city from outside points, asking if any shipments of ice can be spared.

All such questions are being answered in the negative and outside orders for the commodity are being turned down. Local dealers say that, while they have no very large supply of ice on hand, there will be enough to last until cold weather arrives.

A larger supply than usual was stored last winter, and if it had not been for this fact the city would have felt the effects of the shortage before this. As it is, it will not be noticed, and the dealers say there is no danger of the price being raised, although an advance has been made in several of the larger cities.

A continuation of the warm weather may result in bids from the outside for wholesale lots at a price exceeding that now obtained locally at retail.

The summer season all over the country seems to have been of extraordinary length. The ice men last winter stored as much as they ordinarily do, but their calculations did not include a warm season that would be almost a record breaker. It so happened in Duluth that there was a considerable supply of ice left over from the summer of 1904, which was short and cold in Duluth.

The total amount remaining in the ice houses at the close of the season was about 20,000 tons. This made it an easy task to fill the buildings last winter. It was a fine season for cutting operations, and all the ice was stored that there was room for. Local dealers now have reason to congratulate themselves on having laid in such a large supply.

The railroads in Wisconsin seem to be feeling the general shortage keenly, and are making numerous attempts to replenish their ice supply by getting the commodity from Duluth. All outside orders are being turned down, however, no matter how tempting they may be. The local dealers argue that the regular trade should be given first consideration, no matter what happens to the outside world.

HURL ROCKS IN SALOON

Two Men Start Rough House on Lake Avenue.

Three Have a Very Narrow Escape From Death.

Using heavy, jagged rocks as weapons, Gus Halenius and Victor Berg are said to have started in to clean out a Lower Lake avenue saloon last night, and three badly cut skulls are the result of their attempt.

The victims are Mike Lundgren, Louis Peterson and Mac Haldala, and when the size of the stones and the stalwart appearance of the two assailants are taken into consideration, it seems almost miraculous that murder was not committed.

One of the stones was on exhibition in the municipal court this morning. It is about 5 inches in diameter, and the long jagged points would inflict a dangerous wound. There were long gashes in the heads of all three men, and Lundgren had a bloody scar from the bridge of his nose completely across his forehead.

None of the men concerned in the affray could speak English and all the testimony had to be taken through an interpreter.

According to the evidence of the three victoms and the bartender of the saloon, they were standing at the bar drinking when Berg and Halenius came into the saloon. They also ordered drinks, and apparently were already under the influence of liquor.

According to the testimony of all four men, the two new comers suddenly attacked them, using the rocks as weapons, and before they were finally overcome, all but the bartender were suffering from severe wounds.

When arraigned in court this morning, the two prisoners denied using the rocks, but Judge Cutting found them guilty.

"This is one of the most vicious assaults we have ever tried in this court," said Assistant City Attorney McKeon. "It is a wonder to me that one or more of these men were not killed. A stone that size in the hands of as powerful a man as either of the prisoners, might easily break a man's skull."

Judge Cutting imposed the maximum fine for the offense, which was $100 and costs with the alternative of spending ninety days in jail at hard labor.

Grand Jury Indicted a Range Man Who Accused Another.

After spending a month in the county jail, following the last grand jury's report, Charles Erickson, a resident of Virginia, was released from custody this morning, the court granting the state's motion for a dismissal of the indictment. The dismissal was asked on the grounds that Erickson has had sufficient punishment.

Erickson has returned to his home a much wiser young man. His case had some unusual features. He was the complaining witness against another young man from the range, who was bound over to the grand jury for stealing his revolver. The grand jury failed to indict the other young man, but did indict Erickson for carrying concealed weapons.

DR. MITCHELL, THE GREATEST MAGNETIC HEALER IN THE WORLD, CAUSES DISEASE TO DISAPPEAR AS IF BY MAGIC.

Hundreds Have Been Cured Who Had Given Up All Hope of Ever Getting Well.

The Doctor Has Patients From All Parts of the Country---They Go Home Cured And Send Their Friends and That Is Why He Is Such a Busy Man.

We have told at times of some of the miraculous cures that Dr. Mitchell has effected—miraculous, that is the word, and the right one. Even with our intimate knowledge of the virtue of his treatment, some of these cures have been so astounding as to cause amazement and wonder. When a person is plucked from the grave and restored to full vigor, and joy of life, there is something so stupendous about the performance that mortals have to wonder. He has so revolutionized the method of healing without the aid of medicine that the medical profession stands aghast at the wonders he has performed. His cures are made so rapid and permanent, as if by magic, and for this reason the press throughout the country have named him the great magnetic healer. Dr. Mitchell admits his influence over disease is puzzling and mysterious. Those thousands of testimonials of confidence only came after he had made good, and proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that he could do all the papers had said he could. Thousands of Duluthians now testify to his healing powers. No one need believe these reports as they pass from mouth to mouth, but anybody can call at Dr. Mitchell's office and have them proven.

Mrs. Gust Johnson, 429 Ogden avenue, Superior, Wis., had a tumor removed by Dr. Mitchell which would weigh about 5 pounds. Her home physician was going to operate but she consulted Dr. Mitchell the day before she was to be operated upon and decided to try his magnetic treatment first. She was cured—the tumor was removed. That was four years ago and Mrs. Johnson is enjoying good health.

Mrs. Ellen Olson, 1517½ London road, cured of tumor of womb and general nervousness; was about to have an operation performed.

Joe Conkey, Knife River, Minn., cured of kidney and stomach trouble.

Miss C. Draper of La Crosse, Wis., cured of paralysis on one side. Her health was in desperate condition, when she came to Dr. Mitchell.

Mrs. G. W. Thompson, 915 East Seventh street, says: "I wish to say that I was cured four years ago of kidney and stomach trouble and nervousness by Dr. Mitchell. My case was pronounced hopeless by many physicians."

Mrs. N. Ecklund of 125 Fifty-seventh avenue west says: "I went to Dr. Mitchell after I had given up all hope. I was so weak and sick I did not believe I could get help. I recommend his treatment."

Mr. Carl Stackmesser of Tower, Minn., who had rheumatism and paralysis and had not walked for eleven and a half years. Was 82 years old and had given up all hope. Cured by Dr. Mitchell.

Mr. Frank Hill of Cloquet, Minn., cured of a bad case of deafness.

Mrs. Sena Hagen of 2432 West Superior street, says: "My health was in desperate condition when I went to Dr. Mitchell. His treatments worked wonders for me and I know of many others whom he has cured."

Mr. Silas Williams of Mathawa, Minn., cured of lung and heart trouble; had been given up to die in three weeks.

Mrs. E. Hiess of 1922 West Michigan street, Duluth, says: "I have taken a barrel of medicine and was just about dead when I went to Dr. Mitchell four years ago. I weighed 129 pounds. I now weigh 180. My trouble was heart trouble and 'female weakness.'"

Mrs. E. Loring of 115 Twenty-second avenue west cured of St. Vitus' dance.

Mr. Martin, from the range, had a boy 13 years old who was all run down in general hearth, his eyes being very weak and suffering much from headaches. The boy was cured in six weeks by Dr. Mitchell.

Mrs. M. Lautave of Grand Forks was cured of female weakness. Had been a great sufferer for years and was about to have an operation performed and did not expect to live through the summer. Was cured by Dr. Mitchell. This statement can be substantiated by calling at 125 North Fifty-ninth avenue west.

Mr. Ed Watkins of Forest City, Minn., who was going blind, cured by Dr. Mitchell after all others had failed.

Mr. S. T. Baker of 405 Fisher avenue, West Superior, Wis., says: "My wife doctored with fourteen doctors for female weakness. Finally they told her an operation was the only thing would cure her. Dr. Mitchell cured her in a course of treatments. My daughter was also cured of deafness."

Mrs. L. W. Abbot, Akron, Mich., has been cured, and found no relief until she went to Dr. Mitchell. "I am now well," she said, "and recommend this wonderful treatment to all sufferers."

Mr. Ely Lafave of Two Harbors, Minn., cured of stomach trouble and general breakdown of the entire system.

Capt. W. G. Govert of Stillwater, Minn., had his health restored by Dr. Mitchell.

Mrs. J. E. Close of 2324 West Third street, who had doctored for months without getting help, and had tried everything, given up all hope, decided to try Dr. Mitchell's treatment, as a last resort. The treatment worked wonders for her, saved her life and restored her to health, and she gladly recommends this magnetic treatment to all her friends.

Mrs. John Morris of Oacona, S. D., writes: "I believe in your treatment and recommend it to all sufferers."

A lady with a lame and stiff shoulder of fifteen years' standing is cured in three weeks.

A man who was losing his eyesight—everything began to look smoky, and he could not read newspaper print—was restored after a course of treatments.

A lady who had spinal trouble of ten years' standing was cured by Dr. Mitchell.

Mrs. Fredericka Hallquist of 2836 Huron street, says: "When I went to Dr. Mitchell I was in a hopeless, helpless condition. I had kidney and heart trouble and my friends all thought I would die; medicine did me no good. When Dr. Mitchell took my case I weighed 212 pounds; I was reduced down to 170 pounds; I am now enjoying good health; while treating at the office I saw many that came as a last resort to Dr. Mitchell and they were all convalescing; several of my friends are treating with him and they are being restored to health; I will be glad to substantiate this statement to anyone."

Anthony Johnson of 6324 Cody street, says: "I was about to have an operation performed for an abscess in my side; I had been in bed for weeks, was all run down and so weak I did not think I could stand the operation, and I decided to call Dr. Mitchell. He examined me and said I was in bad condition but he would cure me. I recommend his treatment to anyone suffering as I did, for I am now built up strong and healthy."

Mrs. Edith Gordon of Forman, N. D., cured of kidney and stomach trouble.

Mr. A. Johnson of Tower, Minn., cured of chronic appendicitis. Was all run down. Gained 30 pounds under Dr. Mitchell's treatment.

Dr. Mitchell has hundreds of letters like the above on file at the office. This treatment is highly recommended by those who give it a trial. Whatever Dr. Mitchell tells you, no matter what you can fully rely upon.

THE FOOTBALL SEASON OPENS

First Meeting of Representative Teams of the "Big Nine."

Chicago, Oct. 7.—The formal opening of the Western football season took place here today, the university of Chicago being pitted against the university of Iowa in the first meeting of representative teams of the "Big nine." On account of the crippled condition of Coach Stagg's regulars, Chicago did not have her strongest team in the field. Little was known of the strength of the Iowa team, except that it had defeated Coe, 27 to 0, and beaten Monmouth 40 to 0. Coach Stagg's team was well drilled and a close game was expected. The weather was clear and mild. The line-up:

Chicago.	Position.	Iowa.
Mohler	Center	Fitz
Scherer	Right guard	Rockwood
Badenoch	Right tackle	Schwinn

Northwestern university faced its first hard try-out, at Evanston today, being confronted by a fast team from Wabash college Crawfordsville, Ind. McCormack, the Northwestern coach, did not expect an easy game, as the Wabash team had displayed fine form against Chicago and Illinois, and seemed more than likely to give the Northwestern team a close contest.

The line-up:

BURGLARS SECURE ABOUT $500 AT WILD ROSE, WIS.

Wautoma, Wis., Oct. 7.—Burglars blew the safe at the postoffice at Wild Rose to pieces, last night, and got away with about $500 in stamps and money. An attempt to rob the state bank at the same place failed. The burglars blew off a portion of the door to the vault, causing a damage of several hundred dollars. They were evidently frightened away.

After the War.

Now that peace has been declared between Japan and Russia the entire world will have something serious to think about in regard to the strength of the Japanese. In fact, a commanding nation has sprung into being, with which the powers must reckon in the future. If you neglect the stomach and bowels and allow the system to become weak and rundown, Nature always requires a reckoning, and which in some cases results in a long, serious sick spell. You cannot afford to take chances, and for this reason we urge you to commence taking Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, at meal time and bed time, and give it a fair chance to make you well again. Thousands have been cured during the last fifty years of indigestion, dyspepsia, heartburn, costiveness, bloating, sour stomach, female ills or malaria by using the Bitters promptly. Start today.

JAPS TO HAVE GREAT NAVAL PAGEANT

Tokio, Oct. 7.—The coming visit to Japanese waters of the British squadron, commanded by Vice Admiral Sir Gerard Neel, commander-in-chief of the China station, will, it is expected, be made the occasion, soon after the ratification of peace, of a grand naval review, which, with Admiral Togo's triumphal entry into the city will offer a splendid occasion for diverting the people's attention from the unsatisfactory terms of the treaty. It is believed the authorities will do everything possible to utilize these events, as demonstrations of the fact that the peace of Asia is guarded by the two powerful allies. American warships are expected to be present at the naval review.

Many of those who allowed themselves to be carried away by the tide of dissatisfaction which set in when the peace terms became known, are gradually becoming reconciled to the situation.

GREEN BAY, WIS., MAN IS CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Appleton, Wis., Oct. 7.—Wenzel E. Kabat of Green Bay, according to District Attorney Krugmer, will on Monday be charged with one of the worst crimes in the history of this section of Wisconsin—the murder of Michael McCarthy, a Kaukauna farmer, to gain possession of the wealthy man's big estate and the burning of the body in a brush fire at a lonely spot on the McCarty farm to hide evidence of the alleged deed.

The sheriff received warning, this morning, that farmers are organized at Kaukauna to lynch Kabat, when he comes to that town for a hearing on Monday, or even before.

JOHN MITCHELL CAN SEE NO REASON FOR STRIKE.

Pittsburg, Oct. 7.—John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers of America, arrived here today from New York on his way to Elizabeth, Pa., where he addressed a large meeting of bituminous miners this afternoon.

Regarding the possibilities of a strike next spring, Mr. Mitchell said: "As far as I can judge as having been in the anthracite field for some time, everything will work out harmoniously to the end. I can see no reason why there should be a strike next spring."

M. S. BURROWS HERE.

Comes In From the Wilds Looking Healthy and Happy.

M. S. Burrows is in town again. This exceptionally fine day in this exceptionally fine season, has been the subject of much comment, but Mr. Burrows' appearance explains it. He is like a burst of sunshine to his friends, and is looking the embodiment of health and good humor.

He got in yesterday from Munascar lodge, his summer home on Trout lake, Itasca county, and shows the benefit of outdoor life and a care-free condition.

He will remain in the city until the early part of the week, when he will go to St. Paul to attend a wedding of some friends there. Later he will go to Florida and the South in general to spend the winter, and will then go to Europe to idle away about a year. Following that he will go into business again, but where or what, he will not say yet.

BANQUET TO CLERGYMEN

Eveleth Masons Entertain Brethren Attending Methodist Conference.

Routine Business Takes Up the Time at Morning Session.

Eveleth, Minn., Oct. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Those of the clergymen attending the Northern Minnesota conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, who are members of the Masonic fraternity, were the honored guests at a banquet given by the Eveleth lodge in the local lodge rooms last evening.

There are about forty Masons among the 250 preachers who are here, and all of these attended the successful affair. All the Masons in Eveleth, and some from surrounding towns, were present. The banquet was a sumptuous one, and the viands were followed by a number of impromptu but satisfying talks.

Grand Master Sisson of the Eveleth lodge presided as toastmaster and among those who responded to toasts were Rev. E. C. Clemans, presiding elder of the Duluth district, and Rev. Dr. Hingeley, presiding elder of the Litchfield district.

This morning's session of the conference was largely devoted to routine business and no appointments were announced. T. E. Archer is to be left without an appointment at his own request; Clyde R. Lawson was transferred from Idaho to this conference, J. S. Piker was transferred from Northern Nebraska to this conference, and the following clergymen are to continue at their present posts: B. F. Parker, missionary at the White Earth reservation; Antone Coutoure, Indian missionary at Wakemup Bay.

G. S. Kingham and S. L. Parrish were advanced to the fourth year studies and Ezra R. Stevenson was elected to elders' orders. He will be ordained tomorrow afternoon by Bishop McDowell.

Jesse T. Dodds, son of Dr. Dodds, was continued on trial and will attend Hamline university. John A. Ewing, Robert G. Gren, Paul Little, W. A. Parkinson, W. B. Butler, W. G. Bogle, J. M. Burns, W. B. Williams, and L. J. Wood were continued in their present relationships.

The following young preachers were received on trial and were introduced to the conference by the bishop, to be ordained by him tomorrow afternoon: J. A. Lewis, G. H. Hayes, Thomas Grice, Allen E. Warman, William A. Pringle and H. P. Scott.

It was announced that John Callahan of the Star of Hope mission, Duluth, was to receive an appointment to take charge of a large mission in New York. He was congratulated by the bishop and by the members of the conference. He will be elected to deacon's orders.

W. A. Pringle, Thomas Grice, J. H. Lewis, J. A. Hayes, J. S. Kettlewood and H. R. Scott will be ordained as deacons, under the missionary rule, tomorrow. S. F. Spitz, who has been very ill but who is now ready to take a charge, was transferred from Indiana conference and taken in this one. W. G. Fritz was also taken into this conference. He was a member of the Philippines conference but was obliged to leave the Far East on account of illness.

The committee which has been considering the endowment fund of $50,000 for conference claimants, decided to ask the clergymen in the conference to contribute 2 per cent of their salaries to the fund. Bishop McDowell will probably appoint an agent to look after this fund tomorrow.

Rev. Dr. L. T. Guild of Minneapolis was taken ill last evening, and asked to be excused. He returned to Minneapolis.

Addresses were delivered to the conference this morning by President Bridgeman of Hamline university, Supt. Palmer of the Anti-Saloon league and Mrs. Parther of the Women's Foreign Missionary society.

The Asbury hospital committee recommended the following as members of the conference board of directors: Rev. Messrs. Hingeley, Jordan, Sharpe, Clemans, Easton, Guild and Thompson. It also urged the clergymen to exert themselves in an effort to secure funds to permit the completion of the new hospital building.

The following were recommended to visit Hamline university during the coming year: Rev. Messrs. J. G. Morrison, M. S. Rice, Bickard, Guild, Heard, Easton and Powell.

Bishop McDowell will preach in the Eveleth church tomorrow morning and in the afternoon will conduct the ordinations, and Rev. E. M. Randall, secretary of the Epworth league, will preach in the evening.

The following effective elders in the Minneapolis district were passed in character and reported on their benevolent collections: A. A. Graves, G. E. Ferguson, J. H. Buttleman, Donald McKenzie, C. H. Sweatt, Joseph Hogg, J. H. Dewart, W. H. Jordon, L. T. Guild, J. W. Heard, W. A. Shannon, P. A. Cool, F. L. Thompson, T. W. Stout, C. M. Heard, G. G. Vallentyne, J. H. Miller, C. F. Sharpe, L. A. Willsey, H. B. Collins, J. W. Mauser, A. F. Thompson, A. A. Meyers and S. S. Davis.

The following holding special appointments were passed in character: Robert Forbes, Jabez Brooks, G. S. Innis, Thomas McClary, L. P. Smith, R. H. Craig and L. S. Koch.

In the Crookston district the following elders were passed in character and reported their benevolences: Lafayette Dodds, A. C. Routzahn, T. N. Swinnerton, J. B. Smith, G. P. Watson, Robert Lumnip, G. P. Watson, W. L. Singer, G. E. Satterlee, A. H. McKee, Grell Collins, J. G. Morrison, Edwin Deacon, J. T. B. Smith, James Roberts, L. A. Dodge, Isaac Peart, E. A. Cooke, C. H. Flesher, J. L. Parmeter, George E. Tindall, J. M. Stewart and C. W. B. Ellis.

In the Duluth district the following elders were passed in character and reported their benevolences: L. Chalmers, C. W. Lawson, W. H. Robinson, H. W. Knowles, J. A. Geer, W. E. Loomis, Henry Logan, F. G. Clark, J. W. Powell, M. S. Rice, S. P. Long, J. W. Robinson, C. F. Davis, S. G. Briggs, R. W. Sanderson, R. J. Taylor, Matti Lethonen, C. H. Hawn, C. H. Blake, J. D. Manly, M. O. Stockland, C. S. Kuhan, Rupert Swinnerton, E. E. Cooper, W. H. Cooper, E. J. Gratz, E. M. Catheart and D. O. Johnson.

Rev. Dr. Fayette L. Thompson of Minneapolis addressed the conference on "Some Ministerial Essentials." He said the preacher must have some confidence in his own powers as well as a trust in God, that he should make himself as well equipped for his duties as much as possible, by study, devotion, and practical effort.

Bishop McDowell, addressing the conference, said that an annual conference was a day of judgment, not a final day of judgment. Preachers were not as careful as they would be if this conference was their only chance. He would ask one question in relation to their sacred work: What was their relation to it as persons and as professionals? What kind of men are we, should be a question, and what kind of men are we becoming? There are some preachers not what they ought to be, but they are becoming like their ideal. Other men were not even becoming what they ought to be. Many a preacher confessed that he ought to be better, but confession needed effort or it was fruitless. Some men asked pardon in bulk, but never in particular. Men needed to search their hearts. Are we better men than we were last week? Add to your faith virtue and to your virtue knowledge. This comes by diligence and effort. We must do more good than we did last year. Preachers need self-control and not as some supposed self-conceit. He had found one man who absolutely failed because of his laziness. His working library consisted of seven volumes of illustrations. The only chairs in his study were rocking chairs. He was a transfer from another conference. Another notable and promising man whom we expected to become a great preacher is now simply a man with a mind full of ecclesiastical gossip. Never be jealous of another man, but let his success be your glory. Do not imagine that the possession of one thing, and that a good thing, will excuse you from lack of other good things. A fiddle with one string does not make such good music. A preacher with only one string is not of much service. At what point as men are we going to improve? Life runs down and these conferences help to tone up our systems. Even the Lord Jesus needed to keep in communion with His Heavenly Father to keep in tone. We need to set our watches at the perfect time, to get our lives in order as they are liable to run down. Let us get near Christ and learn of Him.

Dr. Clemans's report as presiding elder of the Duluth district contains some very characteristic touches, among them the following, the grim humor of which will be appreciated:

"At a conference last year I reported that the parsonage debt at Clear Lake was paid. The pastor, Thomas Brice, found in July a debt of $150 still unpaid. As he was new to the country, having just arrived with wife from Ireland, he wrote me to ask permission to raise money to pay the debt. I was easily persuaded to grant permission and within two weeks he wrote that the debt was paid and some money in the treasury. I think he is becoming rapidly acclimated to Minnesota Methodism in the Duluth district."

Another in regard to Stacy on the Wyoming conference:

"A $1,000 building was dedicated. J. L. Parish, pastor. This is the young brother's first charge and the building of the church is due to his faith and persistence. A preacher of another denomination came into town and served notice on the pastor of Methodism to leave the place. As we had been holding services for twenty years, we thought our title to possession was good, and the church is the answer to the notice to go."

In the Aitkin circuit the Sutton church has been dedicated at Esmagimo. Dr. Clemans says: "With the site at Esquagimo, we have twenty additional acres of land. Brother Sutton and I believe we have an iron mine on the property and we want it for Methodism on the dividends. Why not? All kinds of people are getting iron mines. Cannot God give one to the Methodist Episcopal church if he wants to?"

Rev. M. S. Rice of Duluth addressed the preachers yesterday afternoon from the text Matthew xxvii., 40. He said that he once asked his people what they would like to happen in the church, and every one had some wonderful thing they wished to occur. Then he asked them if they were willing that the thing they wanted should happen. When people hear that God is with you they will want to come where you are. I am too young a man to be giving advice to preachers. My message for the preacher is, "If thou be the Son of God, come down from the cross." The cross is the great center of Christianity. Everything in the life of Christ led up to that. What would we preachers do without the cross of Christ? What would a sin-stricken world do without it? We cannot understand the cross and we make a mistake when we try to explain it. We preachers minister to others twelve months in a year, and we get starved, and we need to get together and to nestle close to the cross. God is misunderstood and so are His works. Some men think that God should act as they think He ought to act, and they say God ought to do so and so. But if God works contrary to my way of thinking I expect it. He would not be what he is unless he did act differently than we would have Him act. Just think of man daring to dictate to God, as if God had made a horrible mistake, and that Christ knew no better than the man who asked him to come down from His exalted position. To think that God's plan would be ours. Think of a human being offering to God a better plan than that of Calvary. Had it been necessary God would have called a cohort of angels to deliver Christ. But the cross was where God and Christ wished the Savior to die. Had it been necessary He would have come down, but if Christ was the Son of God, he was where He ought to be and He could not come down from the cross, neither could He be rescued. Jesus Christ could not come down from the cross because he was the Son of God, and for the very reason that these men wanted Him to come down from the cross.

If He was the Son of God he could not come down. His place was on the tree. We dare not attempt to explain the cross. If we could understand it we would not preach about it. It towers over the wrecks of time, marches on through ages and conquers sin and sorrow and men. It hangs the hope of a sorrowing and sin smitten race. On the cross Christ is absolutely alone. In some places he is among others, though superior and better, but yet he is among men. His life was drawn out for our sakes. His mission was fulfilled in the cross. He waded through three hard and troublesome years. He chose to stand with men on earth. On the mountain He stands with Socrates and others, but on Calvary He is alone. The cross lifts his name above all others. He draws all men not by what He says or does in life, but by the cross. The cross is what is to draw men to Him, and it has never failed. The cross is the objective point of all preaching. He did not come on earth to save himself, but to save others. He could not come down and save others. Yet He could have done it, but we thank God He did not come down. He is there to save all men from sin. Did you know of a man who was ever a Savlour of men who tried to save himself first? He is willing to die that others might live evermore and save them from sin and death and hell.

Dr. Bridgeman said at the public meeting last evening that Hamline University was enjoying a year of great prosperity. The freshman's class was larger than other years by forty. The Norton athletic field had been a great boon to the students for recreation. The number of students was the largest in the history of the school.

Charles E. Haynes of Hamline University was passed to the studies of the second year. Walter B. Williams, a missionary in West Africa, was passed into the studies of the second year.

C. H. McCrae was passed in character and advanced to studies of the third and elected to be ordained deacon at Brooklyn, N. Y.

Rev. William Fielder, D. D., who was appointed president of Fort Worth University, Fort Worth, Texas, has been years an active worker in the prohibition alliance and the father of the Fielder bill in South Dakota, which is a prohibition law. He came to Minnesota eleven years ago, and has served for six years as presiding elder and five years as pastor of the First church, Minneapolis. The announcement made in conference of his appointment was received with great applause. Dr. Fielder has served the church faithfully and this promotion is highly deserved. He will leave Minneapolis for Fort Worth in November. The university has 1,000 students and it is one of the best in Methodism.

The bishop will ordain elders and deacons on Sunday. His address to the class yesterday afternoon was a masterpiece. The following is the class advanced to full membership: T. N. Swinnerton, John P. Hess, T. J. Chappell, Ezra R. Stevenson and J. W. Scott.

Bishop William Frazer McDowell is standing at the extreme end at right of picture. Seated at right hand are Rev. Dr. Fielder, presiding elder of Minneapolis district, and Rev. Dr. J. B. Hengeley, presiding elder of Litchfield district. Behind the latter a re Dr. Clemens, presiding elder of Duluth district, and Dr. L. Dodds, presiding elder of Crookston district. Next to Bishop McDovell is an Asbury Deaconess.

Few People Know How Useful It Is In Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

UP TO THE RETAILERS

To Secure the Passage of a National Food Law.

St. Paul, Oct. 7.—Until there is a national food law enacted, manufacturers and wholesalers of Minnesota will be exempt from arrest and prosecution for the manufacture and handling of adulterated food stuffs. This is the opinion of State Dairy and Food Commissioner Slater. Mr. Slater's statement followed the action of Judge Smith of the Minneapolis municipal court, who a few days ago refused to sentence a retail dealer found guilty of selling adulterated food products. The judge based his decison on the fact that the manufacturer and not the retailer was the guilty party.

At the retail grocers' banquet in St. Paul Thursday evening the food and dairy commission of this and other states were severely scored for the zeal with which retail dealers were prosecuted for selling impure food products, while the manufacturers and wholesalers were allowed to manufacture and handle the products without fear of arrest.

In defending the proceedings of the state dairy and food commission, Mr. Slater said:

"It is impossible for us to reach the manufacturer and wholesalers, as there is no national law governing the manufacture and handling of impure and adulterated food products, in existence. The only way the food and dairy commissioners can prevent the distribution of adulterated foods to the consumer is to prosecute the retailer. It is the retailers who are vitally interested in this question, and it is up to them to secure the passage of a national food law at the next session of congress."

BOARD NOT A DEAD ONE

Civil Service Commissioners Say Rules Must Be Observed.

Results of Recent Examinations Are Canvassed and Announced.

That the rules of the civil service commision should be rigidly enforced, or else that the commission should go out of existence, was the opinion expressed by the members last evening, in discussing the case of Donald G. Gearhart, who is employed in the water and light department.

Mr. Gearhart has not passed the civil service examination, and was appointed by Manager Case without reference to the eligible list. The explanation made was to the effect that he will "handle money" and that he is not therefore under the civil service regulations.

As the department already has a cashier and an assistant cashier, the explanation is not taken seriously by the board of civil service commissioners.

The matter is now in the hands of the council for investigation.

"What we want to ascertain," said Commissioner Fider, "is whether or not every clerk in the water department can be a cashier."

"If they can," said Commissioner Dice, "we might as well go out of business."

• • •

On a motion by Commissioner Nunan, the pay of Harry Walbank, clerk in the comptroller's office, was also held up pending an investigation. It is claimed that he was appointed by the comptroller by permission of the council, but that the matter had never been brought before the civil service commission for approval, as provided for in the charter.

• • •

The report of the secretary on the recent civil service examinations, was made to the board, and the results canvassed. They will be certified to Mayor Cullum, Chief Troyer and Chief Black.

Officer Charles E. Wilcox led the list of candidates for promotion to the position of police sergeant, with a percentage of 90.5. Officers Geer, A. F. Schulte and Butchart came next in the order named. Officers Webber, Roberg, Barber, and Toewe were below the required mark.

A. A. Ebmer and A. S. Klock were first and second in the examination for promotion to the position of captain in the fire department, with 95 and 91 per cent respectively. Their names will be certified to Chief Black, and the one vacancy existing will be filled by either one of the candidates.

There are two vacancies for the position of lieutenant, but H. C. Merriman was the only one who succeeded in passing the examination.

For appointments to the police force, the following names will be certified to Chief Troyer as eligible: E. N. Schulte, 93.5; B. J. Dickman, 93; James E. Kennell, 92; Mike McDermott, 88.5; Fred Mahlen, 83; Henry Bromlette, 78.5.

The following men, having served as substitutes in the fire department, will be appointed to regular positions: G. A. Henry, 91.5; W. E. Becker, 87.5; Charles R. Elk, 87; Fred Jones, 87; George Storm, 83.5.

R. E. Stewart and T. E. Phillips were placed on the eligible list for promotion from stoker to engineer. W. F. P. Kurtz was put on the eligible list for appointment as stoker, and W. H. Denny was placed on the list as an eligible lineman.

OFFICERS RE-ELECTED.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 7.—The convention of the German-American national alliance today adopted a report of the committee on personal liberty which protested against the liquor traffic. The officers of the alliance were re-elected.

CANCELING THE CLAIMS

Echoes of Northern Pacific Eastern Terminal Dispute Heard.

Quite a number of cancellations on Northern Pacific lands have been received this week by the Duluth land office from the general office in Washington. Yesterday another batch of these cancellations came in. About twenty claims have now been cancelled and it is expected that before the work of cancellation will have been finished, full 100 or thereabouts will have been slaughtered.

These cancellations come as the result of that old and time-honored dispute as to the Northern Pacific's eastern terminal. The eastern terminal of that road was believed to be at Duluth, but the road having extended along the lake shore to Ashland, claimed Ashland as the eastern terminal, and, incidentally, claimed certain valuable lands along the right of way between here and Ashland in view of its extension.

Settlers went in on this land, however, and the Northern Pacific had to fight the matter to the United States supreme court. That court finally determined that the settlers had a right to it and that the Northern Pacific's eastern terminal was at Duluth. This, of course, knocked out the road's claim to land between Duluth and Ashland and gave the settlers a chance.

In 1898, congress passed an act extending the Northern Pacific land grant presumably in order to allay the disappointment of the company in not getting the valuable timber land between Duluth and Ashland. By this act it was ruled that as the land in dispute between Duluth and Ashland, settlers would have a prior right, providing they settled and filed on the land before Jan. 1, 1898, and that those who had filed timber and stone rights on any of the land before Jan. 1, 1898, had no right unless they had proved up and paid over the money before that date. The fact that such had filed and paid their filing fee made no difference; that leniency was only to actual settlers.

Of course there have been scores of contests ever since and these cancellations are the result. This land in dispute will go to the Northern Pacific now that the claimants are being turned down. Of course in case the road had been turned down, by virtue of the act passed in 1898, the road would not have suffered, for it would have the right to choose an equal amount of land some place else.

These claimants who are being turned down, it is said, will probably not suffer much. It is asserted that the greater number of them have long since sold their claims to lumber companies for valuable considerations and that it is the lumber companies which will suffer at the hands of the department and not the claim holder.

Increase In Sinking Fund Equals Saving on Maintenance.

Preliminary Action Taken Toward Erection of New Buildings.

The decision of the board of education to impose a three mill tax for the purpose of raising $30,000 to take care of small bond issues falling due during the coming year and in 1907, kept up the total rate for school purposes to a point almost equal to last year's rate in spite of the saving which the board has effected in the general running expenses of the schools.

At the regular monthly meeting last evening, it was decided to fix the amount to be raised for school purposes at $20,000, which is $5,000 less than the amount raised last year, in spite of the big increase in the sinking fund.

Last year a levy of two mills was made for the sinking fund, amounting to about $20,000. This year the levy will amount to more than $30,000, the rate being three mills.

The building fund this year will have the same levy as last year, or at the rate of one mill, amounting to about $30,000. This amount together with the balance on hand and the $25,000 which can be realized from the sale of the remainder of the $125,000 bond issue, will give the board funds sufficient to erect two new $50,000 grade school buildings, one on Sixth street and the other in West Duluth, and in addition pay for the site of the new Sixth street school.

In the general fund, a big saving has been effected this year, largely owing to the cutting down of the school year to nine months. Last year the levy for the general fund amounted to $225,000, while this year it will be an even $200,000.

In brief, then, the action of the school board last evening, left the total levy just $5,000 less than last year, while $30,000 more was put into the sinking fund, and taken from the general fund.

Owing to the increased assessed valuation this year, the rate will be a fraction of a mill less than last year. Last year the rate was 10 8-10 mills, whereas this year it will be 10 2-5 mills. The following table shows the amount raised for the different funds last year and this year:

	1904.	1905.
General fund	$235,000	$200,000
Building fund	30,000	30,000
Sinking fund	60,000	90,000
Total	$325,000	$320,000

The levy was fixed by the board with but little discussion, and the matter had evidently been thoroughly threshed out at informal meetings of the members.

"I maintain we must take care of those bonds," said Treasurer Le Tourneau. "We could arrange to issue refunding bonds for the amount necessary, and cut down the rate, but on a small issue like this we should arrange to meet the payment when it falls due. On a larger issue we can and will have to issue refunding bonds, but I think we should arrange to take this issue up when it falls due in 1907. We can raise part of the amount this year and part of it next year."

The motion carried, all of the members present voting "aye" on the roll call. Directors Washburn, Powell and Chairman Codding were absent.

• • •

The board also took preliminary action on the erection of the two new grade schools which are planned for next year.

On a motion by Director Hendricks, the clerk was instructed to advertise for competitive plans for a ten-room grade school building, to be erected on Sixth street and First avenue west, at a cost of not to exceed $25,000. This would leave the sum of $15,000 for heating and plumbing fixtures.

When the plans have been submitted the board will select the one most to its liking, and will allow the architect to draw up detailed specifications. If the plan is satisfactory it may also be used in the West Duluth school.

It is now too late to get work under way this fall, and all the board can do is to get all the preliminary work out of the way so as to allow the contractor to start breaking ground as early as possible in the spring.

The clerk was also instructed to advertise for sale the frame dwelling which occupies the site of the proposed school building on Sixth street.

• • •

Superintendent Denfeld submitted a detailed report of the school work of the month, which showed that the school system is once more in good working order for the coming year.

• • •

Protests were received from the Zenith Paper company and the Duluth Paper company against the quality of paper being furnished by the Albertson Stationery company, on its contract for the year's supply. The other companies claimed that the paper was below the grade of the sample on which the bids were submitted, and that it was unfair to the other bidders to allow such paper to be accepted.

The paper was claimed to be off color, and also under weight, but after the matter had been thoroughly discussed it was passed over by the board without action.

• • •

In a communication to the board, Phil Bevis, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., asked permission to open a night school in the Munroe school.

A committee of West end citizens composed of R. R. Forward, S. Morterud and Rev. H. K. Madsen have made arrangements to hold evening classes three times a week to teach English to foreigners, the classes to be conducted by the Y. M. C. A.

Several members of the board expressed commendation of the idea and the motion was carried without opposition.

GARDENERS WIN PRIZES

Awards Made to School Children Who Have Best Gardens.

With the awarding of prizes to the junior gardener having the best cultivated plot in each of the school gardens the season of 1905 was completed as far as school gardens go. The little plots of ground which have been cared for with more or less faithfulness by the school boys since early spring were inspected by a committee, and the awards were made. The gardens about each school were judged by themselves, as the conditions in each locality were so different it would be impossible to choose the best garden from among them all.

The committee consisted of Bishop McGolrick and Mayor Cullum, Mrs. J. L. Washburn, president of the Women's Council, and Mrs. Henry S. Ely, chairman of the school gardens committee of the Council.

At the Washington school the first prize was awarded Arthur Sund, the honorable mention was given the gardens of Thomas Beatty and Robert Miller.

At the Emerson school, William Kunbell won the first prize, and honorable mention was made of the gardens of Carl Lindquist, Richard Bawden and Stanley Laskey.

At the Franklin school, William Elliott won the first prize, and honorable mention was made of the gardens of John Oakes, Phillip and John Hollenbeck and Joe Swartz.

The members of the Council and those who have watched the progress of the work feel that the gardens have been an immense success, and that the project has met a real need among the boys of the city who are unoccupied during the summer. Wednesday the young gardeners of the Franklin school presented Supt. Denfeld with a fine collection of vegetables which were raised in their gardens.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT.

Portland Oregonian: The Albany Methodist conference is making trouble because a minister appropriated church cash to his own use. A Methodist preacher ought to know better. Real money is not intended for him.

Baltimore American: A shrewd minister in Jersey City appealed to the women of his church not to attend bareheaded, on the ground that her hair being woman's crowning glory, she was more apt with its full attraction exposed to distract the men with admiration of her charms from their prayers. Naturally the tactful insinuation that women should in the goodness of their hearts lighten men's distractions by lessening as much as possible their own excess of good looks appealed too powerfully to the feminine heart to go unregarded.

SEE FRANK DANIELS.

Many Duluth People Enjoy His Performance at Superior.

Nearly two car loads of Duluth people went over to Superior last evening to see Frank Daniels in "Sergeant Brue" at the Grand. The seating capacity of the house was taxed to the limit. Every seat appeared to be taken and then there were not enough to go around, many men finding it necessary to take advantage of the standing room only sign. Mr. Daniels is always well received in Superior, but this time the reception was probably the warmest ever accorded him. It has been a long time since any one has drawn such applause from an audience at the Head of the Lakes. The musical farce is full of fun and laughs, and the songs are pretty and well sung. They are the kind that send the men away from the house whistling. Mr. Daniels has an excellent supporting company and quite a famous beauty chorus.

Friday—Trades assembly, Labor World hall; Lathers, Labor World hall.

Aside from the strike of union job printers, which was started this week, the labor news is scarce and of little interest. Everything centers at this time on the printers' strike and every labor union man in the city is doing what he can to help out the boys who are striking. The whole question at issue is the eight-hour day. Duluth is one of the first cities to demand this because of the fact that the agreement with employing printers ran out on Oct. 4. The strike is peaceful but effective; but both sides seem determined to fight the thing to the end. The printers assert that they have the market cornered and must of necessity win out in a very short time. The employing printers laugh at this and claim that they can get all of the labor they want. One of them said last evening:

"I claim we can get and will have all of the labor we need. Of course, it would be folly to suppose that we can do this in a day. But within a reasonable time we can get what we need. The shops which really need printers now, have them and we are getting more. The union cannot win for they have not things cornered as they say they have. The union claims it will drive us out of business. Now is the time to do it. It strikes me that the union can find no riper time than the present."

The union has put pickets on trains and expects to stop a good many who would otherwise come in to work from the ranges and the country. One man was stopped yesterday, but he was the only man found. The union also has solicitors out among the business houses presenting their case and urging the business men to support the strike. They claim to be meeting with good success.

Each night quite a number of unions meet and these meetings are being attended by representatives of the printers who are forcing a campaign for the union label, not only on printing, but on everything. The union men are urged to have the label even on the cash slips which they receive from the butcher, baker or candlestick maker, or refuse to buy the goods.

• • •

It is claimed by the printers that this campaign is having a visible effect, but on the other hand, the members of the Typothetae assert that it is having no effect at all and they are just as well satisfied that the campaign should go along.

As a matter of fact, it is agreed that up to date, the strike has been an even break with the first few rounds in nobody's favor.

• • •

The strike of candy makers, which was inaugurated a week ago by candy makers, who claimed to have been working sixteen hours a day for $40 a month and wanted the hours reduced to fourteen per day, were not union men. When some of the union men were asked if they would support these men, they laughed and said that they could not because of the lack of organization when the candy-makers could belong to a union if they chose; and from the further fact that if the men were union men in spirit they would not be working anything like the hours stated for the amount given.

• • •

Outside of the matter mentioned, unionism in Duluth is quiet. Everything else is at peace and the union men of the city all seem to be working.

OWNERLESS TRUNKS.

The bane of an express company is the man who has his address carefully painted on his trunk or baggage, says the Brooklyn Eagle.

He may change his address a score of times, but almost invariably the address he had when he first bought his trunk remains blazoned upon it. When for some reason the destination marked on a trunk is lost or has been written incorrectly, the trunk is held at the terminal and then sent to any address that can be found on it. If the trunk has painted on it "John Jones, 50 Blank street, Newark, N. J.," it is shipped off to Newark. But if Mr Jones, since he bought the trunk, has moved to Manhattan or Brooklyn or Poughkeepsie or some other place, his trunk is going to have a long trip before he gets it, and a lot of needless activity and expense is gone through with. Owing to such misunderstandings, for which the owner is entirely to blame, trunks have been shipped from Long Island City to Chicago, while the owner was all the time a resident of New York City. In other cases trunks have also traveled from Long Island City up to the heart of the Adirondacks because their destination address had been lost and all that remained to indentify them was an old express card plastered on, with an Adirondack address.

If these trunks are not claimed, they eventually find a lodging, along with other express flotsam and jetsam, in the "On Hand Room." This is the express company's orphan asylum. Here all lost and unclaimed parcels—everything from a paper of pins to a grand piano is a "parcel" in the express office vernacular—are stored and here one may find every conceivable article, rowboats and refrigerators, oil cans and cases of champagne, baby carriages and bamboo poles, garden hose and steam heaters. These are for the most part articles that have been dumped at some terminal by an alien expressman without proper directions attached to them and without a clew to the owner's identity. In the "On Hand Room" of the Long Island Express company, at Long Island City, many carefully wrapped parcels and wooden boxes can be seen, which have not as much as a word written on the outside to betray their contents. But these, along with all other articles in the room, are carefully numbered and their numbers entered in a record book, with the description attached. The express companies in this state are required by law to keep these unclaimed articles for at least one year before desposing of them. Every December, the Long Island company makes a final effort by advertising to find the owners and then the articles are sold at auction. The boxed or packed articles are sold blind, the purchaser not being informed as to the contents. Bicycles are things most commonly abandoned by their owners and allowed to go astray and at the last sale fifty were sold. Among the articles disposed of were also twenty valises and eight trunks. At no sale has the amount realized been more than sufficient to pay for the expense of the effort made to find the owners of the various parcels.

GETS HEAT OF SUMMER

Duluth Temperature Close to the Eighty Degrees Mark.

Only Two Days on Record Which Beat the Present.

At 3 o'clock today the thermometer at the weather station on the hill registered 78½ degrees in the shade. Taking into consideration the reflected heat from buildings and cement sidewalks, it would mean that the temperature down on Superior street will be over 80 degrees in heat.

Now, wouldn't that stagger the oldest inhabitant?

The greatest amount of heat ever recorded in Duluth in thirty-four years for the month of October was on the 7th, 1886, and on the 21st, 1901, when 80 degrees was reached in each case. This is the closest to come to that record and is only a degree and a half below the record. The warmest October on the average was in 1890, when the average was 50 degrees. The general average temperature for October during thirty-four years is 44 degrees. The lowest temperatures each day this month so far have hovered around the average for the thirty-four years as stated, and only once, on the 5th has it gone below, that day reaching 42 degrees. The lowest temperature each day this week is as follows:

Monday, 44; Tuesday, 52; Wednesday, 56; Thursday, 42; Friday, 50.

The weather is nothing short of remarkable generally speaking, and that of today is most extraordinary. Very few days in June, July or August reach the heat of 78 degrees and when they do men are going about with their coats over their arms and complaining of the heat. When one stops to think that at that period of the year when light overcoats are the vogue and on some evenings heavy wraps, and instead Duluth is getting actual summer weather, it is a subject on which speculation may be had.

SHOWS NEW INTEREST

Lake Superior & Pittsburg Stock Has Bulge—North Butte Steady.

Among the copper stocks of local interest, Lake Superior & Pittsburg was the feature today. The recent strike of new ore in that mine turned attention to that stock, and it bulged to $41, and closed at $40. Calumet & Pittsburg was stationary, showing no change. Pittsburg & Duluth again sold freely at $28.

North Butte opened at $56, dropped to $55, and rallied to $55.50, closing at $55 bid, and $55.50 asked.

In Boston a curb market has been established, similar to the curb market in New York. The leading houses in Boston all have representatives on the curb, and thus far the attempt has been very satisfactory. The first day more than 5,000 shares were traded in. The curb market should widen the trading in the unlisted stocks.

HART CHARGED WITH MURDER

Would-Be Suicide Arrested For Poisoning Irene Klokow.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—Dr. Oliver B. Hart, millionaire's son, would-be suicide and husband of a 16-year-old wife, was formally charged today with the murder of 10-year-old Irene Klokow, waif of an industrial school, whose father is a patient in an insane asylum and whose mother cannot be found. The doctor, who is said to be addicted to morphine and cocaine, gazed stupidly at the walls of the court room when arraigned today, and did not speak a word. He was represented by a prominent lawyer, who agreed to a continuance of ten days asked for by the police. Before going into the court room Dr. Hart was questioned by police officials, but adhered to his original story that the Klokow girl had swallowed morphine pills by mistake and that he had not attacked her.

The prisoner's father and father-in-law, residents of St. Louis, have both arrived in Chicago and are interesting themselves in developments.

Continuance of the case was set by the court for Oct. 17. The prisoner was taken to the county jail hospital.

PRESENT REPORTS

Officers of Children's Home Society Review Year's Work.

Secretary's Report Shows Fine Condition Prevailing In Home.

At the annual meeting of the Children's Home society, yesterday, besides the election of officers which was reported in The Herald last evening, the reports of the officers were read. These will be of general interest, for this is among the most important of the city's charities.

The report of the secretary was as follows:

"The work of the eighteenth year of the Duluth Children's Home society closed with Sept. 1, 1905, and the directors present to you, today, their annual reports.

"There have been fifteen regular and eight special meetings of the board with an average attendance of nine members present. The board of directors is an admirably organized body, whose successful operation is the result of experience and conscientious effort, and in the division of labor each department speaks through its committee.

"Last year we were able to report the progress and termination of our beautiful and serviceable new building but this year it is our grateful privilege to testify to the great benefit and blessing it has been, in enabling us to provide for and safely protect the large number of children who have been committed to our care. The spacious playrooms, dormitories and dining room, together with the large park ground adjoining have enabled us to give them the maximum of care and comfort with the minimum of labor and expense.

"During the last year the deliberations of the board have been presided over by the president, Mrs. R. N. Marble, whose zeal and ability are unquestioned. The promotion of the interests of the home is vital to her.

"As is well known, the spirit of this institution, during the last few years, dwells with the one extreme of life, childhood, and the committee on admission and dismissal will report to you, the number, condition, care and welfare of their charge. This committee requiring, as they possess, good judgment, discretion and executive ability.

"To the finance committee is committed the collection and the ways and means of providing funds for the society and to the treasurer the receipt, care and disbursement of the same, positions of large responsibility which have been ably filled.

"There remain three most inuprotant adjuncts of the work, the house, supply and clothing committees, for these minister to the actual material needs of this large household. Let the house mistress who looks after the welfare of a family of the average number—four or five—estimate the labor and responsibility of supplying food, fuel, clothing, house supplies and regulating the internal economy of a family of more than sixty persons.

"Thanks are extended to the auxiliary, who have so generously given their time and assistance in earing and providing clothing for the nursery.

"To the Q. F. U. society and the King's Daughters, who visit the home frequently and diffuse an atmosphere of energy, enthusiasm and great material aid, our hearty appreciation is expressed.

"In December we were most fortunate in securing the services as superintendent of Miss Wheeler, who came to us with highest recommendations for her ability and experience and who, during her nine months' service with us, has proven most satisfactory. To her unremitting care and ability is due the excellent physical condition of the inmates and the smooth running of the domestic machinery with scarcely a jar, and whose gentle influence upon the minds and characters of the children in whom she endeavors to instill the best mental and moral principles is recognized, not only in the home, but by the public.

"Upon the secretary devolves the grateful acknowledgement of gifts of time and service, continued in some cases since the beginning of the society of the advisory board, consisting of A. L. Ordean, Hon. J. D. Ensign, Wardwell Ames, Victor Stearns and George Spencer, together with J. L. Washburn, who has most generously given his time and advice.

"To our corps of leading physicians, Dr. Walker, Dr. Cheney, Dr. Linneman and Dr. DeSaulriers we are under heavy obligations and through whose unremitting services we deal hopefully with the illness unavoidably arising from the constantly varying admission of children, received from all sorts and conditions of population.

"To all whose Christian charity and benevolence in providing us with the means to keep the sick ward and dormitories constantly equipped, to the friend who so generously offered to meet the expense of the charity ball and to the newspapers that so freely and courteously give their space and attention to our needs, our grateful thanks are given.

"We have to chronicle three deaths during the past year, Violet Elmore, aged 9 months, from a complication resulting from whooping cough and measles.

"Violet Wilson, aged 11 years of appendicitis at St. Mary's hospital, and Edwin Nolan, aged 8 years of diphtheria.

"The board feels much gratified at the success of the charity ball of 1904, which was held in November, as is the custom, and the receipts from which assist us so materially in meeting the expenses of the home during the year.

"We would not fail to mention that unique organization, the Needlework Guild, which comes to such active life once each year and performs such prodigies of labor in so brief a period of activity. To them we are indebted for 450 articles of clothing. Will they accept our grateful thanks?

"Christmas in the Home is celebrated each year, contributions are generously donated by the merchants and citizens, thus enabling us to give to each inmate a service able gift besides simple toys. A turkey dinner is also provided with its appropriate accompaniments and the day has been made one of good cheer, peace and good will.

"So much for the past. The future is hidden from our view, yet we may look in that direction. We will never feel wholly at ease in regard to the welfare of the institution until steps are taken towards an endowment fund, with our larger building and its additional cost of living, we will ever feel dubious as to the result until esome permanent income is assured. We are planning a larger associate membership. Is it asking too much for a work the size of our and in a city as full of Christian women as ours to ask assistance from all in the burdens and pleasures of their work?

"We enter the nineteenth year of the work of the Children's Home society full of gratitude to all who have assisted us so kindly, full of courage and hope.

"May we always have powerful friends and strong workers and the wisdom rightly to care for those committed into our keeping. MAUD S. HAZEN,
"Secretary."

The Largest Circulation in Duluth

TO SUBSCRIBERS:

It is important when desiring the address of your paper changed to give both old and new addresses.

A LITTLE ABOUT US.

The Herald has lately doubled its pressroom facilities by adding a second perfecting press, which is now in full running order and has been accepted from the manufacturers. This makes two perfecting presses, with a combined capacity of 48,000 papers of 10 or 12 pages an hour or 24,000 papers 14 to 24 pages an hour, now operating daily in The Herald's pressroom.

With this addition, The Herald's plant may be called complete and ready for a continuance of the present growth of its business for some time to come. Indeed, while trying to be as modest about it as it is possible to be under the circumstances, The Herald is compelled to accept the word of those who know, that it has the finest, most modern, complete and convenient plant of any newspaper in any city of the country of twice the size of Duluth. This achievement has not been made all at once, but has been a matter of growth. Since the paper was installed in its new building two years ago everything that then proved to be lacking to bring the plant up to the highest state of perfection has been added, including this new press which the growing circulation of the paper made necessary. Within the past year, too, The Herald has added two double-magazine Mergenthaler linotypes, giving it a battery of ten machines, a number exceeded by only a few newspapers in the Northwest.

Within a few weeks, too, The Herald had acquired a complete new "dress" of head letter and advertising type, regarding which there has been much favorable comment by the press of the state. The composing room has been equipped with a large and complete assortment of the latest new faces of advertising type for the benefit of The Herald's advertisers. That the new equipment has added greatly to the beauty and effectiveness of the typography of The Herald there can be no doubt.

In a building constructed especially for its convenience, upon plans prepared after a thorough investigation of newspaper plants the country over, with its mechanical appliances of the most modern type and in profusion great enough to meet the demands of a growing business in a growing territory, The Herald feels that it is in good shape to hold its position at the head of the procession.

This equipment, while large enough and complete enough now and for some time to come, will be added to from time to time as rapidly as necessary, and no expense be spared at any time in keeping The Herald in the lead.

The same thing can be said of its news service, which is complete and in keeping with its mechanical equipment. While paying particular attention to Duluth and the Northwest, it will at all times, through the Associated Press and such other mediums as may be available, continue to keep its readers abreast of events in the world at large. Its local and Northwest service, however, will continue to be given special attention, and will be improved in the future as rapidly and as radically as it has in the past. It will continue to advocate things it believes to be for the benefit of Duluth and its tributary territory, and to be, as in the past, the particular organ of the people.

It is the growth of The Herald's circulation and business, of course, that not only makes possible these elaborate preparations for getting out a newspaper, but makes them necessary as well. The steady, healthy growth of the circulation of the paper, from its modest figures of a decade ago to its present total of more than 16,000, has been wholly without the stimulus of bribes and premiums, as The Herald has always believed that the use of such methods in building up a circulation is completely analogous to the practice of taking stimulants; the victim finds that he needs an ever increasing quantity of his particular stimulant, until finally he falls beneath its insidious ravages. Accompanying this growth in circulation there has been a very satisfactory increase in advertising patronage of all classes.

To its friends, both in Duluth and wherever The Herald may go, it extends now and at all times a cordial invitation to come in and look the plant over, and to make themselves free of The Herald's hospitality and its services. Aiming as it does to serve the people, it will always esteem as a favor and a privilege the opportunity of getting closer acquainted with its constituents, individually and generally.

THE PLATT TYPE.

New York ought to be proud of its two United States senators, in the light of recent events. On its amiable and jocular junior senator, Chauncey Mitchell Depew, life insurance developments have thrown much light of late. Upon the devoted head of the senior senator, Thomas Collier Platt, the fierce light of publicity has beaten for many a day. He is known for what he is—a politician of a type not too admirable yet entirely too common. A little incident has just taken place which throws a little more light of the same sort upon the grizzled head of the "Easy Boss."

It deals with the declaration of the senator that he is no longer a partisan of Governor Higgins. The reason he has frankly announced his opposition to the Republican governor of the Empire state is peculiarly enlightening as to the ideals and methods of the politician of the Platt type.

Platt worked faithfully for Higgins during the campaign. He says himself that he wrote 38,000 letters in his behalf, and he ought to know how many it was better than anybody else. But now, if Higgins seeks a renomination, he will oppose him.

He will not oppose him because he has been derelict in his official duties, nor because he has fault to find with his loyalty to the people, to the law and to his own conscience. No, indeed, that is not the stuff that the opposition of politicians of the Platt type is made of.

Senator Platt is interested in a New York hotel which includes a bar. It stands within 200 feet of a church. The New York law says that no excise license shall be granted for premises so located. The hotel people got the legislature to pass a bill giving them special exemption, and permitting the issuance of a license in their case, even though the hotel was within the proscribed distance from a church. Mr. Platt asked the governor to make the bill a law by his signature, and the governor refused to sign it.

That is why Platt is opposed to Higgins. He feels that the writing of those 38,000 letters was a wasted labor, when it will not result in the granting of a little favor like that. What if Higgins does believe that the law against saloons in such a location is a wise and beneficial law, as he evidently does? That is nothing to Platt. His political creed teaches that one good turn deserves another, even at the sacrifice of conscience and principle.

Men customarily act according to their lights, so that it is with politicians of the Platt type as it is with those of whom Watts the hymn-writer said:

"Let bears and lions growl and fight,
For 'tis their nature to."

A SIMPLE PROBLEM.

This matter of federal regulation of railway freight rates is not such a complicated and formidable problem as the railroads would have you believe. They have had a good deal to say, through their public mouthpieces, about the making of rates. They have pretty generally and pretty unanimously declared that it is ridiculous to think of the government making rates, when it now takes the utmost ingenuity of the highest grade of talent in the railroad business to make the rates. Furthermore, they say that if the government makes the rates it will not reduce them as fast as the railroads will, and that further, if the government makes the rates it will ruin the railroads.

A good deal of this talk is put out for the purpose of throwing dust in the eyes of the people, and of making them think the question is a terrifically complicated and dangerous one. Just one thing it is necessary to know to realize that this is not the case, and that is that none of the prevailing measures, approved by President Roosevelt and his party, such as the Esch-Townsend bill, propose to have the government make freight rates. Talk of that nature is merely to deceive.

All the federal regulation party wants is that the interstate commerce commission or some other competent federal body be given the right to substitute a fair rate for one which it finds to be unfair. That is, if a shipper is aggrieved by an exorbitant rate, and lays his case before the commission, and the commission finds his cause just and the rate unfair, it shall have the power to substitute a fair rate for it.

The interstate commerce commission's powers have been reduced by the courts so they can simply say a rate is unreasonable, without substituting a fair one. Its decision cannot become effective until the railroad has pushed the case through three federal courts and up to the supreme court of the United States. In the meantime the complaining shipper is still paying the unjust rate, and so are all other shippers similarly situated. If the courts uphold the commission, the complaining shipper must go back and begin all over again by suing for the excess freight he has paid during the pendency of the trial. With things this way, the railroads can practically defeat all attempts to correct an unjust rate, by tiring out complainants.

The demand is simply that the just rate substituted by the commission for an unjust rate shall become effective at once, instead of waiting several years for a weary round of court proceedings. Then the shipper who complains and all others similarly situated will get the benefit at once. This the railroads will say is as unjust for the road as the other method is for the shipper, but they would be protected from confiscatory rates by their right to a writ of injunction. The problem could be quickly settled if the railroads will quit trying to obscure the issue, and get down to sensible reasoning.

GAYNOR AND GREENE.

Every few days a couple of men named Gaynor and Greene get into the papers with something about their luxurious stay over in Canada while they are fighting efforts by the officers of the law of this country to get them back. Most people have but a vague idea what it is all about, and probably nine out of ten, if asked what anybody wanted them back in this country for, would not be able to tell.

For Gaynor and Greene have been able to keep up the fight against extradition for six years, which is a long time for the public to remember their offense, and which also indicates that this country has by no means a monopoly of vexatious delays of the law or of the almost superstitious veneration of hoary precedents and quibbling technicalities that too many courts possess.

Now the warrant for the extradition of these two men has been signed by the Canadian minister of justice, and their return to this country to meet the indictments from which they fled is assured. Either they have exhausted the supply of pretexts for impeding the law's progress, or their money has run out. They have exhibited a marvelous fertility of invention during the six years they have been fighting extradition. The case has been carried up to the king's privy council, the highest British court, and back again to Canada.

What are they wanted for? They are charged with frauds in connection with harbor improvements in Savannah, Ga., for being concerned in which the army engineer in charge of the work, Capt. Oberlin M. Carter, served nearly four years in prison. During the six years that have elapsed since the scandal broke out, while Capt. Carter has been suffering his punishment, Gaynor and Greene have been living in luxurious exile in Canada, employing lawyers to think up ingenious ways of delaying the execution of the law. Now, when Capt. Carter is through with his part of the punishment, they must come back and answer to the indictments against them, and perhaps, ultimately, suffer punishment.

If by any mischance their money has given out, they may have to accept speedy punishment. But the experience they have had in delaying the law, if they have the necessary funds, should enable them in this country to postpone the day of punishment indefinitely.

A DULUTH ZOO.

Early in the week The Herald published a brief communication from S. A. Thompson, presenting the suggestion that Duluth should have a "zoo" in which is displayed specimens of the animals of this region.

The suggestion, which was manifestly born of the recent convention of bears in the outskirts of the city, is a very good one, indeed. In line with the move to establish a "White City," a form of amusement designed to make the stay of visitors in the city more pleasant, this plan of Mr. Thompson's could, it seems likely, be carried out very nicely indeed.

The zoo need not be, at present, on a very elaborate scale. It would be enough, probably, to have in it specimens of the animals native to the surrounding woods. Mr. Thompson's suggestion was simply that a few of the confiding bears that have been wandering into the city be captured and placed on exhibition. That is good for a start, but the idea might be elaborated considerably at no very great expense, by offering rewards for the capture and presentation to the city of specimens of the various other animals that frequent this territory. Civilization is advancing apace, and though Duluth's bears have given her some notoriety by coming unexpectedly into the city in considerable numbers, the haunts of the wild beasts are drawing backward toward the wilder north every year.

Before they are quite gone—which will be at no very remote time—it would be a good idea to capture a few and make them a part of the "White City" exhibit; whether the experiment be confined to Mr. Thompson's suggestion and made to consist only of a few bears, or whether it set up the more ambitious aim of being a complete exhibition of the fauna of Northern Minnesota. The extent to which the plan is carried out might be left to the "White City" managers, or whoever it is—if anybody—that takes up the suggestion with a view to carrying it out.

By all means, at least there should be a little permanent colony of bears in Duluth, so long as they seem to like the place so well.

THE FIELD SURVEY

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat says: "The Dingley law is not perfect, but no one has yet succeded in finding its weak spots. A treasury surplus of nearly $9,000,000 in September is its latest development." But its commonest development consists of thousands of household deficits that speak still more loudly.

A zoo would be a very seemly addition to the attractions of the "White City," and the bears are fairly swarming in to apply for jobs in it.

The great trouble with making the Democratic fight against negro suffrage in Maryland a party issue elsewhere is that the Maryland Republicans, too, declared for white supremacy.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Fate and the railroads have not been against the 'Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch' company on this trip, and we will be able to play in Duluth," said W. K. Kingsley, advance man of "Mrs. Wiggs," who will be at the Lyceum next week, at the Spalding. "Two years ago we tried to make Duluth but failed in the attempt.

"We came up through the copper country, playing to indifferent houses, and gave the production in Ashland. After that we started for Duluth but met with delays on the railroad. There was a wreck, or something of the sort, and a man was killed. When the difficulties of travel were finally straightened out we found another company was playing an engagement at the Lyceum, and were forced to pass your city. We did not get here at all that year, or last season, either. Since then the successes we have met with in the large eastern cities have more than made amends for the rather small patronage that was accorded us in the West on the first tour, and this season we are enjoying a liberal patronage all along the line.

"Luther Burbank, the agricultural wizard of California, has named a gigantic new cabbage the 'Mrs. Wiggs,' after Anne Hegan Rice's heroine. If the Mrs. Wiggs cabbage is as great a success as the kindly woman whose name it bears, Mr. Burbank will have developed a remarkable vegetable. The company carries several head of cabbage on its property list and it is hoped by the management that in the near future the real Mrs. Wiggs cabbage may also be used. The original cabbage patch in Louisville is to be fenced off and preserved as a memorial of a unique and delightful creation. It is strange how the story writer and playwright can evolve a character whose sayings and doings are more familiar to the public than those of many of our greatest men. It must be remembered, however, that Mrs. Wiggs was quite a remarkable woman in adversity."

"The North and the South are not as neighborly as they ought to be," said Walter Kendrick of St. Paul, a native Southerner at the McKay. "The people of the North and of the South do not come in contact with each other as much as they should. It would be better for everybody concerned if they would visit back and forth more.

"I do not mean by this that they should call on each other frequently, as neighbors do, but, instead of going to the Atlantic coast or the Gulf of Mexico to spend their summers, the Southerners should come north and put in their time along the Great Lakes, and in the winter the Northerners, instead of going only to Florida and California, or to some foreign country, would do better to sojourn in the middle South, where they would get just as much enjoyment as they possibly could anywhere else, and probably more, and at the same time they would find the climate as agreeable as anywhere in the world. I am sure the Southerner could not ask for a more pleasant place to spend the hot months than at some of Lake Superior's picturesque resorts. If this practice of visiting back and forth were carried out, the country, as a whole, would be benefited. A firmer bond of sympathy and friendliness would be established.

"The Northerner is beginning to revolutionize business methods in certain parts of the South. He is beginning to realize more and more the money-making opportunities that exist in the lower tier of states, and is taking advantage of them. The real estate men from up here are getting into the South and applying their own business methods. There is nothing slow about them, and the South is reaping the benefits of their labors."

"The recent meeting of the commissioners of the coal owners' association, held at Columbus, Ohio, and the meeting of the bituminous operators to be held in Chicago in November, and the efforts being made by the national officers to perfect the miners' union, show that both sides are taking time by the forelock in strengthening their position when they meet in joint convention in Indianapolis next January, to agree or disagree on a scale of wages and conditions of employment for another term," said C. T. Robbins of Wilkesbarre, Pa., at the Spalding.

"In the event of a disagreement we are told to prepare for one of the greatest strikes in our history. There is one saving point, however, which deserves the serious consideration of both parties. The time has come when the paralyzing of the commercial interests of the country through gigantic strikes, with all the misery and suffering they entail, is justly looked on as almost criminal, and the party to the controversy who cannot go before the bar of public opinion and justify its position must in the end suffer defeat.

"I am optimistic enough to believe that when the joint convention meets both parties will be ready and willing to correct the errors of the past rather than break up the present method of adjusting wages and conditions, as appears in a long and ruinous struggle to establish an artificial supremacy. There can be no natural supremacy between employe and employer. The one is handmaid to the other and they must work together or not at all."

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of this date in 1885.

Herbert Leonard and Sarah J. Bromley were married last evening at the home of the bride's mother by Rev. Mr. Anthony. After supper there was dancing until a late hour.

Professor T. P. Brooke of Minneapolis passed through Duluth today on his way home from an Eastern trip. During the morning Mr. Brooke met many musicians here who are well acquainted with his talent as a composer of band music and he was strongly urged to settle in Duluth. It is believed he received such substantial encouragement that he is likely to come. At present he is director of a large musical organization in Minneapolis and is arranging music for several large publishing houses.

Postmaster Flynn left town today for a short business trip to St. Paul. He has returned his bond with two sureties thereon to Washington and may receive his commission about two weeks hence. He has appointed as deputy Charles T. Cash, who has had much experience in postal matters.

The attendance at the county fair last evening was large. The great hall was crowded with people, the ladies being well represented. The Duluth Glee club, composed of Messrs. McGowan, Doran, McWhorter and Burke sang two melodies, which were received with hearty applause. Hon. Ignatius Donnelly inspected the farm products with much interest. Mr. Donnelly was introduced to the assemblage by Col. George R. Stuntz and delivered an eloquent address.

At the city council meeting last evening Aldemen Truelsen, Markell, Daugherty, Kendall, Davis, Duncan, M. Carroll and J. R. Carroll were present. In the absence of Mayor Moore, Alderman M. Carroll presided. A communication was received from the newly organized Superior Short Line Railroad company, asking the council to take immediate action one way or another relative to granting said company right of way along and across certain streets at Rice's Point. Mr. Catlin, the attorney for the road, said the real object was to furnish the Omaha road with an entrance into Duluth and terminal facilities at this place. The matter was referred for immediate action to a special committee composed of Aldermen Markell, Truelsen, Duncan and Daugherty. Recorder Budden's report showed the receipts for the past month were $7,779.20; cash on hand July 1, $33,536.95; disbursements, $25,134.24. The clerk of the municipal court reported total receipts of $3,116.35 and orders issued for salaries $798.

Fire this morning destroyed the frame row on Lake avenue owned by Capt. James Lloyd and Fred Gilbert. The buildings burned were Lawry's saloon, Gilbert's grocery store, John Curry's saloon, McLennan & Clark's meat market, Capt. Lloyd's ferry office and a Chinese laundry. The total loss was about $9,000.

THE WEATHER

And yet another glorious day. What a wonderful string of days it has been! For a couple of weeks now the weather has been beautiful enough to make up for a full year of bad weather, if there had been such a thing or could be such a thing. Mr. Kicker has been saying every day that it was too good to last, that we should have to pay for it, and uttering sundry similar croakings, but now he has almost reached the point where he can permit himself the enthusiasm of admitting that it is not bad at all. He may even be able to weather a three days' northeaster without swearing that we haven't had a decent day all summer and fall.

The temperature in Duluth varied only 4 deg. in the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning. The maximum was 61 deg. and the minimum was 60 deg.

The outlook is good for a continuance of the fair weather over tomorrow. The local forecast says it will be partly cloudy and cooler, and that the winds will be fresh and brisk southwest to northwest. Says the weather man of general conditions:

The barometer is low from Lake Superior westward to British Columbia, but pressures have risen and it is somewhat cooler west and northwest of Nebraska. The barometer has also fallen throughout the lake region and Upper Mississippi valley accompanied by warmer weather and fresh to brisk southerly winds. Storm southwest warnings have been displayed since 10 o'clock last night, but were ordered down 10 a. m. today. Pressures are high over New England states with cooler in all Atlantic coast states. Very little rain fell, being confined to Florida, Assiniboia, British Columbia, Oregon and Washington.

Autumn and Its Message.

When our eyes light upon the first scarlet banner which the early maturing tree or shrub flings out to the autumn breezes we are dull of soul if we do not look upon it as a sign. Beautiful is that bit of crimson foliage and still more beautiful is the scene when the color spreads, and embroiders the hillsides and forests with strands of red and brown and gold that no human painter can ever equal. But all this gorgeous display is designed not for the eyes of man alone but for his heart as well.

Autumn hath not so many bards to sing its praises as hath the festive spring-time, but it carries its own peculiar message and has its own distinctive blessing. It is too often looked upon as the forerunner of winter's rigors and it too often induces a purely pensive mood. I know a man whose temperament is such that he begins as early as the month of April to dread the autumn. "This is a bright spring morning," you remark as you meet him. "Yes," is his lugubrious reply, "but it won't be long now before the days will begin to shorten and the winds of autumn will begin to blow." He has done this for so many years that he actually takes delight in these gloomy prognostications.

But why should not autumn as well as spring be a season of pure joy in physical existence? In these golden October days we may well repeat Longfellow's lines, who, singing of an autumn of long ago, says:

"There was that nameless splendor in the air,
That wild exhilaration everywhere
That make the passers on the city street
Congratulate each other as they meet."

The lassitude of the summer ought to yield to the tonic of this glorious season. With the blood tingling through our veins, with a new elasticity in our step we may not only be more civil than we have been to chance acquaintances on the street, but eager to be up and doing.

Indoor occupations and diversions grow more attractive now. The evening lamp brought earlier into requisition draws the members of the family together, and in countless homes groups made up of parents and children or of friends with congenial tastes pass profitable hours with books and games and in social converse. In the summer we seem to be forced to fritter away a good deal of time but somehow as autumn approaches our consciences smite us if we are not making good use of the swiftly passing days and of the fragments of time at our disposal.

Autumn is the season of harvesting and while the farmers are stacking their corn and bringing in the golden pumpkins we may well ask if a period of in-gathering ever comes to us, and, if so, what are the fruits which we pack away so carefully in our storehouses. Are we harvesting anything out of the labors of preceding seasons besides dollars and pleasure? Have you any more confidence in your fellow men, any more faith in God than you had a year ago? If you have not, may it not be well to begin at once to sow the kind of seed out of which those rich possessions shall fruit by and by?

For we cannot escape the fact that autumn signifies the hurrying forward of the year toward its completion. An ended cycle will soon be here. We are not to play the baby over the swift on-going of time. Neither, on the other hand, should we fail to heed the message of the autumn. Life is meant to ripen and mellow to its finish. We cannot count on an unending succession of happy days. What we must do we must do quickly and because we have only one life to live we must choose to do the things worth the doing, for, as a certain poet says, who has within a few weeks gone himself to the heavenly life bearing in his hands many sheaves garnered in years of worthy living:

The time is short. Then be thy heart a brother's
To every heart that needs thy help in aught;
Soon thou wilt need the sympathy of others.
The time is short.
Each thought resentful from thy mind be driven,
And cherish love by sweet forgiveness bought;
Thou soon wilt need the pitying love of heaven;
The time is short.

Highways and Byways of The Town.

The book agent was tall and slender, dark as to complexion and eyes, and rather handsome. His clothes were in keeping with his distinguished appearance, and his manner, before he opened his mouth, might lead one to infer that he was a gentleman bringing in a society item about his wife's 5 o'clock tea.

It lacked only twenty minutes of being 3 o'clock, the busiest time of the day in the editorial rooms of an afternoon paper. The reporters were noisily pounding their typewriters, and scarcely taking time to glance toward the open window across the was, where twenty or thirty telephone girls were chewing gum and lazily moving plugs about in the vicinity of mysteriously twinkling electric lights.

The stranger fixed his piercing black eyes on the face of the nearest man, and began to talk.

"I have here," he said, "something I desire the privilege of giving you for absolutely nothing. It is free; it will not cost you a cent. I am making this special offer in this city this week, and in this city alone."

The reporter stopped his work long enough to pick up one of the miniature magazines tossed on his desk.

"Duluth, I suppose, is the only city in the universe receiving such consideration at the hands of your company," he had the temerity to remark.

The dark eyes looked at him with such a world of pity and reproach, not to say disgust, in their depths, that the newspaper man felt deeply humbled and abashed, and wished that he had kept silent. He even considered making an apology, but before his slow-moving mind had a chance to fully decide the important question, the book agent spoke again.

"My boy, I speak truly," he volunteered coldly, almost disdainfully. "I am making the offer in this city this week—in some other city next week." He paused long enough to allow the full significance of his words to sink deeply into the mind of the frightened youth, who was probably fully three years younger than the agent, and then proceeded:

"I give you the magazine, and I give you the twelve books free. I ask from my heart that you take them as a present. The regular price of the magazine, the best published, is $4 a year. The books, giving scores of selections from the best foreign authors of today, tomorrow and yesterday, usually sell for $10 a set. I make you a present of the $14 outfit. Will you take it as a gift from me?"

It was easy to see that the agent would consider as a great personal favor the acceptance of his offer. It seemed a genuine pleasure to accommodate him. His beautiful eyes were so full of entreaty and love for the human race, and, withal, were so very compelling, that, under their magic spell, one would scarcely dare to even think of disobeying his commands. But just at that moment both telephone bells mercifully rang at the same time, and the trusting reporter came halfway out of his trance.

"How much of a cash present do you expect to balance the present you are going to make me," said the youth, whose eye had caught the titles of five or six books, a set of Stevenson's works, long coveted.

Again came that look of reproach to the face of the book agent. A cloud of sorrow filled his eyes. Emotion almost made him choke. The newspaper man privately informed himself that he was a brute to thus insult the visitor by mentioning so gross a thing as money in his presence. Probably his private secretary attended to all such matters.

"I give you the $10 set of books and the $4 subscription to the magazine," continued the book agent, when he had so far regained control of his outraged feelings that he could proceed in a manner which would not be guilty of allowing his listener to realize how deeply his, the listener's words had offended him, the book agent. "I also give you this $12 set of Stevenson's works, magnificently bound, beautifully put together, and printed with the finest type on the finest book paper obtainable. That makes $26 I am giving you, and all I ask is $1. You do not need to pay me the dollar. I do not want it. I would not take it, in fact, if you shoved it to me. Pay it to the man when he delivers the books. Your subscription to the magazine will begin at once."

"And how many monthly payments?"

"Twelve, and only a dollar each. A dollar surely cannot break you."

The book agent laughed lightly. His manner showed that he knew a man of the reporter's appearance must certainly be earning about $30 a week. A dollar break him? No wonder the book agent laughed at his own joke. The idea so well fixed as the reporter hesitating even for a moment about accepting so liberal an offer. Why, it wouldn't bother him to buy a 10-cent cigar and tell the clerk to keep the change from the dollar. That was his style, exactly.

The reporter could see that the book agent firmly believed this to be a fact. It would be too bad to disabuse his mind of that highly commendable opinion, and, besides, he did want that set of Stevenson, and the magazine was a pretty good one, as magazines go, and the foreign authors might prove themselves to be entertaining on some stormy winter evening. The reporter flushed with shame to think that he might possibly have incurred the displeasure of the book agent by keeping him away from his duties so long.

The book agent slid a piece of paper under his victim's nose.

"Sign here," he sternly commanded.

"See here, I don't want to butt in," came a voice from behind, "but if you have any talking to do I wish you would come around after 3 o'clock to do it. You had better get out now; the boys are busy."

It was the city editor.

The big hand of the clock had almost reached an upright position, and still the reporter's "story" was on his machine, only half finished. He looked to see the gentlemanly book agent collapse with mortification and beat a hasty retreat. Probably he never would come into the office again. Too bad to offend such a decent sort of a chap. He was such a genuine gentleman that his feelings might easily be injured by the lightest word.

But the book agent didn't collapse. He didn't even show any sign of being hurt, and there was no indication of ill feeling on his handsome features. He smiled obligingly, bowed his willingness to depart and overlook the rudeness of the city editor in thus breaking in upon a friendly chat.

"Certainly, certainly," he said. "I am sure I beg your pardon. I did not realize that I was at all interfering with the work of your staff. I shall drop around later in the day."

The city editor disappeared within his sanctum. The book agent took a quick step toward the reporter. His obliging smile was a thing of the past.

"Sign here," he ordered. His voice had a ring of earnestness to it. Disobedience might mean all sorts of terrible things.

"Come around about 4 o'clock," said the reporter. "The presses will be waiting for this copy in about two minutes."

"Sign now," came the commanding voice again. "It is a very simple matter. Just put your name on this line. The books will be delivered here next week."

"But I don't want them delivered here. Take them up to the house."

"All right, anywhere you say, only put your name on that line."

"But I want to think it over for a few minutes. Give a man a little time, can't you?" said the reporter plaintively. He felt like getting down on his knees and begging for a brief respite. The window was open. He wondered if it would hurt him very badly if he flung himself out. It wouldn't be so bad if he could strike on his head and die immediately. Then he would not have to face the book agent with an explanation of his strange conduct.

"You can do it better now than any other time," persisted the dark-eyed one. "Only think, $26 worth for $1! One dollar a month can't break you."

The reporter grew desperate. It didn't seem right to take men of such refinement by the neck and kick him out of the room.

"You had better get out before the city editor appears on the scene a second time," he said, making his voice as savage as his evident fear of the assertive individual would permit.

"It will take only about two seconds for you to put your name here."

"I don't know yet that I want the books."

"But you do want them. Remember you are getting $14 worth for nothing. This is an opportunity you cannot afford to miss. Any man in the office will tell you the same thing. For nothing, mind you, and only $1 a month for the books. Any man can stand $1 a month. I am selling twenty sets a day.

"Here, put your name on this line. That's right. Now place your residence address here. Thanks. You will get the books next week. Pay the man who delivers the books $1. Good-bye."

The reporter looked guiltily around to see if any one had witnessed his downfall, and then turned and began fiercely to pound his typewriter, registering a mental vow that he would kill the deliverer of the books if, instead of taking them to the house, he brought them to the office while there was any one else in sight.

Wounds, Bruises and Burns.

By applying an antiseptic dressing to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, they may be healed without maturation and in about one-third the time required by the old treatment. This is the greatest discovery and triumph of modern surgery. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principle. It is an antiseptic and when applied to such injuries, causes them to heal very quickly. It also allays the pain and soreness and prevents any danger of blood poisoning. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money, not to mention the inconvenience and suffering such injuries entail. For sale by all leading druggists.

DANISH CAVALRY DOES GOOD WORK

Goes Afoot at Early Hour and Catches Prince Asleep.

Copenhagen, Oct. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The heir presumptive, Prince Christian, is being bantered not a little about an adventure in the maneuver field. His royal highness commanded the Twenty-eighth infantry, and it had been agreed that the Third dragoons, assisted by a battery, was to fight his men to a bloodless death, or else suffer defeat by the prince's troops.

The prince, like many another royal martinet, calculated that his opponent, Col. Muinthe, would be so courteous as to allow him his usual beauty sleep, and he snored and snored until some time after sunrise, having given orders that he be waked at 6 o'clock. "At 7," he had said to his officers, "we will make for the enemy."

Whether the colonel knew the prince's disposition, we cannot say, anyhow he was in the saddle at 3 sharp, and at 4 o'clock his dragoons began to attack the enemy's infantry, occupying the village of Galt, between Aarhus and Silkeborg. The prince's infantry fought well and hard, and after a tremendous struggle succeeded in "throwing" the horsemen. But while the fight was in progress, 100 dragoons dismounted, and creeping stealthily upon the chief farm of the village, where Prince Christian slept, surrounded it on all sides. The prince had only a corporal's guard to protect him, and it was soon made prisoner, whereupon the commanding lieutenant burst into his royal highness' bedroom and declared him prisoner of war.

Good-natured King Christian laughed at the accident, but the crown prince was very wroth, and read his son a powerful lecture on the beauties of early rising and general circumspection. Christian, on the other hand, praises his caprors, and says he is glad that the Danish cavalry's reputation for quick and secret action has once more been demonstrated. It will be remembered that in the wars of 1848 and 1864 the Danish cavalry arranged some very remarkable surprise parties.

WILDCAT STORIES

About Norwegian Affairs Printed In the London Papers.

Christiania, Oct. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Our statesmen cannot understand why an otherwise reliable paper like the London Standard should indulge in such wildest stories regarding Norwegian affairs as it published of late. If the false information spread would be confined to Standard readers, it would not matter, as the Standard's circulation is limited and as the paper is generally taken by people not easily excited. But the Standard's news is regarded as authorative, and so it happens that ill reports printed in that paper gain circulation all over the world, American correspondents especially, helping to spread them.

Your correspondent was informed by a leading authority that the London paper's report that the armament of the war port, Horten, on Christiania Fjord, "was being hurried day and night," was misleading. It is the governments duty, of course, to be prepared for all emergencies, but undue haste, tending to be provocative, has never been indulged in. The same authority also denies that the Swedish warships at any time during the negotiations, "made clear for action." That, during the same period, several great powers offered their good services as mediators, is likewise denied.

NAPOLEON CULT

Seems to Have a Firm Hold on the Scandinavians.

Christiania, Oct. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Alexander L. Kieland, author of "Garman and Worse," etc., has written a historical novel, "Napoleon," which is selling by the thousands. The Scandinavian people don't seem to get enough of Napoleon, as the big sale of Napoleon literature proves. Kieland has once before paid his compliments to the great Corsican in the romance "Blucher." Another well-known work on Napoleon is Mathilda Malling's new romance, issued in Copenhagen. Matilda Malling, by the way, was born a Swede, but writes in Danish.

SWEDES AND AMERICANS

Are Supplying Rifles and Ammunition to the Finns.

Stockholm, Oct. 7.—Special to The Herald.)—Additional news regarding the mysterious steamer that foundered near the island of Kalosher, Finland, indicate that Finnish patriots, or other enemies of the czar, now in Sweden and the United States, were masters of the vessel and contents.

On the morning after the catastrophe, the sea near the island was found to be strewn with rifles. Among other warlike instruments three boxes containing American revolvers were found among the wreckage.

That the Finnish refugees in Sweden are not uninterested in the vessel is evident from the fact that at least one of the life boats found was of Swedish origin, lately built in this country. Happily, or unhappily for the crew, all perished when the vessel sank, owing to an explosion in the hold, probably in the ammunition chambers when the vessel ran upon the rocks.

PRINCE KNUT

Gets Off Another Good One to His Mother.

Copenhagen, Oct. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Either an "anarchist" must have been talking to little Prince Knut, son of Prince Christian, or that precocious youngster has a wonderfully matured judgment.

His mother had examined him the other day to see whether he had learned his lessons, as he stoutly avowed to have.

"What is a monarchy?" she asked.

"Monarchy is a hereditary disease," replied the youngster promptly. Even Voltaire could not have given a better answer.

HELSINGFORS IS WITHOUT ALCOHOL

Not a Place Licensed to Sell Wine, Beer or Liquor.

Helsingfors, Oct. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Swedish, Danish and British anti-alcohol agitators are arriving here in large numbers to study "the alcohol free city" for Helsingfors has not got a single saloon, restaurant, hotel or cafe licensed to sell a drop of wine, beer or liquor. The situation was created by the following combination of circumstances:

To put a stop to the reckless exploitation of the people by Russian agents, bent only upon increasing the consumption of alcohol for the benefit of the czar's pocket, the city fathers recently decided to create a monopoly for the sale of liquor, which was to be entrusted to a company composed of Finnish stockholders, and the profit of which should go to the poor. The governor of Finland, bribed by the liquor element, refused to sanction the ordinance, and the municipality could do nothing but protest against the governor's veto to the senate. While this protest is undecided the municipality refuses to issue liquor licenses and, all of them running out Oct. 1, the unusual situation announced was created.

So far the city fathers had it all their own way, but now come the hotel and restaurant keepers and say: "If we are not allowed to sell liquor, we won't sell meals either." The restaurant keepers, accordingly, then closed their doors and the hotel keepers turned themselves into lodging providers only. It remains to be seen who holds out longest. The strenuous city fathers or the amusement loving people and others who are compelled to dig out.

The municipality has not yet decided whether temporary licenses shall be issued to the wholesale liquor dealers.

IS NORWAY A KINGDOM?

Or Did It Cease to Be One Last June?

Christiania, Oct. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The several European powers ruled by kings make it a point to emphasize the fact that Norway is still a kingdom. In all official communications the word "royal" is used ad nauseam, and it looks as if the foreign writers could not get enough of it.

Gasberg, the Radical lawyer, and Pastor Eriksen, the Socialist, upbraid the government for accepting such communications, and insist that Norway is no longer a kingdom; that it ceased to be a kingdom on June 7, "when Oscar received his walking papers." The two men are traveling about the country addressing the masses in behalf of the republic, and filling them with disgust and distrust of royalty.

Your correspondent is bound to say that the organs of the government disavow all extreme measures, and will have nothing to do with such extremists as Gasberg and Eriksen.

FOUR MORE SOCIALISTS

Are Elected In Sweden and the Tories Are Indignant.

Stockholm, Oct. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Tory papers and the industrial barons are as surprised as they are indignant because four more Socialists have been made people's representatives. Chief among them is Socialist Christianson, the editor, who won a notable victory in Helsingborg. Against the election of this ardent fighter for the cause of democracy, the Jingoes will appeal to the courts. They charge "colonizing," claiming that the suburbans, recently annexed by Helsingborg, had no right to vote. Furthermore, they say that the editor is not a Swedish citizen. This latter objection seems to have very little foundation in fact, for, though Christianson is a native of Finland, both his parents were Swedes.

Fear of the projected anti-strike law probably helped Mason Leksoll to win the seat of the Liberal. Olsson, in Gefle, the mining district. Leksoll is a well-known Socialist. Two other new representatives, elected in the district, are Radical Liberals, fighting for universal franchise, Lector Starback and Editor Lindh. Their opponents were both known as enemies of organized labor.

The workmen also contributed largely to the defeat of another enemy of organized labor, Waldenstrom. The latter belongs to a sect that opposes the state church, but his superior Christianity did not prevent him from advocating war with Norway. At Gefle the workingmen, principally miners, had it all their own way, and democracy was the watchword on the lips of the masses. Other Socialists whose names will be often mentioned in future are Eriksson Bernhardt, Smedjebacken-District, and L. T. Carlsson, Kalix district. All these Socialists were selected on a platform demanding universal franchise and peace.

MISSING HORSE IS LOCATED

Believed That Some Malicious Person Turned Animal Loose.

Spite is believed by the police, to have been the cause of the supposed theft of Henry Goodson's horse from the stable Thursday night.

The animal was found yesterday afternoon, by Detective Schulte in a barn on First street, where it had been left by a stranger, who said he had found it wandering about the streets with the halter dragging.

As soon as the owner of the barn heard of the theft he reported to headquarters that the horse was in his stable, and it was turned over to its owner last evening.

As the horse could not possibly have opened the door itself, it is believed that some person, either out of maliciousness or idle mischief, opened the stable door and released the horse.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Favorable Reports Predominate In All Parts of Country.

New York, Oct. 7.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Favorable trade reports still predominate and there is no anxiety regarding the future. Higher temperatures checked retail distribution of heavy wearing apparel and other seasonable merchandise, but preparations for unprecedented fall and winter trade continue without diminution. Superlatives are needed in commenting on real estate transactions, building permits, bank exchanges and railway earnings, and failure statistics for the third quarter show a very low commercial death rate. Quarterly records back to 1875 disclose no three-month period when the ratio of liabilities to solvent payments through the clearing houses was lower than the 62 cents to $1,000 just recorded, while the average loss to each firm in business of $15,26 was less than in any year except in 1881. Industrial activity increases, a large tonnage of new business assuring full time at the steel mills still further into next year. Footwear shops show much heavier shipments than in 1904, and the textile factories are well engaged. Better crop news weakened cotton and grain prices slightly, but there was enormous profits to the growers even if quotations go still lower. No serious weakness is feared, no matter how large the production, owing to the interest of exporters. Latest reports of railroad earnings in September show a small gain of 7 per cent over last year's figures, and foreign commerce at this port provides an increase of $2,178,289 in imports, and a gain of $222,891 in exports as compared with the same week of 1904. Strength prevails in the hide market, despite increased receipts of cattle and some deterioration owing to the longer hair that is a seasonable factor at Northern points. Leather is strong.

Commercial failures this week in the United States are 195 against 240 last week, 205 the preceding week and 222 the corresponding week last year. Failures in Canada number twenty-two against twenty-one last week, thirty-four the preceding week and twenty-five last year.

RIESLAND WINS CASE

A. L. Lindquist Loses $10,000 Malpractice Suit.

Jury Takes But Thirty Minutes to Deliberate Over Evidence.

A. J. Lindquist lost his $10,000 malpractice suit against D. W. Riesland, chiropractor. The case was given to the jury late yesterday afternoon, and in thirty minutes a verdict was returned in favor of Mr. Riesland.

Lindquist claimed that he had been permanently crippled and his health ruined by reason of spinal treatment at the hands of Mr. Riesland. He alleged in his complaint and in his testimony that Mr. Riesland stretched him on a traction table and hammered his backbone with either his fist or a hammer in the attempt to break up an alleged condition, called ankylosis of the spine, or the growing together of several vertebrae.

Mr. Riesland claimed that he did not use violence, that he manipulated the spine with his hands, did no striking, and that he could have accomplished a cure had Lindquist stuck to the treatment.

The case attracted much interest, for the reason that it is the first instance that a malpractice case involving chiropractic treatment has been brought into court. Following out supreme court rulings, the trial judge refused to permit testimony by regular physicians in criticism, or in the way of opinion, as to chiropractic or its relation to Lindquist's treatment, on the ground that the "regulars" are of a different school than the chiropractics.

The court also held that as the state legislature has not provided for the licensing of chiropractics, there is no license required of them.

Mr. Lindquist was represented by J. H. Whitely and Paul Thompson, and Mr. Riesland by John Jenswold, Jr.

Among the witnesses for Mr. Riesland was Oakley G. Smith, a chiropractic from Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

REPUBLICANS NAME HUGHES

As a Candidate For the Mayor of New York.

New York, Oct. 7.—Charles F. Hughes, principal counsel for the committee of the legislature to investigate insurance affairs, was last night unanimously nominated as the candidate for mayor of New York by the Republican city convention in Carnegie hall. The other nominations were: Richard Young of Brooklyn, for controller, and James L. Wells of the Bronx for president of the board of aldermen.

Former Lieut. Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff was chosen temporary chairman of the convention. Senator Page read the platform, which embraced a denunciation of the Democratic municipal administration, an affirmation of the principle of non-partisanship in municipal affairs, a demand for the passage by the next legislature of laws for the protection of life insurance policy holders and a more rigid official scrutinizing of life insurance companies, the control of future subways by the municipality and the establishment of a municipal lighting plant.

Senator Elseberg, in placing Mr. Hughes' name in nomination, said: "I said that in presenting to this convention the suggestion I am about to make we must have no thought that the man whom I shall name will give time to the work of the campaign. We shall ask no time from him. We believe that the most eloquent campaign addresses that he can make are the questions he is daily putting to the witnesses before him. We insist that whatever the action we may take tonight, it shall not deter him from relentlessly pursuing every evildoer, high or low, Republican or Democrat."

"It's Hughes, it's Hughes," the delegates shouted, and then for fully two minutes the convention became wildly enthusiastic.

A similar demonstration greeted the formal announcement of the name of Mr. Hughes by Mr. Elsberg and the band played "Hail to the Chief" and the "Star Spangled Banner."

On motion of Herbert Parsons that the vote be made unanimous, the secretary cast a single vote for Charles E. Hughes.

Mr. Hughes was asked later if he had any statement of his position to make for publication.

"There's just nothing now," he said.

PASSES OVER ITS ROAST

County Board Takes No Action on New Courthouse Matter.

Only Reference to Grand Jury Report Was Toolhouse Episode.

With all the commissioners present except Charles Knüppl, who is serving as a petit juror at the present term of district court, the county board in meeting yesterday took no action referring in any way to the new courthouse. The only reference made to the recent grand jury report was by Commissioner McInnis, who jokingly remarked that Commissioner Kugler might move the toolhouse on the Max farm to the vacant lot at the rear of the jail and that the county could store in it some of the records which the grand jury reported as stacked away in the jail basement and liable to destruction.

Commissioner Kugler said he would put the toolhouse right on the courthouse square if the board would pass a resolution directing him to do so and suggested that there must be some toolhouses in other commissioner districts that were built with county funds and of which there are no records on the books.

The board voted that no money shall be expended on county roads, except where the work is done under the supervision of a road foreman, regularly appointed and confirmed by the commissioners, and the work has been previously ordered. This resolution was adopted because several bills for county road work have been presented, certified to by the persons doing the work.

The appointments of the following road foremen were confirmed: C. Olson, Tower and Itasca road; Barney Eaton, Eaton road, and C. Ryan, Sturgeon Lake road.

The appointment of Martin Steffen by Commissioner Kugler as foreman on the Calvary road was confirmed.

A committee comprised of the whole board was appointed to look after the construction of the St. Louis river bridge at Floodwood, with power to put in certain protection piling, if found necessary, for one of the approaches, the work not to interfere with the bridge contract. The committee was also authorized to appoint an inspector if deemed necessary.

Four commissioners were first suggested on this committee, but Commissioner McInnis claimed that as long as there has been a question raised as to whether the correct measurements were made of the river where the bridge is being built the whole board should look into the matter. He created some little amusement by suggesting that it might not be a bad idea to invite the grand jury to go along with the committee.

After adjournment last evening the members of the board left for Floodwood to inspect the bridge construction.

Fashionable Jewelers, 315 West Superior Street

CONVENTION IS AT HAND

State Gathering of Baptists Will Be Opened Monday.

Sessions Will Be Held Every Day Until Saturday.

Some of the leading Baptists of the West will be present at the forty-sixth annual convention of that denomination in this state, which will open at Pilgrim Congregational church, Duluth, Monday.

Clergymen and laymen from all over the state and out of it will be present so that the attendance at the convention will probably be about 300. Two hundred and fifty visitors are expected.

The local Baptists decided that they had no house of worship large enough to accommodate so large a gathering and it was decided to secure the use of Pilgrim church from the Congregationalists. This was done and the sessions of the convention will accordingly be held in the home of the Congregationalists.

Members of the many local committees have completed arrangements for the entertainment of the delegates to the convention, during their stay in the city. The delegates from the Twin Cities and the southern part of the state will be met at Hinckley, Monday, by the local committee and before the train has reached Duluth, the visitors will have been assigned to the homes at which they will stay until after Friday evening, when the convention ends.

The opening session of the convention will be held Monday evening, when Carey B. Emerson of Minneapolis, will preside as moderator. The formal address of welcome on behalf of the local Baptists and the city will be made by Z. D. Scott and the response will, in all probability, be made by Mr. Emerson. The annual sermon will be given on the opening night of the convention, and by Rev. L. A. Crandall, D. D., who is said to be one of the ablest preachers in the state of Minnesota.

As the theme of the convention will be "Efficiency," the address to be made before the convention Tuesday morning by Rev. C. F. Bronson, who will discourse on "True Efficiency—What It Is," will be particularly interesting. The other speakers will work up along this theme and the result will undoubtedly be some very interesting and helpful addresses.

One or more addresses will be given at almost every session of the convention, and by some of the brightest lights of the denomination. Among these are Rev. Eric B. Hulburt, D.D., dean of the divinity school of the University of Chicago; Rev. Dr. S. T. Fowler of Minneapolis; Rev. Dr. Williams, who represents the home missionary society of the Northwest; Rev. R. R. Pope, superintendent of the state missions; Rev. W. B. Riley, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist church, Minneapolis; Rev. Theodore Heysham, Ph.D., pastor of the Central Baptist church, Minneapolis; Rev. S. T. Ford, D.D., and Rev. Frank Peterson, D.D., of Minneapolis.

The first session of the convention will be devoted largely to an exchange of greetings by the visiting and local Baptists, and the giving of addresses. Tuesday morning some committee reports will be heard and a number of carefully prepared addresses delivered.

The Women's home and foreign missionary work will probably take up most of the time at the Tuesday afternoon session. Addresses are to be made by Mrs. C. A. Salquist and Miss Gerda Paulson.

The election of officers will take place Wednesday, when, also, addresses will be delivered by the state convention missionaries. The convention will also discuss the affairs and transact the business of the Minnesota Baptist Education society, and in the afternoon listen to the reports of the evangelistic committees. Four eloquent addresses on evangelism will be delivered by some of the leading pastors.

The report of the convention board and Rev. G. Nygren's address on "Northwestern Minnesota," will be heard at the session to be held Wednesday evening.

Thursday will be a busy day for the Baptists. Then committee reports will be heard, Sunday school work discussed, and a debate held on the question, "Resolved, that the Sunday school should be supported by the church." A. J. Hoag will have the affirmative and A. Bousfield will have the negative.

There will be no session of the convention Thursday afternoon, but there will be a board meeting. An evening session will be held, however. The report of the treasurer and financial committee will be made to the convention Friday morning, the last day of the gathering. Pillsbury academy and the Baptist Young People's union will come up for discussion in the afternoon. The final session will be held Friday evening.

A quartet, which has been drilled by Prof. A. F. M. Custance, will sing every evening during the convention, giving the compositions of Prof. Custance largely. Solos will also be given. Grayce Frances Turner is the soprano; Mrs. C. B. Gilbert, the alto; A. Rudolph Bjorkquist, tenor, and C. H. Giddings, bass. The accompanist is Mrs. J. O. Milne.

WHEAT IS VERY DULL

Trading Light and Market Sags, With Northwest Weakest.

Flax Offerings Heavy and Decline In Price Results.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 7.—Wheat was very dull and heavy today and trading was light in volume in all markets. The weather continues exceptionally favorable in the Northwest and wheat is moving as fast as railroads can care for it. The general sentiment is that only the concentrated holdings in the Chicago market are holding the price. Liverpool closed unchanged to ½d lower, Paris ½@¾c lower and Berlin ½c lower and Budapest ¾c higher.

The December option in the Duluth market closed ⅝c lower, and also in Minneapolis, ½-⅝c lower in Chicago and Kansas City, ½c lower in New York, and ¼-⅜c lower in St. Louis. Winnipeg closed ½c lower.

Broomhall estimates world's shipments to be reported Monday at 9,600,000 bus.

Stocks of wheat at Duluth this week are expected to show little change.

Corn in the Chicago market closed ⅛c higher for December and at Liverpool ¼-½d higher. December oats in Chicago closed ⅛c higher.

Car receipts of wheat were 272 at Duluth, against 208 last year, and at Minneapolis 557 against 568 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 829 against 776 last year. Chicago reported 61, last year holiday. Winnipeg received 115 cars, of which 25 graded No. 1 northern, and 107 No. 2 northern. The total last year was 571 cars.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,232,000 bus, last year, holiday. Shipments 455,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 490,000 bus. Shipments 281,000 bus.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was dead. December opened ⅛c lower at 89¾c and fell to 89¾c, closing there, a loss of ⅝c. The May option opened ⅛c lower at 84⅞c, and fell to 84⅛c, closing there, a loss of ¾c.

Cash wheat continued in nothing more than fair demand and 1¢ over December was the price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was active and heavy, although the opening was firm. Offerings were large and they came steadily through the session. The buying demand was good, but the offerings filled it. October opened ½c higher at 90¾c, and fell steadily to the close which was at 87½c, a loss of 1¾c. November opened ⅛c higher at 89¾c and fell to 87⅝c, which was the close, a loss of 1½c. December also fell 1⅝c, closing at the November price. May fell 1⅝c to $1.06.

Oats advanced ⅛c, and rye was unchanged.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Profit Taking By Small Holders Causes Easier Tone In Wheat.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—Profit taking by small holders caused an easier tone in the wheat market here today. Failure of the wheat market at Liverpool to respond to the sharp advance yesterday was one of the main reasons for the bearish sentiment. Continued clear weather in the American northwest was another depressing factor. December opened 5c to 1⅛c 8c lower at 84@84⅝c to 85c. After touching 81⅝@83c, the price rallied to 85@85c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 839 cars, against 1,145 cars last week and a holiday a year ago.

As a result of fair support from a leading bull, the market held steady the last half of the session. For December the highest point of the day was reached at 85¾. The close was steady, with December off 1⅝@1¾c at 81⅝@83c.

Trading in the corn market was of small volume. Higher prices at Liverpool offset the effect of ideal weather for the new crop. As a result the market had a steady undertone. December opened unchanged at 44½c, sold off to 44¼@44¾c, and then rallied to 44⅝c. Local receipts were 200 cars with 67 of contract grade.

The market closed steady, with December up a shade at 44⅝@45c.

Liberal receipts had a weakening influence in oats. The feature of the trading was active selling by cash houses. December opened unchanged at 28¾c and sold off to 28¼c. Local receipts were 385 cars.

Buying of October pork by shorts caused a firm tone in the provisions market. January pork was up 2½c at $12.45. Lard was up 2½c to 5c at $6.87½ to $6.90. Ribs were 2½c up at $6.20.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Today's market proved to be a narrow affair, yesterday's activity and strength not being in evidence at any time. The early weakness brought out support from the leading elevator concern, which rallied prices to about yesterday's closing figures, prices finally easing off with the closing ½@⅝c lower for the day. News that in any way could affect the market was as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth, trade dragging along, seemingly having gotten back to its old former dull rut. The speculative situation, however, still looks unchanged. While the market is narrow, support seems always in evidence, and we feel we would continue to stick to the buying side on recessions.

Corn closed unchanged after a dull and disappointing day. Trade was not at all active, the market range clearly indicating the slowness of the trade. The stubborn strength seems to reflect a pretty well sold out condition of the market. Our leading elevator concerns popularly believed to have accumulated a large line. It has been popular for some time to sell the new crop, which has resulted in what looks like an over-sold condition. A spell of wet weather would cause a hasty scampering, which might develop into the stampede of shorts. On the soft spots, we continue to feel friendly to the buying side.

Oats—While trade conditions show but little improvement, the speculative market made a little gain for the day. A splendid cash and export demand which is being done in a quiet way, will, we feel, in time result in a broader and higher market for oats.

Chicago Record Herald: Exporters are in a serious tangle as the result of the congestion east of Buffalo. All of the railroads of that section are simply smothered with business and have gone to the hitherto unheard of extremity of refusing freight at published tariffs even subject to indefinite delay. In the past it has been a practice of the roads there to pay storage and insurance on grain where they were unable to furnish cars to carry it on from Buffalo. This they now refuse to do, and only one road offered to book freight yesterday if the owner would pay the storage and other charges. Knight McDougall had the following last night from their New York house: "All roads still refusing to book freight and elevators at Buffalo fast filling up." Exporters have for several days been skirmishing to get spot grain at the seaboard to fill ocean freight charters for urgent loading, although at the same time having large quantities of grain blocked in between New York and Buffalo. The condition will prove a serious blow to New York as an exporting point.

Chicago Inter-Ocean: Winnipeg is doing the exporting business in wheat. Four hundred thousand bushels were sold yesterday for direct export, including 80,000 from Montreal for October shipment. It was also claimed that 300,000 bushels had been worked by Baltimore. In three days sales aggregated 750,000 bushels. The price yesterday was the lowest of the season, 10 cents under New York December C. F. I. Buffalo. The trade is keenly conscious this as a bullish factor, thinking that at this rate the Manitoba wheat will soon be out of the way and the United States wheat holders will then have a show.

The Missouri October report makes corn conditions 88, against 95 last month and 91 a year ago. Crop 2,33-,000,000 bushels against 2,55,000,000 bushels last month and 1,77,000,000 bushels a year ago. The government September estimate was 2,57,000,000 bushels, 92 per cent safe from frost. Condition of wheat sown, 92, against 92 a year ago.

Pringle, Fitch & Rankin, Chicago: A Toronto exporter wires: "Trade in any quantity in wheat has been very dull of late. We are in a desperate condition with blockading, and our advantage is becoming unbearable and will result in lower price. We cannot see anything in the situation to warrant higher prices. World's shipping is large. It is a fact that wheat in Canada is selling 1c under the price in Chicago."

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR

The Market Closed With Easier Tone Throughout the List.

Bank Statement Was Fully as Unfavorable as Expected.

New York, Oct. 7.—Stocks showed some strength with the appearance of relaxation in the money market early in the week. But when money rates rose again to the highest level of the year, speculative interest in the market was killed and prices wavered. The action of the money markets here and abroad caused a growing conviction that immediate return of easy money is not to be hoped for and gave rise to apprehension of danger of occasional flurries in the money market which might cause distress to speculative holders on margins.

Moderate selling at the outset this morning imparted a weak tone to the market, but losses did not exceed fractional limits. St. Paul, Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, and Amalgamated Copper fell ½ to ¾. Locomotive was firm.

Railroad equipment stocks were bought heavily, the movement having had origin in the late advance of yesterday in Locomotive. The stock inaugurated the rise today and its gain of 2¼ was followed by that of 1½ in American Car and Pressed Steel Car. Railroad stocks continued heavy and their weakness pulled down the railroad equipment stocks later. New York Central, Canadian Pacific, Northwestern, Wabash preferred, Colorado Southern second preferred and United States Rubber fell 1 to 1½. Hocking Valley preferred and Virginia & Carolina Chemical preferred rose 1, Federal Mining 4 points.

Fears set in poor bank statement caused general selling and the most prominent and active stocks got a point or more below last night. Selling subsided after the appearance of the bank statement, and Locomotive moved up again, an extreme of 3¼ points. The preferred gained 1¾, United States Pipe 2, and Pacific Coast second preferred 2½. The recoveries in the general list were trifling, and selling was renewed. Except for these few specialties the closing was easy near the lowest.

Quotations furnished by Edwards-Wood Co., Room A, Torrey building.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Except for specialties, the market closed with an easier tone throughout the list, under a moderate volume of business. The bank statement was fully as unfavorable as expected, but after the appearance the market assumed a steadier tone. New York comments on the bank statement and on the immediate market are naturally conflicting, but as a rule the conservative element in Wall street are inclined to wait until the market adjusts itself. The market is inclined to rule irregular and uncertain in tone. This will make for a market of scalping possibilities, purchases on the weak spots and taking profits on the bulges desirable.

* * *

Dick, Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: Stocks have been rather heavy today, although several industrials, like Locomotive, Cast Iron Pipe and Car Foundry, made material gains. Leading railroads, however, were all heavy, stocks like Reading, Union Pacific, St. Paul, New York Central, etc., declining slowly but steadily. The bank statement was disappointing, showing a heavy loss in cash and a reduction of more than $5,000,000 in surplus in spite of a reduction of nearly $12,000,000 in loans. The market was dull and genetally heavy at the close.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Tight money and a poor bank statement caused a cessation of the upward movement in copper. It looks now as money would be higher next week than it has been at any time, and this must cause considerable liquidation. There was considerable profit-taking in Franklin, the price broke easily to 18¾ at the close. Rhode Island was in good demand at 8, over 1,000 shares being bid for. We advise considerable discrimination in purchases during the next week until the money situation becomes more clear.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 7.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 1@3 points in response to lower cables and good weather. Shorts were covering for over Sunday, but after working up a point or two from the opening prices broke under a renewal of bear pressure and reports of Wall street liquidation. Selling at a net decline of 8@11 points, the market attracted increased demand from local shorts and during the middle of the morning rallied about 8 points from the lowest, showing a steadier tone, though most of the demand was from covering and sentiment around the ring continued bearish average.

Cotton futures closed barely steady; October, 9.56; November, 9.70; December, 9.86; January, 9.95; February, 10.02; March 10.08; April, 10.12; May, 10.15. Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 10.19; middling gulf, 10.35. Sales, 50 bales.

S. deposits $8,391,050, decrease $4,172,750.

FELL IN LOVE AT BIG FIRE

Romance of Iroquois Disaster Ripens Into a Wedding.

Despite the gay pictures on the walls and popular impression, stage life is rather sordid, wearing and sometimes gloomy, but there are occasional bright touches which relieve the hardships which the theatrical life entails and the romance of Fred Burmaster, electrician, and Ada Hall, chorus girl, of "The Tiger Lilies" extravaganza company, which comes to the Metropolitan next week is one of these.

Mr. Burmaster and Miss Hall were married in Minneapolis Thursday, while the company was playing at the Dewey theater in that city, and the ceremony was the culmination of the courtship which began with the Iroquois theater disaster in Chicago nearly two years ago.

Mr. Burmaster was one of the corps of electricians with the ill-fated spectacle "Mr. Blue Beard," and Miss Hall was a member of the large chorus. The newspapers were filled with the account of that awful catastrophe and all of them cited many instances of heroism on the part of the theatrical people, those in the audience, and the Chicago firemen, and some of them told of a stage attache who stood at an opening under the stage and helped many frightened chorus girls to safety. The opening was what is known as a coal hole and once through the hole, the rescued ones were on the sidewalk on Dearborn street.

That stage attache was Fren Burmaster and the last girl he helped through the coal hole before he sought safety from the greedy flames by going through it himself, was Miss Hall. She had a very narrow escape from death as she was clad in the flimsy costume which the chorus members wore in the fairy spectacle which was in progress when the fire started and if it had ever become ignited, she probably would never have lived to marry Mr. Burmaster.

But the dress di not catch fire and she reached the street in safety. So did Mr. Burmaster and after that, they managed to see a great deal of each other. This was the beginning of the romance which ripened into the marriage which took place Thursday.

Last season both were members of "The Runaways" company and became engaged. This season they decided to wed when "The Tiger Lilies" reached Miss Hall's home, Minneapolis. Mr. Burmaster lived in St. Paul before he went into the theatrical business.

NEW BOAT IS IN PORT

Steamer Peter White Arrives From Buffalo After Ore.

This Is Steamer's Second Trip Since She Was Launched.

The new ore carrier, Peter White, arrived in port today from Buffalo to load ore. This is the second trip of the White, she having taken her first cargo from Marquette to Buffalo a short time ago. While going into Buffalo on that trip she ran aground just outside the breakwater, but after lightering 200 tons was released without damage.

The White is 504 feet long, has a beam of 54 feet, and is 30 feet deep. She was built this year at the yards of the Great Lakes Engineering Works at Detroit for the Presque Isle Transportation company, and is named in honor of the leading living pioneer of the northern peninsula of Michigan.

A new fad introduced on the White is the name of the steamer in facsimile of the signature of Peter White, on the side of the steamer.

WHEAT IS VERY DULL

Trading Light and Market Sags, With Northwest Weakest.

Flax Offerings Heavy and Decline In Price Results.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 7.—Wheat was very dull and heavy today and trading was light in volume in all markets. The weather continues exceptionally favorable in the Northwest and wheat is moving as fast as railroads can care for it. The general sentiment is that only the concentrated holdings in the Chicago market are holding the price. Liverpool closed unchanged to 1d lower, Paris 5@7½c lower and Berlin ½ lower and Budapest ⅝c higher.

The December option in the Duluth market closed ⅝c lower, and also in Minneapolis, 1@1¼c lower in Chicago and Kansas City, ⅝c lower in New York, and 1⅛@1¼c lower in St. Louis. Winnipeg closed ⅝c lower.

Bradstreet estimates world's shipments to be reported Monday at 9,000,000 bus.

Stocks of wheat at Duluth this week are expected to show little change.

Corn in the Chicago market closed ⅛c higher for December and at Liverpool ¼@⅜d higher. December oats in Chicago closed ¼c higher.

Car receipts of wheat were 212 at Duluth, against 208 last year, and at Minneapolis 366 against 268 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 578 against 476 last year. Chicago received 61 last year holiday. Winnipeg received 115 cars, of which 26 graded No. 1 northern, and 107 No. 2 northern. The total last year was 51 cars.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,222,000 bus, last year, holiday. Shipments 440,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 430,000 bus. Shipments 381,000 bus.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was dead. December opened 1c lower at 80¾, and fell to 80@c, closing there, a loss of ⅞c. The May option opened 8c lower at 85¾c, and fell to 85@c, closing there, a loss of ⅞c.

Cash wheat continued in nothing more than fair demand and 1@2c over December was the price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was dull and heavy, although the opening was firm. Offerings were large and they came steadily through the session. The buying demand was good, but the cravings filled it. October opened 6@7c higher, at 99@c, and fell steadily to the close, which was at 97½c, a loss of 2@c. November opened 6c higher at 94@c and fell to 97½c, which was the closing price. December also fell 2@c, closing at the November price. May fell 1@c to 91c.

Oats unchanged @c, and rye was unchanged to ½c lower.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Profit Taking By Small Holders Causes Easier Tone In Wheat.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—Profit taking by small holders caused an easier tone in the wheat market here today. Failure of the wheat market at Liverpool to respond to the sharp advance yesterday was one of the main reasons for the bearish sentiment. Continued clear weather in the Argentine northwest was another depressing factor. December opened 1c to 1½c lower, at 81¾@c to 82c. After touching 81⅝@c, the price rallied to 82⅛c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 580 cars, against 1,150 cars last week and a holiday a year ago.

After a rush of buying from a leading bull, the market held steady the last half of the session. For December the lowest point the day was reached at 81⅝c. The close was steady, with December off ½@⅝c at 82@c.

Trading in the corn market was of small volume. Higher prices at Liverpool offset the effect of ideal weather for the new crop. As a result the market had a steady undertone. December opened unchanged at 41@c, sold off to 40⅝@c, and then rallied to 41⅜c. Local receipts were 200 cars with 6 of contract grade.

The market closed steady, with December up a shade at 41@41⅜c.

Liberal receipts had a weakening influence in oats. The feature of the trading was active selling by cash houses. December opened unchanged at 28⅝c and sold off to 28¼c. Local receipts were 383 cars.

Buying of October pork by shorts caused a fair rally in the provisions market. January pork was up 2½c at $12.45. Lard was up 2½c to 5c at $6.87½ to $6.90. Ribs were 2½c up at $6.50.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Today's market proved to be a narrow affair, yesterday's activity and strength not being in evidence at any time. The early weakness brought out support from the leading elevator concern, which rallied prices to about yesterday's closing figures, prices finally closing off with the closing 5@5½c lower for the day. News that in any way could affect the market was as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth, trade dragging along, seemingly having gotten back to its old former dull rut. The speculative situation, however, still looks unchanged. While the market is narrow, support seems always in evidence, and we feel we would continue to stick to the buying side on recessions.

Corn closed unchanged after a dull and disappointing day. Trade was not at all active, the market range clearly indicating the slowness of the trade. The stubborn strength seems to reflect a pretty well sold out condition of the market. Our leading elevator concerns popularly believed to have accumulated a large line. It has been popular for some time to sell the new crop, which has resulted in what looks like an over-sold condition. A spell of wet weather would cause a hasty scampering, which might develop into the stampede of shorts. On the soft spots, we continue to feel friendly to the buying side.

Oats—While trade conditions show but little improvement, the speculative market made a little gain for the day. A splendid cash and export demand which is being done in a quiet way, will, we feel, in time result in a broader and higher market for oats.

Chicago Record Herald: Exporters are in a serious tangle as the result of the congestion east of Buffalo. All of the railroads of that section are simply smothered with business and have gone to the hitherto unheard of extremity of refusing freight at published tariffs even subject to indefinite delay. In the past it has been a practice of the roads there to pay storage and insurance on grain where they were unable to furnish cars to carry it on from Buffalo. This they now refuse to do, and only one road offered to book freight yesterday if the owner would pay the storage and other charges. Knight McDougall had the following last night from their New York house: "All roads still refusing to book freight and elevators at Buffalo fast filling up." Exporters have for several days been skirmishing to get spot grain at the seaboard to fill ocean freight charters for urgent loading, although at the same time having large quantities of grain blocked in between New York and Buffalo. The condition will prove a serious blow to New York as an exporting point.

Chicago Inter-Ocean: Winnipeg is doing the exporting business in wheat. Four hundred thousand bushels were sold yesterday for direct export, including 80,000 from Montreal for October shipment. It was also claimed that 300,000 bushels had been worked to Baltimore, in three days' sales, aggregated 750,000 bushels. The price yesterday was the lowest of the season, 99 cents under New York December C. I. F. Buffalo. The trade in general construes this as a bullish factor, thinking that at this rate the Manitoba wheat will soon be out of the way and the United States wheat holders will then have a show.

The Missouri October report makes corn conditions 85, against 95 last month and 77 a year ago. Crop 2,315,000,000 bushels against 2,500,000,000 bushels last month and 1,770,000,000 bushels a year ago. The government September estimate was 2,786,000,000 bushels, 92 per cent safe from frost. Condition of wheat sown, 93, against 92 a year ago.

Pringle, Fitch & Rankin, Chicago: A Toronto exporter wires: "Trade in any quantity in wheat has been very dull of late. We are in a desperate condition with blockades, our car shortage is beginning unbearable, and will result in lower price. We cannot see anything in the situation to warrant higher prices worth speaking of. It is a fact that wheat in Canada is selling 5c under the price in Chicago."

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR

The Market Closed With Easier Tone Throughout the List.

Bank Statement Was Fully as Unfavorable as Expected.

New York, Oct. 7.—Stocks showed some strength with the appearance of relaxation in the money market early in the week. But when money rates rose again to the highest level of the year, speculative interest in the market was killed and prices wavered. The action of the money markets here and abroad caused a growing conviction that immediate return of easy money is not to be hoped for and gave rise to apprehension of danger of occasional flurries in the money market which might cause distress to speculative holders on margins.

Moderate selling at the outset this morning imparted a weak tone to the market, but losses did not exceed fractional limits. St. Paul, Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, and Amalgamated Copper fell ½ to ¾. Locomotive was firm.

Railroad equipment stocks were bought heavily, the movement having had origin in the late advance of yesterday in Locomotive. The stock inaugurated the rise today and its gain of 2¼ was followed by that of 1½ in American Car and Pressed Steel Car. Railroad stocks continued heavy and their weakness pulled down the railroad equipment stocks later. New York Central, Canadian Pacific, Northwestern, Wabash preferred, Colorado Southern second preferred and United States Rubber fell 1 to 1½. Hocking Valley preferred and Virginia & Carolina Chemical preferred rose 1, Federal Mining 4 points.

Fears of a poor bank statement caused general selling and the most prominent and active stocks got a point or more below last night. Selling subsided after the appearance of the bank statement, and becoming upward again, an extreme of 3¼ points. The preferred gained 1¾. United States Pipe 2, and Pacific Coast second preferred 2½. The recoveries in the general list were trifling, and selling was renewed at 1 Except for these few specialties the closing was easy near the lowest.

Quotations furnished by Edwards-Wood Co., Room A, Torrey building.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Except for specialties, the market closed with an easier tone throughout the list, under a moderate volume of business. The bank statement was fully as unfavorable as expected, but after its appearance the market assumed a steadier tone. New York commissions on the bank statement and on the immediate market are naturally conflicting, but as a rule the conservative element in Wall street are inclined to wait until the market adjusts itself. The market is inclined to rule irregular and uncertain in tone. This will make for a market of scalping possibilities, purchases on the weak spots and taking profits on the bulges desirable.

Dick, Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: Stocks have been rather heavy today, although several industrials, like Locomotive, Cast Iron Pipe and Car Foundry, made material gains. Leading railroads, however, were all heavy; stocks like Reading, Union Pacific, St. Paul, New York Central, etc., declining slowly but steadily. The bank statement was disappointing, showing a heavy loss in cash and a reduction of more than $5,000,000 in surplus in spite of a reduction of nearly $12,000,000 in loans. The market was dull and generally heavy at the close.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Tight money and a poor bank statement caused a cessation of the upward movement in copper. It looks now as money would be higher next week than it has been at any time, and this must cause considerable liquidation. There was considerable profit-taking in Franklin, the price broke easily to 15¾ at the close. Rhode Island was in good demand at 8, over 1,000 shares being bid for. We advise considerable discrimination in purchases during the next week until the money situation becomes more clear.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 7.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 1@3 points in response to lower cables and good weather. Shorts were covering for over Sunday, but after working up a point or two from the opening prices broke under a renewal of bear pressure and reports of Wall street liquidation. Selling at a net decline of 4@11 points, the market attracted increased demand from local shorts and during the middle of the morning rallied about 8 points from the lowest, showing a steadier tone, though most of the demand was from covering and sentiment around the ring continued bearish average.

Cotton futures closed barely steady; October, 9.56; November, 9.70; December, 9.86; January, 9.95; February, 10.02; March 10.08; April, 10.12; May, 10.15. Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 10.10; middling gulf, 10.35. Sales, 99 bales.

S. deposits $8,291,050, decrease $4,172,750.

New York Money.

New York, Oct. 7.—Money on call, nominal; no loans. Time loans, firm; sixty and ninety days, 5@5¼ per cent; six months, 4¾ per cent. Prime mercantile paper, 4¾@5 per cent. Sterling exchange, steady, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.85.20@85 for demand, and at $4.82 for sixty days; posted rates, $4.83@4½ and $4.86@4½; commercial bills, $4.81¼@4½. Bar silver, 61½c. Mexican dollars, 47c. Government bonds, steady; railroad bonds, irregular.

FELL IN LOVE AT BIG FIRE

Despite the gay pictures on the walls and popular impression, stage life is rather sordid, wearing and sometimes gloomy, but there are occasional bright touches which relieve the hardships which the theatrical life entails and the romance of Fred Burmaster, electrician, and Ada Hall, chorus girl, of "The Tiger Lilies" extravaganza company, which comes to the Metropolitan next week is one of these.

Mr. Burmaster and Miss Hall were married in Minneapolis Thursday, while the company was playing at the Dewey theater in that city, and the ceremony was the culmination of the courtship which began with the Iroquois theater disaster in Chicago nearly two years ago.

Mr. Burmaster was one of the corps of electricians with the ill-fated spectacle "Mr. Blue Beard," and Miss Hall was a member of the large chorus. The newspapers were filled with the account of that awful catastrophe and all of them cited many instances of heroism on the part of the theatrical people, those in the audience, and the Chicago firemen, and some of them told of a stage attache who stood at an opening under the stage and helped many frightened chorus girls to safety. The opening was what is known as a coal hole and once through the hole, the rescued ones were on the sidewalk on Dearborn street.

That stage attache was Fren Burmaster and the last girl he helped through the coal hole before he sought safety from the greedy flames by going through it himself, was Miss Hall. She had a very narrow escape from death as she was clad in the filmsy costume which the chorus members wore in the fairy spectacle which was in progress when the fire started and if it had ever become ignited, she probably would never have lived to marry Mr. Burmaster.

But the dress di not catch fire and she reached the street in safety. So did Mr. Burmaster and after that, they managed to see a great deal of each other. This was the beginning of the romance which ripened into the marriage which took place Thursday.

Last season both were members of "The Runaways" company and became engaged. This season they decided to wed when "The Tiger Lilies" reached Miss Hall's home, Minneapolis. Mr. Burmaster lived in St. Paul before he went into the theatrical business.

NEW BOAT IS IN PORT

Steamer Peter White Arrives From Buffalo After Ore.

This Is Steamer's Second Trip Since She Was Launched.

The new ore carrier, Peter White, arrived in port today from Buffalo to load ore. This is the second trip of the White, she having taken her first cargo from Marquette to Buffalo a short time ago. While going into Buffalo on that trip she ran aground just outside the breakwater, but after lightering 200 tons was released without damage.

The White is 564 feet long, has a beam of 54 feet, and is 30 feet deep. She was built this year at the yards of the Great Lakes Engineering Works at Detroit for the Presque Isle Transportation company, and is named in honor of the leading living pioneer of the northern peninsula of Michigan.

A new fad introduced on the White is the name of the steamer in facsimile of the signature of Peter White, on the side of the steamer.

GOING RATE ADVANCES,

But Has Not Yet Reached the Three-Cent Level.

The report that 3 cents has been fixed as the wheat freight rate for early forwarding is erroneous. Three cents is the rate named in a charter for Oct. 20, but not before, and only one charter at that rate has been made.

The going rate from Fort William is about 2¾ cents, fixing it at that rate for the present.

The receipts of wheat are really not heavy enough as yet to push the going rate upward, but doubtless ere long the rate will be raised.

Big Contract Finished.

Toledo, Oct. 7.—A six years' contract for enlarging the Toledo Straight channel was completed yesterday afternoon by the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company, successors to Lydon & Drews. The contractors ran but five days over the time limit. The channel is now 400 feet wide and twenty-two feet deep for its entire length in the bay of ten miles. The river channel abreast the city is of like dimensions.

RESIDENCE BUILDING WILL BE VERY HEAVY

Buying of Property For Improvement Leading Feature of Market at Present Time—Several Improvements of Considerable Importance Planned For Near Future.

Improvement talk and plans continue to be an important feature in the present situation of the Duluth realty market. During the week just closed there has been an excellent inquiry and quite a number of sales have been made though none of the considerations have reached any very high figure. The transfer record shows that there is a steady sale of lower priced property, much of which the brokers do not report unless they happen to have a number within a limited portion of time.

Indications of cooler weather coming on have caused a decidedly stiffening in the demand of houses and flats for rent. During the past week there has been quite a large movement to the uptown residence portion of the city of the summer residents on Park Point. Loans are in fairly good demand for this season of the year and the agencies report money so easy that it can be had at fairly low rates.

• • •

It is quite generally believed in contracting circles that the Massachusetts Real Estate company which has within the past two years been erecting a large number of flats and houses, besides improving its various store properties, will erect, this coming year, a six story store and office building at the southeast corner of Superior street and Fourth avenue west. That the real estate company has had under consideration a project for an improvement of the corner mentioned has been known for some time past, and it is understood that the present large demand for business property with central location is responsible for the intended building movement.

• • •

Another proposed improvement of considerable interest is the new clubhouse that the Duluth lodge of Elks is said to contemplate on property to be purchased at Third avenue west and Second street, in the rear of the Board of Trade building. It is proposed by the Elks to erect a three story building 40 by 100 feet, the lower floor to be used for store room, the second for club rooms and the top floor for lodge room.

Duluth has been visited, this month, by a large number of outside parties, mostly farmers from Iowa or older settled states, who are looking for investment in lands in this and Carlton county, with the idea of developing them into agricultural and dairy communities. The Boston & Duluth Farm Land company. The Guaranty Farm Land company and the land department of the Duluth & Iron Range road have all been busy with prospective purchasers who have been looking over various sections of land and who are said to be very favorably impressed.

The farm land companies have had an excellent year's business in spite of the unusually wet season and have placed in the aggregate many new settlers on hitherto undeveloped and wild land. The cheap prices of Northern Minnesota agricultural lands makes a strong appeal, because of its possibilities, to the farmers who have developed farms in the older settled portions of this and adjoining states and many are selling out their property at fancy prices and putting their money into the new lands.

• • •

Street improvement is being pushed forward as rapidly as possible in several sections of the city at the present time. Continued fair weather for the past week has enabled the West end paving work to get a start that was very much needed, although it will still be some time before the work is completed. Fifth avenue west is undergoing a long-needed improvement and by tonight the cedar block pavement will be practically completed from Superior to First street. Blocks are being laid above First street. The sandstone block pavement below Superior street to Michigan street was completed last week. Arrangements have been made to continue the sandstone block pavement below Michigan street to Commerce street, an improvement which was as much a necessity, if not more so, that the pavement above Superior street, on Fifth avenue. The portion of the avenue below Michigan street abuts railroad property and the Omaha and Northern Pacific roads have contributed an aggregate of $2,650 toward the pavement. The remainder of the expense will be paid from the general fund.

• • •

T. G. Vaughan reports the sale of a house and lot on First street, near Twenty-third avenue west for $2,800; a lot on Grand avenue near Thirty-seventh avenue west, for $350; a lot on Central avenue, West Duluth, for $700; a lot on Fourth street, near Eleventh avenue east, for $500; a house and lot on Second street, near Twentieth avenue west, for $2,100; two lots on the corner of Thirty-ninth avenue west and Magellan street, for $450. Mr. Vaughan is negotiating the sale of another $3,000 West end property. He reports a strong demand for property, especially in the West end, and notes a marked strengthening of the demand for property in all parts of the city.

• • •

West Duluth has had and is still having an excellent building movement in the way of new residences, real estate values in that part of the city having undergone a notable change from what they were two or three years ago. Among some of the new building projects are the residence of Rev. Mr. Jamieson, on Fifty-eighth avenue west; Dr. Stack's row of tenements on Elinor street, and the residence for Mrs. Crouett, on Fifty-eighth avenue west.

• • •

Richardson & Day this week closed deals which mean the erection of three fine homes on East Fourth street, between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth avenues east, on the upper side. Clarence Coleman, J. L. Owen and Wallace P. Wellbanks purchased three lots and will erect fine residences at once. They are employes of the government engineer's office.

• • •

Napoleon Grignon has purchased from S. J. Hubbard, the northwest corner of Twenty-fifth avenue west and Second street, for $7,050. The property is unimproved and is described as lots 401 and 403, block 86, Duluth proper, Second division.

• • •

T. W. Wahl has sold his residence property on the upper side of London road between Fourteenth and Fifteenth avenues east to Ella R. Mendenhall, for $5,800. The property is described as lot 14, block 40, Endion.

• • •

Transfer of another property to the Lake Superior & Southeastern Railroad company was made this week by the purchase from Lida B. Given of lot 250, block 20, Second division, for $3,750. This lot is located on the south side of Michigan street just east of the Garfield avenue viaduct.

• • •

The Swedish Evangelical Lutheran church, which is erecting a new church edifice at the southwest corner of Third street and Sixth avenue east, has sold J. J. Haley an adjoining lot for $1,700. The property purchased is described as lot 13, block 68, Portland.

• • •

W. T. Bray's plans for a city hall and fire station at Eveleth have been accepted. It will be a two-story structure 42 by 75 feet with a one-story stable in the rear.

• • •

The contract for the skating rink to be built on the Temple Opera site for John Shea, has been awarded John Hilliard and the portions of the old walls remaining after the fire are being torn down. The new rink will be 70 by 140 feet and will be constructed according to plans by Architect J. J. Wangenstein.

A Beautiful Suburban Home Costing $1,600

CLYDE S. ADAMS, ARCHITECT.

The continual increasing demand for a small suburban house, which may be constructed at the lowest possible cost is solved in the house above shown. The exterior design of this house is of pleasing character and will make a comfortable and cozy home for a small family.

The first floor has diningroom, livingroom and kitchen, all fair sized rooms, well lighted and cheerful, while the arrangement is compact and easily heated in the winter. A snug porch graces the entrance to the home, which adds much to the comforts thereof during the summer months. The second floor has four commodious bedrooms, each provided with an ideal closet. The entire floor may be well ventilated.

You will observe that there is ample room for a fair-sized family, and an outside kitchen may be added at a small expense, which would add much to the convenience, and enhance the value of the property.

Care should be exercised in the selection of tints for the exterior as good taste in this particular item adds much to the appearance. This house can be built for $1,600, as itemized below, including plumbing, heating and painting.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Butcher at Minot Has a Desperate Fight With Burglars.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Minot—In a desperate struggle with two armed burglars at 1:30 Friday morning, Earl McGinnis, a meat cutter employed at the Tompkins market, was shot through the left forearm. The bullet was removed and no serious results are expected. McGinnis went to the shop about 1 o'clock to secure some medicine he had left there, and was approached by two men, who, with drawn revolvers, commanded him to "dig out." He showed fight, and in the struggle which followed one of the men fired his gun, the shot taking effect in McGinnis' arm. The men had planned to rob the store and mistook the butcher for a night policeman. After firing the shot the men took to their heels and no trace of them has been discovered.

Preferring death to disgrace, Minnie Bluhm, a servant girl employed in the family of Charles Irwin, committed suicide Friday. A post-mortem examination by Dr. Windell, county coroner, developed the fact that she was in a delicate condition. While her stomach has not been analyzed, the opinion prevails that she took morphine to hide her shame. She was about 22. Her parents reside on a farm north of the city and she has a sister in St. Paul.

Fargo—The box car famine in this state is proving a great handicap to the farmers. The wheat movement has been so great that the elevators are filled, and the railroads appear to be unable to furnish enough cars. The greatest number of complaints come from along the line of the Soo. In some sections of the state farmers hauled grain back to their farms after taking it into towns. In others the grain was dumped in piles along the tracks. In a few instances the threshers were stopped until temporary granaries could be erected.

The wheat movement has had a big effect on the bank clearings. In Fargo the clearings for this week were 40 per cent in excess of the corresponding week in 1904.

J. L. and E. B. Grandin have sent a check for $1,000 to Secretary Allen of the Y. M. C. A. building now under construction. The association still lacks several thousand dollars of sufficient funds to complete the work.

The city schools are badly crowded as a result of the increased enrollment, and efforts are being made to have some unused buildings in a few of the ward schools prepared for the accommodation of the overflow.

The resignation of Paster Vermilya of the Broadway M. E. church will be tendered as he has a call from another field.

The plans for the city hall have been somewhat changed and new bids called for. The former bids were in excess of the appropriation and estimates.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Lead—The richest strike since the famous Grant find several years ago, was made just recently on the Bumble Bee claim in Whitewood gulch. This property is owned and operated by John McKibbon and James Snyder and is most advantageously located. It lies in Whitewood gulch on the creek about half a mile below the famous Wasp No. 2.

For some time the men have been driving a tunnel on water level and when they reached the distance of 200 feet, they struck the pay ledge. The rock runs over $25 to the ton; $80 of this is in gold and the rest in silver. The ledge is about seven feet in width and if the width and value continue, the find will be truly marvelous. The rock is not specimen rock in any way. It is a mixture of a white and bluish quartz and contains no free gold. It is concentrating in effect. McKibbon has worked for a great many years on these claims, and has spent a large amount of money in developing them.

Custer—Work is being prosecuted rapidly at the property of the Black Hills Fullers' Earth company and prospects are good. The company is about to close a contract to supply a Chicago house with 200 carloads of this earth.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Marquette—Capt. John T. Rebilcock, superintendent of the United States Steel corporation's Section 21 mine at Ishpeming, was hit by a steam shovel Friday night, sustaining a fractured skull and other injuries which are expected to prove fatal. He is chairman of the Marquette county board of supervisors.

Negaunee—George Mode, Sr., of Negaunee, administrator of the estate of his son, George Mode, Jr., through his attorneys, has commenced suit in the circuit court of Marquette county against the Weber Steel-Concrete company of Chicago, for damages in the sum of $15,000, alleging that the death of the junior Mode was due to carelessness on the part of the defendant company. Young Mode was killed last June by a fall from the top of a concrete chimney which the Weber company was building for the Marquette County Gas, Light and Traction company, at its plant in Negaunee. Mode, in company with the man who was supervising the construction of the chimney, was working on the top section, when it crushed beneath them, precipitating both a distance of over 100 feet to the ground. The bodies of the men were crushed and broken, and they lived but a few minutes after reaching the ground.

Escanaba—An additional smallpox case was reported at Escanaba Tuesday, making several now under quarantine in the city. The case found Tuesday was that of Dora LaPointe, a 13-year-old girl, who had been attending St. Anne's school. Vaccinations of school children have been proceeding rapidly, and it is thought that all of their number will soon be immune. There is considerable apprehension at Escanaba over the appearance of the dreaded disease.

Miss Lina Lucia, a popular Escanaba young woman, was drowned at Cisco Lake, Mich., near Watersmeet, by the capsizing of a canoe. She was a member of a party of young people who were canoeing, and it is reported that the tiny craft she was in capsized while she was trying to change her position in it. The body was recovered, and has been interred at Escanaba. The deceased was trying to change her position in it. The body was recovered, and has been interred at Escanaba. The deceased was 21 years of age, and had spent several weeks at Cisco Lake, but was about ready to return to Escanaba, having planned to get back home Tuesday of this week.

Ontonagon—A bear which has been raising havoc with the pigs on Hemlock Hill farm at Green, Ontonagon county, has met its doom. A platform was built in a tree near the pigsty and upon it two employes of the farm took up their stations. They did not have long to wait before bruin put in an appearance. When the animal had approached to within about 100 feet from them they fired simultaneously. The bear wheeled around and struck out for the brush. A day or two later the carcass of the bear was found but a short distance from the scene of the shooting, but not until some one had removed the skin. It was a monster in size and had killed no less than half a dozen pigs.

DEMOCRATS DEMAND A REVISION OF TARIFF

Delegates at Massachusetts Convention Insist Duties Must Be Lowered.

Boston, Oct. 7.—The only drawback to the unanimity in the voting at the Democratic state convention at Faneuil Hall, in this city, today, was the possible entrance as a candidate for governor of Former Mayor John H. H. McNamee of Cambridge. The state committee had arranged a slate, headed by Gen. Charles W. Bartlett of Boston as the candidate for governor and Henry M. Whitney of Brookline for lieutenant governor. Efforts had been made to induce Mr. McNamee to withdraw. He seemed determined, however, to go into the convention, because he had been given the support of the delegates from Medford and Cambridge and of some from the western part of the commonwealth. The remainder of the ticket as agreed upon included Henry M. Little of Newburyport for secretary of state, John P. Leahy of Boston for attorney general, Patrick J. Ashe of North Adams for auditor, and Daniel J. Doherty of Westfield for treasurer and receiver general.

The platform to be presented by the committee on resolutions was understood to contain a plank favoring mild or gradual municipal ownership, a declaration against federal supervision of insurance companies, and a reciprocity plank, almost identical with that proposed by the committee of 100 of the Boston chamber of commerce, of which Henry M. Whitney is president.

Former Congressman John P. Thayer of Worcester was selected as permanent chairman.

The following platform was adopted:

The paramount issue at this time before the people of Massachusett is relief from tariff restrictions. The effect of this policy forced upon the dominant Republican party by the greed of great and selfish interests, has been to cut Massachusetts off from its natural markets of sale and purchase, and to push the state towards the danger line of industrial decline. It is shown in trade reports, financial statements and census returns that while the industries of the country, as a whole, have materially increased in the past decade, those of this state have remained nearly stationary.

We believe that a sensible relief from these evils could be obtained without disturbance to business by placing on the free list a number of the raw materials of our industries, such as coal, iron, lumber, hides, wood pulp, and by the immediate enactment of a dual tariff law, which, while having the present tariff as its maximum, would give liberal reductions in duty rates to those stations that will accord to us favorable trade opportunities.

The Republican party, ruled by the great interests which are fattening on the spoils of protection, counsels delay. It will not touch, for the purpose of change, a single schedule in the tariff law until compelled to act as the result of political defeat.

We believe that general laws should take the place of special laws in legislation relating to public service corporations; that all corporations should eb prohibited from contributing money to be used for political purposes; that as the tariff is the mother of trusts, these offsprings should be deprived of the excessive protection, by means of which they are oppressing the people; that United States senators should be elected by the people, and that pending the passage of a constitutional amendment, state legislation should be provided for their nomination by direct popular vote; that in all attempts made to regulate the business of the country, through the medium of the national government, care should be taken to respect the rights of the state government, and to prevent the creation of bureaucratic authorities, capable, when located in a distant capital, and when working without direct responsibility, of overriding the wishes and destroying the liberty of the people.

We believe that legislation should be enacted giving to cities and towns broader powers in the conduct and control of business which derives its profits from the necessities of the community, experience having demonstrated that under favorable conditions and proper management the business of public utilities can be conducted by municipal corporations with profit to the people, both in price and in service.

We believe that the revelations of life insurance corruption, brought out by the investigation now going on in New York City, make it evident that there cannot be for these corporations too much or too close official oversight, and we protest against substituting a system of national control, of more than questionable constitutionality, for the existence of state supervision.

We heartily commend the diplomatic courage and sagacity of President Roosevelt in exerting the great influence of his office to bring to an end the terrible and bloody war in the Far East.

We deeply regret that Governor Douglas has declined the highly deserved honor of a renomination. He has shown in his official career an honesty, courage and dignity which have won for him the commendations alike of political friends and opponents.

DULUTH MEN INTERESTED

In Getting Possession of Valuable Group of Butte Claims.

Properties of Copper Queen of Idaho Reported Very Rich.

Butte, Mont., Oct. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Butte mining men are deeply interested in a company of local and Eastern capitalists that has organized for the purpose of securing possession of a valuable group of claims in this city located near the Pennsylvania, one of the best producers of the camp and owned by the Boston & Montana company. The claims included in the proposed purchase are the Oneida, Yankee Boy, Dutton and the Symons. None of these properties have been worked at any depth but the four of them have already produced more than $1,000,000 worth of ore.

It is understood that several Duluth capitalists are interested in the company. Duluth men have recently evinced an unusual interest in the camp and, in fact, control at the present time one of the most valuable group of mines in Butte, namely the Speculator and adjoining properties.

The grade of ore in the Oneida, Yankee Boy, Dutton and Symons claims is not surpassed in any mine in the camp. The properties are all recent discoveries and but little development work has been done. It is stated that the new company will sink a central shaft and do considerable exploring at a greater depth than has heretofore been reached.

• • •

Probably the most talked-of stock in Butte during the past week was that of the North Butte company, controlled by Duluth men. The rapid rise of the market price of this stock has not only set Butte mining men and investors thinking, but has caused considerable speculation on the part of Eastern men.

It is freely predicted in this city that North Butte will go up to $75 per share before January 1. Already the price has risen to over the $50 mark but even this figure has not tempted local holders to let go.

Already the ground has been surveyed and work commenced on the erection of the new hoist at the Speculator. The work of retimbering the No. 2 shaft is progressing rapidly and as soon as the improvements now under way are completed, the producing capacity of the properties will be increased many fold. Despite the fact that all ore is now being hoisted through the high ore shaft, the company is clearing a neat sum every month.

• • •

Owing to an accident at the Diamond several days ago, that property has been practically shutdown. The hoisting engine went wrong and a force of experts has been busy since that time making repairs. It was announced tonight that everything would be in readiness to resume operations by the end of the week.

• • •

The Pittsburg and Montana smelter which has been closed down for the past ten days, reopened, yesterday, and is now running full blast. The management is still experimenting with the new machinery and a shutdown is to be expected at any time. It is not expected that the plant will be in operation steadily before January 1.

• • •

The 352 foot stack at the Butte Reduction works is completed and this week visitors are being taken to the top of the structure. This is the highest cement stack in the world. The contractors claim that the stack is so constructed that it can sway a distance of twenty feet at the top in the event of a high wind without danger of collapsing. During the past five days 263 persons have climbed to the top by means of a circular stairway on the interior of the stack. It will be put in operation next week.

Announcement has been made here that Duluth parties have secured control of the Copper Queen group of claims in Lemhi county, Idaho. The three patented claims included in the deal are the Copper Queen, Blue Beard and Gold Flint, formerly owned by T. E. G. Lynch of Nova Scotia.

The claims are reputed to be very valuable. During the summer months extensive development work has been done by leasers and about $25,000 worth of ore shipped to the Butte smelters. The rock has assayed from 10 to 40 per cent copper, $20 to $35 in gold, and 10 to 50 ounces of silver per ton.

The new company is known as the Copper Queen Mining and Smelting company. It is stated that the capacity of the concentrator will immediately be increased to 100 tons per day, and twenty expert shaft men will be put to work sinking on the Copper Queen to a depth of 400 feet. The new company is capitalized for 500,000 shares at a par value of $1, of which stock 100,000 shares have been sold and the money deposited in the bank.

The temporary organization of the company is B. F. White, president; T. E. G. Lynch, vice president; J. C. McFadden, secretary, and the First National bank of Dillon, Mont., treasurer. The principal office of the company is at Duluth.

DELEGATE FOR WEST INDIES

Vatican Urged To Appoint To Succeed Archbishop Chappelle.

Rome, Oct. 7.—The Vatican has been urged to appoint an apostolic delegate to Cuba and Porto Rico, to succeed the late Archbishop Chappelle of New Orleans. Pressure has been brought to bear to have Archbishop Farley of New York chosen apostolic delegate to Cuba and Porto Rico, pointing out that the arch diocese of New York disposes of funds sufficient for the position, and besides, because steamers for Cuba start from New York. For similar considerations the Bahama islands belong to the arch diocese of New York. The appointment is considered a most important one, being, it is believed, a step towards the delegate's nomination as a cardinal.

IRON MINES ON MICHIGAN RANGES

Expected That Ishpeming Shipments Will Break the Record.

While the district is by no means alone in the distinction, there is no question that all ore-shipping records in the Ishpeming field of the Marquette range will be broken this season. Ever since the opening of navigation ore has been rushed to the Marquette and Escanaba docks, and from fifteen to eighteen switching crews have been kept busy in the local yards of the three railroads sharing in the traffic. Similar activity has been experienced in the adjacent Negaunee field, and it is not expected the shipments will slacken until the latter part of November. In the district south of Negaunee, the Steel corporation has suspended shipments from the Volunteer mine stockpile, although it is probable that a few more cargoes will go forward. Ore has been moving from this mine since last spring, but there still remains a considerable tonnage. The mine is not now being operated, the lease not having been renewed when it expired last year. The property is owned in fee by Senator Alger of Detroit.

At Negaunee, Marquette range, the Breitung Hematite mine, controlled by the Breitung estate of Marquette, is being unwatered preliminary to resuming work. The property has been idle for over a year. In the eastern part of the city, the Pickands-Mather company has installed another diamond drill—the third—on the so-called Gaffney tract, on which it holds an eighteen-months option. It is the confident expectation at Negaunee that the operations now in progress at the Gaffney property will result in the opening of another mine. At present there are more diamond drills in commission on the east end of the Marquette range than at any previous time in the history of the district. The Cleveland Cliffs Iron company has three at work in the field between its Negaunee and Maas mines. Jones & Laughlin has one in operation on the Corbett tract near the Maas, and is also working two drills in the Little Lake homestead district, to the south of the city. The Cleveland Cliffs company has five drills boring in the vicinity of its Austin mine, in the Swanzey district, and Toledo parties are at work on the Pelissier farm out from Marquette. In addition to these surface drills, a number are in use underground at producing properties. Diamond setters and drill operators have never been in greater demand than at present. A number of Marquette county men have recently refused positions in foreign countries at wages not less than $200 per month, and in some instances as high as $225, preferring to remain at home.

At Republic, Marquette range, the Republic mine of the Cambria Steel company has been working full-handed all season. More than 500 men are employed, with no indication that there will be any cut in the pay roll. The ore is moving rapidly from the stockpiles, and it is not likely there will be any left at the close of the season.

The scarcity of labor is delaying operations somewhat at all properties in the Crystal Falls district of the Menominee range, and it is being felt more keenly as the weeks pass. Work preliminary to a resumption of mining operations is uder way at the Armenia property of Corrigan, McKinney & Co., and it is expected that the pumps will be doing duty within a fortnight. The Armenia is a wet mine, and extensive preparation is being made so that there will be no delay, once the water begins to come out. At the company's Great Western Mine, the principal program mapped out for the winter is the opening of the new level, the twelfth, which will tap a fine body of ore. Work in preparation for an increased output is also under way at the company's Dunn Mine. A new shafthouse is being erected, and a stockpile ground of large extent will be graded. Near Amasa, the Shenango Furnace company has a diamond drill at work, exploring the La Chapelle property.

The Cleveland Cliffs company, which recently took over the old Iron Belt mine on the Gogebic range, is making extensive preparations for its development. Two diamond drills were sent to the property two weeks ago, and machinery is now being delivered.

At North Escanaba, Lake Michigan, dredging has been started at the site of the new ore dock to be erected by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road this fall and winter. The length of the structure will be 1,450 feet, 70 feet in height, and the approach to it will be 2,400 feet additional. At Marquette, Lake Superior, a start upon the construction of the new ore dock for the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railroad also has been made. This dock will be 1,250 feet long and will contain 200 pockets, each of a capacity of 250 tons, giving an aggregate sterling capacity of 50,000 tons. In height the dock will be 70 feet 8 inches. The structure is to be finished and ready for use by the opening of the season of navigation in the spring of 1906.

BODY FOUND NEAR CREEK.

Young Man En Route Overland Murdered By Companion.

St. Paul, Oct. 7.—A special to the Dispatch from Helena, Mont., says: Because he had not heard from his son, Wasson J. Oliver, enroute overland from Canada to his Southern Montana home, W. M. Oliver, a prominent citizen of Southern Montana, came to Helena and informed the police that he believed his son had met with foul play. Investigation resulted in the finding of the murdered body near Wolf creek last night. His outfit had been burned, but the horses and a young Frenchman traveling with him were missing, and it is believed the latter committed the crime, as he was seen with horses at a date later than Mr. Oliver last heard of his son. Officers are searching for the Frenchman.

DULUTH MEN INTERESTED

In Getting Possession of Valuable Group of Butte Claims.

Properties of Copper Queen of Idaho Reported Very Rich.

Butte, Mont., Oct. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—Butte mining men are deeply interested in a company of local and Eastern capitalists that has organized for the purpose of securing possession of a valuable group of claims in this city located near the Pennsylvania, one of the best producers of the camp and owned by the Boston & Montana company. The claims included in the proposed purchase are the Oneida, Yankee Boy, Dutton and the Symons. None of these properties have been worked at any depth but the four of them have already produced more than $1,000,000 worth of ore.

It is understood that several Duluth capitalists are interested in the company. Duluth men have recently evinced an unusual interest in the camp and, in fact, control at the present time one of the most valuable group of mines in Butte, namely the Speculator and adjoining properties.

The grade of ore in the Oneida, Yankee Boy, Dutton and Symons claims is not surpassed in any mine in the camp. The properties are all recent discoveries and but little development work has been done. It is stated that the new company will sink a central shaft and do considerable exploring at a greater depth than has heretofore been reached.

• • •

Probably the most talked-of stock in Butte during the past week was that of the North Butte company, controlled by Duluth men. The rapid rise of the market price of this stock has not only set Butte mining men and investors thinking, but has caused considerable speculation on the part of Eastern men.

It is freely predicted in this city that North Butte will go up to $75 per share before January 1. Already the price has risen to over the $50 mark but even this figure has not tempted local holders to let go.

Already the ground has been surveyed and work commenced on the erection of the new hoist at the Speculator. The work of retimbering the No. 2 shaft is progressing rapidly and as soon as the improvements now under way are completed, the producing capacity of the properties will be increased many fold. Despite the fact that all ore is now being hoisted through the high ore shaft, the company is clearing a neat sum every month.

• • •

Owing to an accident at the Diamond several days ago, that property has been practically shutdown. The hoisting engine went wrong and a force of experts has been busy since that time making repairs. It was announced tonight that everything would be in readiness to resume operations by the end of the week.

• • •

The Pittsburg and Montana smelter which has been closed down for the past ten days, reopened yesterday, and is now running full blast. The management is still experimenting with the new machinery and a shutdown is to be expected at any time. It is not expected that the plant will be in operation steadily before January 1.

• • •

The 352 foot stack at the Butte Reduction works is completed and this week visitors are being taken to the top of the structure. This is the highest cement stack in the world. The contractors claim that the stack is so constructed that it can sway a distance of twenty feet at the top in the event of a high wind without danger of collapsing. During the past five days 283 persons have climbed to the top by means of a circular stairway on the interior of the stack. It will be put in operation next week.

• • •

Announcement has been made here that Duluth parties have secured control of the Copper Queen group of claims in Lemhi county, Idaho. The three patented claims included in the deal are the Copper Queen, Blue Beard and Gold Flint, formerly owned by T. E. G. Lynch of Nova Scotia.

The claims are reputed to be very valuable. During the summer months extensive development work has been done by leasers and about $25,000 worth of ore shipped to the Butte smelters. The rock has assayed from 10 to 40 per cent copper, $20 to $35 in gold, and 10 to 50 ounces of silver per ton.

The new company is known as the Copper Queen Mining and Smelting company. It is stated that the capacity of the concentrator will immediately be increased to 100 tons per day, and twenty expert shaft men will be put to work sinking on the Copper Queen to a depth of 400 feet. The new company is capitalized for 500,000 shares at a par value of $1, of which stock 100,000 shares have been sold and the money deposited in the bank.

The temporary organization of the company is B. F. White, president; T. E. G. Lynch, vice president; J. C. McFadden, secretary, and the First National bank of Dillon, Mont., treasurer. The principal office of the company is at Duluth.

DELEGATE FOR WEST INDIES

Vatican Urged To Appoint To Succeed Archbishop Chappelle.

Rome, Oct. 7.—The Vatican has been urged to appoint an apostolic delegate to Cuba and Porto Rico, to succeed the late Archbishop Chappelle of New Orleans. Pressure has been brought to bear to have Archbishop Farley of New York chosen apostolic delegate to Cuba and Porto Rico, pointing out that the arch diocese of New York disposes of funds sufficient for the position, and besides, because steamers for Cuba start from New York. For similar considerations the Bahama islands belong to the arch diocese of New York. The appointment is considered a most important one, being, it is believed, a step towards the delegate's nomination as a cardinal.

DEMOCRATS DEMAND A REVISION OF TARIFF

Delegates at Massachusetts Convention Insist Duties Must Be Lowered.

Boston, Oct. 7.—The only drawback to the unanimity in the voting at the Democratic state convention at Faneuil Hall, in this city, today, was the possible entrance as a candidate for governor of Former Mayor John H. H. McNamee of Cambridge. The state committee had arranged a slate, headed by Gen. Charles W. Bartlett of Boston as the candidate for governor and Henry M. Whitney of Brookline for lieutenant governor. Efforts had been made to induce Mr. McNamee to withdraw. He seemed determined, however, to go into the convention, because he had been given the support of the delegates from Medford and Cambridge and of some from the western part of the commonwealth. The remainder of the ticket as agreed upon included Henry M. Little of Newburyport for secretary of state, John P. Leahy of Boston for attorney general, Patrick J. Ashe of North Adams for auditor, and Daniel J. Doherty of Westfield for treasurer and receiver general.

The platform to be presented by the committee on resolutions was understood to contain a plank favoring mild or gradual municipal ownership, a declaration against federal supervision of insurance companies, and a reciprocity plank, almost identical with that proposed by the committee of 100 of the Boston chamber of commerce, of which Henry M. Whitney is president.

The following platform was adopted:

The paramount issue at this time before the people of Massachusett is relief from tariff restrictions. The effect of this policy forced upon the dominant Republican party by the greed of great and selfish interests, has been to cut Massachusetts off from its natural markets of sale and purchase, and to push the state towards the danger line of industrial decline. It is shown in trade reports, financial statements and census returns that while the industries of the country, as a whole, have materially increased in the past decade, those of this state have remained nearly stationary.

We believe that a sensible relief from these evils could be obtained without disturbance to business by placing on the free list a number of the raw materials of our industries, such as coal, iron, lumber, hides, wood pulp, and by the immediate enactment of a dual tariff law, which, while having the present tariff as its maximum, would give liberal reductions in duty rates to those stations that will accord to us favorable trade opportunities.

The Republican party, ruled by the great interests which are fattening on the spoils of protection, counsels delay. It will not touch, for the purpose of change, a single schedule in the tariff law until compelled to act as the result of political defeat.

We believe that general laws should take the place of special laws in legislation relating to public service corporations; that all corporations should eb prohibited from contributing money to be used for political purposes; that as the tariff is the mother of trusts, these offsprings should be deprived of the excessive protection, by means of which they are oppressing the people; that United States senators should be elected by the people, and that pending the passage of a constitutional amendment, state legislation should be provided for their nomination by direct popular vote; that in all atttempts made to regulate the business of the country, through the medium of the national government, care should be taken to respect the rights of the state government, and to prevent the creation of bureaucratic authorities, capable, when located in a distant capital, and when working without direct responsibility, of overriding the wishes and destroying the liberty of the people.

We believe that legislation should be enacted giving to cities and towns broader powers in the conduct and control of busess which derives its profits from the necessities of the community, experience having demonstrated that under favorable conditions and proper management the business of public utilities can be conducted by municipal corporations with profit to the people, both in price and in service.

We believe that the revelations of life insurance corruption, brought out by the investigation now going on in New York City, make it evident that there cannot be for these corporations too much or too close official oversight, and we protest against substituting a system of national control, of more than questionable constitutionality, for the existence of state supervision.

We heartily commend the diplomatic courage and sagacity of President Roosevelt in exerting the great influence of his office to bring to an end the terrible and bloody war in the Far East.

We deeply regret that Governor Douglas has declined the highly deserved honor of a renomination. He has shown in his official career an honesty, courage and dignity which have won for him the commendations alike of political friends and opponents.

IRON MINES ON MICHIGAN RANGES

While the district is by no means alone in the distinction, there is no question that all ore-shipping records in the Ishpeming field of the Marquette range will be broken this season. Ever since the opening of navigation ore has been rushed to the Marquette and Escanaba docks, and from fifteen to eighteen switching crews have been kept busy in the local yards of the three railroads sharing in the traffic. Similar activity has been experienced in the adjacent Negaunee field, and it is not expected the shipments will slacken until the latter part of November. In the district south of Negaunee, the Steel corporation has suspended shipments from the Volunteer mine stockpile, although it is probable that a few more cargoes will go forward. Ore has been moving from this mine since last spring, but there still remains a considerable tonnage. The mine is not now being operated, the lease not having been renewed when it expired last year. The property is owned in fee by Senator Alger of Detroit.

At Negaunee, Marquette range, the Breitung Hematite mine, controlled by the Breitung estate of Marquette, is being unwatered preliminary to resuming work. The property has been idle for over a year. In the eastern part of the city, the Pickands-Mather company has installed another diamond drill—the third—on the so-called Gaffney tract, on which it holds an eighteen-months option. It is the confident expectation at Negaunee that the operations now in progress at the Gaffney property will result in the opening of another mine. At present there are more diamond drills in commission on the east end of the Marquette range than at any previous time in the history of the district. The Cleveland Cliffs Iron company has three at work in the field between its Negaunee and Maas mines. Jones & Laughlin has one in operation on the Corbett tract near the Maas, and is also working two drills in the Little Lake homestead district, to the south of the city. The Cleveland Cliffs company has five drills boring in the vicinity of its Austin mine, in the Swanzey district, and Toledo parties are at work on the Pelissier farm out from Marquette. In addition to these surface drills, a number are in use underground at producing properties. Diamond setters and drill operators have never been in greater demand than at present. A number of Marquette county men have recently refused positions in foreign countries at wages not less than $300 per month, and in some instances as high as $225, preferring to remain at home.

At Republic, Marquette range, the Republic mine of the Cambria Steel company has been working full-handed all season. More than 500 men are employed, with no indication that there will be any cut in the pay roll. The ore is moving rapidly from the stockpiles, and it is not likely there will be any left at the close of the season.

The scarcity of labor is delaying operations somewhat at all properties in the Crystal Falls district of the Menominee range, and it is being felt more keenly as the weeks pass. Work preliminary to a resumption of mining operations is uder way at the Armenia property of Corrigan, McKinney & Co., and it is expected that the pumps will be doing duty within a fortnight. The Armenia is a wet mine, and extensive preparation is being made so that there will be no delay, once the water begins to come out. At the company's Great Western Mine, the principal program mapped out for the winter is the opening of the new level, the twelfth, which will tap a fine body of ore. Work in preparation for an increased output is also under way at the company's Dunn Mine. A new shafthouse is being erected, and a stockpile ground of large extent will be graded. Near Amasa, the Shenango Furnace company has a diamond drill at work, exploring the La Chapelle property.

The Cleveland Cliffs company, which recently took over the old Iron Belt mine on the Gogebic range, is making extensive preparations for its development. Two diamond drills were sent to the property two weeks ago, and machinery is now being delivered.

At North Escanaba, Lake Michigan, dredging has been started at the site of the new ore dock to be erected by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road this fall and winter. The length of the structure will be 1,450 feet, 70 feet in height, and the approach to it will be 2,400 feet additional. At Marquette, Lake Superior, a start upon the construction of the new ore dock for the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railroad also has been made. This dock will be 1,250 feet long and will contain 200 pockets, each of a capacity of 250 tons, giving an aggregate sterling capacity of 50,000 tons. In height the dock will be 70 feet 8 inches. The structure is to be finished and ready for use by the opening of the season of navigation in the spring of 1906.

BODY FOUND NEAR CREEK.

Young Man En Route Overland Murdered By Companion.

St. Paul, Oct. 7.—A special to the Dispatch from Helena, Mont., says: Because he had not heard from his son, Wasson J. Oliver, enroute overland from Canada to his Southern Montana home, W. M. Oliver, a prominent citizen of Southern Montana, came to Helena and informed the police that he believed his son had met with foul play. Investigation resulted in the finding of the murdered body near Wolf creek last night. His outfit had been burned, but the horses and a young Frenchman traveling with him were missing, and it is believed the latter committed the crime, as he was seen with horses at a date later than Mr. Oliver last heard of his son. Officers are searching for the Frenchman.

In Lake Superior Copper District

Much Exploratory and Development Work—Centennial's Mill Returns—Franklin Drills Enter the Ledge—Mass Shipments Are Heavy.

Calumet, Mich., Oct. 7.—One of the most remarkable features of the present situation in the Lake Superior copper district is the argument of exploratory and development work that is in progress. On all portions of the copper range diamond drills and exploratory openings are in service. Nor is the present activity confined to the new mines, as many of the older and larger companies are investigating undeveloped portions of their properties. The discovery of important values on some of the older properties is practically certain in some instances, and these companies will have a big advantage in their complete mining and milling equipments, whereas the newer properties are not provided with extensive plants.

Centennial's operations are now reaching a highly interesting stage. It is believed that the lower workings are just beginning to enter the rich copper shoot which dips out of the Wolverine into the Centennial. The character of the Centennial's newest openings would indicate this; at least there is a decided improvement noted in the quality of the lode. The Centennial's mill returns show steady improvement. In September the mill was in commission fourteen days on Centennial rock, stamping 7,400 tons. The product was 128 tons of mineral, an average yield of 1.73 per cent, or 37½ pounds to the ton stamped. Of the rock hoisted only 11 per cent was discarded and this is indicative of the character of the openings. Earnings of the Centennial company last month were slightly more than sufficient to pay expenses, something that was never before accomplished in any period of the Centennial's history. It is believed that the openings underground will improve steadily as depth is gained and there will be a gradual improvement in the production.

Few of the smaller producers in the Lake Superior district have benefited more largely from the advance in the price of copper than the Mass Consolidated of Ontonagon county. During the last two years the attention of the management has been devoted mainly to the development of the property and the opening of greater areas of stoping territory. Now the mine has a large reserve blocked out and is in a position to take advantage of the strong demand for copper. Rock shipments have been increased to 525 tons daily and current production is at the rate of 3,150,000 pounds of refined copper annually. It is conservatively estimated that the company is earning $70,000 net per annum on this metal market. There has been no surcease of development work, in fact, exploratory and construction work are larger now, and the foregoing earnings are secured after meeting these extraordinary expenses.

As soon as the equipment of the new "C" shaft is completed and the railroad spur to that point is ready, there will be a greater increase in Mass production. Like its neighbor, the Michigan, the Mass mine is a large producer of barrel and mass copper, fully one-third of its output being secured in that form. There are thirty-six drills in use in the mine at present and the working force has been increased considerably. The Mass possesses a speculative value in its Minnesota conglomerate explorations, which may reasonably be expected to show up some rich ground in the course of the next few months.

Connection between the two shafts at the Ahmeek mine was established recently by a drift on the first level. The two shafts are 1,445 feet apart and the connection was made at a depth of 225 feet. Excellent copper ground was exposed for the entire distance, the average quality being fully equal to that exposed in the shafts. No. 1 shaft is now 740 feet deep and No. 2 is down to a depth of 765 feet, both being bottomed at the fifth level. The character of the ground penetrated by both shafts is good, the lode being uniformly well charged with copper. With its present extensive openings and high-grade ground, the future of the Ahmeek is permanently fixed.

• • •

What in all probability is ledge rock has been encountered by the Franklin Mining company in its diamond drill exploratory work for the Kearsarge lode on the northern portion of the Franklin Junior property. The sand pipe, which dips east at an angle of 45 degrees, encountered the rock at a depth of 120 feet from surface. After numerous efforts to dislocate the rock by blasting, the pipe was driven down and cemented on the ledge. The diamond drill has penetrated solid rock to sufficient depth now to warrant the belief that it is in the true ledge. This hole was extremely difficult, large boulders, which had to be continued, being prevalent in endless succession to a depth of 120 feet. This hole is 1,500 feet south of the line of the Rhode Island property, and the management of that company naturally is deeply interested in the work. At the diamond drill hole on the southerly portion of the Franklin Junior, much difficulty has been encountered, but it is believed that the pipe has at last entered the rock, after penetrating fifty-seven feet of overburden. This hole is 1,500 feet north of the Arcadian line.

Removal of the Calumet & Hecla's supply house at Lake Linden, which for many years was located at the old dock near the Calumet mill, to the large dock near the smelting plant, has been completed. This warehouse is 48 by 115 feet in size and its removal to a point one mile away was quite an undertaking, as it is constructed of structural steel. It will be enlarged to 48 by 175 feet in size. It is used as a receiving storehouse for the company's freight, the great bulk of which is brought in during the season of navigation. The new dock upon which the warehouse is being placed is 700 feet long and is close to the north end of the company's coal docks.

Champion's rock shipments are crowding 2,150 tons daily at present and an average of 26 to 27 pounds of refined copper per ton is being secured. This is sufficient commentary on the condition of the property. Shaft "E," the deepest of the mine, is below the tenth level. Drifting south on the third level has progressed 1,400 feet and on the fourth level 1,200 feet. The character of the openings, which are headed toward the Globe tract, is very favorable.

• • •

Nine-ton skips are now being used successfully in some of the Calumet & Hecla's shafts. These are much the largest skips in use in the lake mines. Previous to the introduction of the present skips, six-ton skits were considered large and three to five-ton capacity has been the usual size. But the Calumet & Hecla management has demonstrated to its own satisfaction that the larger skips are more economical, the increased load being handled without a corresponding increase in steam consumption, strain on the hoisting and cable, or wear and tear on the shaft equipment. A nine-ton skip is used in No. 5 shaft of the Calumet branch and No. 8 shaft of the Hecla branch. At the vertical Red Jacket shaft the two Kimberly skips in use have a capacity of 7½ tons each. A large number of new tramcars of an improved pattern are being sent underground at the Red Jacket shaft. These cars will hold 3½ tons each.

• • •

Operations at the old Hamilton property in Matchwood township, Ontonagon county, are confined to drifting on the Norwich vein from the point where it was intersected in the tunnel driven into the base of the bluff. The west drift is 200 feet long and the east drift 150 feet. The lode is six to eight feet wide and shows some copper in the easterly openings. It was encountered 502 feet from the mouth of the tunnel and 400 feet of ground intervenes at that point between the openings and surface. It is planned to tap the Meads vein in the tunnel later. The Hamilton is being developed by the Copper Crown Mining company, which has recently acquired the Norwich property. Development of the latter will be started this fall. It is planned to erect a small stamp mill on the river and near the property next spring.

• • •

Two diamond drills are in service at the Cliff property, owned by the Tamarack Mining company, in Keweenaw county. The strike of the lode opened by the Miskwabik is being established across the entire Cliff tract. This lode is to all appearances identical with the Kearsarge amygdaloid. It has been located at three points on the Cliff. No information regarding its value is volunteered by the Tamarack management.

• • •

Work in the east crosscut from the Challenge shaft has been discontinued, as it has penetrated a conglomerate which parallels the Baltic lode on the east throughout all the mines where it has been extensively developed. Drifting upon the lode encountered in the west crosscut continues and has progressed fifty feet in each direction. This lode is thirty-seven feet wide where penetrated by the crosscut, and the rock shows a striking resemblance to the Baltic lode. That it is the Baltic lode the management is not prepared to say, but every indication points to such being the case.

• • •

Water is being kept out of the Bohemian workings in Keweenaw county to permit inspection at any time. The options held by the syndicate which explored the property and discontinued work three months ago, when its funds became exhausted, have expired. The shaft is eighty feet deep and there are 200 feet of lateral openings at that depth.

• • •

At the Tecumseh the diamond drill at No. 2 location has not yet encountered the Kearsarge lode. There is only a short piece of ground between the No. 2 drill hole and the Metalline property of the Calumet & Hecla company. The shaft at No. 1 location on the Tecumseh is in a satisfactory grade of rock at a depth of twenty feet.

OLD BUT GOOD.

Some time ago a number of Harvard students were boarding at a certain boarding house and were served hash a number of times a week, says the Boston Herald. It finally became quite a fad with the boarding mistress. After a while one of the waitresses heard one of the students mumbling something to himself after each mouthful of hash. She thought there might be something the matter with him, but everything was all right until hash was served again.

One day while passing the same student she happened to hear him say, after each mouthful: "Hebrew xiii., 8; Hebrew xiii., 8." She thought it quite funny, and made up her mind to find out, if possible, what it meant. So the Bible was consulted, and to her astonishment she found the following in Hebrew xiii., 8: "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today and forever."

VERY APPROPRIATE.

The Stephen S. Sawyers of Millbury had twelve children, says the Boston Herald. Mr. Sawyer, being particularly fond of alliteration, gave all of them names beginning with S. They had Stephen, Jr., Susan, Samuel, Sarah, Seth, Sophie, Solon, Sally, Samantha, Salome, Saul and Sandy.

When the "stork" was about to hover for the thirteenth time, Mrs. Sawyer said: "My dear, what are we to call it?"

"I should suggest 'Sufficient,'" he replied.

Important Finds In the Calumet & Arizona Group

Boston Stock Exchange Expert Figured $27,000,000 In Sight In Calumet & Arizona—Shattuck's New Find Runs About Ten Per Cent Copper.

Bisbee, Ariz., Oct. 7.—Some of the important finds in the history of the camp have been made within the past few days. The indications are for a continuation of new finds during the present fall and coming winter, for very active exploration is now under way in all the properties of this camp, both in the Calumet & Arizona group and Copper Queen. The latter, by reason of its greater length of underground openings and its longer life, has immense reserves blocked out, and has no such vast proportion of unexplored ground as the Calumet & Arizona group.

In the Calumet & Arizona itself there have been big finds within a week or two. In the south part of the Senator claims, on the 1,050-foot level, ore is now being blocked out in quantity that averages up to 35 per cent copper. This apparently dips toward the north, and comes out of the Lowell claim of the Queen mines. On the 1,150-foot level, No. 20 crosscut, has been run into Buckeye ground, and No. 29 started off it, and there is about ninety feet of ore running from 7 to 8 per cent at the ends of these, with the breasts still in ore. On the Irish Mag claim, 400 feet higher than ore had before been found or mined, some recent exploration work has found large bodies of ore, indicating that the possible depth of the mineral bearing ground is far greater than has been supposed, and it may even come to surface.

An expert for the Boston Stock exchange, who has been making an examination of the mine for the purpose of listing, figures one block of $27,000,000 in sight, and not includign any of what is spoken of above, which had not been sufficiently developed to be counted by him when he made his examination.

On the Lake Superior & Pittsburg 1,000-foot level, new ore bodies have been cut in No. 31 crosscut the past week, but little is yet known of their dimensions or extent. The assays are quite high, however.

• • •

In the Pittsburg & Duluth mine there have been new and large finds of late, and the property is much improved. These finds are on the 1,250-foot level, and are nearly all in the Sunnyside claim, where the bulk of the mine's workings have been. A drift is started from near the Congdon shaft of this mine, toward the Hope and Wagner claims, and it is supposed this will show ore, as the two claims are now proved to be in the well mineralized part of the camp. This mine is now hoisting ore regularly for the smelter at Douglas, and it is supposed that the furnace which is to smelt its product, as well as that of the Lake Superior, will be ready by Oct. 15. Accidents to the furnace, as it was being tested last week, made this delay necessary.

• • •

In the Calumet & Pittsburg mine, which has been sinking its Briggs shaft for more than two years, the bottom has now been reached, and a station is being cut on the 1,120-foot level, from which drifts will be run to ore bodies known to exist. A winze that was being sunk from the 940-foot level, to connect with one of these drifts, has been started no less than three times, in an effort to get it in ground firm enough to stand. It is now going down satisfactorily. The Heatsot shaft of this mine is progressing very well, and the prediction is that it will be in ore by Jan. 1 next. A drift from the Junction to its 900-foot level, to the Pittsburg ground, has now passed the line by twenty feet and is in ore all the way, the character of the material changing for the better soon after the line was crossed.

• • •

In Junction the circular drifts being driven around the shaft on the 960-foot level has made about 250 feet progress with its connections, and of this more than 100 feet is ore. As soon as this drift is completed there will be drifts off into ore in various directions. It has been found by the work on this level that main contact between lime and porphyry dips away very sharply to the northeast, which not only gives Junction more and better mineral ground than any one hoped it had, but is a fact of the utmost interest to its neighbor, the Denn-Arizona. This dip is very pronounced, and Junction shaft, which a few hundred feet above was all in porphyry, is now some distance from it, and is surrounded by rich ore and leached ground, indicating still more ore below. This work is giving a more definite knowledge of the camp and the deep formation thany anything that has been done.

• • •

The Calumet & Arizona production for the month was 2,760,000 pounds of copper, Copper Queen's was 6,750,000, making the camp total 9,510,000 pounds. With the rest of Arizona this puts the territory ahead of Montana and the chief copper making commonwealth in the world.

• • •

The official date for blowing in the new furnace at the Calumet & Arizona has been set for October 15. The work of widening the converter building has taken a little longer than estimated, but the event can be looked for between October 10 and 15, certainly not later than the 15th.

• • •

Shattuck's new find on the 700-foot level was predicted by Supt. Pattison about a week before it was made. It is along a radiating fault plane, and is an important discoverey, running about 10 per cent copper. This is probably of great depth, quite likely rivaling the former discovery there, which probably runs from the 500 to the 800-foot level and beyond.

Ground is being excavated in preparation for placing the foundations for the new boiler, lately received, and the boiler will be placed in position during the coming week.

A party of directors and stockholders in the Denn and Shattuck properties are expected to arrive here sometime during the month.

The shaft of the Denn-Arizona mine is now down 500 feet, the result of four and one half months' work, which is said to be the best record ever made in the district. The shaft is 21 by 8 feet in the clear, and is timbered throughout.

Supt. B. M. Pattison stated the other day that the record in sinking on the Denn was better than that on the Shattuck-Arizona, and that in the month of August a clear 125 feet had been sunk. Foreman Joe Colley says he intends to send her down to the 900-foot level at pretty nearly the same gait, and if he keeps his word good the ore zone disclosed by the diamond drill will be reached by the first of January. Only six men have been employed in doing the actual work of sinking, and it can be considered to have been as good a job as has ever been done around Bisbee.

Word has been received by Supt. Pattison that the new hoist has been shipped, and will be here in the early part of the month. A new boiler is also on the way, and the plant will be installed immediately on arrival.

At the Copper Queen mines all of the new change houses have been completed and are ready for occupation. From now on every man employed about the different plants will have a locker to keep his clothes in and there will be no more stealing of which there has been considerable in the past.

A new cable for the big double drum hoist at the Holbrook was put in during the week and the old cable sent to the shops for repairs. The company is very careful of its hoisting apparatus, and weakness in any cable calls for an immediate change. A heavy demand will shortly be made upon the Holbrook for ore, and the heaviest shipments to the enlarged smelter will probably come from this shaft.

The mine has immense reserves and is developing new bodies of ore every day. It has one solid body of ore all blocked out and lying south towards the Spray shaft which is estimated to be worth $1,000,000 and has never been touched, except for sampling purposes. All of the ores are soft and easily taken down, necessitating only hand labor.

The usual daily shipments of ore are being made from all of the shafts of the company and increased development work is a feature of the past week.

Friday morning of last week the Saginaw company struck a seam of ore in a crosscut on the 350-foot level. Supt. Harrington upon being advised of the strike, gave orders to follow the ore and the coming week may demonstrate whether it leads to an ore body or not.

The formation in which the men have been working in this part of the mine has been showing strong mineral indications and the finding of ore has been expected at any time. Its disclosure on Friday gives hope, from general conditions, that it may develop into something good.

Word has also been received that the hoist and all other machinery for the new plant had been shipped on Sept. 15 and should arrive here within a week.

• • •

A deal was closed up during the week whereby J. C. Steele and his partners in the Bisbee Contact group of claims, situated about a mile west of the Bisbee West, mine, agree to transfer their interests to a syndicate of Michigan people for a consideration which will cover five figures. The property has good surface showings of ore, and it is understood that the people who will take it over will start development work as soon as they secure possession.

• • •

Work inaugurated by the Cochise Development company is progressing rapidly. The new road to the shaft has been completed, and about one half of the grading for the foundations of the hoisting and power plant is finished. The collar of the shaft has been retimbered, and everything necessary is being put in order for the reception of the machinery, which is expected to arrive within a week.

• • •

The Copper Buttes mine, consisting of a number of claims east of Phoenix, near the Globe district, is idle. It has been examined by engineers from the North, in the interest of leading copper development companies there, but no sale has taken place. There is a shaft nearly 500 feet deep, which is not in the lode, as the management considered it better to sink outside of it, and to drift to the ore bodies, but the unwisdom of this policy has been proved, as usual. The surface presents very seductive possibilities, with a vein of rich oxides that in itself would be sufficient to make a large mine, if it extends in depth.

• • •

The Blue Bell mine, south of here, is now some thirty feet in rich copper glance. A small exploratory shaft is going down, and will be continued so long as it is in ore.

• • •

Mining for monazite is becoming an industry in the Dragoon mountains. The mineral is so valuable that only a small amount of it is required to make a paying property. It is used in the manufacture of gas mantles.

• • •

Last week marked the blowing in of one of the large new furnaces at the plant of the Copper Queen company at Douglas. The new furnace that goes into commission now is known as No. 8 and will have a capacity for handling about 300 tons of ore per day. Immediately after No. 8 is in commission, work will be started on No. 6, which is expected to be ready for the handling of ore within sixty days. The new furnace will be used on Copper Queen ores and custom ores.

During the month of October the Copper Queen will begin the work of handling the old slag dump through the smelters and expect to ship about two hundred tons of slag per day until the dump is exhausted. In addition the regular shipment of Copper Queen ores is being steadily increased and the coming of January will find the Copper Queen producing more copper than ever before in its history.

At the Cuprite shaft, the newest development work inaugurated by the Copper Queen, a depth of 130 feet has been attained and the contract has been let for an additional 100 feet. Pete Moon is the contractor. The Cuprite is located about two thousand feet from the Shattuck & Arizona shaft.

The old dump of the Uncle Sam mine is being shipped to the smelter at Douglas by Contractor Yeager and Joseph Muirhead and Billy Reid are leasing on the West Atlanta and shipping good ore.

Last week an increased flow of water was encountered at the Lowell and at the same time a new body of ore is being exposed on the 1,200.

The well drilling force employed in sinking a deep well in the vicinity of the Copper Queen smelters at Douglas, abandoned the present location and will try elsewhere in the same locality. While there is an abundance of water for smelter operations at Douglas the Copper Queen has been engaged in an endeavor to develop an underground flow. The drill during the last week broke through into a lava flow and the operations were discontinued and the machinery will be moved next week.

• • •

Joe Colley, foreman at the Denn-Arizona mine, has made the best record for shaft sinking ever made in the Warren district.

• • •

The Cananea, Yaqui River and Pacific road, which now runs from here to the Greene Consolidated copper mines, to be extended southward toward Mexico City and northeast to the boundary line, to a connection with the Southern Pacific. It will ultimately reach the city from the northwest and will be an important line for mineral development of Sonora and Sinaloa. The railroad development now under way in this part of Northern Mexico is very important and will change the face of the country in a few years.

• • •

The Ray mine at Kelvin is working its old dumps and attempting experiments in chemical precipitation of the ores contained therein. This mine was at one time very active and many hundred thousand dollars were spent under the guidance of an English engineer whose knowledge of the West was less than of London methods.

• • •

Congress mine at Vulture is dropping ten stamps and is hoisting ore from 4,000 feet in the No. 5 shaft, which is now the deepest and most important part of the mine. It has several shafts that are 3,000 feet deep.

• • •

At Jerome three diamond drills are working, one on the Jerome Development company's ground, north of the United Verde, one of the Pfau and the other underground in the Verde Chief. None of the various Jerome properties have yet found the continuation of the wonderful United Verde ore shoots, and the theory that it is a chimney holds firm place. Of course continued work may discover other chimneys or other blowouts in the broad mineralized belt running along the summits of the Black Hills, from Verde south to the Bradshaw group near Prescott.

• • •

The Arizona Smelting company is already buying ores for its new $1,000,000 smelter, which is to be running in three months. This smelter promises record-breaking speed in mine settlements, and will revive many an abandoned property that is of value if it does not pay too much for transportation and smelter charges.

MINING INSTITUTE.

General Outline of Program for Menominee Range Meeting.

The following is a general outline of the program for the Menominee range meeting of the Lake Superior Mining Institute, beginning Oct. 17, subject to change by the committee in charge:

Tuesday—Visit the Chapin and Pewabic mines in the forenoon, leaving about noon for Crystal Falls, where the mines will be visited during the afternoon. The evening meeting will be held at Crystal Falls.

Wednesday—Visit the mines and points of interest around Sturgeon Falls and Vulcan. The evening meeting will be held in the courthouse at Iron Mountain.

Thursday—Excursion to Escanaba, to visit various points of interest, after which a boat trip to Gladstone to visit the Cleveland-Cliffs furnace is planned.

In order to enable the committee to arrange ample accommodations for all, it is necessary that they be advised as early as possible of the number who will attend.

Further information as to rates from the various points will be furnished to members as soon as possible. Also a list of papers to be read at the meetings.

The meeting promises to be one of the most interesting yet held, as the entire time will be devoted to the inspection of the iron industry.

A. J. Yungbluth, Ishpeming, is secretary.

ABOUT POWDER-PUFFS.

Philadelphia Bulletin: "The best powder-puff," said a druggist, "is made of down plucked from the breast of a live Norwegian swan baby, or cygnet. The next best powder-puff is down from a dead cygnet's breast.

"Something like 50,000 cygnets are killed annually in the islands of the Baltic and in Norway and Sweden to supply the world with powder-puffs. Only the down from the young swans' breasts goes into the puffs. A wonderful down it is, softer than snow, softer than cloud. A dozen puffs may be made from one cygnet.

"Here are some puffs mounted in plain bone. Here are some mounted in gold and jewelled with diamond chips. The one puff costs 50 cents, the other $5. Rich women buy the cheap puffs, poor women the dear ones. Why? Because rich women throw a puff away as soon as its first pure white delicacy is lost, while poor women use a puff till it is worn down to a stub."

Butte Copper Mines

Valuable Claims Owned By the North Butte Company—When New Shaft Is Completed Earnings of $300,000 Monthly Are Expected.

Butte, Mont., Oct. 7.—The North Butte Copper company now owns the Speculator, Edith May, Miners' union, Adirondack, Copper Dream, Jessie and Hancock claims, and one or two others the names of which have not yet been made public. At the present rate of production the company has ground opened for five years and is now producing at the rate of 3,000,000 pounds of copper a month at a cost of 5½ to 5¾ cents a pound. The company has been operating since last April, but the fact was not given to the public until last June, in which month the earnings showed $196,000. Owing to the fact that in August the main shaft was shut down for retimbering and the ore was hoisted through a neighboring mine by arrangement with the Anaconda company, it was expected that the earnings would show a considerable decrease, but instead there was an increase of $70,000 over July. When the new shaft is completed the production will be increased about 50 per cent, and the expense will be greatly lessened. The earnings will be about $300,000 and more monthly on the present price of copper.

The Amalgamated Copper company is earning at the rate of $5,640,000 a year on its bi-products of gold and silver. With an average output of 21,-000,000 pounds of copper a month from the company's smelters at Anaconda and Great Falls, its output of bi-products is about 800,000 ounces of silver and 300 ounces of gold a month, or at the rate of 9,600,000 ounces a year. At the present average price of silver that biproduct is worth to the Amalgamated, $5,568,000 a year and the gold $72,000.

• • •

Owing to the unusually low water in the mountain streams and rivers this year, the companies which have been supplying the Butte mines with electric power have been compelled to cut off the supply and the mining companies have returned to the use of steam. The result has been that the big compressors and machines have been put out of commission and smaller ones put in their places. There has been fear that some of the mines would have to suspend operations for a time, but the work will be kept up, though at greater expense and more inconvenience.

• • •

The directors of the Anaconda Mining company last week declared another dividend, payable the latter part of this month; the amount being $1.25 per share, an increase of 75 cents over the last one, which was declared in May. This dividend places the stock on an 8 per cent basis for the year. The par value of the stock is $85 per share and the authorized issue $30,000,-000, all of which is outstanding, 900,000 shares or about 75 per cent being held by the Amalgamated company. On the present basis the Anaconda will distribute among its shareholders this year about $2,400,000 as compared with $1,200,000 last year, when only a 4 per cent dividend was declared. The company paid $1 per share in 1902, 1903 and 1904.

• • •

The United Copper company, comprising the Heinze interests, is quite active at present and is maintaining a steady output of about 1,100 tons of ore per day. Its Minnie Healey mine is again in operation, and within a short time it will begin pumping water from the workings of the Lexington. The engine on this property is fast assuming shape. As the water is lowered the company will repair the openings now under the flood and follow this work by mining the ore. No attempt will be made to enter the ground from the Cora side until the water is well down and all possibility of an accident by flooding is past. The upper levels of the mine, those between the 400 and the surface, are yielding their customary quantity of average ore, about fifty tons per day, which is being shipped to the Heinze plant.

The Belmont mine is also giving up some ore, but no strike has been made in the property. The vein from which the ore is coming is small; the ore is of fair quality.

The Rarus and Cora are yielding the bulk of the ore being treated in the Heinze plant, the output of the former averaging 450 tons per day and that of the latter 400. In addition to the supply from these mines, the company is buying some custom ore and is getting some from lessees of its own claims.

Capt. Hoatson Talks

About the Mines In Arizona and At Butte and the Big Returns That Are Coming.

Thomas Hoatson, Thomas Burt and Thomas Nelson, returned last Saturday morning from their trip to Arizona and Montana, where they looked over some of the mining properties in which they are heavily interested, says the Houghton Gazette.

The "three Toms," as they are popularly called, are loud in their praise of the mines which they visited and believe that Lake Superior shareholders will soon be able to take life easy and live on the dividends obtained from their investments.

In speaking of the Arizona mines, and particularly of the Calumet & Arizona sisterhood, Capt. Thomas Hoatson stated that they were all looking well, in fact better than ever before. It is now two weeks since they were in Arizona. "Every mine in the group is showing ore in rich and large quantities," said Capt. Hoatson Saturday morning to a Mining Gazette reporter, except the Calumet & Pittsburg, and there they are working through lime, and will reach the ore body in a comparatively short time.

"The Lake Superior & Pittsburg, Pittsburg & Duluth and Junction all have located ore, and the two former will be shipping this week. The ore that they have already secured is rich, and there is no reason whatever for their not following in the footsteps of the Calumet & Arizona. The Junction is showing up well, in fact better than was expected, while the good old reliable C. & A. needs no statement to be made concerning it."

"The smelter was all ready to be blown in," continued Capt. Heatson. "It was practically complete when we visited it two weeks ago, but for a few details could have been in operation for several weeks. There is more than a sufficient quantity of ore to keep the furnace in operation coming from the Lake Superior & Pittsburg and Pittsburg & Duluth."

In continuing his remarks as to the Arizona mines, Capt. Hoatson stated that the chances for success of every one of the sisterhood proving big successes were never better. They are being well equipped, and with fine smelters to care for the rich ore sent up, there is nothing to fear except what to do with the dividends.

"Stockholders in the Calumet & Arizona mines can bank on one thing, and that is to take their certificates that are now returning them no dividends, and place them in a trunk for a short time, and forget that they own them. The surprise will then be more agreeable when they receive their dividend checks."

"The man that owns North Butte" stated Capt. Hoatson, "has a good thing. We visited that property last, and the remarkable showing evident there would surprise the most ardent supporter of this property. Rich ore is being met with everywhere, and I believe the man that sells at the present time is making a great mistake."

These Were Live Watermelons

They Scared the Negroes Nearly to Death and Broke Up a Whole Camp Meeting.

The Magazine of Fun relates the following: "It was a nice moonlight night—it always is durin' camp meetin', you know—an' we knew the colored camp meetin'ers would raid that patch about midnight an' sure enough purty soon they come crawlin' along, an' sort o' felt their way to the melons, an' there were those pigs asleep among the vines an' painted jest like the melons. Purty soon we—me an' Oscar an' old man Fosdyke an' the boys was a-hidin' where we could see the fun that night—purty soon we heard the leader, Shelt, say: 'My Lawdy! I got a big one!' an' then we saw him rise up with one o' them painted shoats in his arms, an' then that shoat woke up an' equealed an' wriggled loose. It didn't have to try very hard to git away, 'cause Shelt he let out a yell you could 'a' heerd from here to Mitchell's sawmill, an' jest threw his arms up in the air an' hollered for mercy, an' the shoat fell onto the ground an' started like a streak o' greased lightnin' over to'ards one o' the others what was jest a-pickin' up a melon. It was a real melon, but jest when he took holt of it another shoat jumped up beside it; an' o' course, when Shelt's shoat whizzed between his legs an' the other one up an' started a-running', he thought it was the same one, an' he let out a holler, too, I can tell you. This darky he dropped right down on his knees an' commenced a-prayin' as loud as he could talk, an' by that time all the other pigs was woke up, an' they all started runnin' around in circles like; an' one o' them run full tilt right into this feller's back an' upset him, an' made him fall smash into a big melon an' git it all over his head, an' then about four other pigs scrambled acrost him while he was a-layin' down, an' they whopped on across the patch an' tripped 'Lije up when he was tryin' to git away, an' he fell into the fence an' was so bad scared he couldn't move—jest laid ther and begged fer mercy while the hogs run over him. Soon as they all got past him he jest burrowed through that rail-fence like as if he was a pig himself, an' took out across the fields to-ards that camp meetin', yellin' and prayin' by turns, an' Shelt an' the other fellers went after him as fast as they could lick.

"They do say they was more excitement at that camp meetin' that night than ever was knowed of before. Shelt an' 'Lije an' the fellers what was with 'em never stopped until they was square in front o' the exhorter, an' they rolled to their knees and shouted that they wanted to be saved, an' saved quick."

Miss Beryl Halvorson has gone to Moberly, Mo., for a visit with her sister.

MRS. F. S. ALLEN OF DODGE CENTER,
President of Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs.

Clubs and Musical

The meeting of the Twentieth Century club, which was held Monday afternoon at the library, was one of most delightful in the history of the club. A large number of women were in attendance and the meeting was as representative a one as could be gathered under the conditions. A large number of women from other clubs called to greet Miss Statham upon her return from abroad as did many of the former members of the club and the number of faces new in club circles was not inconsiderable. A cup of tea was served following the meeting and an informal reception held, but in the program of this afternoon the greatest interest was shown.

"The Ethics of Shopping" was the subject which the women discussed and many thoughts were brought out in the informal talks that were given following the paper on "Christmas Shopping," by Mrs. F. L. Barows. Mrs. Barrows' paper was an able and most interesting one. She dwelt at length upon the evils of child labor and urged in closing a deeper and more intelligent interest in this question by the club women of the city.

In the five-minute talks which followed, given by a number of representative club women, the personalities of the speakers were brought out in a manner which is seldom evident in a discussion of like nature. "Typical" is a word which might be applied with more than ordinary force to the meeting and the words of the speakers.

Mrs. Washburn was the first speaker in the five-minute informal talks which followed Mrs. Barrows' paper. She spoke in a simple and direct way of the ethics of shopping and she urged a nicer consideration for the young woman clerk, not by palpably talking down to her, but in a clear realization of the fact that this independent young woman is doing her part in the world's work and every good member of society is doing hers.

"Our paths may often cross and she has it in her power to make my way easier with prompt, courteous and intelligent service as I may help her with thoughtful consideration and demanding no unnecessary service." The talk was one of the most delightful of the afternoon.

Mrs. H. C. Marshall was the next speaker of the afternoon. "Organized mentality in house management," said Mrs. Marshall, "is one of the conditions which must reign before shopping conditions can hope to be improved. The housekeeper who orders peaches in the morning to find out at noon that the sugar must be replenished, and that rubbers for the jars must come on the 2 o'clock delivery, and that the jars are giving out by 4 o'clock, is the one who makes the life of the merchant an arduous one. Some of the merchants with whom I have talked said that this was not an uncommon experience, and that on one Saturday, seven deliveries were made to one house, with a total account of 74 cents for the entire number of orders. The mere statement of such a case is sufficient to see that a large part of the unideal condition of shopping lies with ourselves. And we can see too, why Duluth may be a more expensive place to live. Consider and system in our ordering will help solve the question."

Miss Anderson spoke of the movement last year to secure the half holiday for the employes of the retail establishments and the need of the help of each individual woman in shopping.

Mrs. William S. Bishop reverted to the question of child labor, and spoke of the need of supplying the unoccupied children with some plan to keep them busy during the summer, when many boys are put to work simply to keep them busy. The need of manual training and cooking and sewing schools was the thought she emphasized.

Mrs. G. Hood Thompson in a practical manner made several practical suggestions. The need of compulsory education and the great need of a truant officer with a salary large enough to enable him to devote all his time to looking up the truants, were the side of the question upon which she spoke.

Mrs. J. D. Morrison gave the last talk of the afternoon, and in a charming word picture, she closed the discussion of the afternoon. She opened her talk by telling of a woman she saw one day in Macy's "very large and very disagreeable store" go from counter to counter to make her purchases with an immense bouquet of American beauty roses which dwindled one by one as she left each counter until upon leaving the store but one remained. And a little cash girl impulsively reached out to smell and touch it to find it a moment later in her own hands with the donor gone.

"We can not all go about giving away American beauty roses," said Mrs. Morrison, "but we can carry with us the white rose of pure intent, the yellow rose of joy shining in our faces and the pink rose of dainty consideration, with the red rose of a true heart endeavoring to live up to the ethics of life as related in Exodus, in negatives to be sure, but we find it further expounded in the sermon on the Mount. It will fit the ethics of shopping better than any other rule which we can follow."

The following resolution introduced by Miss Statham was unanimously passed:

"Be it resolved that the women of the Twentieth Century club be united in their efforts to reduce the rush that attends the Christmas season in the shops, by doing their shopping in November, and early in December.

"Be it further resolved that the clergymen of the city be asked to speak on this subject from their pulpits early in November."

At the first meeting of several of the clubs which took place this week increased enthusiasm has been noted among the members and the outlook for the club year is most gratifying. The Matinee Musicale held the first meeting of the year Monday afternoon and the membership is already greater than ever before in the history of the organization. The program was presented by Miss Ruth Rogers and Miss Frances Woodbridge.

Tuesday evening the first meeting of the Bishop's club was held. The meeting was in the form of a reunion and informal social. Readings were given by Miss Agnes Poirier and Miss Mary Shesgreen and vocal selections were given by Mrs. Carl Gilbert.

This afternoon the first meeting of the year of the Saturday club was held. The members of this club are among the most attentive and faithful and much systematic and real work is accomplished during the year.

Last Saturday evening a musicale was given at the home of Mrs. Morgan of 814 East Third street. An interesting program was presented by Misses Mary Morgan, Gertrude Murphy of Minneapolis, Mrs. Ferguson, Ethelwyn Morgan, Esther Wessinger, Marjorie Morgan, Myrna Newell, Myrtle Hobbs, Eleanora Kraft and Ruth Hobbs.

The Literature class of the Twentieth Century club will hold the first meeting of the year next Tuesday afternoon at the club room at the library. This class outers upon the year's work with perhaps the best preparation which it has enjoyed for some years. The outline of work is most attractive and with Mrs. C. H. Merrill as leader the program will undoubtedly prove most interesting and instructive. After the half hour devoted to current events the following program will be given:

"Slavic Race and Languages," Mrs. C. H. Merritt.
"St. Cyril," Mrs. A. H. Smith.
Poland from the development of literature to Cassimer the Great. (1333).

A general review of the work of the Needle Work guild, made by Mrs. O. H. Simonds, is as follows:

It was in June, 1895, that Mrs. T. D. Merrill invited a number of ladies to her home to meet Mrs. Hamill of Chicago. During the afternoon Mrs. Hamill gave a very interesting account of the Needle Work guild; how Lady Wolverton of England had conceived the happy thought of giving new garments—let me emphasize new—to the organized charities, and making the thought appeal to women by asking two few articles of clothing (bed linen, towels, etc.) of each person, surely not over-taxing anyone.

Like all good things, this method of helping the charities found its way to America. Mrs. John Wood Stewart of Glen Ridge, N. J., founded the Needle Work Guild of America, and today there are hundreds of branches in all parts of this United States. The simplicity of the work of this society finds a ready response from the busy women. One meeting of the section presidents and their directors is held each year. The round-up in October lasts but three days, and then the new articles are collected and exhibited, that the public may know what has been accomplished by the guild. Following this is the distribution of the articles to the different organized charities, after the reports of the secretary and treasurer and the election of officers, the year's work is over.

The Duluth branch of the Needle Work guild was organized in June, 1895. It now has 15 district presidents, 15 directors. Each section is supposed to report 110 new articles and one money subscription at the annual round-up, which occurs the last week of October.

During the nine years the organized charities, numbering eighteen, have received articles as stated below:

St. Luke's hospital	1,029
St. Mary's hospital	732
Woman's hospital	1,047
St. Anne home	88
Children's home	2,994
Ladies' Relief society	3,604
Associated charities	235
St. Anthony's guild	1,210
W. C. T. U., West Duluth	774
Duluth Bethel	2,189
Glen Avon Aid society	422
Star of Hope mission	410
St. Anthony's guild, West Duluth	1,215
Bethel Rescue home	488
St. James' Orphans' home	1,777
Humane society	268
Outside poor	167
A total of	18,351

The notes of acknowledgment from each of these organizations tell forcibly how much they appreciate the work of the Duluth branch of the Needle Work Guild.

There is little money asked by this society. Cash is sometimes given to buy suitable clothing, mostly shoes and hats. A certain amount of this fund is sent to the national office in Philadelphia where the leaflets and by-laws are printed and sent to each branch to be distributed among the members. By so doing a clear understanding is given of how the work is carried on. Only the national secretary is paid a salary.

A glimpse of the finances will show that the Duluth people interested in the Needle Work Guild are as generous in this charity as in many other things that appeal to their generosity:

The Duluth branch has the honor of having two of its presidents on the national board. In January, 1901, the secretary represented the Duluth branch at the annual meeting of the Needle Work Guild of America in Cleveland, Ohio. Be Guild of America in Cleveland, Ohio. Beside the secretary one member has attended two of the meetings of the national body. These meetings are most interesting as a report of the hundreds of branches from East to West and North to South is given.

The Duluth branch has organized a very successful branch in West Superior and one in Ashland. This in one of the features of each guild to organize in surrounding towns as far as possible. Mrs. Hamill, who was instrumental in organizing the Duluth branch is now the national president. Her address at the national meeting in 1903 and published in the Altruist gives the spirit of the Guild work and it may be a stimulant to us all to read it.

The most talked of affair among club women is the federation meeting and the possibility of the presidency coming to a Duluth woman. From present indications it seems very much as if Mrs. J. L. Washburn will be the choice of the federation for this office. Mrs. Allen of Dodge Center, who is the president now, it is understood will not be a candidate for the office again. The presidency of the federation for the coming term is an especial honor, because of the entertainment of the biennial at St. Paul in June of next year, and Duluth club women are hoping that the honor will be given Mrs. Washburn.

The delegates for the Twentieth Century club, who have been appointed by the president, Miss Statham, are Mrs. H. C. Marshall, and Mrs. F. L. Barrows, and as alternates, Mrs. A. H. Smith, and Mrs. M. R. Baldwin. Among others who will go are Miss Lydia Poirier, and the delegates from the Saturday club were elected this afternoon at the meeting.

THE HOUSE NEXT DOOR

By Frances Gillespie.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub Co.)

Jack examined her critically as she made her placid way down the shady street, all unconscious of his intent scrutiny. Her plain gray skirt and white shirt waist were decidedly prosaic, while her shoes—Jack gave an exclamation of despair.

"Why on earth can't her feet look like a girl's anyhow? I feel like going up behind her and slapping her on the back, saying, 'Well, old chap, how's business?' or 'Lend me ten dollars, like a good fellow.' Instead of that, when I am eventually presented to her highness, I am expected to blush and stammer, and fidget my collar and murmur my delight in an awed whisper. Think of the awful pity of a girl like that having millions!" And Jack closed his eyes to shut out the unwelcome vision.

The day was a radiant one, a cloudless sky, a fresh breeze from the water and just enough warmth to make one feel pleasantly lazy; the kind of a day that inclines one to think out and plan great things, only to forget them afterwards.

Jack's long figure stretched itself luxuriantly in the hammock and the smoke from his pipe circled dreamily above his head while he eyed the stately walls of his next door neighbor's mansion.

She had only been his next door neighbor for two weeks, but two weeks in the quaint, sleepy little town had been sufficient to set afloat reports of her wealth and extravagance well nigh unbelievable.

Simmons, the fruit man, had ventured as far as the front door, and then had met disaster in the form of a cocker spaniel of an inquiring disposition and with an abnormally developed taste for old clothes. Simmons had retired in undignified haste, but not before he had caught a glimpse of luxury hitherto unknown in Cedarsville, and had left a generous portion of his trousers with the spaniel.

Naturally Simmons was authority upon all things pertaining to the grand and exclusive house behind its high green hedge. He had drawn upon his fertile imagination and the result was a series of startling tales.

"The guy at sicked the dog on me must a been a deef," he told his breathless audience at the feed store; "and ye oughter saw the diamond spittoons setting 'round."

If Simmons' audience had been at all oddly critical, they might have objected here, for the lady of the millions lived alone, except for a young girl companion, and there was hardly need for the article mentioned, diamond or otherwise, except for the use of the aforesaid dead swell.

But no one of Simmons' hearers seemed to mind this flagrant departure from the paths of truth. On the contrary his wildest flights of fancy were received with profound respect.

The first glimpse of the fairy princess had been a trifle disconcerting to Simmons, and a great disappointment to the expectant populace of Cedarsville. She had appeared at church one Sunday, and had entered and taken her seat before the curious congregation realized that she was in their midst. Her gown was a plain dark blue serge and her broad, good natured face was framed by a mannish straw sailor.

Jack, who occupied a point of vantage directly behind the lady, had distinctly heard her shoes creak as she came heavily down the aisle.

Jack was talking tenderly to his pipe while the hammock swayed to and fro. "The girl I marry must be little and dainty and sweet. The fluffy kind that has dimples and a sunny smile; the kind that would smile when I was late to supper, and even darn my socks with a smile on her face." Jack's eyes misted dreamily while his fancy pictured this girl of his dreams in various distracting domestic poses. He saw her presiding at his lonely bachelor breakfast table, pouring his coffee and carrying it around to him herself. I'd rather have the millions," he muttered, half under his breath.

It was not the first time he had indulged in these delectable dreams.

Suddenly he sat up, almost tumbling out of the hammock in his haste. Across his neighbor's yard in mad flight ran the brave cocker spaniel and behind him, hotly pursuing, came Jack's own bull pup, Mike.

Just as Jack cleared the hedge dividing the two yards Mike landed on the spaniel's back, and immediately the air was filled with the spaniel's shrill yelps and Mike's deep-toned barks.

Jack ran without ceremony to where his neighbor's garden hose was lying and, quickly turning on the current, ran back to the whirling, squirming mass of black and brown. The cold water put an end to all hostilities and the two enemies stood apart and eyed each other disdainfully.

"You put up a pretty good fight, old man," condescended Jack, as he examined the spaniel's wounds, "but I'm afraid you got the worst of it."

"Why, how ridiculous!" said a clear young voice, and Jack looked up and straight into a pair of glorious indignant gray eyes. He had a confused impression of a dainty, delicious pink gown, then he suddenly remembered his pipe and disreputable trousers and wet shirt.

"How ridiculous!" repeated the girl. "You know King beat. Your poor doggie," she said, the gray eyes suddenly filling with tears; and then, regardless of her pink ruffles, she sat down on the ground and, taking the dog's head in her lap, began to tie her diminutive handkerchief about his ears.

Jack had said no word; speech was an utter impossibility and unnecessary. It was the girl he had always dreamed of and loved in those happy, blessed dreams. He knew she would look just the way she did, and speak with just such a sweet, musical voice. Her sunny hair, piled high on her head, seemed to Jack's enchanted eyes like purest gold. He wanted to put his hand on its shining strands; and her dainty hands, so deftly bandaging the dog's ears—Jack was seized with an overwhelming desire to catch them and hold them in his own.

The unconscious girl was far too busy tying up her battle-scarred hero and murmuring pet names to the unappreciative beast to notice Jack's intent and worshipful gaze; but there must have been some subtle, compelling power in his steadfast eyes, for suddenly she raised her own and their glances met. It was only for a second that she looked, but in that time her heart passed from out of her keeping; then her clear gaze faltered and a hot red tide surged over her face and throat; her very ears were dugilag.

"You are Miss Beardsley's friend, are you not?" Jack heard himself saying.

An indefinable something flashed across the girl's face, then she smiled.

"I believe I am," she answered unsteadily; "I should hate to think I was her enemy."

"I knew I should meet you," said Jack; "I have always wanted to."

"Indeed!" murmured Miss Beardsley's friend, a mystified look in her eyes. Her heart was beating rapidly. It seemed to her that something sweet and precious had suddenly come to life within her; she was deliciously nappy, but she could not tell why.

She closed her eyes and passed her hand across the brow, then the trees and sky seemed to be whirling and she seemed to be floating gently through the air.

Jack reached her just in time to save her from a fall; for one brief, intoxicating instant he had his arm about her; then she sat up and smiled faintly.

"I am all right," she told him; "don't be frightened, it was only the sight of so much blood."

Jack's senses were swimming; how many thousand years of happiness had he lived since his first look into those gray eyes?

"You will think me a fool," he said; "I am one perhaps. I do not even know your name; I do not care; I only know that I want you for my wife. I love you, dear; I have always loved you. It would be the same if I had met you a year ago or many years from now. Will you marry me now, at once? I live just across the hedge, you wouldn't have far to go; you wouldn't be any one's companion any more except mine, for life. Will you trust me, dear?"

The girl's face was quite white and her eyes glowed darkly.

She bent slowly toward him like a slender swaying flower.

"I love you, too," she whispered tremulously. "Oh, what is Time to such a love as this?"

Then Jack forgot the danger of being seen from the road, and all other things earthly, while he held her closely, tenderly in his arms.

A few minutes later she raised her flushed face from his damp shoulder and smiled into his adoring eyes. "Isn't it too bad that our dogs are not better friends?" she said.

Jack came back to earth. A short masculine figure was coming up the street. Jack recognized the gray skirt with a guilty start.

"You have not told me your name yet, love you? I forgot to ask you," he said hurriedly.

"My name," she said slowly, "is Doris Beardsley, and that"—motioning to the approaching figure—"is my companion, Miss Mimms."

Get Well—Keep Well

The Color of Clothing Affects One's Health—Black Clothes Transmit Heat, But Absorb Light—Interesting Experiment on Grass—White Clothes For Summer Use—Yellow Hat Lining a Preventive of Sun Stroke—Why Tan-Colored Skin Does Not Blister—Photographers Find Orange Paper Valuable.

BY EDWARD B. WARMAN.
(Author of Scientific Physical Training, Conductor Get Well-Keep Well Club.)
(Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

If you have not given the subject any special thought, you may well wonder what connection there can be between the color of clothing and health. The salutary influences of solar light (not solar heat, merely) are not sufficiently well known to have their therapeutic value appreciated. The sun has its effect, beneficially or otherwise, on everything in the universe, the human body not excepted. There are certain cases in which one needs the heat of the sun, but there are many more in which the light of the sun is of greater value.

DO NOT WEAR BLACK IN SUMMER.

Black clothes, black hats, black shoes, should be generally discarded in midsummer (and in all tropical countries) when exposed to the direct rays of the sun. It is an indisuptable fact that, in the realm of color, black transmits the heat, but absorbs the light of the sun.

If you are obliged to ride, walk or work while being exposed to the heat of the sun, then it is a matter of grave consideration as to the color of your clothing. Danger and destruction lurk in the heat of the sun, but not in the light thereof.

Black is detrimental to the growth of vegetation, as well as to the best results of the human body. Some years ago, in Detroit, Mich., I pegged down a square yard of dark muslin on a well-kept lawn, and by the side of it a square yard of white muslin. I left them there during the month of July. At the end of the month I removed both pieces. Underneath the white cloth (which had reflected the heat but transmitted the light) the grass was as green and fresh as when first covered. Not so underneath the black cloth (which had transmitted the heat, but absorbed the light); there not a single spear of green grass was to be found; all was parched and dead.

Fancy our soldiers and sailors in Manila, or the people of India, or in any of the tropics, dressed in black. If you have doubts upon this subject, sit in the shade, with your feet in the sun some hot day, one foot in a black shoe, the other in a tan. The heat will soon convince you upon which foot is the black shoe. One ounce of practitive effect the various colors of clothing produce on the human body, when exposed to the sun. It will be seen that white produces the least percentage of heat; black the largest.

THE EFFICACY OF YELLOW.

Deep yellow or orange-colored cloth, as a covering for the head, or as a lining for the hat, is a preventive of sunstroke. It is not the overheating of the blood that causes sunstroke. It is directly due to the effect of the sun on the head. The blood may become overheated by exercise or by overfeeding, or by intoxicants, and, with the added humidity in the air, we have "heat prostrations" as a result, but not sunstrokes. This preventive is a simple one, and will admit of a thorough scientific investigation. The yellow of the cloth absorbs, dissolves, neutralizes the destructive element of the particular ray that is detrimental to the brain.

An overseer in New Orleans complained of very severe headaches in consequence of being exposed to the heat of the sun day by day. In compliance with my request he lined his hat, even the brim, with orange-colored cloth. But a few days passed when he said: "I am thoroughly convinced of the truth of your theory. At first I noticed the good effect, but thinking it might be due to my imagination, I left them there during the month of July. At the end of the month I removed both pieces. Underneath the white cloth (which had reflected the heat but transmitted the light) the grass was as green and fresh as when first covered. Not so underneath the black cloth (which had transmitted the heat, but absorbed the light); there not a single spear of green grass was to be found; all was parched and dead.

THE EFFICACY OF YELLOW.

Deep yellow or orange-colored cloth, as a covering for the head, or as a lining for the hat, is a preventive of sunstroke. It is not the overheating of the blood that causes sunstroke. It is directly due to the effect of the sun on the head. The blood may become overheated by exercise or by overfeeding, or by intoxicants, and, with the added humidity in the air, we have "heat prostrations" as a result, but not sunstrokes. This preventive is a simple one, and will admit of a thorough scientific investigation. The yellow of the cloth absorbs, dissolves, neutralizes the destructive element of the particular ray that is detrimental to the brain.

An overseer in New Orleans complained of very severe headaches in consequence of being exposed to the heat of the sun day by day. In compliance with my request he lined his hat, even the brim, with orange-colored cloth. But a few days passed when he said: "I am thoroughly convinced of the truth of your theory. At first I noticed the good effect, but thinking it might be due to my imagination, I left them there during the month of July. At the end of the month I removed both pieces. Underneath the white cloth (which had reflected the heat but transmitted the light) the grass was as green and fresh as when first covered. Not so underneath the black cloth (which had transmitted the heat, but absorbed the light); there not a single spear of green grass was to be found; all was parched and dead.

Fancy our soldiers and sailors in Manila, or the people of India, or in any of the tropics, dressed in black. If you have doubts upon this subject, sit in the shade, with your feet in the sun some hot day, one foot in a black shoe, the other in a tan. The heat will soon convince you upon which foot is better friends?" she said.

Jack came back to earth. A short masculine figure was coming up the street. Jack recognized the gray skirt with a guilty start.

"You have not told me your name yet, love you? I forgot to ask you," he said hurriedly.

"My name," she said slowly, "is Doris Beardsley, and that"—motioning to the approaching figure—"is my companion, Miss Mimms."

Always Ready With a Lobster

How the Up-to-Date Restaurant Keeper Manages to Fill His Orders—Two Hundred Articles of Diet For Two Thousand Diners—Much of Marketing Done By Telephone.

New York, Oct. 7.—(Special to The Herald.)—On the daily bill of fare of a first-class restaurant in a large city the hungry diner ordinarily finds from 200 to 250 different ways of satisfying his appetite—to say nothing of the various ways of satisfying his thirst. To eat this startling array of edibles mine host of the modern inn expects daily from perhaps 2,000 persons up to more than thrice that number, according to his location and the size of his patronage. Some days there is an unexpected increase in the number of patrons, and other days an equally unexpected falling off; the kind of food demanded varies with the weather. On a warm day, for example, meats and soups are likely to become a drug on the market, and the multitude, especially at the noon hour, clamors for milk and crackers, salads, cold meats and frozen deserts. A cold snap in the late autumn completely upsets the summer dishes. There is, in fact, almost no fixed demand, and yet there must always be a sufficiency of whatever happens to be the need of the hour—a combination of circumstances that makes the life of the restaurant keeper anything but an existence of dull monotony.

Restaurants which feed thousands of people in a day are of recent origin, and many of the problems of their managers were unknown to the keepers of the eating houses of twenty-five years ago. On the other hand, the man at the head of the twentieth century establishment has facilities for doing business of which the old-timers had little conception. Cold storage and rapid transit enable the restaurant keeper of today to draw on the gardens of the South, the woods of the North and the ranges of the West for his supplies. Electric lights and electric fans help to make the restaurant attractive and keep it cool. If the building includes the latest architectural whimsies, the air breathed by the diners is filtered and guaranteed to be as pure as the spring water served on the tables. And the restaurant keeper has the telephone. Of the ten or twelve thousand Americans who subscribe to the telephone service of the Bell companies few find the invention of Dr. Bell more useful in business than do the men who feed the multitude.

"What we would do nowadays without the telephone," said a restaurant keeper the other day, "is hard to imagine. It's the one thing in this day of big crowds and long bills-of-fare that enables us to keep things moving without having either to overstock the larder in advance or try to persuade our patrons to take something else just as good when there's an unusually hard run on some special article. And we can't tell when there's going to be such a run. Lobsters, for example. Sometimes we won't sell a broiled lobster for half a day; and then again we may get calls enough in an hour to make us see the finish of the stock that we procured in the morning. That's where the telephone comes in, for it's as good as being next door to the market and whenever we see anything running out it's a mere matter of pressing the button, so to speak, and the provision dealer does the rest within fifteen or twenty minutes."

Although the method of preparing this enormous daily table for its thousands of guests varies with different restaurant keepers the main plan of campaign is very similar. The restaurant man lays out his bill-of-fare for a week in advance, very much as an orderly housekeeper might do for a small family—with the marked difference that he considers every seasonable edible and must lay his plans in accordance with market prices and a general knowledge of what humanity at large will consider tempting. Beef, of course, is a standby, one well known restaurant consuming about three tons of beef weekly in summer and more in winter. Flour, for bread, cakes, pies and various other purposes, is, of course, another commodity that is readily and periodically provided for.

But after these and a few other staple articles are settled, the restaurant man is plunged into a maze of possibilities and probabilities—the whole question of vegetables, fruits and especially milk, being more or less dependent upon the weather of a day that has not yet developed. The bill of fare has been so arranged that it covers all possible conditions, but just what part of it will be most seriously attacked by the devouring multitude is the unknown quantity in the restaurant keeper's equation—and his profits are very largely based on not ordering more of any one thing than will be eaten within a fixed period.

Aside from the big order twice a week of food articles that will keep in good condition for several days, the restaurant man is a daily marketer, sometimes, in fact, doing his entire day's marketing each morning. In some cases he goes to the market in person, and in others he telephones his entire order. Markets are the first places open for retail business in a large city. And the restaurant man is one of the very earliest citizens to get down to business. Six o'clock finds him starting his round of the different departments of their restaurant, taking stock of their different needs and making up his market list. Seven o'clock is likely to find him in communication with his market either in person or over the telephone.

Before making up his list of edibles, however, he casts a very wise eye at the weather. Your experienced restaurant manager, in fact, usually becomes a pretty good weather sharp. And he doesn't, as a rule, pay much attention to the reports of the weather bureau, for his curiosity is confined to very local conditions in which he trusts his own weather wisdom more than that of any official prophet. The weather is the real keynote of his market order. Having made up his mind what it is likely to be for the next twenty-four hours, he plans his market order to suit the expected kind of appetite.

The first order, however, is only a beginning, although a large part of the edible kingdom, animal, vegetable and liquid, the quantities varying according to the promises of the thermometer and the "look" of the morning weather. As the day advances the actual conditions of weather and appetite begin to reveal themselves and then the telephone comes into play to call up the reserves.

A morning that started out cool turns warm and the restaurant manager calls up his milk dealer and orders a reinforcement of cold milk. Or the kitchen reports that there has been an unusual demand for broiled mackerel during the breakfast hour; again the telephone, and the fish dealer is on his way to supply fresh mackerel. A man coming in, who particularly orders a cut of meat this is not in the supply department, and the telephone summons his supreme desire straight from the market to the kitchen. Nor does the telephone serve only to connect the restaurant with the market, but it connects one restaurant with another, thus adding to the sources of supply open to any sudden demand. And the market man, of course, is equally in telephonic touch with other market men if he happens to be out of whatever the restaurant needs in a hurry.

The restaurant man, however, is not the only persons who uses the telephone to simplify the problem of eating one's meals comfortably and promptly and the restaurant telephone is kept pretty well employed during the eating hours by men who telephone orders from their business offices. Patrons make appointments over the telephone with their wives at restaurants; and such appointments with business men make it possible to carry on business straight through the lunch or dinner hour, a practice which is certainly not the best thing in the world for the digestion. In some dining rooms, the use of the telephone even goes so far as to place an instrument at each table; but there are still many places into which this final expression of telephonitis has yet to penetrate.

From an economic point of view, therefore, the telephone has greatly simplified the problem of feeding thousands of persons daily and doing it at the least possible cost to the individual feeder. The restaurant man, thanks to the telephone, gives "next door" to every food product that appears on his bill-of-fare; and yet as one restaurant keeper, and not an old one at that, said recently: "It's not so very long ago since I had to walk two miles to order a ton of coal."

Was a Singing Muskellunge

Fish Would Hum and Bark as Long as He Heard the Sweet Strains of Music.

The fish liar has not won himself much fame this year, and patient people who can sit by a pool and hold a pole for hours have failed to bring back to town the usual number of yarns. There is one man, however, who risks his reputation on a fish story which had its beginning on a Wisconsin lake, says the Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"I was out in a boat with a guide," says this man, "and had fished for three hours without getting a strike. We had just given up all hope of making a catch, when the guide said he smelled muskellunge, and was sure there was a big fellow in the water close by the boat. I threw out my line in every direction, but couldn't stir up anything. Finally the guide pulled from his pocket a large nail and began rapping on a piece of metal. A few seconds later I saw a ripple on the water twenty feet from the boat. This ripple pointed toward the boat, and gradually approached it. When within three feet of us a huge fish slowly raised its head a foot out of the water. The guide began beating faster with the nail, and the fish began humming, first low, and then louder, until the noise it made resembled the bark of a sea lion. I grabbed an oar and was going to dispatch the big fellow, when the guide motioned for me to sit down. After the fish had sung and barked for two or three minutes, the guide made the noise on the other side of the boat, and the fish swam around there.

"What's the matter with the crazy thing?" I asked the guide.

"It's a singing muskellunge,' said the guide. 'I have seed many ov 'em.'

"I asked him to let me kill it, but the guide said it would be worse luck than killing a toad. He told me to be still just a minute and he would show me something. And he did, too, I can tell you. He held the piece of metal in the bottom of the boat and beat on it very rapidly. The fish sank beneath the water, and I was just about to say he had gone away when the surface of the lake opened and a muskie as big as a school boy leaped into the air and fell into the boat, barking like sixty. I grabbed my knife and was about to stab it between the eyes, when the guide raised a protesting hand. He carefully wrapped the big fellow up in a net, tied a rope to the bundle and dropped it into the water. He said he was going to tie the fish up near the shore, where it would be an attraction that would bring a rush of people to the resort. But the fish thought differently about it. When he saw he was being towed to shallow water he gave a terrific flirt with his big tail and tore the net to pieces. Then to show how he resented that sort of treatment, he darted away for ten feet, and, with one flicker of his tail, almost blinded both the guide and myself with the water he dashed at us.

"Some day when I get time I'm going back there and catch that fish. What lake is it in? Think I'm fool enough to tell! No, sir, I want the fun myself."

ELECTION OF SENIOR CLASS IS SPIRITED

Rival Factions Have Great Time In Choosing Officers—Ashland Football Bunch Cancel Game and High School Team Is Playing Aitkin.

The first senior class meeting took place Wednesday afternoon and the election of officers was the most hotly contested of any election in the high school for many a long day. Ever since the beginning of school there have been two factions in the class that have been booming different sets of candidates with the greatest of vigor. Since the meeting they have been christened the Mac Fadden and the Abraham factions, after the two young men who did the bulk of the talking for each side. The followers of MacFadden were for the most part successful.

Rudolph Abraham opened the battle for his party, nominating Frank Crassweller for president. Charles MacFadden nominated Ed Borgen, and Verner Claypool was also nominated. Ed Borgen was elected amid cheers from the MacFadden followers. Charles MacLennan, the retiring president, resigned the chair to Borgen, who took charge of the meeting during the rest of the election.

In the election of vice president, the MacFaddenites were again successful. Neil Loranger was chosen for the place. The secretaryship was closely contested, but again the followers of MacFadden were triumphant and elected their candidate, Ethel Becklinger. The treasurer's position was filled by electing Henry Becker. Both the MacFadden and Abraham men claim him a stheir candidate and it is thought that he was honored by the undivided vote of both parties. For sergeant-at-arms, Robert Forsyth and Wallace Quimby received the unanimous vote of the class.

It was not, however, until the time for the election of mascot arrived that the death grapple between the rival parties was enjoyed. Each of the two factions seemed determined that the leader of the other side should be the keeper of the fortunes of the class. The sons of Abraham therefore nominated Charles MacFadden, whose followers retaliated by proposing "Dude" Abraham for the place. The two candidates were exiled from the room according to custom that the class might be free to discuss their merits without restraint and it is rumored that a wordy battle ensued in the privacy of the hall. The election was close, but in the end the Abraham men triumphed, electing Charles MacFadden by a good majority.

The office of class historian was allotted to Margaret Whipple. She will write the class history and, if the usual program for class night is again carried out she will read the history then.

The election of the Zenith board was postponed to the next meeting. There are no prominent candidates for the position of editor-in-chief in the field.

IS MEETING AITKIN.

High School Football Team Playing the Bunch From There.

This afternoon at the Athletic park, the high school team is trying conclusions with the bunch from Aitkin. The game with Ashland that was to have been played on this date has been cancelled by the Ashland management.

This game will be watched with interest by those interested in local football, as it is the first the boys have played since they have been under the direction of Coach Phillips. He took charge of the squad Wednesday, and has been putting them through a strenuous course of football tactics every afternoon since, trying to eliminate as far as possible the ragged work shown by the boys last Saturday.

Mr. Phillips has had a large gridiron experience, and is expected to turn out a winning team. At Marshalltown, Iowa, he had charge of athletics for six years, and coached the football squad for four. His actual playing experience was at Illinois university, where he was on the varsity eleven for the whole four years of his course. He is at present instructor in physics at the high school, and his duties in this capacity are so strenuous that it is uncertain whether he will be able to continue coaching the team for the entire season.

Regarding the condition of the team and the game, Coach Phillips says that there had been a most marked improvement in the team work of the boys during the week, and that the spirit they show, and the material in the school is a positive assurance of a fine team. The chief fault of the boys now is fumbling, which may put their goal in danger this afternoon, where otherwise their work is too good to give the Aitkin contingent the slightest chance of scoring.

The line-up of the Aitkin eleven can not be secured, but the team is said to be a strong one. Aitkin has turned out some of the foremost athletes in the state, and the little town is said to be football crazy this fall. Safford, who is to play center on the university team is an old Aitkin man, having come to the Duluth high school to graduate after taking the first three years of his course at Aitkin. The visitors are said to be very heavy, but not so fast as the local boys. Altogether, it is regarded as the most important game outside of those with the Twin City teams, and even a defeat would not augur ill for the local's final success, as it is said that Parks, last year's star half, will be back in the game for the Mechanic Arts game next Saturday, and there is a rumor that others of the old players will get back on the team in time for the big games with Minneapolis Centrals and Superior.

The following are the bunch that will face Aitkin this afternoon:
Center, Coventry.
Right guard, Forsyth or Crawford.
Right tackle, Spencer.
Right end, Harold Bowen.
Quarter back, Crassweller.
Left half, McKinley.
Right half, Cummings or Frink.
Full back, MacDevitt.

School Notes.

Tuesday morning in chapel Supt. Denfeld spoke to the school on "Industry," which, in connection with Mr. Smith's talk Monday on the advantages of higher education, has induced a regular epidemic of hard work in the school such as has never before been seen.

* * *

There have been no very definite arrangements made regarding lectures for the school for the coming year, but it is thought that Mr. Seymour, the historical lecturer, who made himself so popular on his two former visits here, will be here some time during the winter. Marshall Darrach will probably not visit the city this year.

* * *

The game with St. Paul mechanic arts for next Saturday is now a certainty. Manager Stalker received a letter from the St. Paul management to that effect Wednesday.

* * *

Prof. Ulrich is still too busy to commence the work of the Agassiz club, and the society will probably not meet until the latter part of the month at the earliest.

* * *

The treasurer of the athletic association has again a job which is not a sinecure. The proceeds of the Two Harbors game were nearly $75.

* * *

The latest reports from the senior class meeting were that Charles MacFadden was looking in vain for the class constitution in order that he may ascertain whether a candidate may resign office. Mr. MacFadden claims that the duties are too numerous to permit of his adding to them the responsibilities entailed in the office of class mascot.

* * *

The junior class meeting will be held next week. So far the only prominent candidate for the president is Elmer MacDevitt.

* * *

The freshman-sophomore football game is under discussion, but as neither team has begun to practice, it will not be played till the latter part of the season.

The Latest Books and Magazines

"King Leopold's Soliloquy; a Defense of His Congo Rule,"
By Mark Twain.

"The Young Man and the World," By Senator Beveridge.

Leading Features of the Magazines For October.

The issue of whether Leopold, king of the Belgians, is or is not abusing his power as ruler of the Congo Free State, and is or is not responsible for long series of incredible cruelties in that far-off land, seems to be becoming a live one. Not long ago this column reviewed a book by a former Minnesota man, Henry Wellington Wack, setting forth the case for the defense, and showing, in a ponderous tone, that Leopold's rule of the Congo was in the interests of humanity and religion.

Now comes into court Mark Twain, the glorious old lion of American letters, as attorney for the prosecution in the case of Civilization against Leopold of Belgium. His brief is in the form of a pamphlet, entitled "King Leopold's Soliloquy; a Defense of His Congo Rule." If anybody happens to be an admirer of Leopold—which is extremely improbable—he should not be misled by the sub-title. It is a scathing arraignment of the long-whiskered king, charging him in plain, crushing terms with innumerable horrors. Those who know Mark Twain's style need not be told that the book is vigorous, and that he enters into the prosecution with heart and soul and with all the force of his tremendous and uncommon genius. The book pictures Leopold reading and discussing pamphlets in which he is attacked, and in which charges most horrid are made against him. For instance, he says:

"They have told how for twenty years I have ruled the Congo state, not as a trustee of the powers, an agent, a subordinate, a foreman, but as a sovereign—sovereign over a fruitful domain four times as large as the German empire—sovereign absolute, irresponsible, above all law; trampling the Berlin-made Congo charter under foot; barring out all foreign traders but myself; restricting commerce to myself through concessionaires, who are my creatures and confederates; seizing and holding the state as my personal property, the whole of its vast revenues as my private 'swag'—mine, solely mine—claiming and holding its millions of people as my private property, my serfs, my slaves; their labor mine, with or without wage; the food they raise not their property but mine; the rubber, the ivory and all the other riches of the land mine and gathered for me by the men, the women and the little children under compulsion of lash and bullet, fire, starvation, mutilation and the halter."

This is a succinct epitome of the charges, which are horrible and unprintable in their details. Again Mr. Clemens quotes Leopold as repeating charges against him, thus:

"If the innocent blood shed in the Congo state by King Leopold were put in buckets and the buckets placed side by side, the line would stretch 2,000 miles; if the skeletons of his 10,000,000 of starved and butchered dead could rise up and march in single file, it would take seven months and four days to pass a given point; if compacted together in a body they would cover more ground than St. Louis covers, World's fair and all; if they should all clap their bony hands at once, the grisly crash could be heard at a distance of—." And so on.

It is a terrible philippic against Leopold, both as to his own personal character and his rule of the Congo.

It is published by the P. R. Warren company, Boston.

Senator Beveridge of Indiana has given his second book to the reading public. The first one, the "Russian Advance," had a remarkable sale and proved invaluable to the many students of Russo-Japanese affairs during the late war between the two countries. Senator Beveridge's first book was written after a tour of the two countries and personal interviews with the leading statesmen of both nations. The senator's second literary venture, which has just been issued from the press of the Appleton company, New York, is likely to prove a more popular seller than the first. Its title is "The Young Man and the World." Senator Beveridge has been contributing a series of articles to a Philadelphia publication which have attracted attention throughout the country and it was this series which suggested to his publishers a theme for his latest book.

The book addresses itself to young men, and reads as if the author were counselling with, rather than advising, the young men. Senator Beveridge is himself a graduate of the hard school of experience. He took a full course in the preparatory school of adversity. He started at the bottom of the ladder and has reached the top in an incredibly short time. The author omits the first personal pronoun and the book is entirely free from anything suggestive of autobiography. The Indiana senator, however, has taught the young man of the country by example as well as by precept. He started in life as a ploughboy; was in turn a logger in the woods of the Northwest, later he held the lines over a team of mules hitched to an oldfashioned scraper along a line of railroad construction. Later when he took up a college course, he paid his expenses by selling subscription books out of school hours, and when he completed his college course his health was broken from over-study and he sought restoration as a cowboy on the plains.

The new book was written during the senator's summer vacation in Wisconsin. Senator Beveridge is a poor man. He is one of the exceptions that prove the rule that the American senate is a millionaire body. In Indianapolis he lives plainly, boarding with a private family, and in Washington he is an exponent of the simple life. When Mr. Beveridge came to the senate, he learned what nearly every man has experienced in public life—that the salary of the average senator and member of congress is hardly sufficient to meet the expenses of living. Instead of trying to augment his income by acting as attorney for corporations or deriving pecuniary benefits from investments that might seem inconsistent with a proper discharge of his official duties, he turned his attention to the literary field, which proved not only attractive to him but remunerative, and has been appreciated by the reading public.

The North American Review for October will interest a wide circle of readers. Richard Olney, formerly United States secretary of state, considers the "Legal Aspects of Congressional Railroad Rate-Making." His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons discusses "Lynch Law: Its Causes and Remedy." Andrew Carnegie descants upon the advantage which would accrue to the world from "An Anglo-French American Understanding." Jeremiah W. Jenks, professor of political economy in Cornell university, makes some suggestions as to "How to Extend Commerce in the Far East." Emmet O'Neal answers in the negative the question, "Can Congress Reduce Representation?" and the Rev. Dr. J. F. Mullany presents a number of reasons why he answers in the negative the question, "Is Catholic Education a Menace to American Institutions?"

The October issue of the Arena is exceptionally strong. Every reader will be interested in Hon. J. Warner Mills' amazing and almost incredible history of the Denver water works, which appears in his series on "The Economic Struggle in Colorado" under the title of "The Pageant of the Throne Powers;" in "The Conservation of Monopoly," by John Moody, the author of "The Truth About the Trusts;" "The American Doctrine of Shipping Rights," and the exceptionally fine story, "A Pastoral of the Hills." The Arena is honest, fearless and outspoken and every number contains several articles of exceptional interest.

Although not a year old Smith's Magazine has already won a reputation for the vital, telling short stories which it contains. In the November number there is a story called "The Snobs," by George Bronson-Howard, that is a delightful commentary on certain phases of social life. There are also stories and articles by such authors as Lillian Bell, Vincent Harper, Alexander Hume Ford, Channing Pollock a.d Mary J. Holmes.

A strong warning of the danger that confronts America in the rapid increase of child labor leads the October number of Men and Women. Under the caption of "The Modern Slaughter of the Innocents," Owen R. Lovejoy, of the national child labor committee, contributes a startling array of facts and figures that are bound to quicken the public to a sense of the impending industrial and sociological calamity. Next to this powerful article is the sturdy appeal of Gov. Folk of Missouri for the people themselves to exercise their power and right the wrongs of bad government. The most striking feature of the number, aside from these important articles, is the array of high-grade fiction.

The Atlantic Monthly for October is particularly rich both in the incisive and well-considered discussion of important public topics and in literary papers, essays, stories and poems, of the most attractive quality. William Allen White is the author of the leading article upon the "Golden Rule." Mr. White handles the morality of present day business and public life without gloves. In "The Endless Life," which was one of the Ingersoll Lectures at Harvard upon immortality, Samuel McChord Crothers offers not the least notable of that series of essays which has contained the ripest thought of such men as John Fiske, William James and Dr. Osler.

The October Magazine number of the Outlook, which, by the way, now appears at the same time with other illustrated magazines, has a long list of articles with and without pictures, and on rather unusually varied topics. Thus, an interesting view of the political situation is found in Robert Lincoln O'Brien's "New Men in the Senate," with portraits of half a dozen of the new United States senators who promise to be powers in politics the next few years. In the art world we find a readable account of the personality and work of the "etcher, illustrator and author," Joseph Pennell, written by the well-known art dealer and critic, Frederick Keppel.

What is supposed to be the best short story in the German language opens the Bohemian for October. It is entitled "Cross-Patch," and is translated from the German of Paul Heyse, by Melvin Lee. It is a story of simple peasant life in that section of country lying about the bay of Naples. The other stories in this number cover an unusually wide range.

The special features of the October Review of Reviews are three articles relating to the final stages of the Russo-Japanese peace negotiations—"The Making of a Modern Treaty of Peace," by Louis E. Van Norman; "How St. Petersburg Received the News of Peace," by W. T. Stead, and "Japan's Elder Statesmen and the Peace," by Adachi Kinnosuke; an illustrated article by Charles de Kay, apropos of the assumption of the directorship of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York City, by Sir Caspar Purdon Clarke; a searching paper, entitled "American Life Insurance on Trial," by Walter Wellman.

Pursuant of the policy advocated by the Four-Track News, the October number of that magazine has, in its literary part, eight addit'onal pages, making it the largest yet issued. The opening article, entitled "Barrie's Thrums," by Maurice Smiley, takes the reader to Kirriemuir, Scotland, the town where lived "The Little Minister," and others who have endeared to the literary world, and to Scotchmen in particular, the name of James M. Barrie. Robt. Shackleton, in an article entitled "At the Sign of the Elephant," tells of one of New York's ancient, picturesque villages where, it is believed, was the home of the first elephant brought to the United States.

* * *

The October issue of Interior Decoration, the new magazine on the decoration of the home, opens with a full-page illustration of a Louis XV room in the Bradley-Martin house, New York, as part of an article on the decoration of the door. Considerable space is given to a profusely illustrated article on the three-piece curtain. The glass curtain is illustrated from many examples in the house in Upper New Yory city, and a Riverside Drive chess room is illustrated and described.

* * *

The frontispiece of The World's Work for October is a full-page portrait of William Travers Jerome, the district attorney of New ork. In "The Story of Industrial Trusts" there is a revelation of some of the ruin brought on by financial debauch of the "merger" period of a few years ago. Sereno S. Pratt, in "Our Financial Oligarchy," draws a startling comparison between the United States senate and the similar body of high financiers who control, by similar methods, the financial destinies of the nation. The article is illustrated with the portraits of sixty-one of these "Senators of Business."

The Garden Magazine for October is a special double number (112 illustrations and colored cover), making a full presentation of the important subject of fall planting. The broad aspect of the case is discussed by well-known experts from different parts of the country. Henry Hicks speaks for the East, F. D. Maynard discusses the subject for the Prairie states, and John M. Hunter tells of the unlimited opportunities that the fall presents in the South. W. C. Egan presents an unbiased statement of the arguments for and against planting perennials at this time of year, showing when and where it is profitable.

Among the illustrated articles in the October Metropolitan is a breezy paper on President Roosevelt's great prestige in the West and the cause of it. This article is written by a prominent journalist and one of the president's frends. Some very striking snap-shot photos of Western types—cowboys and their kind—add to the interest of this contribution. Another article of timely importance deals with the study of trees. The subject is viewed from a new angle, and the various types of trees are pictured and described in a way to make one long to start out on an arboreal expedition through the woods. Sme famous old historical trees are noted by the author and these are shown photographically as they appear today.

The best introduction to the personal side of Thomas F. Ryan, who controls the Equitable Life Assurance society, that we have yet had is given by Henry Harrison Lewis in "Success Magazine" for October. Mr. Lewis takes us into the private office of the financier, and allows us to observe his comings and goings through the course of a busy day. In "The Yankee Drummer Abroad" H. D. Varnum contributes an account of some of the trials that confront a salesman trying to push American goods in foreign countries. The manner in which these difficulties are overcome testifies to the intelligence and fertility of resource of the American "drummer." Montrose J. Moses, in "How Their First Books Were Written," describes the struggles of modern authors with their first productions.

The complete novelette in the October Lippincott's is "A Manila Madness." Its author is Frederic Reddie, whose earlier works, "The Other Man" and "A Transaction in Rubles," have also been brought out by this Magazine. His latest production is primarily a mystery story possessing an intense love-interest. The plot is hatched at Manila, but quickly shifts to New York City for the scene of its unraveling. In his portrayal of the character feminine Mr. Reddie seems to be particularly felicitous, and in the dramatic situation he excels. Lippincott's is happy to be able to present fiction by the Hon. John Hay. "The Blood Seedling" is a good story, well written, and rests not only upon the late author's distinguished name, but upon sympathetic treatment of a strong plot.

The Forum for October-December opens with Henry Litchfield West's quarterly review of "American Politics," bearing specially upon the topics of proposed legislation affecting railroad rates, tariff revision, and agitation toward the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people. A. Maurice Low devotes the major part of his paper on "Foreign Affairs" to a discussion of the peace treaty between Russia and Japan, and speculation as to its probable effects upon the mutual relations of the various world-powers. "Finance" is comprehensively treated by Alexander D. Noyes, in an article whose subdivisions take up specifically the stock market, the grain and cotton crops, Equitable Assurance affairs, Russian and Japanese securities, and the gold output of the world.

Carter H. Harrison, ex-mayor of Chicago, contributes a striking paper on "Red-Letter Hunting Days," and one of the most interesting articles that have been written on the peace conference at Portsmouth is that by Walter Wellman in the October number of The World To-Day. The personal description he gives of both Russians and Japanese explain many things not accounted for on the surface of the peace terms. An extremely interesting account of successful municipal management is given by Francis W. Parker under the title, "Southwark: A Government of the Plain People."

"To-Morrow" for October has reached its highest point as a vital publication, both in respect to its editorials and its contributions. While Charlotte Perkins Gilman is advocating employment for mothers, thus necessitating absence from their children, "To-Morrow" editorially makes a strong stand for the segregation of children away from their parents in the care of trained educators, claiming that only in this way can they obtain vital habits of initiative, industry and proper mental attitude.

The October number of Pearson's Magazine opens with an interesting article on the Austrian emperor, Franz Josef, the grand old man among royalties of today. How the giant trees of California are cut down is another article, profusely illustrated. The "Slave Dogs of the Frozen North" is an animal article, illustrated with photographs taken by the ill-fated explorer, Hubbard, which tells of the wonderful race of half-wolves with which Peary hopes to make his dash for the Pole. "The Lost Children of Greater New York" is an article illustrated by a newly famous young artist, Miss Bessie Collins Pease, who is making a specialty of "kid pictures."

The October issue of The Engineering Magazine contains several noteworthy contributions to the literature of technical work and activity. The second of the valuable papers, by John F. Wallace, upon the Panama canal, discusses the difficulties encountered, these being both physical and governmental, and the conditions under which this great undertaking is apparently obliged to be executed, are set forth as they actually exist.

* * *

The Pilgrim for October takes high rank among American family magazines. An article of timely interest by Fred E. Jackson tells how the nation's wheat crop is handled in the great elevators of the North and West. Mrs. Stella Reid Crothers, in a second illustrated article, tells of the work of America's foremost feminine editors. Hiram Moe Greene's department of comment on current events treats of the great history-making episodes of the past month.

An automobile duel—something absolutely new in fiction—is the central episode in Daniel Lesuer's novel, "Forces of the Past," which is now the talk of Europe, and which appears translated in the October issue of Tales. The duel takes place during a great international automobile race—evidently modeled closely on the Gordon Bennett Cup races—which is described at length and with remarkably picturesque vividness.

The Popular Magazine has scored something of a scoop over its competitors by securing Cutcliffe Hyne's latest series of stories, "The Trials of Commander McTurk." McTurk is an American naval officer, and his adventures are proving fully as interesting as those of Mr. Hyne's previous character, Capt. Kettle. In the October number McTurk tests the value of a modern, high power, steam blockade with strange results. The war in the Far East forms the theme of the new serial, "The Girl of the Third Army." George Bronson-Howard, the well-known war correspondent, is the author. There are four other serials.

Ainslee's for October brings the magazine down near the end of the year with a table of contents that promises a remarkable climax to an unusually successful twelve months. It begins a new serial, "The Warreners," by Marie Van Vorst, a typical humorous story by Joseph C. Lincoln, and equally good tales by Lucia Chamberlain, H. F. Provost Battersby, Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, Mary H. Vorse, Beatrice Hanscom, Grace MacGowan Cooke and Anne O'Hagan.

The October McClure's is devoted peculiarly to American life and activities. Not a story in it, nor a special article, but concerns the real and immediate things that move this country at large. Pastor Charles Wagner, the French clergyman-author of "The Simple Life," writes of his visit at the White House, and with simple directness tells of the children and the household life of the president as he saw them. He writes an interesting and important estimate of President Roosevelt as a man.

The Century celebrates the one hundred and twenty-sixth anniversary of the battle between the Seraplis and the Bonhomme Richard, September 23rd, with the issue of its October number containing Gen. Horace Porter's account of "The Recovery of the Body of John Paul Jones." Gen. Horace Porter, who gave of himself and his means so liberally to recover the remains of our first naval hero and to found a national shrine, here tells his own modest story of the difficult search and its success and of the ceremonies in Paris attending the transfer of the body—a chapter of our history to thrill the heart of every American. Whether the reader of the October Century turns first to this feature, or to the first chapters of Katharine A. Carl's record of her experience "With the Empress Dowager," or to Dr. Thomas W. Evans's "The Empress Eugenie's Flight From Paris," or to the "Unknown Portraits of Shelley," here first brought to light, or to Russell H. Chittenden's discussion of "Economy in Food," or to Mr. Richard Watson Gilder's essay on the Brownings, or to the color reproduction of "The Sandpeep," by Maxfield Parrish, or to the fiction of the number, will depend upon the individual—the range is varied enough to appeal to every taste.

The October number of Harper's Magazine is enriched by Edwin A. Abbey's illustrations for King Henry VI., reproduced in tint, and some particularly effective color work by Howard Pyle. Ernest Rhys's critical comment on King Henry VI. accompanies the Abbey pictures. Henry W. Nevinson's third article on "The Slave-Trade of To-day" is one of the most important features of the number. In this paper the author reaches the heart of his subject, and makes the revelations his readers have awaited. Professor John Bassett Moore writes on the influence and tendencies of American diplomacy; Hamilton W. Mable describes the free kindergarten in New York, aided by Alice Barber Stephens's appealing child pictures in tint; George Buchanan Fife relates with zest and humor some amusing adventures in a quaint Norman village.

Theodore Roosevelt describes his recent "Colorado Bear Hunt" in the October number of Scribner's Magazine. The account is written with vigor and vivacity which are so characteristic of the author. The individuality of the various dogs in the pack, the traits and characteristics of the guides and packers, the delightful humors of everyday life in camp, the excitement of the chase—all are depicted here with skill and force; indeed any one who reads this narrative will have a stirring picture of exactly what happened during the weeks that Mr. Roosevelt was out of the world in the Rocky mountains. His companions of the hunt, Dr. Alexander Lambert and Philip B. Stewart, took many excellent pictures of the various incidents, and they are reproduced with the article. One of the most striking, "Death of the Big Bear," forms the frontispiece of the number. In the November number Mr. Roosevelt will give an account of the "Wolf Hunt in Oklahoma," which preceded the "Bear Hunt" a few days.

The general impression prevails throughout the country that enlisted men in the regular army are underpaid, and that this a fruitful cause of desertion. In an interesting article contributed to the current number of Leslie's Weekly, Capt. Eli A. Helmick admits the charge, but shows that the men receive more pay than is usually supposed, those of the sergeant's grade averaging $18 per week. A thrilling experience is graphically described in the contribution by Mrs. C. R. Miller, entitled "Through the Rockies on an Engine." This is, perhaps, the first time that a lady has ever occupied the engineer's cab on such a perilous trip.

"The Return of Secretary Taft" is the particularly timely and interesting article which opens the current Harper's Weekly. It is written by William Dinwiddie, one of the distinguished staff correspondents of Harper's Weekly in Japan during the Russo-Japanese war. It recalls a number of interesting incidents of Secretary Taft's stay in the far East, and is finely illustrated with photographs of his party, which included Miss Alice Roosevelt.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

THIS is the caution applied to the public announcement of Castoria that has been manufactured under the supervision of Chas. H. Fletcher for over 30 years—the genuine Castoria. We respectfully call the attention of fathers and mothers when purchasing Castoria to see that the wrapper bears his signature in black. When the wrapper is removed the same signature appears on both sides of the bottle in red. Parents who have used Castoria for their little ones in the past years need no warning against counterfeits and imitations, but our present duty is to call the attention of the younger generation to the great danger of introducing into their families spurious medicines.

It is to be regretted that there are people who are now engaged in the nefarious business of putting up and selling all sorts of substitutes, or what should more properly be termed conterfeits, for medicinal preparations not only for adults, but worse yet, for children's medicines. It therefore devolves on the mother to scrutinize closely what she gives her child. Adults can do that for themselves but the child has to rely on the mother's watchfulness.

Black Ants Are Undertakers

Insect Man Tells How They Chase, Kill and Bury the Cockroaches.

"The 'undertakers' will get him," said the insect man to a New York Tribune reporter one night last week, as a big, dark brown cockroach came speeding across the billiard room floor in a well-known Fifth avenue hotel. Then the insect man—for every large New York hotel has an insect man—explained his remark.

"I don't bother to kill a cockroach when I see one scooting along, because I know his days are numbered. The 'undertakers' will get him."

"What are they?"

"That's what I call the black ants in the basement," said the insect man. "I calls 'em 'undertakers' because they does up the cockroaches an' lugs 'em away and puts 'em out of sight."

Having lighted the proffered cigar, the insect man, assured of a good listener, went on:

"Ye see, I used to have the fidgets when I seen a cockroach, and I wouldn't rest till I'd killed him, but that was before I caught on to what the black ants do to a cockroach. Now," he continued, after a hard puff at the weed, "I'm tellin' you only what I have saw. You can depend on it that you won't have cockroaches long if you have black ants. I keep the ants in one place, and they know their holes as well as dogs or cats. I've got a colony of 'undertakers,' as I calls 'em, under a board in the store room. If they try to spread I drown 'em, and they've got so they know their place. The first time I seen the 'undertakers' tackle a cockroach was five years ago last winter, when I took the job of insect man here. I was settin' over there by the door, near the wash basins, one night, when I seen a big black roach comin' across the floor like an auto on a down grade. He got to within five feet of me an' stopped, sudden like, same as a man does when he's been to a store and suddenly wonders if he's forgotten any of his wife's errands. Well, this chap stopped and then turned around and started to run. I jumped up to kill him, when I happened to see a black ant heading for him. The next thing I noticed was that the roach was in trouble. He was making off, but he seemed to be crippled. Then the ant I spotted rushed right over and jumped onto Mr. Roach. I got down on my knees to investigate, and found that a big black ant was holding fast to two legs of the roach—holdin' on like grim death. When the second ant piled on to the roach he grabbed another leg and bit it in the joint. That crippled the roach pretty bad, but he could still navigate a little.

"Now you may think I'm lying, but I ain't. One of them ants suddenly let loose and run like a suburban winner for home. He went up the walk like a telephone message and in less than three minutes he was on his way back with a squad of ten ants, all runnin' to beat the band. The leader made a beeline for the roach, which had worried along about six feet with one 'undertaker' fast to his legs. The re-enforcements pitched onto the roach and killed him quicker'n you could say Jack Robinson.

"Then the twelve dragged their victim over to the wall, and there they stuck. They couldn't get the roach any further. They seemed to hold a council, and one fellow piked off home again, returning in a few minutes with fifty or sixty more 'undertakers.' They tried carrying the roach up the wall and failed. But they was dead gritty. A few feet away the steam pipes rest against the wall, and the whole bunch of 'undertakers' got under and around the roach and took him over to the steam pipes. There wasn't much steam on that night and in twenty minutes the ants had carried the dead roach up along a molding into their den. I've watched 'em out after cockroaches many times since. They usually hunt in pairs, and when they smell a roach they'll lay in wait for him. A roach can outrun 'em two to one, but they'll somehow head him off now and then, and when one of them little black 'undertakers' once tackles a cockroach, it's all day with the bug. The ant will get word to the gang under the plank, and before the bug knows it he is being carried home to breakfast, same as a man would go out an' shoot a bear. It's because they act so sure and solemn-like I calls 'em 'undertakers.'"

The Accepted Mode is Velvet

STREET COSTUME IN AMETHYST VELVETEEN

"WOLLERSTEIN" MODEL IN CHIFFON VELVET

THE PRINCESS MODE IN VELVETEEN

VELVETEEN AND QUILLED RIBBONS

THAT MOST universally becoming fabric, velvet, is accorded the position of the leader in Dame Fashion's procession for the coming season, and surely nothing more flattering to each and every type of femininity could be selected.

Not that there is danger of monotony or of overdoing the thing in this selection, for there are as many classes of velvets—and nowadays this term must be understood to include the velveteens as well—as there will be wearers of them in plenty.

For toilette of formal intent the exquisite chiffon velvet is far and away the best choice. The exquisitely soft colorings, the peachy bloom of the surface, the slightly ribbed effect that makes for such a charming play of light and shade in the folds, and, above all, the beautiful background that it makes for such trimming devices as the designer may care to employ.

Real lace and velvet; velvet and real lace. The two seem to belong somehow to each other, and they will form the favored combination of the coming season for all formal occasions. Many of the oldtime laces have been most successfully revived, although the very high price demanded will make them prohibitive for all but the wealthy. However, the woman of slender purse may console herself with the fact that there are machine-made imitations of all of the best laces turned out today, many of which are such excellent copies of the handmade webs that they will deceive even an expert at times, not to speak of the average lace lover.

For one's "very bestest best frock," as the small folks of the nursery oftentimes say, those delicate tints in chiffon velvet cannot be excelled. There are some soft tones in the hydrangea blues, in old pinks, soft sage greens, and—for electric light use only—the pinkish tints of mauve that, combined with a touch or two of real lace, preferably in the yellowish tint that old lace acquires with the passing years, will lend an air of stately grace and distinction to even the most petite woman who wears them.

Many of the best makers of Paris are designing costumes that will include some sort of a wrap en suite in both the chiffon and panne velvets, and velveteen as well. All of the new skirts are extremely full, and they one and all display more or less of a train. These are items of construction that assist marvelously in adapting the costume to more uses than one, since they ensure the dressiest of appearances in the cut to start with; and the insistent vogue of the separate bodice is another adjunct which the well-dressed woman must be inclined to bless.

The petite and slender Parisienne clings determinedly to the coat of reasonably loose outlines and an abbreviated length. Garments modelled upon the Eton and bolero orders appeal to her more than anything else, and the development of these into smart little chasuble coats, caracos and other kindred garments is merely a caprice of the couturier who must vary his output if he is to keep his clients.

The latest of those skirts are fashioned to lie just the least little fraction of an inch on the floor in front, a centimeter or two, if one follows the metric system of measurement. At the sides there are three or four inches on the floor, and the back length depends entirely upon the character of the gown. If intended as a general utility dressy frock, then the train may be of some eight or ten inches, seldom more, in length; but if it is to be an exclusively dinner or evening gown then half a yard is none too much, and anywhere from that to a full yard may be employed. Of course, the height, the build, the allure of the wearer has a very great deal to do with the length of the skirt; but for the average woman, the measurements quoted will produce the best effect.

The princesse mode is one of the most successful of the new season, and this develops charmingly in both silk velvet and velveteen. The vogue of the guimpe and guimpe effects fits in charmingly with this mode, and there is no end to the clever effects that even an average dressmaker can command with these. One model that owes its inspiration to a prominent Parisian maker is in an amethyst velveteen, with real Irish crochet dyed—it almost seems a sacrilege to dip such beautiful work into the dye vat—to match. The skirt is of a full circular design, setting smoothly at the band, but so full is the cut that it ripples just the least little bit in the world over the hips, falling in full godet folds to the feet. At the hem the width in this instance is a full ten yards; and the drop skirt of amethyst taffetas to match has an interlining of a featherweight princess batiste cloth, so that there is a trifle of support to the very full folds of the soft-finish velveteen.

Over the skirt there is a folded ceinture of the velveteen, the folds cut on the bias and applied in an overlapping shingle effect. The front has a cabiler of the dyed crochet that is so planned it comes up over the girdle quite to the bust line, and so affords the straight, unbroken line down the front that is so characteristic of this mode.

To this gown there are two bodices; one of amethyst chiffon over silk with amethyst velvet ribbons in bretelle shape and caught here and there with beautiful oldtime paste buckles. The other is in a baby Irish crochet that accords well with that on the skirt; although that for the bodice is left in the natural creamy white tint, and is not dipped into the dye vat as is the other. Above the hem there are two rows of crochet spray inserted and these are backed with amethyst chiffon over white, so that the design shows up well for all that it is.

A charming Parisian conceit employs old and tarnished looking gold lace for trimming those velveteen gowns that are intended for reception and other house wear. Hand embroideries are oftentimes called upon to supplement those old laces, and the tarnished gold gimps are in about equal favor with the laces. Upon the colored velveteens that are to have such a run this winter they make for the most artistic effect. The dull porcelain blues, the sapphire tints; the rich wine reds and the dahlia colorings; green in every shade from sage to bronze, and a few of the brighter browns, they all take on an added attractiveness when a judicious touch or two of this old looking lace—in reality it is all of it just from the loom, and is aged artificially—is added to the coat.

Ribbons, too, in both silk and velvet are called upon to adorn those smart costumes. Plain, plisse, shirred, corded—in fact, pretty nearly every scheme and method of elaboration that a clever trimmer can devise is expended upon those same ribbons. Close little quillings, and thick puffy puchings find innumerable applications, and buttons and little buckles divide favor for the finishing touches.

But the ribbons, popular and pretty though they be, do not shut out braids entirely from the trimming field. All sorts of fancy braids, from the narrow soutache up to intricate tressed patterns that are some six inches wide, are used by tailor and dressmaker alike; and this season even the milliner cannot resist their attractions, for many of the hats that are to accompany those velvet and velveteen gowns rely upon broad braids in gold, silver or color, for their very best effects.

Poplin, the Irish poplin, is showing in a goodly measure that vogue which has been accorded to all things Irish in recent fashions. The real Irish poplin is not by any means an inexpensive fabric, the least expensive quality sells right on its native hearth for two dollars the yard. Five dollars is nearer what the better qualities fetch; and Queen Alexandra of England makes much use of a quality which commands ten dollars a yard, and this in single width, too. On this side of the Atlantic it must be remembered that the duty exacted by our Uncle Sam upon sartorial luxuries like this amounts to some 60 per cent., more or less, according to the weight and class of fabric, so that this vogue for Irish poplin, like that for the best Irish crochet, will be confined to those who can afford to pay the piper, and pay him well for indulgence in such whims and fancies of fashion.

OF INTEREST TO MADAME.

VELVETS AND VELVETEENS FOR PORTIERES, CURTAINS AND OTHER DRAPERY AND FURNITURE USES—ALL OF THE DULL OLD BLUES IN FAVOR—YELLOW VERY MUCH IN VOGUE—REVIVAL OF EMPIRE MODES IN FURNISHINGS—LITTLE FURNITURE, BUT EACH PIECE AN ARTISTIC EXAMPLE—SOME NOVEL WALL COVERINGS.

The trend of fashion in household effects, as in dress, is turning to the mode of both the first and second empires of France. Velvets and velveteens—in the very wide weaves that upholstery goods employ—are among the newest effects; and plain weaves are to be preferred to the brocaded surfaces that have held sway for so long now. Soft and dull tones prevail in these, and the effect aimed at is one of subdued richness, combined with a certain restful air that is most attractive. Very little elaboration is in vogue, but such trimming and finishing touches as are employed must conform to this idea of a subdued richness which is quite the correct thing just now. Nothing garish or glaring, no overcrowding of furniture and bibelots; a stately spacing of effects is what the empire modes in furnishings demand.

Some charming wall coverings are offered in conjunction with those fashions of a century ago. Physicians may rave and health specialists condemn the textile wall covering; but in spite of that fashion favors those effects, and those who follow fashion will have them. They argue, and, perhaps, not without some show of reason, that our grandparents lived healthy lives in rooms whose walls were hung with velvets, satins and brocades, and why should not their descendants do likewise?

However, the question of health and sanitary considerations aside, there are some very charming designs in textiles for wall coverings, and furniture pieces to correspond are oftentimes included in the scheme. Gilt furniture frames of stately and severe designs belong to the fittings of this period; and rich satins and velvets, chiefly in plain surfaces, are chosen for their upholstered coverings. In fact, so much gilt woodwork is included in the modern drawing-room that in order to produce the requisite effect the coverings and draperies must, of necessity, be of subdued though rich coloring.

All of the dull old blues afford a delightful effect in conjunction with a brilliant gold finish. Some of the curtains, door hangings and other drapery effects that do not come into direct contact with the brilliant gilt finishes are edged with a broad gold band, preferably of etruscan design, and of a somewhat tarnished appearance. The plain band finish without a fringe is preferred; and only on the huge floor cushions—essentially a French invention—do big gold tassels appear.

Yellow brocades are in the highest vogue for rooms whose aspect is northern or northeast, and that are so situated that much sunlight is not attainable. It is the fainter shades, though, the primrose, pale buff, Nankin yellow and such that are in favor; and color relief is not looked for nor expected when this mode of treatment is followed.

The lace draperies that adorn the windows are following the Empire mode likewise. Lace pieces made to fit the window frame exactly—they are run on a fine brass rod top and bottom—are what those who can afford such luxuries order, and then fleur-de-lis of France is usually a conspicuous item in the design. Then come full-length curtains of lace or net. A square-meshed bobbin net with border of point arabe in the natural coloring makes for a very rich effect, and those curtains are allowed to hang in straight, full folds from the top cornice—gilt cornices of Empire design are an integral part of the furnishings of a modern room—and not looped back with sashes, as heretofore.

Then come what one might term the permanent curtains—those that accord with the door hangings and such other drapery effects as may be included in the furnishing plan. Velvet or self-colored brocade are favored for these, and the lining is almost invariably of white or cream upholstery satin.

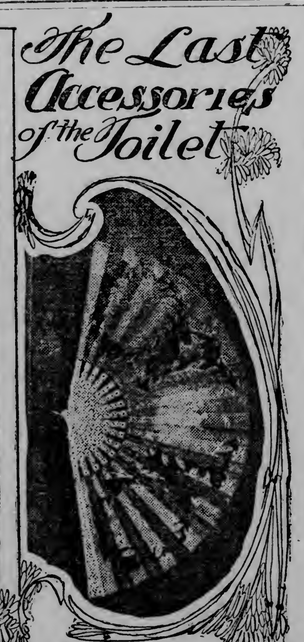

It is an effect of lightness rather than massiveness that is aimed for in those old-time revivals. While there is a perfect craze for old mahogany for dining-room and bedroom furnishings, and enormous prices are paid for genuine antiques, in the drawing-room an elegant lightness is what is preferred. Mirrors, many and well spaced, are now included in the wall scheme; doors display mirror tops or panels, and cabinets in which "articles of bigotry and virtue" are put for safekeeping and convenient display likewise present mirror backs and mirror shelves.

Comparatively few articles of furniture, but each one an artistic example of its kind, is the law upon which modern drawing-rooms are furnished. Those alleged cozy corners are banished to the man's den or smoking-room; there is no cluttering up of sofa cushions and pillows, and there is no danger of falling all over the furniture in the dim light which shaded globes afford.

The Last Accessories of the Toilet

PARISIAN NOVELTIES IN HANDBAGS

A DAINTY FAN

The fan and the handbag are, respectively, the finishing touches to the house and the street toilette, and nowadays art concerns itself with the one fully as much as with the other.

Womankind are supposed to bewail and to bemoan their pocketless condition—at least, so the editors of funny papers would have us think; but the fact that the handbag is intended to, and really does, take the place of many pockets is something that the funny man seems to overlook.

And, in addition, the handbag is an outward and visible evidence of the fact that its wearer, or bearer, is right up to the moment in the matter of style, and that a smart handbag of leather or of metal, with perhaps a jeweled frame, is further evidence of her social wealth and position seems to have escaped his attention.

But be that as it may, the fact remains that the handbag is an important, and, indeed, an indispensable accessory to the street or carriage toilet in these days of fashionable grace. There are bags of a solid gold wire mesh, with jewels inset in the frame, whose cost runs up to four figures, and substantial ones at that. And there are bags of leather, plain and severe, such as suggest in their outlines the correct accompaniment for a severely tailored costume, such as the clever dresser wears for a morning's shopping or a constitutional along the avenue.

With the craze for color that seems to have taken hold of the fashionable world this autumn, colored leather bags to match the costume are among the most modish effects of the moment. The later ones are more than a little larger than their predecessors of the springtime, and in fact, some of them suggest that their bearer is going away overnight, and that the bag holds a full complement of toilet requisites for such occasions.

Some exquisitely fitted street bags come direct from Paris, and their fittings depict the luxury of the toilet over there. The so-called vanity bag must, of necessity, be quite a sizeable affair today if it is to fill all the functions expected of it. The Parisienne who prides herself upon the perfection of her appearance carries a vanity bag that contains all of the requisites to minister successfully to her vanity after she leaves her boudoir. In addition to the mirror and powder puff, there is a cleverly devised little tube of moist rouge—for the Parisienne tints her lips habitually and does not hesitate to add a little dab on her cheeks if she imagines that her own coloring is insufficient at the moment. Then there is a pencil and little brush for the eyebrows and lashes, a tiny straw-colored flask for eau de cologne or perfume with which to bathe the face when fatigued; a little folding fan, and even a skeleton pair of opera glasses. And all of this tucked away in compartments devised especially for each article.

But so far as the American girl is concerned importers do not care to include the rouge and eyebrow pencils; so the vanity bags that are commanding attention in the exclusive and expensive shops are usually minus those items. Their place, however, is well supplied in the pencil and notebook which the up-to-date girl demands as a part of the fittings of her bag, and a little pincase, provided with several varieties of pins, is a frequent fitting in some of the later productions.

Those girls who are blessed with ancestors are detaching the exquisite metal frames from the velvet bags that grandmother and great grandmother used to carry, and having them applied to bags of more modern make. It is quite a fad to have a copy of a Benvenuto Cellini mounting upon the bag that is made en suite with one's favorite velvet or velveteen gown this season, and those bags made from a piece of the costume material are so popular with the smart set that several silversmiths announce that special designs will be submitted, to be worked out in various metals as chosen. Hand-wrought silver, brass, bronze and royal copper are the most frequently ordered, and when one has a crest or a coat-of-arms they are often included in the design. They are tremendously swagger possessions, and their cost is likely to keep them from becoming too popular in this land where everything fashionable is cheapened in production, and all too rapidly becomes the property of the masses, as well as the classes.

The fan as the finishing touch to the house or evening toilette is rapidly becoming quite a fad. For quite a long time the fan was employed only for theater or dancing use; in the house it was only the elderly or the invalid who was supposed to require its assistance. But as a fascinating accessory its possibilities are again to the fore, and the fan as an alluring charm is being studied by the girl who is ever seeking to vary her fascinations.

With the revival of the picturesque in dress those fans that Watteau painted are being eagerly sought for, and fan-painting is rapidly replacing the fad for china and miniature work. It is quickly done, and is profitable besides. So the girl who possesses any skill with the brush need not lack for pocket-money this autumn, if she but turn her attention to fan-mounts.

The sticks may be of ivory, carved or plain. Amber and the lighter tortoise shell are sometimes seen, but they are not so popular as the darker shell. Mother-of-pearl is frequently used in connection with the real laces, and inlays of wrought work in gold or silver frequently appear on the sticks of expensive fans.

The huge fan of ostrich feathers shares in the popularity which the ostrich plume enjoys in every connection, and there are few effects which tell for so much as does a gracefully wielded ostrich fan in the hands of a pretty girl or a stately dame of matronly age.

DRAMATICAL

Attractions at the Lyceum

"Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots" on Monday Night, "Hello Bill" on Tuesday and "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" on Friday and Saturday.

It is the new comedy, "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," by Augustus Thomas, that Charles Frohman will present at the Lyceum theater, Monday evening, and it is the play that so successfully amused the bon ton of New York city last season, that its run was prolonged there from early in the winter until the advent of the midsummer.

Much is always said of each new play that Mr. Thomas makes public, whether serious or humorous, that each new comer is his masterpiece, and that nothing better is possible from his pen in the future.

Mr. Thomas has possibly created something new as a playwright, has avoided the conventional ruts that certain of his less famous contemporaries have not sufficient genius to abandon. And "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots" must be exceptionally novel in treatment that it should have emboldened Charles Frohman to cast is with the important players he has done, there being no less than four recognized leading men and three leading ladies in the following distribution of the characters:

Mrs. Bonner.....Dorothy Hammond
Mrs. Ramsey .. .. ..Mrs. A. A. Adams
Dr. Ramsey .. ..Harry Harmon
Nora .. ..Eva Vincent
Orton, a butler .....Harry Lilford
Mabel Ainslee .. ..Jane Laurel
Walter Corbin .. ..William Courtenay
Howard Leffingwell .. ....Louis Payne
Richard Ainslee .. ....Vincent Serrano
Mrs. Leffingwell .. ..Grace Heyer
Tim, a coachman .. ..A. Goodson
Thomas Bonner .. ....Frank Burbeck
A Driver .. ..Jay Wilson
Police Sergeant .. ..Del De Louis

The scenes of "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots" are located in New York's exclusive suburbs, and the people in the action are supposed to belong to the very creme de la creme of metropolitan society. The incidents are based on none that have happened in reality, though Mr. Thomas is charged with having drawn upon a particular experience of his own for some of the chief situations and climaxes, notably the guestless banquet and the blizzard that despoiled that banquet of its guests. But the supposititious fun that Mr. Thomas has probably woven in with the guestless banquet, and the blizzard has endowed the whole comedy with essential novelty. The chief figures in the action are a jealous husband and an innocent wife. The pivotal "props" are a pair of boots belonging to the wife that was surreptitiously taken from her boudoir and jokingly misplaced.

SCENE FROM "MRS. LEFFINGWELL'S BOOTS," AT LYCEUM MONDAY.

The least changed in personality. Atmosphere and characterization, rather than plot, give value to the play. Mrs. Flexner's handling of the original material has been most sympathetic, and, moreover, she has succeeded in making a play that is as enjoyable to those who have not read the stories as to those who know them by heart.

The first act takes place in the kitchen of Mrs. Wiggs' house in the cabbage patch, which, as every one knows, is now the most celebrated section of Louisville, Ky. Here the amiable, big-hearted, optimistic Mrs. Wiggs is concerning herself with the marriage of the faded and dolorous Miss Hazy to Mr. Stubbins, he of the war record, prospective pension and ungainly appearance.

In the midst of the preparations for the wedding, Billy Wiggs, valiant son of the house, enters with poor Lovey Mary, who has escaped from an orphanage and brought with her to freedom Tommy, the baby boy. The dwellers of the patch, Mrs. Elchorn, Mrs. Schultz, Miss Hazy and their men folk, look with suspicion upon Lovey Mary and her charge, but Mrs. Wiggs protects the wanderers and finds room for them in her already well-filled home.

It is disclosed, though not to the characters in the play, that the baby is the son of the long-absent Mr. Wiggs, who, years before, eloped with a circus lady, now dead. This complication is Mrs. Flexner's one important departure from Mrs. Rice's story. The first act closes with the galeties attending the Stubbins-Hazy nuptials.

In the second act, of which the scene is the exterior of the Mrs. Wiggs and Stubbins houses, Mrs. Wiggs devotes herself to straightening out the difficulties of Mr. and Mrs. Stubbins. Mr. Stubbins, upon learning that Mrs. Stubbins is a total failure as a cook, regrets his matrimonial bargain and seeks to drown his sorrow in drink. Returning to the patch after visits to various saloons, he upbraids his wife and becomes so obnoxious that Mrs. Wiggs, to be rid of him, shuts him in a freight car, which is presently hauled away, nobody knows where.

The third act takes place in the same environment as the second. News comes that Mr. Stubbins' pension has been granted, and a check for $800 arrears is enclosed in the government communication. Mrs. Wiggs decides that Mr. Stubbins must be found, and she advertises for him. But presently Stubbins returns of his own accord from his unpremeditated journey, and in the light of his good fortune he and Mrs. Hazy-Stubbins make up their differences.

Mrs. Wiggs then turns her attention to straightening out a lover's quarrel between Mr. Bob, editor, and Miss Lucy, "the Christmas lady," an enterprise in which she, of course, succeeds. Then comes Mr. Wiggs with a deputy sheriff to arrest Lovey Mary for abducting Little Tommy. Directly the whole secret of Mr. Wiggs' paternity of the child comes out and Mrs. Wiggs, forgiving and big-souled, receives her unfaithful husband back to her hospitable castle in the cabbage patch.

The original company with Madge Carr Cook will present the play here.

"HELLO BILL."

Willis Maxwell Goodhue's funny farce "Hello Bill" will be given at the Lyceum, Tuesday evening, by a company that is said to be the best that has ever given this popular play. It is headed by Sidney Pilson and Miss Caroline McLean, the accomplished young actress who has enacted the role of the dashing widow in "Hello Bill" for the past two seasons.

Mr. Goodhue's farce has about as many novel and complex situations as any of them and he is said to have given his tangles and climaxes artistic touches that make the whole a delightful evening's entertainment.

This season, "Hello Bill" is repeating the success it made two or three years ago and has given great satisfaction wherever it has been produced.

GREAT PLAY COMING.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" at Lyceum Next Week.

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," a dramatization by Anne Crawford Flexner of Alice Hogan Rice's two stories, one of the same name and the other called "Lovey Mary," will be given at the Lyceum Friday evening, Saturday afternoon and Saturday evening, Oct. 13 and 14.

To describe at length the quaint and droll characters concerned in the play seems quite unnecessary in view of the fact that to the majority of American readers Mrs. Wiggs and her associates are already as well known figures of fiction as are Old Scrooge and Micawber, Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn.

All of the important personages of Mrs. Rice's two stories appear in the stage version, and in the migration from book to boards they have not in the least changed in personality. Atmosphere and characterization, rather than plot, give value to the play. Mrs. Flexner's handling of the original material has been most sympathetic, and, moreover, she has succeeded in making a play that is as enjoyable to those who have not read the stories as to those who know them by heart.

Bowles Sees Changes.

George Bowles, manager for Frank Daniels, sees great changes in Duluth since the summer of 1892, when he brought the big Daniel B. Henderson production of "Sinbad, the Sailor" to the Temple theater, then under the management of John T. Condon. There were over 100 in the company and it was a gala engagement here, the theater being packed for the three nights and a matinee.

The Bill At the Metropolitan

"The Tiger Lilies" In Burlesque and Specialties During the Coming Week.

The size of the audiences which have greeted the extravaganza organizations at the Metropolitan opera house indicates that Duluthians like this sort of entertainment and they will undoubtedly go into raptures over "The Tiger Lilies," who began an engagement of five nights and three matinees there Monday evening. This company comes to Duluth after big triumphs in the Twin Cities and, if the Minneapolis and St. Paul papers are to be believed, it is one of the best on the road.

"The Tiger Lilies" are under the management of the Campbell-Drew Amusement company, which is said to have spared nothing to make the production complete and attractive in every way. The company is headed by Alex Carr, the well-known Hebrew impersonator, who is said to be even funnier than was Charles Burkhardt of "The Jolly Grass Widows."

Mr. Carr and, in fact, the entire company are given great fun-making opportunities in the elaborately staged travesty, "The King of the Coffee Fiends." Mr. Carr enacts the role of his majesty and the other members of the company are well cast.

The program opens with the clever skit, adapted from the French, entitled "A Temporary Husband." Both burlesques are replete with pleasing musical numbers, in the giving of which the large chorus appears to advantage. The vaudeville bill includes Alex Carr company in a funny sketch; La Veen and Cross, exponents of physical culture; Richy W. Craig, the funny musician; Ezier and Webb, talented comediennes; Cunningham and Lord, dancers, and the wonderful "Tigerscope."

Matinees will be given Tuesday, Thursday (ladies' day) and Saturday.

At the Bijou

Downey and Willard, Tom Hefron and Other Head-Liners In Vaudeville.

A vaudeville bill of considerable strength is to be offered at the Bijou next week, if the advance notices are any criterion of what is really in store for the patrons of the popular little home of the "continuous." The bill is headed by Downey and Willard who have achieved much success and some money by presenting "A German's Troubles," described as a one act farce of real merit.

Tom Hefron, assisted by his talented partner, "Crutch," will also be seen at the Bijou next week. Mr. Hefron made a big hit during his engagement in Duluth last year. Holmes and Deane, two dainty maids, will do some stunts with musical instruments; Hi Greenway will draw cartoons and do some juggling; J. V. Mitchell, formerly leading baritone with West's minstrels will sing "The Chapel in the Pines," aided and abetted by the colored slides and "The Little Train Robbery" will be shown by the moving picture machine in the same realistic manner as were "The Great Train Robbery" pictures.

At New York Theaters

Ade's Play, "Just Out of College," Is a Pleasant Surprise — James K. and Mary Mannering Hackett In "The Walls of Jericho."

New York, Oct. 7.—George Ade's "Just Out of College" is variously surprising. It is not a fable in slang; no one in it is his own grammarian. It is not an illustration of college life; the collegian mentioned in the title has come out of school and does not go back to alma mater town. It is not a formless conglomerate of humorous talk and talkers; a story is told coherently and with some regard for theatrical effect. For those reasons the newer play is unlike "The County Chairman," with its rural politics, and quite as unlike "The College Widow," with its football; and, while it is not as good as either of those, it seems to me safely better than "The Good Samaritan."

Ade took his pen in hand to write "The College Widow" for Ethel Barrymore, but his hand lost control of his pen and turned out characters more entertaining than the widow. He undertook with "The Bad Samaritan" to make a star role which Raymond Hitchcock would be assigned to, but again his pen wasn't kept in hand. He planned "Just Out of College" for Joseph Wheelock, and I guess—for I don't know—that for a third time he did not realize the design in the execution. Anyway, it wasn't until the play had been reconstructed by William Seymour and edited by Paul Potter that Frohman brought it out. The college graduate, Edward Worthington Swinger, as introduced, is that ever popular fellow of the stage, a liar with a tongue of steel clapping between cheeks of brass. He has brought from school nothing more tangible than a diploma and he has no plan of pursuit more utilitarian than to marry an heiress. He gets $20,000 from her father to go into business and is to report in three months, when a decision on his matrimonial proposal will be rendered. Swinger spends the time and the money in building up a rival to the father's pickle factory and has a fool's good luck at it; but in the meanwhile his lies get him further into vicissitudes which they are meant to get him out of, and such is the material of this latest of the Ananias farces—all original with Ade and most of it ingenious. Joseph Wheelock individualizes Swinger as John Drew would and as N. C. Goodwin would not—by which I mean that Wheeler's audacious liar is suave and not assertive, and that women as well as men will like him.

The oddest in Ade's set of characters is a chap who has a habit of saying, "It's like this," when he sticks in a sentence, and then he tries to tell in gestures what he can't put into words. Next in amusing value is a tell-tale girl whose frank truths do harm where tactful falsehoods would do good. A grafter posing as an apostle of the simple life is made funny by caricature. An amorous bookkeeper, an impudent errand boy and a stately typewriter provide byplay in the business office of the first act. A neat sextette of girls give away sample pickles in the food fair of the second act. A pert news stand girl, a sonorous train announcer and a cute ticket seller are not tiresomely old in the railway station of the third act because they say new things.

Not until the middle of the week was "Just Out of College" presented in New York; so I went to New Haven to see it tried on Yale students. University youngsters filled about two dozen rows in the parquet and balcony, and the rest of the house below the gallery was occupied by fashionable residents. This assemblage laughed almost continuously at Ade's matter, applauded Wheelock's acting heartily and desired to see the author, but he wasn't there.

James K. Hackett and Mary Mannering could not fail with "The Walls of Jericho." That seemed a fortnight ago to be foregone and concluded beyond the possibility of a reversal. For hadn't Sutro's drama been the bigger of last season's two overpoweringly big London successes? But Nat Goodwin had the other play, "The Beauty and the Barge," and it was so much of a fiasco here that faith in the Sutro piece was shaken a little. There was enough of doubt on the opening night to qualify the certainty, but it didn't last long, and it gave zest to an occasion of triumph. That is a theatrically misused word, triumph, but I don't know any other with the right meaning.

"The Walls of Jericho," as blown down by Sutro's horns, does not make the truthful exposure of London society that it purports to; facts are mis-stated by the author to support his case; but he tells a virile story engrossingly and his appeal to the average everyday mind is irresistible. Mr. Sutro, brother of an American millionaire and for many years familiar with English aristocracy, asks us to believe that at evening parties—not informal gatherings, but affairs designated as balls—the guests let themselves loose in cakewalks; that horsey young women stick monocles on their eyes and all the men wear orchids (in their manners as well as their buttonholes) and that cheating at bridge is usual in smart sets. In such a setting Sutro places two rough diamonds, Australian millionaires, who embody all the virtues, toot horns around the modern Jericho of Mayfair and strain their wives to their protective bosoms when the stones begin to fall from the walls. But it takes exaggeration to make what will be regarded by the general public as a strong play.

This production marks the entrance of Mr. Hackett into New York as an actor-manager of the London kind. Arnold Daly has done the same thing; so has Henry Miller; and there is Mrs. Fiske. It is a movement that is arousing much interest. The Hacketts present themselves in their initial production as man and wife, he a self-made millionaire, she the born-so aristocrat. Although the Lady Alethea has an admirer playing for her favor, Sutro has avoided usuality in the case. Neither does she permit the smallest liberty in the dangler's manner toward her, nor does her husband doubt her loyalty for a moment. He objects to the spirit of her social set, and by their opposed points of view a sufficient conflict is created. When the drama is under way, and the cakewalks are passed, a vivid picture of domestic rupture is painted, a man and woman loving each other devotedly, yet utterly separate in sympathy.

James K. and Mary Mannering Hackett have never appeared more advantageously. If he lacks something in subtlety, he possesses a power in high-pitched force that, in this play, is of especial value. In a finely written scene makes his wife's pursuer read aloud a vicious letter written to that sinless woman, Hackett disproves the charge that he is no more than a sword-play actor. Mrs. Hackett shines more brilliantly in a role luminous in changeful moods and emotional contrasts. In a flirtation with her admirer, she holds him off at arms length, yet plays mischievously with his passion, and the difficult material is handled with tact and refinement. She has had nothing in years so well worth doing and that may be one reason why she does it so well.

The revival of "Leah Kleschna," by Mrs. Fiske is a welcome change from the somewhat insipid "Mary and John," which preceded it.

• • •

Another revival which New York theater-goers are thankful for was Bernard Shaw's clever little play, "You Never Can Tell," by Arnold Daly, at the Garrick. This is one of the sequences of Mr. Daly's Shaw cycle. It will be on the boards only three weeks, when it will make way for Mr. Shaw's new and as yet unpublished play, "John Bull's Other Island." The one hundred and fiftieth performance of Mr. Daly's company was celebrated by the distribution of souvenir books, illustrated with etchings of Mr. Shaw, Mr. Daly and scenes from Mr. Shaw's plays.

New York's newest playhouse, the New Montauk theater, in Brooklyn, was opened with "The Duchess of Dantzic" on the boards. All Brooklyn and much of New York crowded the theater. It is owned by Senator Reynolds, a power in politics, and many noted politicians of the Borough of Brooklyn were on hand to congratulate Senator Reynolds.

• • •

There are few changes at the principal theaters. Even "The Sporting Duchess" will hold the boards at least another week and perhaps longer at Proctor's Fifth Avenue, despite the Proctor rule of a change of bill every week. The success of the play has been so great that it may be said that Miss Bingham and her company are in for a run. The cool weather has had an appreciable effect on all the box offices, and there is not a house in the city which is not handling all the business which it comfortably can, while many of them are unable to accommodate all their would-be patrons.

The biggest theater party on record will see the performance at the Criterion theater on Oct. 9. Six hundred and fifty wholesale druggists from all parts of the country will comprise the party, and it took $1,500 to make the necessary reservation.

Sept. 25 a special car carried many New York managers and newspaper men to Boston, where Thomas Jefferson, known as Jefferson the Fifth, began an engagement as the successor in "Rip Van Winkle" to his illustrious father, the late Joseph Jefferson. Thomas Jefferson is an accomplished actor who has played in Paris, London and New York. He has been a member of companies supporting Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, Mary Anderson and other great stars. As successor to his father he is certain to make good. His supporting company includes Frank Bangs and other well-known actors. Manager Charles B. Jefferson has made a new and elaborate production of the play.

Following the engagement of Mrs. Fiske and the Manhattan company at the Manhattan theater, in "Leah Kleschna," Harrison Grey Fiske will produce at that house Maurice Maeterlinck's "Monna Vanna," in which Mme. Kalich will formally make her debut under his direction as a star in English. Mr. Fiske will surround Mme. Kalich with an exceptionally able company, and in due time she will be seen at the Manhattan and in other cities in other plays for which her talents fit her. "Monna Vanna" is a play of unique power and poetic beauty, and Mr. Fiske will give it a production in line with the best, for which the Manhattan theater has been noted. The period and character of the play give scope for elaborate and picturesque scenic and costume treatment.

Shuberts Continue to Add New Houses to Their Circuit—Lily Langtry Coming to America Again—Maude Adams a Forester.

New York, Oct. 7.—The Shuberts continue to perfect their circuit, and if the record of the current week is continued they will soon have houses in all the principal cities of the country for the presentation of their attractions and those of their allies, David Belasco, Harrison Gray Fiske, Frank L. Perley and John C. Fischer. To Washington, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburg, Kansas City and a few other cities they have added Cincinnati, Detroit, Richmond, Va., and Norfolk. One of the members of the combination said to me this week: "We are determined to have a house everywhere the business seems to warrant it, if we have to build them ourselves. We have the backing and the attractions, and already have won the fight against the syndicate."

Hall Caine has seen the New York production of "The Prodigal Son," and says that it is good. Mr. Caine denies intention of putting the American millionaire into either novel or play. He denies the intimate acquaintance with the habits of the captains of industry on this side of the Atlantic necessary for a successful portrayal. He will, however, make the accumulation of vast wealth and its relations to human life and suffering the theme of a new novel. Mr. Caine says: "There is no reason to place the scene of such a story in either the great financial centers of America or even England. The problem of the effects of wealth and whether it in the long run ennobles or degrades can be discussed as well in a novel or play the scene of which lies in my own home, the little Isle of Man."

News reaches me from London that Mrs. Lilly Langtry is to pay another visit to the United States, perhaps early next year. She is first to make a theatrical tour of South Africa, and then come to New York. She has, it is said, been offered a guarantee of $1,500 a week by an American manager, name not mentioned. I also learn that Miss Annie Russell is to present Bernard Shaw's new play, "Major Barbara," at the Court theater in London in November. The play is devoted to a Salvation Army lassie, and was to have been presented by Eleanor Robson.

Gratifying news comes from France that the Buffalo Bill show has not been stranded, as was reported. Only a few of his horses were destroyed by the French authorities on account of the appearance of glanders, and George O. Starr, one of James A. Bailey's right hand men, is authority for the statement that the Wild West show is making money enough to be able to get home when the time comes without taking up a collection.

Quite a ripple was caused on Broadway by the report that Joe Weber and Lew Fields were to get together again. The rumor was very promptly denied by Mr. Fields, who declared that the business arrangements of both these famous comedians was such, he said, that neither could afford to make a change. While for sentimental reasons the reorganization of Weber and Fields might be considered desirable, but as under the present arrangements theater-goers have two fine attractions where only one was before, they are content to let matters rest. It is gratifying to know that the relations between Weber and Fields, which have existed since early boyhood, are as cordial as ever they were.

Maude Adams has placed an order with a Western nursery man for 200,000 young black locust trees, which she will have planted on her estate at Ronkonkoma, L. I. The land is to be worked systematically to aid the growth of the trees. Already 8,000 of the saplings have been planted. They have been set out four feet apart, and are showing a gratifying rate of growth. Since Miss Adams, on advice of her physicians, acquired the Long Island estate she has become an enthusiastic farmer. In a few years Miss Adams expects to be selling railroad ties by the thousand.

It was rumored last week that Oscar Hammerstein is arranging for a season of grand opera at his new theater, the Collseum, to rival the Metropolitan grand opera. Mr. Hammerstein says that plans have not gone far enough to make any definite statement.

Al. H. Wilson, the "golden-voiced singer," who is touring the West in his new comedy drama, "The German Gypsy," is having the most successful season of his career. His part is an excellent one and the role of Metz fits him perfectly. This week Mr. Wilson is acting in St. Louis, where he is a popular favorite and always draws large audiences. He is to present "The German Gypsy" in New York in mid-winter.

Bernard Shaw is a wonder. He has certainly got New York daffy. Must be a great author that can make an office boy a star, still you can't fool the provinces as easily as you can that jack rabbit town. You have got to give them a play out there—but a lot of epigrams. Shaw has never drawn a dollar outside of New York city and never will. New Yorkers are the only ones that love freaks.

Next September will probably see Mr. Kelley as a Broadway star.

Harry Houdini has again proved himself entitled to be known as the Handcuff King" by a most extraordinary feat. A performer named Boudeni, who is also in the handcuff line, agreed with Houdini to a test. Each was to handcuff and shackle the other, and the two men were to be thrown overboard in the New York harbor. The one who could free himself first was to be declared the winner. The men and their seconds repaired to a tugboat and sailed to Atlantic dock, where the shackling was attended to. Ropes were tied around the waists of the contestants and they were lowered into the water. Houdini managed to free himself in two minutes and forty seconds ,while his opponent, after a vain struggle, gave up and had to be hauled on board the tug and revived from his half drowned condition.

Louise Willis, who is appearing in the role of the flirtatious widow in Henry W. Savage's big production of "The Prince of Pilsen," has a decidedly interesting career on the stage. She electrified New York a few seasons ago by taking at a moment's notice Anna Held's place in a big musical production. Miss Held refused to go on and Miss Willis played the part and awoke the next morning to find her impersonation the talk of the town. Later she was engaged for the part of Jack in "Jack and the Beanstalk." Then she visited Australia, playing the Salvation Army lassie in "The Belle of New York," and also played this part in London, where she was later highly praised for her work in "Dick Whittington." She has the distinction of being the only woman who ever played the part of Humpty Dumpty in the famous pantomime of that name at the Drury Lane theater, London.

She played the part of the widow during "The Prince of Pilsen's" five months' run at the Shaftesbury theater in London, and when her English engagements were ended Manager Savage induced her to return to this country and take up the role here.

"I went into an asylum for the insane last summer," said Harry Bulger of "Woodland" company, and as an evidence of the remarkable hold the automobile has on the public, the powers that be in the asylum had a particular portion of the building which they called the "Auto ward." "Where are the other fifty-eight enthusiasts?" I naturally queried.

While en route with "Sho-Gun" company last week, John E. Henshaw, the principal fun-maker of the organization, had a narrow escape from serious injury and possible death. In company with several members of the company Mr. Henshaw was sitting in the smoking compartment of the sleeper listening to stories told by Thomas Leary, the epigrammatic Hauki-Panky of "The Sho-Gun." At some especially good point Mr. Henshaw threw back his head in a hearty guffaw, and just at that instant a bullet crashed through the window near which he was sitting and buried itself in the woodwork a few inches from the comedian's head. It is thought that the shot was fired by some marauder without malicious intent. It is needless to say that Mr. Henshaw is more appreciative of humor than ever before, for he vows that but for his hearty laugh he would have been killed.

Henry W. Savage's English grand opera artists won a notable triumph last week when they appeared in Verdi's "Rigoletti." This florid Italian masterwork, with its exquisite melodies and powerful dramatic story, is the chief new production in the company's repertory this year, next to "The Valkyrie," the first production of which will not go on until the company reaches Boston. "Rigoletto" gives Joseph Sheehan his opportunity to introduce the golden top notes that has made him famous as America's high C tenor, while Winfred Goff has a picturesque part in the title role, where he is the hump-backed court jester. Gertrude Rennyson was the charming Gilda, Mme. Melba's favorite role and Rita Newman appeared in the voice as Maddalena. The scenic production was handsome and the orchestra under Conductor Emanuel shared in the curtain-raising honors at the close of the opera.

The tenth season of the English Grand Opera company opened Monday night with a revival of "Aida" that introduced the magnetic Mme. Serena in the title role. The new prima donna was a favorite from the start, while Francis Maclennan, the tenor of last year's "Parsifal" company, made another personal success. During the week there were performances of "Lohengrin" "Tannhauser," Puccini's "La Boheme" and "Faust," all with new productions and sung with greater spirit and better ensembles than this splendid organization has ever given. The new artists with the company have turned out to be stronger acquisitions than those of former years, giving Mr. Savage the best company he has yet shown.

Next week the English singing forces start on their cross-continent tour of more than 14,000 miles with engagements in eighty cities. Over 150 people will be carried besides an orchestra of fifty under three conductors.

LOVEY MARY AND TOMMY, CHARACTERS IN "MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH," AT LYCEUM NEXT WEEK.

Herr Conried's Plans

Back From Europe, He Tells About Foreign Artists—Why He Has Been Making Offers For Years to Possart.

New York, Oct. 7.—A puffing motor stood one day last August in front of the Imperial opera house in Vienna. About it was a crowd of some 200 persons, comprising, besides members of the personnel of the theater, pedestrians who were attracted by the great machine and the evidences of the importance of its passengers.

"What is the crowd waiting for?" asked a New Yorker, thinking that some celebrity in the world of royalty or government must be expected.

"Why, that is the automobile of the Herr Direktor Conried of the Metropolitan opera house in New York," respectfully answered one of the crowd. "He is just starting for Carlsbad."

In a moment Mr. Conried appeared, talking volubly and followed by a secretary and his hand luggage.

Thus an impressario travels now in Europe, and the world wonders. As the opera company allows Mr. Conried something like $100 a day for travelling expenses during the summer, the financial difficulties of the situation are easily managed.

Theater managers are taken more seriously abroad than they are here, as Mr. Conried can testify. He tells some interesting stories to that effect.

"It is true that last summer I made Von Possart an offer to come over here," he said the other day, "and I have been making him that same offer for years.

I think he was always able to get something out of the Bavarian government on the strength of it.

"'I'll make you an offer, Possart,' I used to say to him, 'but don't talk to me about contracts.'

"Then he would go to the regent and tell him that I wanted him to come to America, and on the strength of my offer he would be able to have done whatever he happened to want at the time. This year when he was compelled to resign the direction of the Prince Regent theater, much against his will, I think, I made him another offer to come to this country in order that he might have that up his sleeve if anything happened.

"After a while we came to talk about it. Then he told me he was never going to act again. I had thought that if he ever did come to New York he might play an engagement at the Irving Place theater.

"Well, what in the world do you expect to do?" I asked.

"'If I come to the United States,' he replied, 'I want to lecture.'

"Well, I know something about lecturing myself, and I think that I could do about as well as Possart, and draw as many people to a lecture. So that ended the famous negotiations for him to come with me to Irving Place."

Mr. Conried had trouble in holding on to Harry Walden, who came here last winter while he was at odds with the German managers' union, and could not find employment of any kind in Germany. Mr. Conried is said to have got him last year for a salary such as is paid here to the very humblest beginner, and Walden is one of the foremost actors of Germany. He was involved in the unpleasant incidents that recently interfered with the career of Agnes Sorma, and was glad to find employment of any kind when Mr. Conried engaged him.

"I raise his salary for this season in spite of my contract with him." Mr. Conried said, "but even then it was not possible to persuade him that it was his duty to keep his contract with me. I found awaiting me on the steamer a telegram from a German manager, offering to pay me the forfeit demanded in his contract if I would allow Walden to stay in Germany and act there. Naturally I refused."

Certainly there has not been in recent years such a company as the Irving Place is to have during the spring months. Harry Walden, Rudolf Christians and Marie Reisenhofer, with the other actors in the organization, will form a remarkable collection of players.

"I am going to take a more active hand in the stage management of the Metropolitan," Mr. Conried said, "and shall put on the Nibelungen Ring myself. I thought of having Anton Fuchs come over to do 'The Flying Dutchman' and 'Die Meistersinger,' but as he cannot I shall mount 'The Flying Dutchman' myself, with such electrical effects in the last act as were never seen here.

"In Munich the characters were improperly costumed in Norwegian dress. I have had my costumes designed by Prof. Leffer of Munich.

"I am also going to produce Strauss' 'The Gipsy Baron,' which I gave here as an operetta years ago. I am going to do 'Haensel und Gretl,' for which I have some beautiful spectacular effects.

"And there are to be no mistakes in the lighting this year. I have spent upward of $40,000 in installing new apparatus by which I can control all the lights by one button. There will be no complaint this season of mistakes in the lighting of the ring."

Mr. Conried saw all of his aritsts during the summer months, and reported them in excellent physical condition. Most of the women have been trying to get thin.

Mme. Sembrich has been climbing hills in Switzerland for that purpose, and Mme. Nordica was in Marienbad and reported to Mr. Conried that she had lost several pounds, sending the news to the steamer to cheer him on the way home. Signore Caruso has also diminished his bulk.

Half Century on Stage

George C. Boniface Tells of Old Plays and Playres—Was Matinee Idol During War.

New York, Oct. 7.—One of the survivors of those dramatic days that are supposed to have been always palmy is George C. Boniface, who is familiar to the present generation of theater-goers chiefly as an erect, dignified old gentleman now cast for parts of minor importance. Mr. Boniface is an old man—as years go—older even than his white hair and mustache suggest. He was a wat time matinee idol, and before that period was the dashing hero of the dramas that the young women of Richmond, Baltimore and Petersburg used to sigh and laugh over.

Mr. Boniface has a record of fifty-four years of active service on the stage. Much of that time found him in companies with Booth, Forrest, Murdoch and the other great actors.

"Often I played with Forrest," said Mr. Boniface, "and it was something to stand up with a heroic figure like that and hold one's own.

"I can hear now the tones of that wonderful voice, swelling like a great organ, with richness and beauty in every tone. How absurd it sounds to hear a person say that Forrest would not be appreciated today. Why, it would be a delight to any audience merely to revel in the beauty of his reading.

"Often I played with Booth, alternating 'Othello" and "Iago" with him and playing various parts to his "Hamlet." He was a very great Hamlet, perhaps the best we had, although James Murdoch was much more scholarly, and I believe he had devoted much more study to the part than Booth had. But everything combined to make Booth wonderful in the role—his voice, his appearance and his grace of movement.

"I have often played "Macbeth" with Charlotte Cushman, played "Dandy Dinmont" with her, too, and most of the other leading roles in her repertoire. There is another woman who would be as great today as she ever was."

Mr. Boniface was born at the corner of Lispenard street and Broadway and became an amateur actor as soon as he was old enough. His brother, Charles, who was ten years his senior, was an enthusiastic member of the old Forrestoneans, a dramatic club with its quarters at the corner of Canal and Elm streets and having among its leading members Dan Marble and W. J. Florence. Mr. Boniface's club was the Murdoch and he acted there until 1851, when he went to Baltimore and as Capt. Bleinheim in "The Rough Diamond," made his professional beginning.

"When I went to Richmond the next season," Mr. Boniface said, "Joe Jefferson was the stage manager and had the low comedy roles. He was there for several years and gave evidence of all the talent that made him a great actor later.

"He had less to do there than stage managers do nowadays, for an actor's competency was assumed as a fact in those days. When a man or woman was engaged for a company he or she was supposed to be able to read lines intelligently, to know where to stand and how to walk. Nowadays all the actors are taught those things for every play.

"Mary Devlin, who was the first wife of Edwin Booth and who died soon after her marriage; John Jack, Daniel Harkins and Edwin Adams were all members of the company, which was as good an organization as an actor could care to belong to. Richmond was in those days a prosperous, important city, and the actors were very cordially received by the Southern families. They could go wherever they wanted to so long as they behaved themselves, and all the members of that company then did behave themselves. So life was very pleasant for us."

There were few combinations in those days. The stars traveled around and found companies in the various theaters waiting to support them in the repertoires that had been prepared in advance. It was not so difficult for the actors to get their plays ready, for most of the visitors appeared in the same pieces.

With the women it was "The Hunchback," "Love's Sacrifice," "The Wife," "London Assurance," "Venice Preserved" or "The Lady of Lyons," in addition to the Shakespearean plays. The men acted in "The Iron Chest"—E. L. Davenport always had to play that—"Richleau," "The Duke's Motto" and the Shakespearean plays. So the work of the company was not so difficult as it might seem except in the case of Edwin Forrest, who would, as Mr. Boniface says, insist upon a new play or two every time he came to act in Richmond.

"Jean Davenport, Edwin Forrest, Charlotte Cushman, Nick of the Woods' Proctor, who died only a year or two ago in Boston, the two Bateman sisters, who used to play in 'The Fire in Hague Street,' in which a little child was supposed to be confined under an iron grating; Julia Dean, James Murdoch and Edwin Booth were some of the stars that used to come along during the season," said Mr. Boniface. "They never stayed more than a week and we changed the bill every night.

"We did that even during the weeks the stock company played. Once we acted 'The Sea of Ice,' and that was so elaborately put on that it ran a week. Then we had a play intended to counteract the influence of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' and show the happiness of the slave under the conditions that existed then.

"It was called 'Cabin and Parlor' and ran for six weeks to large audiences. We took it to Petersburg and it made as great a success there. Such a run was unprecedented in those days and was due chiefly to the great interest in the subject.

"Our seasons in Richmond usually began in September. A popular play was selected and all the company appeared in it. When the curtain rose we were standing in a row and sang 'The Star Spangled Banner.' Then the curtain fell for a minute and the play began."

Mr. Boniface played in Baltimore after he left Richmond, and then in Cleveland with "Honest John Elsler," whose memory arouses in him the same admiration it does in all old players. After coming to New York he became, in 1865, a star.

He was for a long time the stock star at Maguire's theater in San Francisco, and he played in New York at Horace Lingard's theater. The beautiful Alice Dunning Lingard, who was a barmaid in England, had never acted in any drama until Mr. Boniface put her into "The Captain of the Watch" and similar pieces which were played at Lingard's theater. He finally produced there "Don Caesar de Bazan," and Mrs. Lingard played the heroine. She had learned her art by this time and she continued her career as an actress until her death in England a few years ago.

"I passed some time at the Pittsburg theater as leading man," Mr. Boniface said, "and it was then famous for the productions which Foster, the manager, made. He was considered very lavish for those days and Pittsburg saw wonderful spectacles.

"Acting opposite to me was Joseph Ludsford, a very handsome fellow and a splendid actor. He was engaged by Laura Keene to come to New York and was to begin at the opening of her season in September.

"During August he and Billy Florence, with a party of friends, went down to Coney Island. While bathing, they began to play leapfrog on the beach. As Ludsford started to jump over Billy Florence's back he did not make his jump high enough and, stumbling, fell on his back. He broke his neck and was never able to show New York what he could do."

Mr. Boniface has played every role in the standard drama and long ago forgot the number of parts he has taken. He was the first man to act "David Garrick" in this country and although the play was not a great success at first, it was much more prosperous when he revived it.

A few of the older actors believe that there is not opportunity enough for the young men of the day to prepare themselves for their profession, but Mr. Boniface is not one of these.

"The stock companies all over the country now are making it possible for the youngsters to get the experience they need," he said, "and a lot of bright young men and women are among them.

"Ten years ago it looked hopeless for beginners in the profession. There was nothing but long runs, and no way by which they could get the practice that is indispensable to any good actor. Playing one part for a year may make a working theatrical machine of a man or woman, but it will never make an actor. Now all that is different. They all get the work they need.

"I sometimes wish, however, that the actors nowadays could be made to open their mouths and speak the words that authors have written. I understand authors have written. I understand laughs little when I go to a theater nowadays.

"Sometimes when I am on the stage and step to the wings to watch the play I can only with difficulty catch what my colleagues are saying. This is, of course, the result of the rebellion against what the managers call the stage oddities.

"'Be natural and talk in a commonplace way,' is what they say to every one.

"The stage is not life, however. Acting must be artistic exaggeration in voice just as it is in movement. It is a fact that under the stress of emotion the human voice falls into a rhythmic and deliberate style of speaking.

"That suggestion certainly should be followed on the stage, in spite of the manager's constant demand that actors should be commonplace and colloquial. To my mind the most important thing of all is that an actor should speak the text of his part so that it can be heard by everybody who goes to the theater. The first important thing for an actor to do, then, is to speak clearly.

"We have, of course, finer productions than we used to, and more money is spent, but there were many impressive effects in the old times, and it is a mistake to believe that what is spectacular and thrilling is altogether new.

"I remember at the old Bowery theater in some of the Napoleonic plays the runways were built as high as the top of the theater. It was possible on that vast stage, and it was thrilling to see the soldiers dragging up the cannons as they would on the sides of the mountains.

"It was in that theater that Ian Marble as Sam Patch used to jump from the top of the theater into the tank of water under the stage. Oh, yes, we had our thrilling effects in the old times, even if we didn't spend quite so much money as the managers do now."

NOT MUSICAL KIND.

The venerable Susan B. Anthony, at the National Suffrage Association's convention in Portland, Or., insisted on the value of special education and special training, says the Los Angeles Times.

"It is useless," she said, "to attempt to reform or to elevate businesses or customs that we have not thoroughly studied. When, in ignorance, we try to set right and to help the world, we do more harm than good. We make fools of ourselves.

"Indeed, we are then like a little girl whom I knew when I was editing the Revolution. The child went with her teacher one afternoon to visit the county prison. She became interested in a convict who was knitting stockings, and stopped to talk with the man.

"'Do you find it dull here, sir?' she said.

"'Indeed I do, miss,' the convict answered.

"'Still,' said the child, 'the singing of the birds helps to relieve the monotony, doesn't it?'

"'Singing of the birds?' said the convict, in a puzzled voice.

"'Yes,' said the little girl.

"'What birds?' asked the man.

"The well-meaning but ignorant child, with a helpful smile, replied:

"'The little jailbirds. They must be a great comfort to you."

Happenings in the World of Sport

WESTERN FOOTBALL

Minnesota Playing North Dakota and Michigan Case School.

Talk of Post Season Game Between Gophers and Michigan.

TODAY'S GAMES.
North Dakota at Minneapolis.
Case Scientific at Ann Arbor.
Lawrence at Madison.
South Dakota at Lincoln, Neb.
Iowa at Chicago.
Wabash college at Northwestern.

Minnesota is playing the University of North Dakota this afternoon on Northrup field.

After the victory over the scrappy St. Thomas college eleven by the score of 42 to 0 last Wednesday, the football stock at the university has been booming, and the supporters of the team hope to see a big score piled up against the North Dakotans this afternoon.

Safford, the Duluth boy, was not in the line-up Wednesday, but he may be in the game this afternoon. The Minnesota team will probably be chosen from the following players: Cutting, Bugan, Ittner, Vitt, Smith, Sanborn, Brush, Oech, Marshall, Larkin, Kremer, Irstield, Current and Safford.

The Duluth football enthusiasts are looking forward to the Wisconsin game which will be played on November 4. The railroads will make a rate of $4.35 for the return trip, and it is expected that several hundred supporters of the team will take in the game.

• • •

Michigan is playing Case Scientific school today at Ann Arbor. The score of 65 to 0 against Ohio Weslyn, demonstrated that the loss of the great Heston did not disorganize the wonderful machine built up by Yost, and once more football enthusiasm at Ann Arbor is running high.

"If Michigan is defeated in the race for the championship this fall, the winners will have to be the best team that ever stepped in shoe leather," is the terse manner in which Yost sizes up the outlook. Yost has sent out his regular ante-season gloom stories, and the loss of the great Heston and the crippling of Longman, Heston's rival in prestige, have been cited as evidence that the record of four triumphant years was closed, but Michigan's chances now look very bright indeed.

• • •

Lawrence university is playing Wisconsin at Madison today.

The Badgers made a rather poor showing against the Marquette team, but they are still looked upon as a dark horse for the Western championship.

"Al" Cummings was missing from the line-up Wednesday, Meizner and Kuehmstedt filling the position.

• • •

Chicago is drawn against Iowa today, and it will be the first hard game of the year for the Maroons. The score of 38 to 0 made against Beloit last Wednesday, does not give any idea of Chicago's strength, as the team was composed almost entirely of substitutes, and with the regular team in today, the Maroons should pile up just as big a score against Iowa to carry out the predictions of Stagg's supporters.

• • •

There is talk this year of a post-season game between Michigan and Minnesota at the Wolverines win from both the Badgers and Chicago, and if Minnesota goes through the season without defeat. Such a game would please every football enthusiast in the West, and would settle the dispute which has been carried on for two years, since the famous tie game in Minneapolis.

Sporting Comment

It is in just such weather as this that a packsack and a gun, or a canoe and a camera, open up about as big a glimpse of Paradise as the average mortal hopes to secure until he sheds the packsack for a pair of wings.

The woods were never more beautiful than they are now, and the weather man has apparently uncorked a bottle of extra dry, double-distilled, autumn freshness.

Unlucky indeed is the man who is unable to get away for at least a few days of fishing or hunting in the Northern woods before the snow flies. True, the hunting isn't as good as it might be, but the man who would ask for anything better than the privilege of being out in the woods these days, would order beer at a champagne supper.

Some people there are, whose communing with nature never went farther than picking geraniums from a kitchen window box, who ask what there is to do or see in the woods. But the cruising microbe, when once it has been inoculated, generally "takes," and the disease is harder to shake off than hay fever in July.

The moonlight glittering on the black lake, on one of these perfect autumn nights would make a poet out of a boiler maker, and there isn't a true sportsman in Duluth who doesn't cast a longing glance at the closet where his traps are stored every morning when he awakes to find the sun shining in a clear, cool sky, or who isn't afraid to meet the reproachful glance of his setter.

To those who can't get away for a week or ten days, one or two suggestions might be in order. Take a canoe this evening or next Saturday evening, and start up the St. Louis river with a companion or two, and a gun. If the start is made from West Duluth, it would not be difficult to make Fond du Lac before the moon goes down. A blanket beside the fire is good enough for the bed, and by rising early enough tomorrow morning it might be possible to get a shot at some ducks. A dinner of fried pork and eggs cooked on the campfire, an afternoon pipe and a snooze, and a paddle home in the still evening moonlight, should be all that any reasonable man would ask. But watch the weather man's report, and don't get caught on the river in one of Duluth's old time northeasters.

• • •

Yost, Michigan's Yost, the redoubtable "Hurry-up," the epitome of modern football knowledge, says he has a football team this year. Deponent further alleges that nothing short of the finest thing in the way of a football team that ever cracked a skull or gouged out an eye can touch his band of leather-clad warriors.

Making due allowance for the extravagance of language and the veracity of the correspondent who quoted him, Yost probably thinks he has the best team in the West this year.

If Michigan wins from Chicago and Wisconsin this year, her position will be much the same as that of Marvin Hart in the pugilistic world. Hart claims the heavyweight championship of the world, and as James J. Jeffries has broken all precedents by really retiring from the ring, Hart can revel in the glory of a championship belt.

Minnesota, for various very insufficient reasons, was left out of both Chicago's and Michigan's schedules this year, and until the Gophers have been defeated the Maroons and the Wolverines will have about as much right to claim the Western championship as the central high school team.

Meanwhile Mr. Yost can claim anything he chooses for his team. It makes good "copy" and helps the sale of his book, which is said to be bringing him in a snug nest-egg, that may ultimately enable him to retire from football and allow Michigan to worry along without his guiding hand at the helm.

It's not much wonder the Duluth baseball managers have started on a still hunt for a downtown park, when the attendance figures for last season are looked into.

Little Fargo, the prohibition bunch that finished in the third place, played to within 1,000 of as many people as the two-time champions from Duluth, a city with five times as many inhabitants.

Duluth can turn out as good a Saturday or Sunday crowd as any town of its size in the country, but on weekdays the grand stands look like the dress circle of a Boston theater with a bunch of "Uncle Tommers" playing a two weeks' engagement.

With a ball ground near enough to the center of the city to be outside of the black bear preserves, the weekday games might catch some of the shekels of the fans, and with the Sunday and holiday games played in the suburbs, the red ink marks on the company's books would begin to assume a darker hue.

The Athletics have finally succeeded in shaking off the Chicago White Stockings in the American league race, and now everybody is waiting for the big show to commence next week when McGraw's Giants will clash with the Phillies for the world's championship.

Some reputations are duo to be damaged when the unhittable "Rube" faces McGraw's mighty sluggers, and when the American league pitcher tamers begin swinging at Matthewson's mysterious shoots.

The betting favors the Giants, but playing the copper stocks is a much less hazardous game as it looks pretty much like a toss-up between the two teams.

ROSEBEN MAKES A NEW RECORD FOR SIX FURLONGS

New York, Oct. 7.—D. C. Johnson's Roseben, carrying the heavy impost of 147 pounds, made a new world's record for six furlong's, circular track, when he won the Manhattan handicap at Belmont park yesterday. He stepped the distance of 1:11 3-5, which is one-fifth of a second faster than Dick Wells' time made at Washington park, Chicago, in August, 1903. The race run by Roseben yesterday stamps him as the best sprinter in America, as the son of Ben Strome-Rose Leaf picked up his 147 pounds and handled it like a feather. The victory was very popular, but when the time was hung out the great crowd burst out in cheers, which were continued for fully five minutes.

O'Neil sent Roseben into the lead at the start with Aeronaut close up. Aeronaut held on to the stretch, where Roseben drew away and won galloping by four lengths. Dreamer, favorite, won the Dixiana stakes.

TWO GAMES ON GRIDIRON

Duluth Athletics Will Meet Cloquet at Athletic Park.

Central High Is Playing Aitkin High School Eleven.

Two good football games are promised in Duluth for this afternoon and tomorrow.

This afternoon the high school team is playing the Aitkin high school eleven, and the game should be a close one.

Tomorrow afternoon the Duluth Athletic association team will meet the fast Cloquet eleven at Athletic park.

The Athletics look like the fastest and heaviest eleven that has represented Duluth in years. All of the men are old players, most of them having been members of the Central high school team.

Since leaving school they have added weight, and the team that will go on the field tomorrow will average about 180 pounds.

The Cloquet team is composed largely of old college players who are employed by the lumber companies at the sawmill town, and they will put up a strong argument.

• • •

The Athletics have arranged quite a schedule for this season, and several good games are assured, if the showing tomorrow is at all favorable. A return game will be played with the Cloquet team at Cloquet a week from tomorrow, and following that games will be played with the Minneapolis city team, and the Great Northern team of St. Paul.

Two games will also probably be played with the Superior city team, and if all goes well return games may be arranged with the two Twin City teams that are scheduled to come to Duluth.

DANNY MAHER

Is Still the Leading Jockey on English Tracks.

London, Oct. 7.—Sam Heapy is by long odds the champion jockey if the Belgian race courses. He has won 100 races outo f 312 mounts, giving him an average of 30 per cent.

Danny Maher still has a commanding lead over all the jockeys riding in England in percentage of wins and is almost even with Wheatley in actual wins.

The new law in France forbidding all betting except in mutuals, a government monopoly, has been rigorously enforced, and there has been a marked falling off in interest and in attendance at the French race meets.

The race course at Nice has been remodeled, and when the meeting is held in January the track will be almost like one of the first-class American tracks, after which it has been modeled.

WINNIPEG LED LEAGUE

The Attendance Figures Greater Than Any Two Other Cities.

Duluth Has Good Reserve List For Next Year's Team.

Official attendance figures, which were made public at the recent Northern league meeting held in Crookston, show that Winnipeg played to more people than any other two cities in the circuit.

The total number of people who passed through the gate at the Manitoba capital during the ball season, was between 74,000 and 75,000, or an average of about 550 to the game. With the team Winnipeg had this year an average of 250 to the game would pay expenses, so that the management of the Maroons came out a big winner.

In Duluth the total attendance during the season was between 22,000 and 24,000, or less than half that of Winnipeg. The Duluth management, by careful figuring and the sale of one or two players, was able to clear expenses during the season, and have a balance of about $500 to the good, which went toward paying off last year's indebtedness.

Fargo was the best ball town in the circuit this year, when the city's population is taken into consideration. The little city turned out between 21,000 and 22,000 people during the season, while Grand Forks played to about 19,000. In both of these cities the transportation expense were light, owing to the short distance between them, and the proximity of Crookston, and both teams did a little better than clear expenses.

In Superior and Crookston the attendance during the season was less than 12,000, and these teams proved the only losers in the circuit.

Many plans are under consideration for next year. They include the enlargement of the league to eight clubs, and the purchasing of a downtown park for Duluth. With a down town park there is, apparently, no reason why the attendance figures in Duluth should not pass the 40,000 mark next year, especially if the team is more on a par with the others and does not make such a runaway race of it. The one-sided nature of the games this year kept down the attendance figures, as the fans lost interest in the race, and with an exciting race and a down town park, it should be a very small attendance at even the Monday and Tuesday games.

All of the players but Powell, Newman and Neighbors are reserved for next year. The club also has McShane on the list, and there is a good nucleus for a winning team. The question of a manager will be left open until after the new company has been organized, when the stockholders will be allowed to choose their own manager. It is not unlikely that Artie O'Dea will be made playing manager of the team and employed early in the year, so that he will have a chance to get his men together. With the men on the reserve list, the only new players required are a short stop and some pitchers.

ST. LOUIS, 6; CHICAGO, 2.

St. Louis, Oct. 7.—It devolved on St. Louis, the tail-enders in the league pennant race, to finally and irrevocably head off the marvelous rush of the Chicago American league baseball team and drive the final spike in the latter's aspirations for the 1905 pennant, when the coveted piece of bunting was almost in its grasp, and to give Philadelphia a clear title to the American league championship. The locals yesterday drove Dr. White, Manager Jones' premier pitcher, from the box in the third inning and snowed the visiting team under in an avalanche of hits and runs, practically clinching the game, which they finally won by a score of 6 to 2. WEIGHT OF THE YEAR'S ELEVENS

New York, Oct. 7.—One of the features of the present football season, which has so far escaped notice, is the weight of the elevens to be turned out by the big colleges. Last year Harvard, Yale, and Columbia had teams that averaged 190 pounds or over. Princeton was a little behind, with a team which averaged about 185 pounds. Cornell and Pennsylvania had very light teams. Cornell averaged about 173 pounds and the Quaker eleven, which went through the season without a defeat, weighed only 172 pounds. This year both Yale and Harvard will have teams averaging about the same weight as in 1904. The Columbia squad is particularly heavy and will average fully as heavy as Harvard and Yale. The Princeton team will probably not average much above the 180 mark, because the Tiger squad is made up of lighter men this year. Cornell and Pennsylvania each promise to have heavy teams this fall. The Cornell squad is the heaviest by far that the Ithacans ever had and their eleven will certainly average well over 180 pounds. Cornell's line material is particularly good and the task to tackle the Ithacans will weigh on the average 210 pounds, perhaps more. If the men who now seem to have caught the fancy of the coaches at Pennsylvania succeed in making the eleven, the Quakers will have a team that averages 184 pounds. This is an advantage of twelve pounds to the man better than the 1904 eleven and ought to have a decided bearing in the championship games.

Ordinarily it is a precarious matter to forecast at this stage of the game the strongest makeup which the coaches of the different universities can secure. But the preliminary practice has now been on for nearly three weeks and, furthermore, all but Yale have played their first practice games. These facts give one an opportunity to draw a good line on the probable selections.

Judging solely from the way in which they have been lined up in their practice and scheduled games, the veterans from 1904 still in college, and the preference the various coaches have shown, the following table looks to be pretty accurate, as showing the strongest material the coaches of the Big Six now have:

The foregoing selections may not hold true as the season advances, but for the present they are lineups which appear to have given their respective coaches the greatest satisfaction. There are always new men constantly reporting, while injuries or scholarship defects may remove some of the most promising players at any moment.

Marcus Hurley, world's champion bicycle rider and basketball crack, has started gridiron work at Columbia. He is showing up strong as a punter and he is looked upon as a most important addition to the eleven. As Columbia has never had a really first-class punter since Chauncey Bishop's time, it is very gratifying to Capt. Thorpe to find a man with as much ability as Hurley possesses.

California Turning Out Great Men of Brawn and Muscle.

The Latest San Francisco Fistic Wonder Is Al. Kaufmann.

San Francisco, Oct. 7.—All San Francisco is talking about the new Western heavyweight, Al Kaufmann. It is believed that he is going to cut as wide a swath as that other Californian, James J. Corbett.

What is liked particularly about Kaufmann is his punch. There is no questioning the effectiveness of it. In his amateur days he generally managed to put each opponent away with one full sweep of his terrible right. He has opened his professional career auspiciously by disposing of Harry Foley with the first blow that landed.

Old Billy Delaney is as proud as a cat with two tails, although he would have preferred to see the thing last half a dozen rounds or so.

In talking of Kaufmann before the contest, Billy said: "This thing of knocking out amateurs in a punch is all right, as it shows the young fellow has something to start with. I want to see how he acts between rounds, though. You can get a line on a novice when he comes to his corner after a grueling round, and if there are a whole lot of grueling rounds the better the opportunity for noting how stout-hearted he is."

As there was no "tween rounds" in the Kaufmann-Foley fight, Billy will have to await another opportunity for studying Kaufmann's demeanor while resting.

Delaney is satisfied that this new find is game, however. It was remarked, in fact, at the recent contest that Kaufmann was as cool as a cucumber while the seasoned fighter, Foley, had a case of nerves.

Kaufmann's style is unorthodox. He wastes too much energy in dancing around. In time, no doubt, he will copy Fitzsimmons and Jeffries and use his feet in a dignified manner.

No fault can be found with his fist work, though. He is as quick as a flash in sending in punches. Referee Jack Welch thinks Kaufmann the best heavyweight that has developed in years.

"I never saw a prettier punch than the one he floored Foley with, said Welch. "Foley's head struck the floor first and then he flattened out."

That the Britt-Nelson moving pictures made a hit with the public was shown by the fact that the attendance increased rather than diminished with each succeeding performance throughout the week. Hundreds of good sports saw them over and over again, and now have the battle scene impressed upon their memories to such an extent that they are in a position to give offhand answers to questions concerning any particular occurrence or any stated round.

The week developed a crop of prize-ring statisticians, analysists and theorists. Some fellows, by careful tabbing, have become authorities on the number of hooks, jolts and uppercuts used in each three minute spell of fighting. They know —or think they know—how often Nelson led or blocked and how frequently Britt landed.

The analysists have discovered the fatal mistakes that Britt made, and the theorists can enlighten you as to why Britt's blows were not more hurtful. One of these latter, a doctor, by the way, says that Jimmy didn't call on any of his muscle or weight back or below the socket of his arms, and hence his inability to do more than start the blood whenever he lashed out.

The gentleman who framed this theory can scarcely have taken note of the heart punches delivered by Britt. The native son certainly tried to get every ounce of weight into those particular blows, but—let it go at that. A man who allows himself to be drawn into an argument on any question pertaining to the recent fight at this particular time is inviting trouble. There are fellows primed with whys and wherefores waiting for him on every corner.

To the ordinary observer there are certain features of the phantom fight which sing themselves into the understanding. One is that Jimmy Britt took three steps at least to every one taken by Nelson, and another is that Britt struck at least three blows for every punch sped by the Dane.

That is the way Nelson planned his fight. He was ever pressing in steadily, never wasting a step and seldom wasting a blow. He traveled at a natural gait and he kept his opponent stepping backward, the most fatiguing method of locomotion a human being could be required to adopt.

Nelson made good on his boast, "I never back up." Hard raps on the face made the blood fly in showers and jarring punches made him cover up instinctively, but he never threw a foot to the rear unless driven back by the force of a blow. His distress—and he was hurt more than once—was of a flash-like duration, and then he pressed and hooked and swung relentlessly.

Although Nelson has said that the ring will have no attractions for him for several months, the critics and promoters are busying themselves selecting an opponent for him. So far Jimmy Gardner appears to be the popular choice, and Nolan has said that Gardner will do if he can make "Bat's" weight.

In connection with this weight question it should be mentioned that Britt is the only fighter Nelson will meet at what has come to be known as "afternoon weight." Britt can have a match on the old terms, to-wit, 133 pounds several hours before entering the ring. Jimmy Gardner and for that matter any other man outside of Britt, will have to do 133 pounds at the ringside.

IS THE KING OF JOCKEYS

Although not so much rivalry is shown in later years between the premier jockeys of the racing turf and there is not the same stride for highest honors, yet followers of the sport everywhere will find interest in a list of the winners for the last ten seasons, as compiled by the San Francisco Bulletin.

Going back to 1896 and 1897 the contest held the attention of sport lovers all over the country, with "Snapper" Garrison and Jimmie McLaughlin pulling for a diamond whip offered by a New York sporting paper. The press in those days recorded each rider's achievement, so that toward the end of the racing season there was nearly as much interest taken as there is in a close pennant race in the baseball world these years. Garrison carried off the honors in 1896 and McLaughlin got to the top in 1897. The year following both riders had limited opportunities on account of an increase in weight, and although the fight that existed the previous season was as interesting, both riders were placed in the background by the lightweight Western negro, "Pike" Barnes, who wound up the season many winners in advance of the competitors. In 1899 Barnes, while piloting fewer horses to victory than he did the previous year, again led the list by a comfortable margin. In 1899 Mart Bergen appeared on the racing firmament as the riding talent. Bergen is still seen in the saddle these days, though a back number with the present jockeys. In '01 and '02 Hugh Penny got off with a lead early in these years and finished in front both seasons.

Willie Simms, who, like Barnes, was a colored boy, duplicated the feat of Penny, and for the next two years he was on top of the list. It was in the second year that Simms broke the previous record of "Pike" Barnes and piloted the most winners ridden in a season. L. Reiff, a cousin of Johnny and Lester Reiff, the two Americans that were so successful in England, came into prominence as the leader of the riding brigade. Reiff piloted 292 winners out of 469 chances, establishing a world's record for the largest number of wins, and, incidentally, having the highest per cent of winning mounts of any of the riders that led the list in the last two decades.

"Skeets" Martin won on 173 occasions the next year and led the list. Most of "Skeets'" riding that season was on California tracks. Tommy Burns, who has ridden every winter for the last half dozen years on the California tracks, was champion in '98 and '99. In the second of these years Burns established a record of being the first jockey in America that ever rode in over 1,000 races in a single season.

In 1900 Jockey Mitchell got an early start at New Orleans and when the season's races were over, he had piloted 195 winners during the year.

Winnie O'Connor had 1,047 mounts in 1901 and won on 253 occasions.

In 1902 Jay Ransch broke Burns' record of the largest number of rides and out of 1,091 chances the Bakersfield boy won on 246 horses. Grover Cleveland Fuller headed the list in 1903 with 226 wins. Last season Gene Hildebrand attracted attention on the California tracks. He was riding for Vic Gilbert at the time. Joe Yeager, the Eastern plunger who was visiting California, immediately took cognizance of the fact that "Hildey" was the making of a great rider. He opened negotiations with Gilbert, and secured the contract on Hildebrand for a reported price of $5,000. The Californian made good for Yeager, and the plunger, though at times playing against "Hildey's" mounts was credited with winning wagers that aggregated over $100,000 on the boy's good work in the saddle.

When the season of 1904 was over Hildebrand had heralded supremacy. He established two records. One in riding the largest number of races in one season, and the other in piloting more winners than any rider in America.

But during the past season Hildebrand has come into disrepute for questionable tactics, to the end that his license was revoked by the stewards of the jockey club in New York last Saturday. This practically ostracizes him from further riding in this country, unless the matter is reconsidered. "Careless and rough riding" is the ultimatum of the jockey club.

POSITIVE PROOF

Because it's the evidence of a Duluth citizen.

Testimony easily investigated.

The strongest endorsement of merit.

The best of proof. Read it:

L. P. Schneider, butcher at McAuley's Washington market, and living at 210 West Fourteenth avenue, Duluth, Minn., says: "A statement I made in 1898, recommending Doan's Kidney Pills, and which has been published in the local papers, very mildly expresses my opinion of that remedy. After suffering for a long time from pain through the back and loins, which made it almost impossible for me to stoop or lift anything without torture, Doan's Kidney Pills cured me, and the lapse of six years has proved that the cure has been permanent. I am sure that I suffered the worst tortures of kidney trouble. Often the pain felt as if a sharp knife was piercing me. At night, although tired out, I could not rest or lie in one position without getting sore all over. The kidney secretions were irregular and contained a heavy sediment. Since I found this cure I have time after time advised others to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and I never miss an opportunity to speak well of them."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50 cents. Foster-Millburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

WANTED TO BUY BACK HIS MINE

Sold For $60,000 and Offered $40,000 Bonus Next Day.

Goldfield, Nev., Oct. 7.—It is an ordinary circumstance in Goldfield these days for a man to make or lose a fortune over night. Millions have been taken out of the mines within two years, possession of which was had for a shoestring, and the speculative desire is strongly marked, especially in those who have been on the ground for a period. However, to sell a mine one day for $60,000, and then to offer a bonus of $40,000 the very next day for the return of the deeds to the piece of ground, is something that rarely occurs even in Goldfield. Such an instance actually did occur, however, within the week, when T. W. Knickerbocker transferred the control of the Blizzard group of mines, which he most valued among the many groups of claims he had staked in the district during the early days. In the transfer, he parted with a mining property that he had long believed to possess unlimited possibilities and that would eventually make him a millionaire mine owner.

The wear and tear of two years of mining camp life had told on him, however, and he was prevalled upon to let go. The group was bought by prominent Goldfield mine operators, with a view to the prosecution of an extensive plan of development to determine the value of the great ore bodies that are so distinctly indicated by bold outcroppings on the surface. The property is situated in the eastern section of the great Goldfield mineral zone, and embraces at least half a dozen of the prominent dikes or fissures of quartz that marked the course of the district's Golden Horseshoe. It is an ideal mining proposition, in the opinion of the experts.

Knickerbocker had upon numerous occasions before the sale, prospected the ground, but had never obtained assays higher than $4.60 in gold to the ton. In Goldfield, this is considered a fair surface showing, though not flattering. Consulting engineers of the practical mining men who had in view the purchase or the property made a thorough examination of the ground, and in sampling the different ledges took an average of six feet of quartz from one of the croppings. This was assayed, the returns showing $34.60 in gold to the ton. Without informing Knickerbocker, the representatives that night returned to the spot and secured other samples, afterwards covering the ledge with loose dirt where exposed. These samples also went high in gold, and no time was lost in closing the deal.

Upon hearing of the discovery, Knickerbocker went out and again examined the property. He took a number of samples for assay from the same spot, and obtained such unusually high results that he immediately looked up the purchasers and offered them a clear profit of $40,000 for their investment. The proffer, however, was unhesitatingly turned down.

Already the purchasers are sinking a working shaft on the ledge that yielded such flattering assays. They will thoroughly explore this fissure, as well as several others that run parallel to it and show pronounced enrichment. In all probability, it will be added to Goldfield's list of producing mines in quick order.

GREEKS PLAN

For Ten Years to Regain Lost Athletic Prestige.

Nicholas Georgantos of the Pan-Hellenic gymnasium, Athen, Greece, at the annual championships of the Hellenes, four weeks ago, threw the discus 133 feet 9 inches, breaking the world's record of 133 feet, held by Martin Sheridan of New York. This record surpasses the best throw ever made by Sheridan, and is within a few feet of the illegitiate throw of Garrells of Michigan, recorded at the conference meeting at Chicago last May.

Georgantos competed in the Olympic games at the World's fair last year, and in practice threw the discus 135 feet 4 inches, but on the day of the contest the best throw he made was 123 feet 4 inches. His nervous condition resulted in several fouls, which disqualified his best throws.

From reports which have come from Attica, where the games were contested, it appears that the Greeks, profiting by the experience in the games of 1896 and 1904, have been preparing for almost ten years for the approaching Olympiad. The discus champion won the shot-put with a cast of 45 feet, while the 100-meter dash was won in :11 2-5, very creditable time.

It is the belief in Greek circles at this time that the Athenians will make a much better showing than they did either in 1896 or 1904.

Perikles Kakousis, who won the weight lift at St. Louis, has not returned to Greece, but has been sojourning in and around Boston, Mass., learning the boxing game. The absence of Kakausis would not affect the resultfriotic banker of Athens.

of the weight lift, as far as Greece is concerned, for Hercules, who became ill at Marseilles, while enroute for America in 1904, is reported as being a much better weight man than Kakousis.

While many in America have been under the impression that the games will be contested in Athens, it now appears that the contests will take place in the old satadium at Olympia, which has been rebuilt at the cost of $1,000,000, the money having been presented to the government by a pa-

The Tar Macadam Mixing and Rock Crushing Plants

Established By Contractor Steele at the West End.

Nearly All Material For West Superior Street Paving Secured Here.

With Fine Weather, the Pavement Will Be Completed This Fall.

In but few cities is it possible to witness the sight of pavements being laid, for which 99 per cent of the material is secured within the city limits, and the paving of West Superior street is probably unique in the fact that the stone for the foundation work is being taken from the property abutting on the street.

Out of the $80,000 or $90,000 which the West Superior street job will cost, between 95 and 99 per cent will be spent right in the city for labor and material. All the materials that go to make up the tar macadam pavement are secured right in the city, and the only money that is spent outside of the city goes for the cement in the concrete work under the curbs, and in the brick which is used for the catch basins.

Everything else needed for the pavement is secured in the city. The rock is blasted out of the granite hills, known as the "point of rocks," and the tar is purchased from the Zenith Furnace company in West Duluth.

A quarry has been started by the contractor, Hugh Steele, on property abutting on the street, near Tenth avenue west, and on the opposite side of the street, about three blocks west, he has set up his crushing plant, and the city's tar macadam mixer, where he is preparing the material which is to be laid.

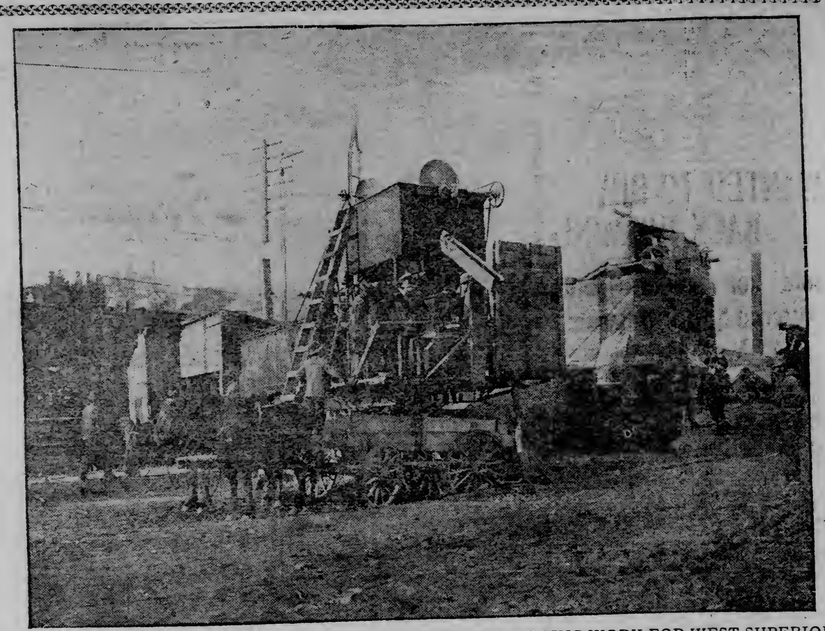

Less than two blocks away from the crusher are two other quarries, where crushed rock is being taken out of the hillside. One of these is the property of Alex. Sang, the contractor, and the other is owned by the city. Crushing plants are operated in connection with both quarries, and the rock for the foundation work on West Superior street is being drawn from Sang's crusher. Only that rock needed for mixing with the tar for the macadam compound is taken out of the hillside, at Tenth avenue west and Superior street.

The mixing of the tar macadam compound, which is being done at Thirteenth avenue west and Superior street is an interesting sight.

The broken stone is brought in from the quarry at Tenth avenue in wagons and thrown into the crusher, where it is ground to the desired fineness. As it is thrown out of the crusher, men are standing ready to feed it into the mixing plant. Tar is brought from the Zenith Furnace company, in steel back t wagons, under which a fire is kept lighted to keep the tar from cooling. The tar is poured into the mixer, on top of the crushed stone, and the completed mixture drops out of the bottom of the machine into the wagons, which are stading prepared to receive it. There is but a short haul from the mixer to the scene of the paving operations, and as the work progresses the distance will be lessened.

The work on the stret was greatly comparitively a simple operation, but the mixing of the material must be carefuly done, and it is of the greatest importance to get the ingredients in the proper proportions as well as to get good material.

The tar that is being furnished by the Zenith Furnace company more than answers all the requirements of the tests of the city engineer's office, and is said to be of a very high grade. The rock is also of the right dimensions, and as far as the mixing is concerned, the West Superior street pavement should be as good a job as has ever been done in Duluth.

TAR MACADAM MIXING PLANT AND ROCK CRUSHER NOW DOING WORK FOR WEST SUPERIOR STREET PAVEMENT.

QUARRY AT THIRTEENTH AVENUE WEST, WHERE ROCK FOR WEST SUPERIOR STREET PAVEMENT IS OBTAINED.

The work o nthe street was greatly delayed during the early part of September by the heavy rains, but the contractor is taking advantage of the fine weather of the last two weeks, and is rushing the work by every means within his power. Several blocks have been covered with broken stone, and on Tuesday afternoon the work of laying the tar macadam mixture was begun. The old pavement is torn up as far east as Garfield avenue, and the traction company will not interfere with the contractor again, having secured a good start on him.

Whether or not the pavement is completed this fall all depends on the weather. With fine, clear weather for another month the street should be almost completed, but rainy weather would greatly delay the work as the soil consists of clay, and holds the water for a long time.

Telford macadam will be laid in place of tar macadam for the block between Thirteenth and Fourteenth avenue, owing to the steep grade which exists there. The tar macadam is thought to be too slippery to make a good pavement on this block, and for that distance Telford will be laid.

The experiment with tar macadam pavement on West Superior street will be watched with interest. It is the first time that tar macadam has been laid on a business street, and if it wears well and proves satisfactory on West Superior street, its popularity in Duluth will be assured.

NEWSBOY, LAUNCH OWNED BY WEST END REPRESENTATIVES OF THE HERALD.

Presented herewith is a picture of the launch Newsboy, belonging to Herman Olson and his sons, Cyrus and Orlando, news dealers at the West end. In the launch is a crowd of lucid newsboys, who that day had an outing on the bay with Mr. Olson and A. C. Pearson, circulation manager of The Herald. About one-third of The Herald newsboy force at the West end are in the boat, for it so happened that the newsboys down there are an obedient crowd, and in not going on the launch were simply obeying their mothers. Of late there have been a number of drowning accidents, in which small boys were involved, and on the day this picture was taken, a lot of the boys had been told by their mothers not to go on the launch, and they stood pat on that command. That in itself speaks well for the calibre of the boys who are selling the papers at the West end.

The ride was given in celebration of the acquirement of the new boat in which the affair was given. Years ago the Olson boys began to sell papers on the streets in the West end, and their father kept a news stand at 1823 West Superior street, his present address. Later on the boys got a bicycle each, and sold Heralds at the vessels lying at the docks; then as business got too big for them to make the rounds of the docks in that way, it became necessary to find a shorter route, and a vapor launch was purchased. This launch was eighteen feet long, and the boys, besides taking papers to the boats in the harbor, carried as well novels, magazines, cigars, tobaccos, candy, and in fact the boat was a floating news, candy and tobacco store. Of late that launch has been too small, so the boys bought the present boat, which is twenty-seven feet long. It is a Pearson hull, with a Damon engine, and is pretty fast.

The Olson boys and their father say that the purchase of the bicycles and and each of the launches came about through the sales of Heralds, and they feel very grateful that their business has so increased. Mr. Olson is the West end agent for The Herald.

TAINTED MONEY.

The Rev. Erastus Gabriel Jackson had been reading a newspaper three months old says Lippincott's Magazine. In it he learned for the first time that a great board of foreign missions was some in bouh as to the propriety of accepting $100,000, in which they scented the taint of kerosene and other things.

The Rev. Erastus was a shrewd mortal, and the sole representative of Christianity in his "midst." Money was always hard to get in his parish—it had always been taken and "no questions asked."

At the close of the weekly prayer meeting he arose to make an important announcement.

"Brev'ern an' sistern," he began, "Ah'd advise all o' yoh tuh come t' church nex' Sundah, with money in yoh clo'es. Thar's somethin' new in ther a'r. Yoh wun't be asked tuh give up what ain't de Law ds. We's a 'lightened nation, an' a 'lightened chu'ch. I spec ther time's com when we ain't a-needin money—that is, some kin's. So I's jest a-sayin' yoh come with money in yoh clo'es—an' yoh'll wisht yoh had ef yoh doan't. We ain't askin' for it, but yoh's sure ter be sorry ef yoh ain without that whut's ther Law'd." The service closed with the usual fervent prayer.

Their pastor's enigmatic declaration worried his congregation not a little. They had sometimes balked when he had grasped too eargerly for their earnings—always in the Lord's behalf. But never before had be intimated that there was money in their possession that he did not want—for the Lord. The plan succeeded, as this shrewd shepherd, in his deep knowledge of human nature, had anticipated. He had a talk with one of his deasons, and to him alone had he unfolded a hint of what was in store.

The Rev. Erastus Gabriel Jackson preached long and vigorously the following Sunday. His theme was "tainted money," and he expatiated with strength of arms, voice, and words upon how little the Lord wanted money of that sort, but he dwelt more heavily on the desire of the Almighty for money that was good. At the close he announced the usual collection.

"Ah jest wan' tuh tell yoh, brev'ern an' sistern, that dar's no 'tained money' 'lowed tuh go iner that ar' contributin' box. Good Deacon Parsons will accompany ther collector, an' Ah've tole him tuh be sure an' see tuh it that what money goes inter thdt ar' box is good, sweet money. Them that keeps their money will do so kaze it is tainted, an' we'll thank 'em—an' ther Lawd too—fer savin' it an' not pollutin' ther sacredness o' ther box with it. We'd sijest that they gib it whar it b'longs—ter ther debbil hisse'f."

It required a long time for the collector, assisted by the deacon, to perform his task that morning. Every worshiper gave up, and as the coin rattled down on the communion table, the Rev. Erastus Gabriel Jackson raised his eyes to heaven with a beatific smile of gratitude. His scheme had succeeded.

TOO LATE FOR ANY.

The veteran circus actor threw his pink silk tights over a black velvet cushion.

"Barnum?" he said. "I knew Barnum well."

He took a brown book out of his pinewood chest.

"Barnum's Reminiscences," he said. "Barnum's book. Never read it, eh? No, I expect not. It's out of print.

"When these reminiscences first were published, Barnum was a proud and happy man. He gave away free copies to everybody he knew. One night, when I was with him, he thought he would give a copy to the cabman who was taking us home.

"'Like reminiscences?' he said to the man.

"'Thank ye,' the cabman answered. 'Thank ye, sir. But it's so late. I'm afeard the saloons is all closed.'"

"MORNING" AND "NOON."

The words "morning" and "noon" once had shifting significance, says the Kansas City Journal. It was usual in England to apply "morning" to the time before dinner. So long ago as April 16, 1796, the Hull Advertiser gave the information that "the duke of Devonshire took a morning ride before dinner yesterday at 7 o'clock in the afternoon." And this was a correct use of the word except that "before dinner" would seem superfluous. "Noon" once meant the ninth hour, that is 3 p. m., at which time the "nones" were recited in the Roman Catholic church.

St. Louis County as a Farming Country

Pioneer Settler Who Is Enthusiastic Over the Agricultural Conditions Here and Has Made Money.

St. Louis is one of the richest counties in the state in more ways than one. Her ore deposits are worth millions and millions of dollars; the fact that her shore line on the largest body of fresh water in the world is long is another advantage, and that she will be one of the greatest agricultural counties in the state some day, is the prediction of many men.

Some people say that farming on lands such as are found here is never good, but the fallacy of this is shown by many things, among which is the letter given herewith. It was written by C. W. Hastings to a well-known agricultural paper, and tells the story of a good many St. Louis county settlers.

Mr. Hastings is a pioneer, and he has made money since he came to Northern Minnesota, in 1887. The county was much more of a wilderness then than it is now, but he persisted, and today he owns 400 acres of land, and is entirely out of debt, which is more than some farmers can say who sought out spots perhaps better favored by man.

In 1887 the settlers in St. Louis county were far apart. Other parts of the state offered more advantages to the prospective farmer, in that his neighbors were nearer at hand, and so were the railroads. Also, the roads were better. St. Louis is a very large county, and it is a great deal newer than some others, but it is richer by far than most of them.

The settlers are still far apart in some parts of the county, but does not each year bring more farmers up here, and does not each year see more improvements in the way of new roads, etc? If Mr. Hastings overcame the obstacles and hardships which beset the farmer here in 1887, the settlers who come today should find less trouble in securing wealth and happiness on the broad meadows north of Duluth.

Mr. Hastings' letter is instructive as well as interesting. It might well be incorporated in the circulars sent out by the men who are trying to induce settlers to take shares in St. Louis county's wealth. He has lived here since 1887, and is enthusiastic, so that his words have the ring of truth born of faith and knowledge of the land about which he writes. He says that hay is his most profitable crop, and that he devotes many of his acres to its culture. His neighbors find beans a profitable crop. The hay is easily grown and harvested, and sells at prices ranging from $8 to $16 a ton.

During the past year many men have taken land in the vast country north of this city and are prospering now. This week, a party of four Nebraskans came up here at the earnest solicitation of satisfied friends who have lived on St. Louis county farms for three or four years. They have gone back to Nebraska well pleased with what they saw and will probably move to Minnesota with their families in the spring. They will tell their neighbors in Nebraska about St. Louis county and the words of contented farmers like Mr. Hastings and the former residents of Nebraska are better testimonials than all the flowery phamplets that have ever been written.

Following is Mr. Hastings letter in full:

MAKING A MINNESOTA FARM.

"I settled in St. Louis county in 1887. I found a homesteader who was badly discouraged. He had cleared about three acres, and on this had a crop of potatoes and garden stuff growing. Although I had but $100 I was able to secure these 160 acres and get a little start. Of course I had a hard time because of a shortage of money, but there was much in the country to give me encouragement. Myself and family got most of our living from the fish in the lakes and game in the woods. In early spring we made maple syrup and sugar, which always sells well. It is a crop which can be gathered when nothing else can be done.

"Myself and family went to work enthusiastically and we now own over 400 acres of land, and are entirely out of debt. I cultivate about 70 acres, raising sufficient grain for my 10 hogs, 20 head of cattle and 100 head of sheep, with occasionally something to sell. Oats grow well here, averaging 50 bushels to the acre, while all garden vegetables grow in abundance.

"I find my most profitable crop is hay. It seems to be always in demand. We are so near the great mining sections and Duluth that we never have any trouble in getting rid of what we want to sell. My hay is a mixture of clover and timothy, which averages about two tons to the acre, and in my experience has never failed. It is harvested with little expense, and I receive from $8 to $16 per ton.

"The soil on my farm is a rich sandy loam, containing some clay and a clay subsoil. Unimproved land sells from $5 to $15 per acre, while improved land now ranges from $10 to $40. Ten to fifteen years ago the same land sold for $2.50 an acre. While I find hay my most profitable crop, some of my neighbors find beans a most profitable crop.

"Dairying will eventually be one of our chief sources of wealth. We have all the essentials, grass, rich clover, good water, a clear, bracing climate, and farmers who are interestd in this business. Up to date the lack of good roads has operated against dairying.

"We have good churches and schools and people who are energetic and honest. There is much interest in the building of good roads and bridges, and the railroads are interested in the development of this country, and are assisting this work, which will greatly improve conditions here.

"One of the strong features of the country is the fact that just as soon as the land is cleared, it sets to timothy and clover. This is characteristic of this northern cut-over country, and is an especially valuable feature. Grass and clovers do not run out, but the meadows and pastures improve from year to year. Our climate, while cold, is not objectionable, as the air is dry, being more like mountain air, and even though the thermometer goes rather low at times, the cold is not felt, as it is further south."

Betty and Bunny Cottontail's Visit to Town.

BY MAUD WALKER.

"I'm so lonely! I'm so lonely! I'm so lonely!" And pretty Betty Cottontail nodded her head, shaking her long, delicate grey ears very emphatically as she declared her unhappy state of mind.

"And what would you have?" inquired Madam Cottontail, sitting up on her hind legs and looking inquiringly at her daughter.

"Why, mamma, I should like to go to town. Ever since I've been big enough to hear of the excitement of that place where so many strange people live I've been dying to go there and see it for myself."

"Well, I've half a mind to give you my permission to go and run your head into danger," said Madam Cottontail. "I know you would be good and ready to return as soon as you got there. You've heard me tell often of the dogs that abound where people live. Now, away out here, five miles from any habitation, we are comparatively safe. But you, like all young blood, would run the risk of loosing your life just to get a nibble of dangerous excitement."

"If you will only give your consent for me to go with Cousin Bunny tomorrow I'll promise you that I shall not run my head into any danger," said Betty, coaxingly. "You heard Cousin Bunny say that he means to spend a week in and about town. He isn't afraid of anything in the shape of people and dogs."

"But what about guns?" asked Madam Cottontail. "They are a bit more threatening than things called people and dogs. A gun may be half a mile away from you, and at the same time put a little lead pill clean through your body." And Madam Cottontail shook her head wisely.

"No, as for me, I'm satisfied to stay in the wilds, away from what is called civilization. Civilization has nothing to offer our kind—you may depend on it."

"Oh, mamma, you are old and easily frightened," said Betty, lightly. "As for me, I mean to see something besides these prairies and wild woods and the river."

"Very well, go and see," said Madam Cottontail. "But whatever befalls you—just remember your old mother's advice. And don't forget the dogs."

"Dogs!" And Betty laughed heartily. "Why, mamma, you amuse me very much. Why, don't you know there never was a dog that could catch a Cottontail?"

"All right, I tell you," said Madam Cottontail. "Go and have your own way."

The next day, bright and early, Betty Cottontail, in company with her cousin Bunny, who came from a neighboring grove, set out towards the town, some six or seven miles distant. "Look for us back in one week mamma dear," called back Betty, as she trotted along beside her gay young cousin.

"If you are not either killed or captured I'll look for you tomorrow morning," said Madam Cottontail. Then the old rabbit went out to get her breakfast. "Foolish youth!" she said, as she looked after the disappearing pair, whose long ears could be seen rising and falling as they leaped along through the high grass.

As Betty and Bunny had several acquaintances living along the road leading towards the wild, Western town, that sat in a grass-grown valley at the foot of a high hill, the two found themselves accosted every little while, and were obliged to stop to chat a bit with each rabbit friend or relative. Not a few shook their heads dubiously when they learned that the pair of reckless youths were off to town, for that particular place held many dangers for the Rabbit Tribe, a fact well known to them.

Thus dallying along the way Betty and Bunny did not reach the hill overlooking the town till late in the afternoon, just as the sun was dropping out of sight in the far west. As they neared the town they were often obliged to seek a hiding place behind a corn shock or in a tuft of weeds from some chance pedestrian or horseman that came from the settlement in the valley. It was then that Betty's heart began to beat a bit faster than was usual with it, and she kept her eyes wide open that nothing strange might catch her unawares.

"Nothing to fear," assured Bunny, who observed that Betty chatted and laughed less. "I'm not the least apprehensive of trouble." But the gay-hearted fellow was not ignorant of the fact that now they were nearing the boundary line, beyond which there lurked many forms of danger for his own kind. Still he meant to keep up his courage and go boldly forward.

At last, after a horseman had disappeared down the road, Betty and Bunny went on up the hill, from the summit of which, they could look down on the town. They decided it would be safer to risk the fields than the open road, so they turned into an old cornfield that was dotted thickly with corn shocks. They had not gone very far into this field when the strange voices of children fell suddenly on their quick ears. Then came the barking of a dog. Although this was the first time either of the cottontails had ever heard human or dog sound instinct told them what these strange noises meant. "Danger!" whispered Betty, her long ears quivering with fright as they caught the ominous sounds. "What shall we do?"

"Oh, since you seem afraid we'll slip into this convenient shelter," answered Bunny, leading the way to a nearby corn shock. The truth may as well be told of the brave fellow that he had no wish to meet the creatures that were approaching and making such hideous noise. But Bunny would not yet have confessed his fear to Betty. Hardly had the two Cottontails hidden themselves inside the corn shock when nearer and nearer came the sounds of children's shouting and dog's barking, and just as Betty was praying with all her heart that the danger would pass them by there thrust itself right into their hiding place the cold, sniffing nose of a dog. Betty thought she would faint, but Bunny laid an encouraging paw on her arm and hoarsely whispered: "Come, follow me, and run for your life—as you never ran before!"

Then as the dog set up an awful barking, his bloodthirsty eyes peering into poor Betty's own wild ones, Bunny dashed out through the side of the corn shock opposite the place where the enemy held them at bay, and took off across the cornfield with the swiftness of a deer. And Betty needed no further bidding: with her very heart in her mouth, so to speak, she kept close to Bunny's heels.

And such a shouting, yelling, laughing and barking as followed them through the harsh grass and corn stubble had never been heard by them. "Sick 'em! Sick 'em!" came the cries, answered by a terrible barking from the pursuing boys' four-footed companion. "Shoot 'em, Tom," came another cry, loud and commanding. Then — whiz — whiz! went something so close to Betty's ear that she thought she had been struck. And such a roar followed quickly that it sounded in the two fleeing rabbits' ears like a nearby crack of thunder.

On, on, wildly on through the old field the two Cottontails flew, with the barking dog close behind. But Betty and Bunny could tell by the sounds of the children's voices and the barking of their nearer pursuer that they were outrunning them. Oh, how their hearts beat for joy at this! And in both little rabbit minds the resolution was quickly formed to return to their wild, safe life as soon as they could possibly do so. "If I live to get away from this danger," whispered Betty to herself, "I'll never go near civilization again—never!"

At last the barking ceased to sound in their ears, and daring to turn round to look backward Bunny and Betty saw that the dog had given up the chase and was trotting back to meet the boys who had evidently given up all hope of capturing or killing the Cottontails.

"Let us rest," said Bunny, sitting down and opening his mouth to fill his exhausted lungs with fresh air. "I'm about done for. Don't care to race with any more dogs."

"No, nor do I ever want to hear a lead pill fly past my ear as I did a bit ago. Upon my soul, I thought I was killed. Mercy——" And poor Betty sat down in the high, dead grass and panted for breath. "Mamma may be a trifle old-fashioned, but I'll listen to her warning after this."

"By the way," exclaimed Bunny, "isn't your mamma going to spend tomorrow with that family of rabbits that have just moved down on the river below you?"

"Certainly — I had forgotten about that," cried Betty. "Why, that's a splendid excuse for our returning home at once. I'm very anxious to join mamma tomorrow and get acquainted with our new neighbors. Let us start for home immediately."

"What—without getting into town at all?" asked Bunny, pretending some remonstrance; but it was a weak remonstrance indeed.

"Would you attempt town after the experience we've just had?" asked Betty with surprise.

"Oh, just as you say about it," answered Bunny, who would not have gone a foot nearer the town under any consideration, but whose pride in a pretended courage kept back the confession of fear. "Perhaps—since you are so timid, we'd better return home. Besides, you wish to go visiting tomorrow."

The sun had slipped entirely from sight and a moonless night was settling down when Bunny and Betty turned their little noses homeward. Home! Oh, dear, dear word! Once or twice en route the tired-out pair sat down to rest on the roadside and to discuss the thrilling experience they had had that evening. And the more they talked of it the more serious because the situation in their minds. "I tell you it was a narrow escape," said Bunny. And he trembled inwardly at the remembrance of their run for life.

An hour or so before dawn Madam Cottontail was roused from her slumber by a slight noise near her abode, which was the interior of a hollow, fallen tree-trunk. Quickly opening one eye she looked out and saw a sight that did not surprise her at all. "Oh, so you came back the very same day, eh?" she yawned, opening the other eye and looking at her daughter Betty. "Where did you drop your cousin? Did he fall a prey to some boy or dog?"

"Oh, no auntie, I came home with Betty. It would never have been safe for her to have made the trip alone." And Bunny, slightly embarrassed, came to the door of Madam Cottontail's house.

"And I dare say it would not have been safe for Bunny to have stayed on in the town," dryly remarked Madam Cottontail. "You children need not try to cover up the cause of your sudden return home. Your faces tell that which your tongues refuse to say. But—I'm glad you got enough of town. Come, tell me what it was—a man, a pack of dogs or a gun?"

"Why, mamma, you know you are going to visit our new neighbors today," said Betty. "I have come home to accompany you."

"Yes; but what was it that caused you to so suddenly remember the proposed visit and to wish to bear me company? Come, out with it."

"A dog, a lot of murderous children and—oh, think of it!—a gun!" cried Betty, finding that honest confession relieved her mind wonderfully.

"Oh, ho! Just as I feared," said Madam Cottontail. "Well, home and mother is not so bad—are they?"

"No, mamma dear," said Betty snuggling against her parent's side. "And if you will forgive me for this past day's conduct I shall never go off from home again in quest of adventure. Home is novelty enough for me, and my own family, kinfolks and friends the only beings I care to know. Now, let us all take a nap and be fresh for an early start tomorrow morning. I know we'll have a delightful time."

And five minutes later Bunny, Betty and Madam Cottontail were sleeping peacefully, Bunny and Betty dreaming of a pack of dogs led on by heavily armed boys, while Madam Cottontail dreamed of the return of two prodigal children.

The Haida Indians and their Totem Poles.

The Haida Indians are divided into two groups of families, the Raven people and the Eagle people. It is forbidden for a man of the Raven group to marry a woman of the same group, and for a man of the Eagle group to marry in his group. Each of these groups is subdivided into a number of families. Most of these families bear the names of certain localities and were originally village communities, but are considered as relatives; therefore, marriage is not allowed among them.

Each family has a number of crests, most of which illustrate certain traditions of the family.

These Indians are in the habit of erecting in front of their houses carved poles—"totem poles"—on which the crests of the families of both husband and wife are represented. The dead are buried in or on similar poles, while others are erected in memory of deceased chiefs.

The illustration accompanying this article (sketched from the model of an original pole which belongs in the Museum of Natural History, New York City) represents a memorial column erected in memory of several members of a family of the Raven clan. Both of the principal designs represent the personified sung. Above he is represented as sea lion, but with blow-hole and dorsal fin. Below he has the shape of a whale. The banded shaft between the two is a drift-log.

How the Rainy Day Cleared for the Girls.

BY ANNIE JAMES.

"Oh, mercy me! It's pouring rain! Isn't it just too bad for anything?" And Jenny Burton sprang out of bed and ran to the window to look down on a street that was sheltered overhead with umbrellas and made disagreeable under foot by a beating downpour of rain.

"Well, I'm glad it's Saturday and we are not obliged to go to school," said half-awake Margaret, rubbing her blue eyes open as she sat on the edge of the bed. "My goodness!—it is raining pitchforks, isn't it, though?" And Margaret came to the window to see the splatter of drops that washed in a torrent against the panes. "We are lucky to be able to stay indoors—that's one thing to be thankful for." And and sat down to draw on her stockings. Margaret returned, yawning, to the bed

"Why, goosie, don't you remember today is the date set for our going to the woods to gather autumn leaves and cat-tails?" asked Jenny with some impatience in her voice. "I feel vexed enough to cry, so I do."

"Oh, so today is the day," replied Margaret, now getting fully awake. Then a cloud of disappointment spread over her pretty face. "Pshaw—it is provoking!"

"Yes, it is," asserted Jennie. "I always feel blue when I can't get out. And I particularly dislike staying indoors on Saturday—the only day we can call our own during school session."

But just then their mother entered the room to see if her little daughters were dressed for breakfast. "Oh, mamma, isn't it just too mean for anything—this horrid rain?" cried Margaret. "We had planned to have such a jolly time—and here is this hateful weather putting a stop to everything."

"Why, dearie, the old earth must have her baths regularly, or she would get bald-headed; that is to say, nothing would grow on her surface. We depend on crops for food and beautiful flowers. Those things depend on the rain to feed them. But—come, cheer up! I've got bright news for you. Since it is raining so that you must abandon your country excursion Fate has been a good old dame and sent us a scrap of good news. Who do you suppose is coming today?"

Both little girls stopped in the midst of their toilets and began to guess. "It can't be—Cousin Ned?" And Jenny looked for answer in her mother's face.

"Oh, is it Cousin Ned?" exclaimed Margaret, her voice hopeful.

"No one else," said their mamma. "I just had a wire from him saying he would be here to spend Saturday and Sunday with us. He arrives on the 11 o'clock train."

"Oh, goody, goody!" cried little Margaret, dancing about the room with one shoe on and one foot bare. "I don't care if it rains snakes and toads—if only Cousin Ned will be here. Won't we have a jolly time?"

"Oh, it's a lot nicer to have Cousin Ned than sunshine and a trip to the country—he's always so jolly." And Jenny lent her enthusiasm to her sister's.

"And why is it that everyone wants your Cousin Ned?" asked mamma. "Don't you think it is because he is always so bright and happy under all circumstances? Rain or shine, he finds plenty to do to entertain himself and any others who might be about him?"

"Yes, mamma dear, you are right." And Jenny brushed a stubborn tangle out of her fair hair. "I'm going to try to cultivate a 'Cousin-Ned disposition,' so I am."

"Now, I'm going to let you two girls fix up the guest chamber for Cousin Ned. That will keep you pretty busy if you get it done before his arrival," said their mother. "Ned loves a cheerful room to keep in tune with his cheerful thoughts. I'll trust to your taste to make the apartment cosy."

After breakfast the two little girls ran up stairs to the guest chamber and began their preparations for the coming most welcome visitor.

"We'll put a lot of bright cushions on the couch and in the big chair by the grate," suggested Margaret. "And we'll bring one of the hall palms up for the bay window and a lot of flowers for the mantel."

"Yes, and all the late magazines from the library, so Cousin Ned may run through them while alone, if he wishes to," suggested Jenny, as she pinned a pretty tidy of her own making on the back of a rocker.

And so they worked away, robbing various rooms of bits of furniture, flowers and draperies, and at last, just as they were taking a farewell look to see if all was perfect, there sounded the hall bell. Down the stairs the two happy girls flew to meet Cousin Ned on the hall threshold and to be grabbed up in his great, strong, damp arms, for all the world as though he were a bear.

"Heigh-ho!" he cried in his cheery voice as he bit the pink ear of each. "What did you let it rain like this for—when I was coming to town? Did you think it would scare me off, eh?"

"Oh, you have mixed it up," cried Margaret, leading Cousin Ned into the sitting-room. "You came just because it is raining. You must have known all along that we would need you on this particular day—so we would not mind not getting to go to the country after cat-tails."

"Yes, Cousin Ned," said Jenny, solemnly, "if you had not come today I don't know how we could have got over a certain disappointment. We had planned for a week past to go to the country today for autumn leaves and cat-tails. Fancy our vexation when we awoke and saw the deluge of rain with a sky that said: 'I mean to keep this up all day.' Really I was on the point of crying when mamma came in to tell us you were coming; in other words, she told us the sun would shine regardless of the clouds. Why, everything brightened right away."

"That's right, Cousin Ned," affirmed Margaret, climbing on the big cousin's knee. "You take the place of——"

"Cat-tails?" asked Cousin Ned, laughing. "Well, it's a good thing to be of use to somebody or bodies, if it is only when the rain comes down."

"Oh, no, Cousin Ned, you don't take the place of cat-tails and autumn leaves," declared Margaret, "you take the place of the sun. As soon as we heard you were coming—why, the rain was entirely forgotten."

"Little flatterer," laughed Cousin Ned, pinching Margaret's cheek. But he felt that, after all, he was thankful to be the owner of a disposition that rain could not dampen nor clouds darken one whit.

An hour later, on entering his room and seeing how the little hands had adorned and decorated it for his comfort and pleasure he went to the head of the stairs and called down to two little girls whose chatter he could hear in the hall: "Say, kiddies, it pays to play at being cat-tails—or the sun—when by so doing one may have the joy of occupying a room made beautiful by the touch of magic fairies' hands. Think I'll make an appointment with you to rain in whenever there happens to come a cloud in the sky. Why, I'm lodged like a king."

"That's because you are so happy that you make everybody else happy," answered Margaret. And Jenny, looking up the stairs, said: "You are the king of all kings we love to entertain. You are the king of sunshine, Cousin Ned."

The Fearless Horsemen.

Oh, the river was long,
And the river was deep;
Sing heigh-oh, sing high-ho!
But the boys built a bridge
From the banks that were steep:
Sing heigh-ho, sing high-oh.

Oh, across this bridge
They did fearlessly ride:
Sing heigh-oh, sing high-ho!

And their horses pranced
To the other side:
Sing heigh-oh, sing high-ho!

Oh, like soldiers bold
They rode far away:
Sing heigh-ho, sing high-oh!
And they'll all come again
Some other fine day:
Sing heigh-ho, sing high-oh!

Little Biographies of Big Masters.

BY MARY GRAHAM.

Charles Dickens—oh, beloved household name! father of darling little Nell, of dear David Copperfield, of poor Oliver Twist, of manly Nicholas Nickleby—of too many gloriously grand brain children to name—was born on Friday, February 7, 1812, at Landport, England, a suburb of Portsea.

All children are doubtless familiar with the author Charles Dickens, but few know him as a child. And when one has been introduced to the little Charles one's heart goes out to him as the man, and one appreciates the noble works of his life the more from having known the boy. How hard, how very, very hard was the path the little Charles was forced to climb that he might place the elder Charles on the pinnacle of fame. There was no hand stretched out to assist in the climbing, no voice to whisper words of encouragement. He was born with the burden of poverty on his back, and before he was scarcely old enough to be trusted in London streets alone he was put to earning his own living.

Charles Dickens.

As a child the little Charles was sickly, and it is said of him that he never participated in the hardier sports of his playfellows. When yet but a bit of a boy he read some old books that his father carried about with his other few household possessions. These were "Roderick Random," "Peregrine Pickle," "Humphrey Clinker," "Tom Jones," "The Vicar of Wakefield," "Don Quixote" and "Robinson Crusoe." Charles had been taught to read by his mother, and had also profited by a few terms in school. While very young the boy displayed a decided talent for telling clever stories and singing comic songs. When he was about nine years old the Dickens family moved for the second time to London. But the elder Dickens was a poor manager, and earned a salary quite insufficient to meet the simplest needs of the family. So they were obliged to live in poor, dirty tenement quarters, with barely enough furniture to prevent their sleeping and eating on the floor. At this time the little Charles desired very much to attend school, but the financial distress of the family prevented this. That no injustice may be done Charles' father—who seems to have been a good-hearted soul, but wholly incapable of supporting the family with which he had burdened himself—an extract from the diary of Charles Dickens (written in the later years of his life) is quoted here:

"I know my father to be as kind-hearted and generous a man as ever lived in the world. Everything that I can remember of his conduct to his wife and children, of friends, in sickness or affliction, is beyond all praise. By me, as a sick child, he has watched nights and days. He never undertook any business, charge or trust that he did not zealously, punctually, honorably discharge. His industry has always been untiring. He was proud of me, in his way, and had a great admiration of the comic singing I did as a child. But he appeared to have utterly lost at a time the idea of educating me at all, and to have utterly put from him the notion that I had any claim upon him in that regard whatever. So I degenerated into cleaning his boots and my own, and making myself useful in the work of the poor home, and in looking after my younger brothers and sisters and running on such poor errands as arose out of our poor way of living."

But as time wore on the elder Dickens seems to have lost all capacity for work, and was sent to the Marshalsea prison, a jail for debtors. At the time of this calamity Charles was 11 years old, and was sent to live with a cousin of his mother's, who found employment for him in a blacking warehouse. The other members of the family accompanied the husband and father to prison, where they shared his wretchedness and privation.

But after a short time the Dickens family came into a small legacy, which paid the debts against the elder Dickens, and thus restored to him his freedom. Then came an opportunity for Charles. He was sent to school, where he made the most of a few months' study, all the schooling he ever received, for it did not take his father and mother long to dissipate their little fortune.

At 15 years of age Charles determined to become a parliamentary reporter, and he studiously pursued the study of shorthand, which he mastered in a remarkably short time. After his working hours he would study and read far into the night, gaining by hard work and courage that which his parents had failed to give him.

Thus through the mire of the slum, suffering every privation and degradation, the disgrace of his father's prison life hanging over him, did the heroic, genius child, Charles Dickens, lead his way, his eyes always above his surroundings—fixed on a star, a star of hope and promise, a star that led him onward and upward to his just reward at last.

TEN BOMBS THROWN AT SOLDIERS AT TIFLIS AT SAME TIME AND IN WIDELY SCATTERED LOCALITIES

The Outcome of a Deliberately Organized Plot of the Populace.

Troops Fire on People and About a Score Are Seriously Wounded.

Quiet at Moscow, But Strike Is Spreading and Disorders Are Feared.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 9.—The throwing of bombs at the troops in Tiflis, yesterday evening, which resulted in the soldiers firing on the people appears to have been the outcome of a deliberately organized plot. Ten bombs were thrown simultaneously in the vicinity of three barracks in widely separated quarters of the city. Shots were also fired at the soldiers as they rushed out of the barracks but the loss of life was confined to one Cossack and one bomb thrower. In addition twenty persons were wounded.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 9.—Gen. Trepoff, assistant minister of the interior, has been informed by telephone from Moscow that no serious disorders occurred there, last night, and that the situation was slightly more reassuring this morning. The strike is spreading, however, and the authorities evidently are very apprehensive. They are hopeful, however, that the St. Petersburg workmen will not be affected.

A serious development at Moscow, today, was an attempt to interrupt railroad communication. The rails were tampered with a short distance from Moscow, causing the derailment of a train but there were no casualties.

The ministery of the interior admits that three Cossack policemen were killed, yesterday, but has no confirmation of a dispatch received by the Russ from Moscow saying that eight bakers were killed in an affray at a bakery and are inclined to question its accuracy saying that their advices do not mention such an event and pointing out that it is hardly possible for troops firing volleys from a narrow street to injure strikers stoning them from fourth story windows.

ALLEGED PAL OF A. J. WHITEMAN CONVICTED

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 9.—"Guilty as charged in the indictment," was the verdict of the jury after an all night session in the case of the people against Joseph Boothman, alleged partner of Alonzo J. Whiteman in passing a fraudulent check on a bank.

Boothman did not appear in the least disturbed by the verdict. His counsel will at once take an appeal, basing the appeal chiefly on the ground that the court erred in permitting the use of the testimony of Boothman taken at the two trials of Whiteman.

Justice Kenefick thanked the Boothman jurors and excused them from further service at this term. Whiteman's trial was commenced this morning.

The indictment under which Boothman was convicted charges him with grand larceny in the first degree, the specific charge being that he helped to steal $750 from the Fidelity Trust company by means of a check for that amount drawn upon a fraudulently-created fund. This fund was created by the deposits of a draft raised from $51 to $9,000.

The crime of which Boothman has been found guilty subjects him to a sentence of not to exceed ten years at hard labor.

AUTHORITY IS LACKING

Doubtful If Commissioner Can Oust Company From Missouri.

Arbitrary Action Only Permissable When Company Is Insolvent.

New York, Oct. 9.—William A. Fricke, superintendent in this city of the Central Union Life Insurance company of Cincinnati, expressed doubt yesterday that Insurance Superintendent Vandiver of Missouri would be able to make good his threat to cancel the license of the New York Life Insurance company to do business in that state unless President John McCall resigned and the funds used for political campaigns contributions were replaced. For two successive terms Mr. Fricke was insurance commissioner of Wisconsin. He said:

"I don't see how the state of Missouri can arbitrarily revoke the license of the New York Life Insurance company to do business in that state on any such grounds as that mentioned in the letter written by Superintendent Vandiver to President McCall. No insurance commissioner has any such right. He can go in and investigate the affairs of a company doing business in his state at any time circumstances seem to justify such proceedure. He can examine the directors of the company and its officials, and the company must defray the expenses, but only if such examination should disclose gross mismanagement can he order a reorganization or decide that the company must do no further business in his state.

"It is only when an insurance commissioner upon examination finds a company to be insolvent, that he can take such arbitrary action as is contemplated in Missouri.

"During the four years I was insurance commissioner of Wisconsin, I took summary action to refuse licenses to or revoke licenses of forty-two companies. I have no doubt that any of these companies could have gone into court and had me enjoined had they not feared the publicity this would have involved. When I resigned during my second term, I examined my records and found that forty-two companies I had proceeded against thirty-six had failed."

Mr. Fricke told how at the annual convention of the national association of insurance commissioners, action was taken to investigate some of the larger companies by a committee composed of the commissioners from Wisconsin, Minnesota, Ohio, Michigan and New York.

"Mr. McCall at that time told us all about the campaign contributions he had made, adding that he thought it in the interest of the policyholders. Nobody took issue with him. We knew also that Robert H. McCurdy had charge of the foreign business of the Mutual and that he was getting an extra large commission on it."

It was said yesterday that Senator Chauncey M. Depew might be a witness before the insurance investigation committee when its sessions are resumed this week.

POSTAGE STAMP COST HER HEART

St. Louis Girl Fell In Love With an Obliging Druggist.

St. Louis, Oct. 9.—A pretty romance, involving the purchase of a two-cent postage stamp, was recalled at the marriage of Miss Lillian M. Grosse, daughter of J. A. Grosse, and E. A. Duesch, a druggist at 2613 South Broadway.

Mr. Duesch recently changed the location of his drug store, and at that time Miss Grosse resided across the street. She often went to the store to buy stamps and an acquaintance was formed. The druggist soon found himself infatuated with his customer, and the fondness for each other became mutual. She came to the store often, and he called at her home. Their acquaintance grew to be more than friendship, and recently they announced their engagement.

The Rev. A. J. Knab, a friend of the bridegroom, braved the dangers of quarantine and fled from Hammond, La., in the fever-striken district, coming to St. Louis to perform the ceremony.

U. S. COURT REFUSES TO RESTRAIN GOULD FROM VOTING THE WABASH STOCK HELD BY MISSOURI PACIFIC

Ramsey Did the Same Thing Last Year That He Now Asks Court to Enjoin.

Decision Regarded as Most Important Victory For Gould Interests.

Court Finds the Case Is Replete With Violations of Missouri Law.

St. Louis, Oct. 9.—In the St. Louis circuit court today Judge Daniel G. Taylor denied the application of Joseph Ramsey, Jr., deposed president of the Wabash railroad for an injunction to restrain the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain road or their trustees from voting Wabash stock held by or for those railroads in the annual Wabash election to be held in Toledo tomorrow.

News of the decision was telegraphed at once to Toledo where George J. Gould and his supporters and Joseph Ramsey and his advisers are awaiting the decision. The failure of the injunction suit which, if successful, would have tied up a large block of Gould stock, is regarded as a most important victory for the Gould interests.

Judge Taylor's decision in part follows:

"It appears from the plaintiff's verified returns of such of the defendants as have been served in this case and the evidence adduced upon the hearing for a preliminary injunction, that the plaintiff is a minority stockholder of the Wabash railroad company; that the Missouri Pacific railroad is the beneficiary owner of 20,000 shares of the stock of the Wabash railroad company, which are now registered upon the stock books of the Wabash railroad company in the name of H. M. Walker, under an instrument or pledge given to secure certain obligations of the Missouri Pacific railroad company held by persons who are strangers to this suit; that the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern railroad company, practically all the shares of which are owned by the Missouri Pacific company has an interest in $5,245,000 of the debenture bonds of the Wabash company which are in the possession of and registered on the books of the Wabash company in the name of the Mercantile Trust company of New York, under the terms of Wabash company's unifying and refunding mortgage and owns 65,000 shares of the preferred stock of the Wabash company which are in the name of George Gould and William L. Wilson; that George Gould is the chief executive officer of all three of defendant railroad companies and that the board of directors of all three of them are composed largely of the same persons, while the principal active officers of the Iron Mountain and Missouri Pacific companies are practically the same and that at the last annual meeting of the stockholders of the Wabash company, held in October, 1904, the plaintiff holding proxies and representing the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain companies' holdings in the Wabash companies, as well as those of others, cast all of the ballots cast at the meeting and elected the entire present board of directors of the Wabash company.

"It also appears that while the defendant Wabash company and the Missouri Pacific Co. have lines extending through various parts of the United States, that both of them have Missouri charters and the most important portions of the Missouri lines are those extending across the state of Missouri from St. Louis to Kansas City and from Kansas City to St. Louis.

"The plaintiff contends that the Wabash railroad company and the Missouri Pacific company are parallel and competing lines within the meaning of the provisions of section 17, article 12 of the constitution of Missouri, and of section 1062 of the Missouri statutes and hence that the holding of these securities of the Wabash Railroad company by the Missouri Pacific company is illegal and that inasmuch as the Missouri Pacific company owns and controls all of the stock of the Iron Mountain company is illegal because that cannot be done directly and seeks by his bill filed herein to enjoin the voting of these securities at the meeting of the Wabash company to be held Oct. 10, upon the ground that they are illegally owned and will be voted so as to effectuate a purpose to stifle competition between the Missouri Pacific and Wabash companies in Missouri, through the operation of these two competing lines under one control and in combination, and that he as a stockholder in the Wabash company will be injured thereby. All the defendants who have appeared or been served disavow such illegal purpose and attack the good faith of the plaintiff's application. The court finds the record in this case so replete with evidence of violations of the provisions of certain of the Missouri laws enacted for the protection of the public, that it has been loath to reach the conclusions herein expressed.

"The record develops the fact that at the last annual election of the Wabash company the plaintiff, Ramsey, holding the proxies of the then and now owners of these very shares of stock, the voting of which he now seeks to have enjoined, voted all of them for the election of the very persons whom he now charges, will if elected, so conduct the property of the Wabash road as to not only violate the provisions of the laws of Missouri, but will also so conduct the same as to injure him. I am of the view that this action of plaintiff is sufficient to compel the court to deny him the relief which he seeks in the absence of proof showing that something has transpired since the time of such voting of this stock by him which would indicate that the purpose of those who will be elected by the voting of this stock at the meeting to be held on the 10th of Oct. will be different from those of the persons elected by the plaintiff.

"The order will, therefore, be that the rule heretofore made upon the defendants to show cause why a preliminary injunction should not be issued will be vacated and plaintiffs application should not be issued will be vacated and plaintiffs application for a temporary injunction denied.

(Signed.) "DANIEL G. TAYLOR."

DECISION EXPECTED.

Ramsey Not Surprised at Outcome of Application.

Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 9.—Joseph Ramsey, Jr., received from the Associated Press his first information of the denial of his application for an injunction restraining the Gould interests from voting the stock held by the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain companies, at the annual election of the Wabash road, to be held tomorrow, which means practically 140,000 against him in tomorrow's election. When shown the dispatch, he smiled pleasantly and remarked:

"Well, this is the first that I have heard of it."

When asked if he had any statement to make, Mr. Ramsey replied with a laugh: "There is nothing that I can say. The decision seems to speak for itself. Of course this thing is not in any way decisive. It merely disposes of one trick in the game."

Mr. Ramsey showed no sign of being surprised or disappointed at the decision. He seemed to take the action of the court as a matter of course, which made very little difference to him in any way. None of the important members of the Gould interests have as yet arrived in the city, with the exception of Col. Bledgett of St. Louis, the general counsel of the road, and he, like Mr. Ramsey, seemed to take the decision with no evidence of surprise.

"I guess that speaks for itself," he said. "There is nothing that I can say. I expected the decision, and really, do not see how it could have been anything else."

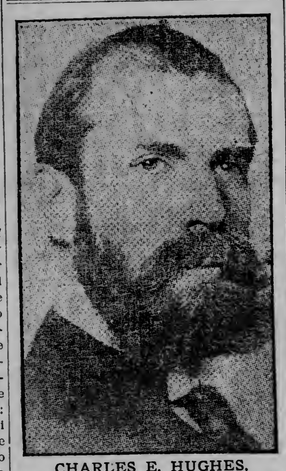

The application for the removal of the three inspectors of election, Messrs Reynolds, Colton and Newton, who have officiated at many annual meetings of the Wabash road was argued for the greater part of the day in the court of common pleas before Judge Kincade. These men by their power to pass upon all proxies submitted, practically control all the votes to be cast at the election and they have in addition, the right to count the vote and certify to the result of the election. Mr. Ramsey, through his attorneys, claims that they are all employes of the Wabash road and while they have been able to fulfill their duties in a satisfactory manner at previous elections, it was because there was no contest and they were not called upon to decide close questions of legal right to vote, as they must do in the present election. Because of their lack of education in this respect, he claims that they are not competent and asks that the court appoint three disinterested inspectors to take their places.

Judge Kincade on Saturday declared that he saw no reason why three other inspectors should not be appointed, provided Mr. Ramsey could show that he represented one-tenth of the stock to be voted at the election.

This morning his attorneys submitted a list of names in addition to that of Mr. Ramsey, with an affidavis that they were all holders of stock in the Wabash road, and in the aggregate represented much more than one-tenth of the capital stock. They asked that the attorneys for the Wabash road be compelled to bring into court the stock book of the railroad company to show that these men were actual stockholders, saying that there was no way of proving this fact unless the stock books were shown.

The attorneys for the Wabash road declared that they had not been served with proper notice to bring stock books, and denied the power of the court in the matter of the appointment of inspectors, because it lacked jurisdiction in that there was nothing to show that the names appended to the affidavit were those of bona fide stockholders. It was admitted that Mr. Ramsey owned 100 shares of the common stock of the Wabash road and debenture bonds to the value of $50,000. Beyond this the list showed nothing, they declared, and because it showed nothing the court was without jurisdiction in the premises.

The arguments lasted for the greater part of the day.

CHARLES E. HUGHES,
Who Declines the Republican Nomination for Mayor of New York.

DECLINED BY HUGHES

Counsellor Refuses the Nomination for Mayor of New York.

Believes It His Duty To Devote Energies To Investigation.

New York, Oct. 9.—Charles E. Hughes, counsel for the insurance investigation committee, today, declined the Republican nomination for mayor of New York City. In stating his grounds for refusing the nomination which was tendered to him by the unanimous vote of the city Republican convention last Friday night, Mr. Hughes said:

"In this dilemma I have simply to do my duty as I see it.

"In my judgment I have no right to accept the nomination. A paramount public duty forbids it. It is not necessary to enlarge upon the importance of the insurance investigation. This is undisputed. It is dealing with questions vital to the interests of thousands throughout the land. It presents an opportunity for public service second to none and involves a correlative responsibility. This work commands all my energy. It is imperative that I continue in it. You have frankly recognized that it must continue unencumbered and with unimpaired efficiency. But it is entirely clear to me that this cannot be if I accept the nomination.

"You know how desirous I have been that the investigation should not be checked by any suggestion of political motive. Whatever confidence it has inspired should be due to absolute independence of political considerations. It is not sufficient to say that an acceptance of this nomination, coming to me unsought, would not deflect my course a hair's breadth, and that I should remain entirely untrammeled. The non-political character of the investigation, and its freedom from bias, either of fear or favor, not only must exist, they must be recognized. I cannot permit them, by any action of mine, to become matters of debate."

TWO CARLOADS

Of Gould's Friends Start For the Field of Battle.

New York, Oct. 9.—George Gould and a large party, including all his chief advisers, legal, as well as financial, left Weehawken last night in two private cars attached to the Chicago-St. Louis limited of the West Shore road, bound for Toledo, where the last fight will be made between the millionaire president of the Missouri Pacific Railroad company and Joseph Ramsey, Jr., for the control of the Wabash railway. Mr. Gould and his party will be joined in Toledo tomorrow by F. A. Delano, whom Mr. Gould caused to be elected to the presidency of the Wabash on Thursday, after having deposed Mr. Ramsey from that office.

Mr. Gould when asked on the train if he expected to win, replied:

"I really cannot say. I hope so, but I will know more about it on Tuesday."

Winslow S. Pierce, Mr. Gould's principal legal adviser is with the party and will have full charge of such legal proceedings as may arise.

It was said yesterday that the departure of Mr. Gould for the West did not terminate the quest for proxies. The search will be continued today until the last possible moment, when a trusted employe will be dispatched from No. 195 Broadway for Toledo with the precious documents.

"This list," said Mr. Morgan, "includes those who have been out of New York city for a year, and if any one tries to register under any name in this list he will be arrested."

TEN BOMBS THROWN AT SOLDIERS AT TIFLIS AT SAME TIME AND IN WIDELY SCATTERED LOCALITIES

The Outcome of a Deliberately Organized Plot of the Populace.

Troops Fire on People and About a Score Are Seriously Wounded.

Quiet at Moscow, But Strike Is Spreading and Disorders Are Feared.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 9.—The throwing of bombs at the troops in Tiflis, yesterday evening, which resulted in the soldiers firing on the people appears to have been the outcome of a deliberately organized plot. Ten bombs were thrown simultaneously in the vicinity of three barracks in widely separated quarters of the city. Shots were also fired at the soldiers as they rushed out of the barracks but the loss of life was confined to one Cossack and one bomb thrower. In addition twenty persons were wounded.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 9.—Gen. Trepoff, assistant minister of the interior, has been informed by telephone from Moscow that no serious disorders occurred there, last night, and that the situation was slightly more reassuring this morning. The strike is spreading, however, and the authorities evidently are very apprehensive. They are hopeful, however, that the St. Petersburg workmen will not be affected.

A serious development at Moscow, today, was an attempt to interrupt railroad communication. The rails were tampered with a short distance from Moscow, causing the derailment of a train but there were no casualties.

The ministery of the interior admits that three Cossack policemen were killed, yesterday, but has no confirmation of a dispatch received by the Russ from Moscow saying that eight bakers were killed in an affray at a bakery and are inclined to question its accuracy saying that their advices do not mention such an event and pointing out that it is hardly possible for troops firing volleys from a narrow street to injure strikers stoning them from fourth story windows.

ALLEGED PAL OF A. J. WHITEMAN CONVICTED

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 9.—"Guilty as charged in the indictment," was the verdict of the jury after an all night session in the case of the people against Joseph Boothman, alleged partner of Alonzo J Whiteman in passing a fraudulent check on a bank.

Boothman did not appear in the least disturbed by the verdict. His counsel will at once take an appeal, basing the appeal chiefly on the ground that the court erred in permitting the use of the testimony of Boothman taken at the two trials of Whiteman.

Justice Kenefick thanked the Boothman jurors and excused them from further service at this term. Whiteman's trial was commenced this morning.

The indictment under which Boothman was convicted charges him with grand larceny in the first degree, the specific charge being that he helped to steal $750 from the Fidelity Trust company by means of a check for that amount drawn upon a fraudulently-created fund. This fund was created by the deposits of a draft raised from $51 to $9,000.

The crime of which Boothman has been found guilty subjects him to a sentence of not to exceed ten years at hard labor.

St. Louis Girl Fell In Love With an Obliging Druggist.

St. Louis, Oct. 9.—A pretty romance, involving the purchase of a two-cent postage stamp, was recalled at the marriage of Miss Lillian M. Grosse, daughter of J. A. Grosse, and E. A. Duesch, a druggist at 2913 South Broadway.

Mr. Duesch recently changed the location of his drug store, and at that time Miss Grosse resided across the street. She often went to the store to buy stamps and an acquaintance was formed. The druggist soon found himself infatuated with his customer, and the fondness for each other became mutual. She came to the store often, and he called at her home. Their acquaintance grew to be more than friendship, and recently they announced their engagement.

The Rev. A. J. Knab, a friend of the bridegroom, braved the dangers of quarantine and fled from Hammond, La., in the fever-striken district, coming to St. Louis to perform the ceremony.

COMING MARRIAGE OF MISS LAWSON

Daughter of Thomas W. Lawson to Be Wedded Wednesday.

Boston, Oct. 9.—The marriage of Miss Gladys Lawson, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Lawson, and Eben Blaine Stanwood, will take place at Dreamwold, the country home of the bride, at Egypt, Mass, Wednesday next, at noon. Only members of both families will be present, and these will number less than 100. A special train will run from Boston to Dreamwold in the morning and return in the afternoon. Rev. John Suter, pastor of Mr. Lawson's home church, the Church of the Epiphany, in Winchester, Mass., will officiate. Miss Layson will be attended by her two younger sisters, the Misses Marion and Dorothy, as bridesmaids, and Miss Bunny Lawson, the youngest of the family, is to be flower girl. Mr. Stanwood's best man will be Ezra B. Barstow, and the ushers will be Dr. Lawrence Oliver, Arnold Lawson, F. M. Stanwood, Jr., Dr. J. M. Little, Jr., Philip French, and C. H. McDuffie. Following an old English custom, Miss Gladys Lawson has sent out invitations to the employes of Dreamwold, their families and friends, numbering 300, to a dance, to be held in the big carriage barn on the farm the night of the wedding. It was generally expected that the wedding of Miss Lawson and Mr. Stanwood would be a large public affair, but Mr. Lawson decided that the wedding should be conducted in accordance with his usual custom when dealing with family matters. It will, therefore, be strictly private.

PORTLAND FAIR TO CLOSE THIS WEEK.

Portland, Or., Oct. 9.—This week will mark the close of the Lewis and Clark exposition after a successful career not anticipated by even the most enthusiastic supporters of the project. Before the closing day is over the fair will have recorded an attendance of practically 2,250,000 persons which considering the fact that the combined population of the old Oregon territory is hardly equal to that number is almost phenomenal.

AUTHORITY IS LACKING

Doubtful If Commissioner Can Oust Company From Missouri.

Arbitrary Action Only Permissable When Company Is Insolvent.

New York, Oct. 9.—William A. Fricke, superintendent in this city of the Central Union Life Insurance company of Cincinnati, expressed doubt yesterday that Insurance Superintendent Vandiver of Missouri would be able to make good his threat to cancel the license of the New York Life Insurance company to do business in that state unless President John McCall resigned and the funds used for political campaigns contributions were replaced. For two successive terms Mr. Fricke was insurance commissioner of Wisconsin. He said:

"I don't see how the state of Missouri can arbitrarily revoke the license of the New York Life Insurance company to do business in that state on any such grounds as that mentioned in the letter written by Superintendent Vandiver to President McCall. No insurance commissioner has any such right. He can go in and investigate the affairs of a company doing business in his state at any time circumstances seem to justify such proceedure. He can examine the directors of the company and its officials, and the company must defray the expenses, but only if such examination should disclose gross mismanagement can he order a reorganization or decide that the company must do no further business in his state.

"It is only when an insurance commissioner upon examination finds a company to be insolvent, that he can take such arbitrary action as is contemplated in Missouri.

"During the four years I was insurance commissioner of Wisconsin, I took summary action to refuse licenses to or revoke licenses of forty-two companies. I have no doubt that any of these companies could have gone into court and had me enjoined had they not feared the publicity this would have involved. When I resigned during my second term, I examined my records and found that forty-two companies I had proceeded against thirty-six had failed."

Mr. Fricke told how at the annual convention of the national association of insurance commissioners, action was taken to investigate some of the larger companies by a committee composed of the commissioners from Wisconsin, Minnesota, Ohio, Michigan and New York.

"Mr. McCall at that time told us all about the campaign contributions he had made, adding that he thought it in the interest of the policyholders. Nobody took issue with him. We knew also that Robert H. McCurdy had charge of the foreign business of the Mutual and that he was getting an extra large commission on it."

It was said yesterday that Senator Chauncey M. Depew might be a witness before the insurance investigation committee when its sessions are resumed this week.

STEAMER ALAMEDA WAS BADLY DAMAGED.

San Francisco, Oct. 9.—A minute examination of the hull of the steamer Alameda, by the marine surveyors, showed the real extent of the damage to the vessel.

The inspectors found that the greatest damage sustained by the steamer was on the port side, where there is the largest puncture. It is seven feet in length by two in width, directly under the port fuel tank. In the interior of the steamer it will be necessary to renew and repair forty frames. According to inspectors it will be necessary to renew twenty-two plates and repair sixty-four others before the steamer will be in seagoing condition.

U. S. COURT REFUSES TO RESTRAIN GOULD FROM VOTING THE WABASH STOCK HELD BY MISSOURI PACIFIC

CHARLES E. HUGHES,
Who Declines the Republican Nomination for Mayor of New York.

Ramsey Did the Same Thing Last Year That He Now Asks Court to Enjoin.

Decision Regarded as Most Important Victory For Gould Interests.

Court Finds the Case Is Replete With Violations of Missouri Law.

St. Louis, Oct. 9.—In the St. Louis circuit court today Judge Daniel G. Taylor denied the application of Joseph Ramsey, Jr., deposed president of the Wabash railroad for an injunction to restrain the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain road or their trustees from voting Wabash stock held by or for those railroads in the annual Wabash election to be held in Toledo tomorrow.

News of the decision was telegraphed at once to Toledo where George J. Gould and his supporters and Joseph Ramsey and his advisers are awaiting the decision. The fail are of the injunction suit which, if successful, would have tied up a large block of Gould stock, is regarded as a most important victory for the Gould interests.

Judge Taylor's decision in part follows:

"It appears from the plaintiff's verified returns of such of the defendants as have been served in this case and the evidence adduced upon the hearing for a preliminary injunction, that the plaintiff is a minority stockholder of the Wabash railroad company; that the Missouri Pacific railroad is the beneficiary owner of 20,000 shares of the stock of the Wabash railroad company, which are now registered upon the stock books of the Wabash railroad company in the name of H. M. Walker, under an instrument or pledge given to secure certain obligations of the Missouri Pacific railroad company held by persons who are strangers to this suit; that the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern railroad company, practically all the shares of which are owned by the Missouri Pacific company has an interest in $5,245,000 of the debenture bonds of the Wabash company which are in the possession of and registered on the books of the Wabash company in the name of the Mercantile Trust company of New York, under the terms of Wabash company's unifying and refunding mortgage and owns 65,000 shares of the preferred stock of the Wabash company which are in the name of George Gould and William L. Wilson; that George Gould is the chief executive officer of all three of defendant railroad companies and that the board of directors of all three or them are composed largely of the same persons, while the principal active officers of the Iron Mountain and Missouri Pacific companies are practically the same and that at the last annual meeting of the stockholders of the Wabash company, held in October, 1904, the plaintiff holding proxies and representing the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain companies' holdings in the Wabash companies, as well as those of others, cast all of the ballots cast at the meeting and elected the entire present board of directors of the Wabash company.

"It also appears that while the defendant Wabash company and the Missouri Pacific Co. have lines extending through various parts of the United States, that both of them have Missouri charters and the most important portions of the Missouri lines are those extending across the state of Missouri from St. Louis to Kansas City and from Kansas City to St. Louis.

"The plaintiff contends that the Wabash railroad company and the Missouri Pacific company are parallel and competing lines within the meaning of the provisions of section 17, article 12 of the constitution of Missouri, and of section 1052 of the Missouri statutes and hence that the holding of these securities of the Wabash Railroad company by the Missouri Pacific company is illegal and that inasmuch as the Missouri Pacific company owns and controls all of the stock of the Iron Mountain company is illegal because that cannot be done directly and seeks by his bill filed herein to enjoin the voting of these securities at the meeting of the Wabash company to be held Oct. 10, upon the ground that they are illegally owned and will be voted so as to effectuate a purpose to stifle competition between the Missouri Pacific and Wabash companies in Missouri, through the operation of these two competing lines under one control and in combination, and that he as a stockholder in the Wabash company will be injured thereby. All the defendants who have appeared or been served disavow such illegal purpose and attack the good faith of the plaintiff's application. The court finds the record in this case so replete with evidence of violations of the provisions of certain of the Missouri laws enacted for the protection of the public, that it has been loath to reach the conclusions herein expressed.

The record develops the fact that at the last annual election of the Wabash company the plaintiff, Ramsey, holding the proxies of the then and now owners of these very shares of stock, the voting of which he now seeks to have enjoined, voted all of them for the election of the very persons whom he now charges, will if elected, so conduct the property of the Wabash road as to not only violate the provisions of the laws of Missouri, but will also so conduct the same as to injure him. I am of the view that this action of plaintiff is sufficient to compel the court to deny him the relief which he seeks in the absence of proof showing that something has transpired since the time of such voting of this stock by him which would indicate that the purpose of those who will be elected by the voting of this stock at the meeting to be held on the 10th of Oct. will be different from those of the persons elected by the plaintiff.

"The order will, therefore, be that the rule heretofore made upon the defendants to show cause why a preliminary injunction should not be issued will be vacated and plaintiffs application should not be issued will be vacated and plaintiffs application for a temporary injunction denied.

DECLINED BY HUGHES

Counsellor Refuses the Nomination for Mayor of New York.

Believes It His Duty To Devote Energies To Investigation.

New York, Oct. 9.—Charles E. Hughes, counsel for the insurance investigation committee, today, declined the Republican nomination for mayor of New York City. In stating his grounds for refusing the nomination which was tendered to him by the unanimous vote of the city Republican convention last Friday night, Mr. Hughes said:

"In this dilemma I have simply to do my duty as I see it.

"In my judgment I have no right to accept the nomination. A paramount public duty forbids it. It is not necessary to enlarge upon the importance of the insurance investigation. This is undisputed. It is dealing with questions vital to the interests of thousands throughout the land. It presents an opportunity for public service second to none and involves a correlative responsibility. This work commands all my energy. It is imperative that I continue in it. You have frankly recognized that it must continue unencumbered and with unimpaired efficiency. But it is entirely clear to me that this cannot be if I accept the nomination.

"You know how desirous I have been that the investigation should not be checked by any suggestion of political motive. Whatever confidence it has inspired should be due to absolute independence of political considerations. It is not sufficient to say that an acceptance of this nomination, coming to me unsought, would not deflect my course a hair's breadth, and that I should remain entirely untrammeled. The non-political character of the investigation, and its freedom from bias, either of fear or favor, not only must exist, they must be recognized. I cannot permit them, by any action of mine, to become matters of debate."

Of Gould's Friends Start For the Field of Battle.

New York, Oct. 9.—George Gould and a large party, including all his chief advisers, legal, as well as financial, left Weehawken last night in two private cars attached to the Chicago-St. Louis limited of the West Shore road, bound for Toledo, where the last fight will be made between the millionaire president of the Missouri Pacific Railroad company and Joseph Ramsey, Jr., for the control of the Wabash railway. Mr. Gould and his party will be joined in Toledo tomorrow by F. A. Delano, whom Mr. Gould caused to be elected to the presidency of the Wabash on Thursday, after having deposed Mr. Ramsey from that office.

Mr. Gould when asked on the train if he expected to win, replied:

"I really cannot say. I hope so, but I will know more about it on Tuesday."

Winslow S. Pierce, Mr. Gould's principal legal adviser is with the party and will have full charge of such legal proceedings as may arise.

It was said yesterday that the departure of Mr. Gould for the West did not terminate the quest for proxies. The search will be continued today until the last possible moment, when a trusted employe will be dispatched from No. 195 Broadway for Toledo with the precious documents.

WOMEN TO PLAY GOLF.

New York, Oct. 9.—Play for the woman's golf championship, under the auspices of the United States Golf association, will begin on the Morris county links today. Miss Georgia N. Bishop is the present holder of the title. Interest centers in the New York, Philadelphia and Boston contingents, as none of Chicago's representatives has put in an appearance.

Ramsey Not Surprised at Outcome of Application.

Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 9.—Joseph Ramsey, Jr., received from the Associated Press his first information of the denial of his application for an injunction restraining the Gould interests from voting the stock held by the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain companies, at the annual election of the Wabash road, to be held tomorrow, which means practically 140,000 against him in tomorrow's election. When shown the dispatch, he smiled pleasantly and remarked:

When asked if he had any statement to make, Mr. Ramsey replied with a laugh: "There is nothing that I can say. The decision seems to speak for itself. Of course this thing is not in any way decisive. It merely disposes of one trick in the game."

Mr. Ramsey showed no sign of being surprised or disappointed at the decision. He seemed to take the action of the court as a matter of course, which made very little difference to him in any way. None of the important members of the Gould interests have as yet arrived in the city, with the exception of Col. Blodgett of St. Louis, the general counsel of the road, and he, like Mr. Ramsey, seemed to take the decision with no evidence of surprise.

"I guess that speaks for itself," he said. "There is nothing that I can say. I expected the decision, and really do not see how it could have been anything else."

The application for the removal of the three inspectors of election, Messrs Reynolds, Colton and Newton, who have officiated at many annual meetings of the Wabash road was argued for the greater part of the day in the court of common pleas before Judge Kincade. These men by their power to pass upon all proxies submitted, practically control all the votes to be cast at the election and they have in addition, the right to count the vote and certify to the result of the election. Mr. Ramsey, through his attorneys, claims that they are all employes of the Wabash road and while they have been able to fulfill their duties in a satisfactory manner at previous elections, it was because there was no contest and they were not called upon to decide close questions of legal right to vote, as they must do in the present election. Because of their lack of education in this respect, he claims that they are not competent and asks that the court appoint three disinterested inspectors to take their places.

Judge Kincade on Saturday declared that he saw no reason why three other inspectors should not be appointed, provided Mr. Ramsey could show that he represented one-tenth of the stock to be voted at the election.

This morning his attorneys submitted a list of names in addition to that of Mr. Ramsey, with an affidavis that they were all holders of stock in the Wabash road, and in the aggregate represented much more than one-tenth of the capital stock. They asked that the attorneys for the Wabash road be compelled to bring into court the stock book of the railroad company to show that these men were actual stockholders, saying that there was no way of proving this fact unless the stock books were shown.

The attorneys for the Wabash road declared that they had not been served with proper notice to bring stock books, and denied the power of the court in the matter of the appointment of inspectors, because it lacked jurisdiction in that there was nothing to show that the names appended to the affidavit were those of bona fide stockholders. It was admitted that Mr. Ramsey owned 100 shares of the common stock of the Wabash road and debenture bonds to the value of $50,000. Beyond this the list showed nothing, they declared, and because it showed nothing the court was without jurisdiction in the premises.

The arguments lasted for the greater part of the day.

FALL REGISTRATION BEGINS IN NEW YORK.

New York, Oct 9.—Registration for city and county fall elections began in New York city today with many precautions in readiness to secure an honest registration. Superintendent of Elections Morgan said that he had secured 50,000 names of former voters, after whose names are marked one of the following words: "Died, papers cancelled, convict, warrant, removed."

"This list," said Mr. Morgan, "includes those who have been out of New York city for a year, and if any one tries to register under any name in this list he will be arrested."

LAHTI'S HEIR CONTESTED

Dead Duelist's Claim Object of Contest In Land Office.

Brings Up New and Interesting Questions—More to Duel.

It is probably too soon for the public to forget the terrible duel which took place on the range a few days ago in which John Canty and Gust Lahti fought each other to the death for some reason unknown. The story of the duel as published in the press of Duluth was the subject of wide and horrified comment among all classes, probably because of the double tragedy and the effectiveness with which the contestants plied their weapons, and because of its evident desperation.

Well one August Walberg of Virginia, Minn., has lost no time in profiting if possible, by the frightful affair. This Walberg on Saturday last, through his attorney, H. L. Shepherd of Duluth, filed a contest on the homestead of Gust Lahti, one of the victims of the duel. The contest is filed against the heir of Lahti, if heir there be, and the contestant represents that Lahti has no relatives so that there cannot, if such is the case, be any heirs of blood in this country at least.

It is set forth in the contest papers that Lahti filed on Oct. 28, 1902, a homestead entry on lots 1 and 2 and the northeast quarter of the northwest quarter of 31-61-17; and that Lahti died on Sept. 29, 1905.

Aside from the fact that no time is lost in filing the contest, its presentation brings up some interesting conditions to the land officials to decide and will probably require a settlement at Washington if the contest is not allowed to go on by the local register and receiver.

There is nothing in the records of the land office or the decisions of the department which shows that such a case has ever come up before, so that the decision in it will establish a precedent. Of course, in this case it cannot be charged that Lahti wilfully deserted his claim or that he did not make the required improvements. In ordinary cases one who starts a contract must wait for six months after the contestee will have left his claim. In this case Lahti has left the claim never to return, death furnishing his transportation. Now as a result, it is a question whether or not Walberg under the circumstances should not wait the customary six months before filing his contest.

Walberg asserts in his affidavit that Lahti has no heirs in this country nor any who have even declared their intentions of becoming citizens. This statement involves an interesting question, to-wit: Could an heir come from the old country, declare his or her intention of becoming a citizen and take the claim within the six months? With these questions confronting them, it is up to the Duluth land officials to decide whether or not the claim contest may proceed.

John Canty, the opponent of Lahti in the doubly fatal duel, had a claim about six miles from Lahti's. He offered proof on this claim during the early part of this year, but a special agent of the government held it up for some reason, and the claim has ever since been under investigation.

Said one yesterday who has read and talked of the Canty-Lahti duel with interest:

"That duel has never been properly investigated and it would furnish an interesting chapter to look into that thing closely and find out as much as possible of it. Why did Canty go to Lahti's claim? Nobody has made any statement about that yet. Canty was working for a Virginia lumber concern and his employers certainly knew why he went to that claim, but have said nothing about it to anybody so far as I have learned. That might be a lot of interest.

"It would be interesting to know who struck the first blow and the cause. Possibly Canty's mission to the claim caused the first blow and his employers might be able to throw some light on the matter. Lahti was a homesteader and lived by himself. Those fellows get very suspicious living alone as they do and it may have been that Canty went to the claim with some proposition for Lahti and the latter became suspicious and started the fight."

KILLED BY A COMPANION

Farmer's Eight Year Old Son Dies From Rifle Wound.

The 8-year-old son of John Grady, formerly a letter carrier in the city and now a farmer living about five miles out of the city, was shot in the left side just below the heart yesterday afternoon by a companion about his own age and named Nessarde. A small caliber rifle was used. Dr. L. T. Pare of the West end was summoned and ordered the injured boy removed to St. Mary's hospital at an early hour this morning in order to be operated on.

Before the operation could be performed the boy died. Dr. Pare will hold an autopsy on the body today. Nothing of the case has yet been brought to the attention of the authorities.

AMBITIOUS YOUNG MAN

Wants to Buy Out Uncle Sam In St. Louis County Land.

The United States land office at Duluth at times receives some peculiar communications, but a few days ago received what everybody in the office admits is the limit. It is evidently from some ambitious boy, or very young man, in Glenwood, Wis., or else it is intended to be a joke. The writer, if serious, wishes to buy all of the government's land in St. Louis county without further ado, if the government will sell it for $1 an acre, and give him ten years to pay for it, at 3 per cent. At that, probably the government would average up better than the scheme it is working now. The letter, which is remarkable for the offer alone, is still further noteworthy for its style, and is as follows, verbatim:

"Dear sirs;—Will you sell all of the land that is in St. Louis co; Minn. on 10 years time and on 3 per cent int; I will give you $1 per acre for the land. If I can't get the papers made out on my own name Then I will find somebody that will be old enght.

NEW FLOORS GIVEN TEST

Concrete Structure Proves Equal to the Big Strain.

Van and Storage Company's New Structure Nears Completion.

After the test which was made Saturday, the officers of the Duluth Van and Storage company are very well satisfied with the storehouse which is being erected for the concern on East Superior street, adjoining its present quarters at Nos. 510-14.

The new structure, which is fast nearing completion, is built entirely of reinforced concrete and brick, not a stick of wood being used, and a test of the concrete floor was made Saturday, which proved that the floors could bear greater weights than wooden floors.

Thirty tons of white lead were piled up on the floor in a space measuring 12 by 12 feet. The lead was left on the spot for twenty-four hours, and not once during that time nor afterwards did the floor give evidences of giving way under the weight. The test demonstrated that the new building would be an admirable one for the purpose it is to be used for, the storage of all kinds of household and other goods.

The building is the only one of the kind in Duluth, and there are only a few others like it in the state. Next year more will be built, however. The Prince Construction company of Minneapolis holds the contract for its erection, which is being directed by C. A. P. Turner of Minneapolis, who is responsible for some of the latest ideas put to the test in the new warehouse.

The dimensions of the new building are 30 by 100 feet, and the structure is three stories high. Its completion in two weeks will give the Duluth Van and Storage company a total storage space of 27,000 square feet. The space on the two upper floors and part of the first floor of the new building will be divided into little fire-proof bins in which goods will be stored. Entrance can be secured by fire-proof doors only, and there will be novel ventilation contrivances over these doors which work automatically, and which will kill any fire which might start inside the compartment. If a fire were to start in one of the bins, the heat would cause the ventilator to close, and the fire could not live after that. It would be smothered.

Two large piano rooms are included also in the equipment of the new storehouse. The rooms will be heated and the temperature kept even all the time. This is to keep the pianos in good condition.

The window sashes in the building are of steel and the glass will be wired. Every precaution has been taken to make the building fire-proof, and J. W. Sheridan, president of the Duluth Van and Storage company, is confident that it is nearer so than any other building in the Northwest.

PARENTS WILL STOP MARRIAGE

Seventeen-Year-Old West End Girl Seeks Romantic Union.

If Mary Lane, alias Linski, is not already a wife, her parents will leave no stone unturned to prevent her marriage, on the ground that she is but 17 years of age, and has not reached the age when she can legally control her own actions.

The young woman is alleged to have eloped from her home at Thirteenth avenue west and Seventh street with Hans Johnson, who was employed at the Duluth Brewing and Malting company's plant.

The young woman's parents have notified Humane Officer Withrow to arrest the bride, if the marriage has not taken place, and return her to her home. If she is already married, the parents ask that the matter be dropped.

Notice has been given the authorities at the Twin Cities to look out for the couple and hold the bride if she is unable to show a marriage certificate.

WELCOME NEW PASTOR.

First Christian Church Is Filled to Greet Rev. Baxter Waters.

The congregation at both morning and evening services of the First Christian church, corner of Fifth avenue west and Mesaba avenue was large to listen to the new pastor of the church, Rev. Baxter Waters, who came from Hiawatha, Kans., to take charge in place of Rev. J. K. Shellenberger, who has been transfered to Wooster, Ohio. Mr. Waters made good impressions at both services.

He has spent the greater part of his life in the South and his departure from Missouri and Kansas, where he was best known, was much regretted. He is a graduate of the Canton, Mo., Christian university and finished his theological course in Yale in 1899. He was pastor of the Central Christian church at St. Louis, Mo., for four years and was transferred from there to Hiawatha, Kans., from which point he came to Duluth.

INJUNCTION IS DENIED

Milling and Elevator Interests Fail to Restrain Wisconsin.

Court Decides Inspection Law is Not Proven Unconstitutional.

Declaring that it had not been proven satisfactorily that the Wisconsin grain inspection law was unconstitutional, Judge Vinje late Saturday afternoon denied the request of the Duluth-Superior Milling company and A. D. Thomson for an injunction restraining the commission from inspecting their grain. The court even refused to continue the temporary restraining order.

The plaintiffs in this suit, which has so interested grain men throughout the Northwest, immediately filed notice of an appeal and requested that the restraining order be kept in force until a decision had been handed down in the case by a higher court.

This motion called forth some eloquence from the attorneys for both sides, those representing the commission protesting most vigorously. The attorneys for the plaintiff declared that if the restraining order was not kept in force, the business of their clients would be seriously affected, and that they might be obliged to shut down their establishments. They said that they suffered losses while being threatened with arrest and hampered by the Wisconsin inspectors, and that as they were buying and selling their grain at points outside the state, they did not come under the provisions of the Wisconsin law.

Attorney Murphy, for the elevator and milling interests, denied the claim of the attorneys for the commission that the "babes in the woods" were crying for Wisconsin inspection. To prove that such statement did not touch the truth at all, he declared, that only eleven cars of grain had arrived at the Head of the Lakes calling for Wisconsin inspection, since Aug. 1.

On the other hand, Senator Hudnall, representing the Wisconsin commission, stated that as the plaintiffs were not having their grain inspected in Superior, they could not possibly suffer any loss from the taking of a few quarts of grain from cars and boats by the Badger State inspectors.

But the court refused to continue the restraining order declaring that if the law was not unconstitutional, it was not within his province to stand in the way of its enforcement. He said that it was a rule of lower courts not to hold against laws unless sure that they were unconstitutional.

Despite the fact that the decision handed down by Judge Vinje wasc a victory for the Wisconsin commission in this particular instance, that body has not received one cent from Minnesota grain concerns for its inspection. Thus far, the Wisconsin commission has performed its duties without any remuneration from the concerns which it hoped would pay the most tribute. The elevator and milling companies have without exception refused to pay the charges, presented through the railroad companies.

Frank Daniels, the inimitable and always jolly little comedian, and always the same Frank Daniels no matter what his play, delighted a great audience at the Lyceum, Saturday evening in "Sergeant Brue" a musical farce, differing considerably from the vehicles in which he disported himself on his visits immediately preceding this. His part is that of a member of the London police who gets the rank of sergeant accidentally and in spite of a cowardice which he is at trouble to conceal. He suddenly is placed in the way of securing a fortune of large proportions provided he can attain the rank of inspector of police and the chase for the inspectorship brings about many amusing complications which place the sergeant in a ridiculous light and give Mr. Daniels opportunity for the employment of all of his prolific fun making ability. He is a master of the comical in facial expression and to see his face is to laugh, in fact it is one long laugh from start to finish when the jolly little fellow is on the stage.

Miss Sallie Fisher sings much better than the average musical comedy star and can act sufficiently to carry the part of Lady Bickenhall, an impoverished member of the nobility who introduces others into society, satisfactorily. The company contains none who shine out brilliantly but in general is capable and carries the farce well.

"MRS. LEFFINGWELL'S BOOTS."

Charles Frohman's big fashionable comedy, "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," which is to be at the Lyceum theater this evening, recently concluded its long run in New York with all the indications of a brilliant and enduring triumph. The critics appear to agree that the humor of the author, Augustus Thomas, flows in abundant quantity throughout the comedy, and that the characters are of a metropolitan type, possessed of sufficient originality and novelty to make them exceedingly interesting. The story is one of jealousy, with a modern Othello as its central figure, and the incidents are believed to be sparklingly told. "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots" is viewed as the funniest of all Augustus Thomas' comedies.

"THE TIGER LILIES."

"The Tiger Lilies" will greet Duluthians at the Metropolitan this evening and will remain all the week, giving performances every evening, except Saturday, and matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. The company is headed by Alex. Carr, and he has the assistance of an able corps of fun-makers and a handsome chorus. "The Tiger Lilies" give a strong vaudeville bill, which includes Lubin's sensational moving pictures of the Britt-Nelson fight.

"HELLO BOY."

"Hello Bill," a farcical comedy, will be at the Lyceum tomorrow evening. The company is claimed to be the best that has ever appeared in the piece.

LAHTI'S HEIR CONTESTED

Dead Duelist's Claim Object of Contest In Land Office.

Brings Up New and Interesting Questions—More to Duel.

It is probably too soon for the public to forget the terrible duel which took place on the range a few days ago in which John Canty and Gust Lahti fought each other to the death for some reason unknown. The story of the duel as published in the press of Duluth was the subject of wide and horrified comment among all classes, probably because of the double tragedy and the effectiveness with which the contestants plied their weapons, and because of its evident desperation.

Well one August Walberg of Virginia, Minn., has lost no time in profiting if possible, by the frightful affair. This Walberg on Saturday last, through his attorney, H. L. Shepherd of Duluth, filed a contest on the homestead of Gust Lahti, one of the victims of the duel. The contest is filed against the heir of Lahti, if heir there be, and the contestant represents that Lahti has no relatives so like there cannot, if such is the case, be any heirs of blood in this country at least.

It is set forth in the contest papers that Lahti filed on Oct. 8, 1902, a homestead entry on lots 1 and 2 and the northeast quarter of the northwest quarter of 31-61-17; and that Lahti died on Sept. 29, 1905.

Aside from the fact that no time is lost in filing the contest, its presentation brings up some interesting conditions to the land officials to decide and will probably require a settlement at Washington if the contest is not allowed to go on by the local register and receiver.

There is nothing in the records of the land office or the decisions of the department which shows that such a case has ever come up before, so that the decision in it will establish a precedent. Of course, in this cause it cannot be charged that Lahti wilfully deserted his claim or that he did not make the required improvements. In ordinary cases one who starts a contract must wait for six months after the contestee will have left his claim. In this case Lahti has left the claim never to return, death furnishing his transportation. Now as a result, it is a question whether or not Walberg under the circumstances should not wait the customary six months before filing his contest.

Walberg asserts in his affidavit that Lahti has no heirs in this country nor any who have even declared their intentions of becoming citizens. This statement involves an interesting question, to-wit: Could an heir come from the old country, declare his or her intention of becoming a citizen and take the claim within the six months? With these questions confronting them, it is up to the Duluth land officials to decide whether or not the claim contest may proceed.

John Canty, the opponent of Lahti in the doubly fatal duel, had a claim about six miles from Lahti's. He offered proof on this claim during the early part of this year, but a special agent of the government held it up for some reason, and the claim has ever since been under investigation.

Said one yesterday who has read and talked of the Canty-Lahti duel with interest:

"That duel has never been properly investigated and it would furnish an interesting chapter to look into that thing closely and find out as much as possible of it. Why did Canty go to Lahti's claim? Nobody has made any statement about that yet. Canty was working for a Virginia lumber concern and his employers certainly knew why he went to that claim, but have said nothing about it to anybody so far as I have learned. That might be a lot of interest.

"It would be interesting to know who struck the first blow and the cause. Possibly Canty's mission to the claim caused the first blow and his employers might be able to throw some light on the matter. Lahti was a homesteader and lived by himself. Those fellows get very suspicious living alone as they do and it may have been that Canty went to the claim with some proposition for Lahti and the latter became suspicious and started the fight."

KILLED BY A COMPANION

Farmer's Eight Year Old Son Dies From Rifle Wound.

The 8-year-old son of John Grady, formerly a letter carrier in the city and now a farmer living about five miles out of the city, was shot in the left side just below the heart yesterday afternoon by a companion about his own age and named Nessarde. A small caliber rifle was used. Dr. L. T. Pare of the West end was summoned and ordered the injured boy removed to St. Mary's hospital at an early hour this morning in order to be operated on.

Before the operation could be performed the boy died. Dr. Pare will hold an autopsy on the body today. Nothing of the case has yet been brought to the attention of the authorities.

Everybody's liable to itching piles. Rich and poor, old and young—terrible the torture they suffer. Only one sure cure. Doan's Ointment. Absolutely safe; can't fail.

AMBITIOUS YOUNG MAN

Wants to Buy Out Uncle Sam In St. Louis County Land.

The United States land office at Duluth at times receives some peculiar communications, but a few days ago received what everybody in the office admits is the limit. It is evidently from some ambitious boy, or very young man, in Glenwood, Wis., or else it is intended to be a joke. The writer, if serious, wishes to buy all of the government's land in St. Louis county without further ado, if the government will sell it for $1 an acre, and give him ten years to pay for it, at 3 per cent. At that, probably the government would average up better than the scheme it is working now. The letter, which is remarkable for the offer alone, is still further noteworthy for its style, and is as follows, verbatim:

"Dear sirs;—Will you sell all of the land that is in St. Louis co; Minn. on 10 years time and on 3 per cent int; I will give you $1 per acre for the land. If I can't get the papers made out on my own name Then I will find somebody that will be old enght.

FOOTBALL PLAYER DIES FROM INJURIES.

Chester, Pa., Oct. 9.—John S. Summersgill, aged 21 years, a member of the Franklin football team of this place, died here yesterday from injuries received during a game Saturday. Summersgill was rendered unconscious by a blow in the abdomen. He revived and resumed playing. Later he was accidentally kicked in the head, and again became insensible. He was resuscitated and watched the game from the side lines. On the way home he fell to the ground, and was removed to the hospital. His death was due to hemorrhages. He was married three months ago.

NEW FLOORS GIVEN TEST

Concrete Structure Proves Equal to the Big Strain.

Van and Storage Company's New Structure Nears Completion.

After the test which was made Saturday, the officers of the Duluth Van and Storage company are very well satisfied with the storehouse which is being erected for the concern on East Superior street, adjoining its present quarters at Nos. 510-14.

The new structure, which is fast nearing completion, is built entirely of reinforced concrete and brick, not a stick of wood being used, and a test of the concrete floor was made Saturday, which proved that the floors could bear greater weights than wooden floors.

Thirty tons of white lead were piled up on the floor in a space measuring 12 by 12 feet. The lead was left on the spot for twenty-four hours, and not once during that time nor afterwards did the floor give evidences of giving way under the weight. The test demonstrated that the new building would be an admirable one for the purpose it is to be used for, the storage of all kinds of household and other goods.

The building is the only one of the kind in Duluth, and there are only a few others like it in the state. Next year more will be built, however. The Prince Construction company of Minneapolis holds the contract for its erection, which is being directed by C. A. P. Turner of Minneapolis, who is responsible for some of the latest ideas put to the test in the new warehouse.

The dimensions of the new building are 30 by 100 feet, and the structure is three stories high. Its completion in two weeks will give the Duluth Van and Storage company a total storage space of 27,000 square feet. The space on the two upper floors and part of the first floor of the new building will be divided into little fire-proof bins in which goods will be stored. Entrance can be secured by fire-proof doors only, and there will be novel ventilation contrivances over these doors which work automatically, and which will kill any fire which might start inside the compartment. If a fire were to start in one of the bins, the heat would cause the ventilator to close, and the fire could not live after that. It would be smothered.

Two large piano rooms are included also in the equipment of the new storehouse. The rooms will be heated and the temperature kept even all the time. This is to keep the pianos in good condition.

The window sashes in the building are of steel and the glass will be wired. Every precaution has been taken to make the building fire-proof, and J. W. Sheridan, president of the Duluth Van and Storage company, is confident that it is nearer so than any other building in the Northwest.

Seventeen-Year-Old West End Girl Seeks Romantic Union.

If Mary Lane, alias Linski, is not already a wife, her parents will leave no stone unturned to prevent her marriage, on the ground that she is but 17 years of age, and has not reached the age when she can legally control her own actions.

The young woman is alleged to have eloped from her home at Thirteenth avenue west and Seventh street with Hans Johnson, who was employed at the Duluth Brewing and Malting company's plant.

The young woman's parents have notified Humane Officer Withrow to arrest the bride, if the marriage has not taken place, and return her to her home. If she is already married, the parents ask that the matter be dropped.

Notice has been given the authorities at the Twin Cities to look out for the couple and hold the bride if she is unable to show a marriage certificate.

INJUNCTION IS DENIED

Milling and Elevator Interests Fail to Restrain Wisconsin.

Court Decides Inspection Law is Not Proven Unconstitutional.

Declaring that it had not been proven satisfactorily that the Wisconsin grain inspection law was unconstitutional, Judge Vinje late Saturday afternoon denied the request of the Duluth-Superior Milling company and A. D. Thomson for an injunction restraining the commission from inspecting their grain. The court even refused to continue the temporary restraining order.

The plaintiffs in this suit, which has so interested grain men throughout the Northwest, immediately filed notice of an appeal and requested that the restraining order be kept in force until a decision had been handed down in the case by a higher court.

This motion called forth some eloquence from the attorneys for both sides, those representing the commission protesting most vigorously. The attorneys for the plaintiff declared that if the restraining order was not kept in force, the business of their clients would be seriously affected, and that they might be obliged to shut down their establishments. They said that they suffered losses while being threatened with arrest and hampered by the Wisconsin inspectors, and that as they were buying and selling their grain at points outside the state, they did not come under the provisions of the Wisconsin law.

Attorney Murphy, for the elevator and milling interests, denied the claim of the attorneys for the commission that the "babes in the woods" were crying for Wisconsin inspection. To prove that such statement did not touch the truth at all, he declared, that only eleven cars of grain had arrived at the Head of the Lakes calling for Wisconsin inspection, since Aug. 1.

On the other hand, Senator Hudnall, representing the Wisconsin commission, stated that as the plaintiffs were not having their grain inspected in Superior, they could not possibly suffer any loss from the taking of a few quarts of grain from cars and boats by the Badger State inspectors.

But the court refused to continue the restraining order declaring that if the law was not unconstitutional, it was not within his province to stand in the way of its enforcement. He said that it was a rule of lower courts not to hold against laws unless sure that they were unconstitutional.

Despite the fact that the decision handed down by Judge Vinje wase a victory for the Wisconsin commission in this particular instance, that body has not received one cent from Minnesota grain concerns for its inspection. Thus far, the Wisconsin commission has performed its duties without any remuneration from the concerns which it hoped would pay the most tribute. The elevator and milling companies have without exception refused to pay the charges, presented through the railroad companies.

GAS WILL BE PUSHED

Proposition For Street Lighting to Be Submitted to Council.

Objections to New Building Ordinance Will Be Considered.

A proposition to light the streets of the city with gas will probably be submitted to the council this evening or next Monday night by the Welsbach company, manufacturers of patent gas mantels, and the Zenith Furnace company.

At the meeting of the council, last Monday evening, the Duluth General Electrical company made an offer to renew its contract for street lighting with the city, at the samo rates now in effect, and in addition to furnish free to the city, fifty arc lights, one light for each park, light for the city hall, and also reduce the rates on electric lighting for private consumers to the extent of 20 per cent.

The present contract with the company expires next year, and it is understood that the gas interests will also make a bid for the business. Experimental gas lamps are now in use on East First street, and also at Eleventh avenue east on Superior street. These were placed there by the company more than a year ago, for the purpose of showing what could be done with gas for street lighting.

Whether the proposition of the gas interests will be submitted this evening or not, is not known, but it is understood to be coming as soon as the time is ripe.

Objections to some of the features of the new building ordinance will be entered by a delegation from the Duluth Builders' exchange. It is claimed by the members of the committee that the regulations in regard to concrete construction are too stringent, and that if they were enforced, it would make the cost of concrete building excessive.

The ordinance comes up for its second reading tonight, and the aldermen announced last Monday night, that they would take up all objections to it this evening.

The report of the board of public works on the cost of temporary repairs to the Lake avenue viaduct is also due this evening. The board was asked last Monday night, to submit an estimate of the cost of putting the viaduct in a passable condition.

FIRST CASE IN WEEKS

Diphtheria Reported For First Time Since September 11.

City Was Free From Contagious Diseases For Three Weeks.

The first case of diphtheria reported in Duluth in two months was placed under quarantine today by one of the health department inspectors.

Duluth has established a record in the line of freedom from contagious diseases this fall, and for twenty-one days the city was without a single case of either scarlet fever, diphtheria or smallpox.

On the day that school opened, on Sept. 11, the health department announced that the city was entirely free from contagious diseases, and showed a clean bulletin board, with all the old cases marked off.

For exactly three weeks there was not a single case reported, which is claimed to be a record that cannot be matched by any city the size of Duluth in the country.

On Oct. 2 there was a case of scarlet fever reported, and the patient was quarantined.

This morning the inspectors were notified of a case of diphtheria, which is the first one reported to the health department since Aug. 10, or nearly two months ago. The latter case was released from quarantine on Sept. 11.

Dr. Murray, the health commissioner, ascribes much of the success in dealing with the diphtheria cases to the order which compels all druggists to promptly report all sale of diphtheria antitoxin. In this way the health department has prompt notice of all diphtheria cases, and the patients can be quarantined before the disease has any opportunity to spread. The plan was the idea of Dr. Murray himself, and it has been copied in several other cities during the last year.

MEASUREMENTS WERE SHORT

Contractors Have Agreed to Extend Floodwood Bridge Approaches.

The county board committee which left the city last Friday evening to inspect the bridge over the St. Louis river at Floodwood, found that the engineer's estimate of the width of the river fell some twenty feet or more short of the actual width as measured after the construction of the new steel bridge was started.

The matter was called to the attention of the commissioners at their last meeting when Commissioner E. M. Patterson said he had been told that the approaches provided for in the contract would fall short of reaching solid ground on either side of the river, and suggested that the board investigate and take steps to provide for an additional approach construction before the contractors moved their pile driving apparatus from the locality.

The contract for the new bridge, with Daret & Hughes of Chicago, contracting agents for the Massillon Bridge company, calls for a structure with a 210 foot span and with 18 foot approaches on either side.

After the situation was looked over the commissioners entered into an arrangement with the contractors whereby the latter, without any advance over their former contract price of $5,600 have agreed to put in a 44 foot approach on one side of the river, with steel stringers running from the bridge pier to solid ground.

Work on the concrete piers for the bridge is to be started immediately and will be inspected by County Commissioner Knuppi, in whose road district the new bridge will be located.

SENSATIONAL PLAYS

Of Low Morals Were Favorites With Mrs. Schandein.

Milwaukee, Oct. 9.—Mrs. Lisette Schandein was fond of the most sensational literature and plays which depicted the lowest things morally, according to testimony given today by her son-in-law, Dr. Louis F. Frank, before Judge Carpenter in the contest of Emil Schandein and Mrs. Frank to break the will which gives the bulk of the estate of Mrs. Jacob Heil, the third child. Mrs. Schandein extolled plays that depicted the human passions in all of their nakedness, Dr. Frank testified. Dr. William O. Becker and Dr. Richard Dewey, were questioned relative to what moral or ethical effects arterial sclerosis would have upon a woman of Mrs. Schandein's age. The general trend of the testimony was to the effect that brain nutrition would be diminished, that the ethical functions of the brain would be lessened and that the patient would have less power of judgment and would lose to a degree a sense of obligation.

Fred Pabst and William O. Goodrich, relatives of the Schandeins, testified that Mrs. Schandein grew rapidly old in the last few years of her life.

RENEWED EFFORTS

Made to Secure Identity of Murderers From Mrs. Ingerick.

Middletown, N. Y., Oct. 9.—Renewed efforts were made today to secure from Mrs. Martin Ingerick, information as to the indentity of the murderer of the Onley brothers and Mrs. Ingerick's daughter, Alice, last Friday. Mrs. Ingerick was beaten until she became unconscious, but was recovering today. She was not able to talk much, however.

Daniel Davis and his wife who were brought to police headquarters last night, were still held at the police station today. Several city and county officers, accompanied by detectives have left here and arrests may be shortly made.

SYNDICATE IS DOWNED

Majority Wins Out In Gold Mining Company Elections.

C. L. Twohy and A. L. Hoffman Heap Defeat on Combine.

After a garrison finish and one which came to pass only after some very tall hustling on the part of C. L. Twohy of Duluth and A.L.Hoffman of Brainerd, the majority of the stockholders in the Shakespeare Gold Mining company succeeded in maintaining their control of the stock in the corporation and defeating the efforts of a syndicate to bring about the procedure known as "freezing out" the other share-holders.

The annual meeting of the company was held at the mine Oct. 2 and the reports of the real situation, which have just been made known, show that the session was hardly as quiet and peacable as a session of the legislature just prior to an over-Sunday adjournment. It appears to have been rather a lively affair, from start to finish.

The efforts of Messrs. Twohy and Hoffman to secure the proxies of shareholders at Brainerd and Duluth enabled them, with the aid of the Sault shareholders, to frustrate the attempts of the syndicate, of which William Wood of Brainerd was the apparent head, to secure control of a majority of stock and elect a board of directors of its own.

In fact so successful were Messrs. Twohy, Hoffman and their friends in the company, representing a majority of the stockholders, that they elected a board of directors on which was not a single memeber of the opposition. Following are the directors elected: C. L. Twohy, Duluth; Andrew Gowan, Duluth; A. L. Hoffman, Brainerd; J. C. Foley, and J. B. Miller of Sault Ste Marie, Ont., F. R. Price Sault Ste Marie, Mich.

The successful candidates received 1,107,395 votes while those put forth by the syndicate crowd amassed only 713,630. Those who sought directorships under the auspices of the syndicate were W. B. Dunn, Houghton, Mich.; Dr. G. F. Jones, Dan McChesney, J. B. Spellman of Webwood, Ont.; William Roach of Sault, Onc., and William Wood of Brainerd, who has been manager of the company.

It is understood that the syndicate secured control of about 35 per cent of the stock in the company, and after the election of directors had taken place, Mr. Twohy, in an address, complimented the crowd on its wisdom in securing such a large amount of stock in a concern so good as the Shakespeare company; offered to treat them fairly, as shareholders, but declared it was not advisable to turn over the management of the company's properties and business to a minority. He said, too, that the victors were willing to meet the defeated ones half way and discuss anything reasonable with them.

Mr. Dunn, representing the holders of the 35 per cent of the stock, declared that he and his associates would accept defeat as gracefully as they could, but declined to name all of those associated with him, and those who ran for directorships against the majority of the shareholders. He intimated, too, that he and his associates might make some sort of a proposition to the directors of the company, looking forward to a further development of the mine.

The directors were somewhat provoked to learn that the clean-up for the last twenty days' run in September amounted only to 201 ounces of amalgam, worth about $1,100. Mr. Wood explained this falling off from the August clean-up by declaring that he had ordered the captain to send only a low grade of ore through the mills.

They look upon this as one of the syndicate's moves. They feel that an attempt was made to depress the stock in the company, that the members of the combine might secure many shares of the stock at comparatively low figures.

The newly elected directors remained at the mine for three days, going all through it and assuring themselves that it contained rich veins. They became so satisfied that the sinking of the shaft from the 150-foot level will begin soon. T. W. Trotter, who was elected vice president, was placed in temporary charge of the mine and a competent mining expert will be placed in charge as soon as possible. The other officers elected by the directors were:

President C. L. Twohy: Secretary, A. L. Hoffman, and treasurer, F. H. Hughes, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Formal Opening and Sale of Fine Furs

Tuesday and Wednesday!

FREE EMBROIDERY LESSONS.

Mrs. Newell gives free embroidery lessons tomorrow morning from 9 to 11. All are invited.

Our stocks of choice Furs and Fashionable Fur Garments are now at their best, which means that it's the proper time to make your selections.

It is absolutely necessary when selecting important commodities such as Furs, Diamonds, etc., that you select a safe and dependable concern whose reputation for handling only the best is a guarantee of fair treatment.

The S. & B. Co. have been catering to your fur wants for 35 years, an honorable experience which seldom falls to the average concern of today.

Good Furs are not bought for a day, a month or a year. When one buys a good article of this kind they expect years of service from it—in fact when bought at the right place such will be the result.

On the other hand the markets are flooded with patchy and imperfect skins, second and thirds from which the choice pelts have already been selected. Many of these grades of fur are made up and sold as the best and for a time look the equal of the best. Six months' of wear discloses their defects—poor skins, uncertain dye and patched construction; in a year's time they're absolutely worthless.

We are selling reliable Furs from the most complete collection of really fine Furs in this section. When you are ready to discuss Furs come in and talk with our fur expert, who will give you every assistance in making a good selection. During these opening days we are offering especially attractive prices which should interest all prospective Fur buyers. For instance, we are offering for tomorrow:

ROYAL ERMINE NECK PIECES AT $18.50. We place on sale tomorrow morning 25 pieces of this exquisite and rare fur; made from deep, pure white fur in new designs; a splendid buying opportunity.

NATURAL SQUIRREL TIES AND THROWS, $5.75. A handsome collection of these desirable pieces made from selected skins in long ties or throws; special price tomorrow $5.75.

JAP MINK THROW, $8.75—Made from superfine skins in a rich sable color and guaranteed to wear; same style in best natural mink at $18.50.

See our extensive line of Throws, Scarfs, Muffs and Sets in mink from $8.75 to $125.00. Natural or sable squirrel new mink Muffs, latest shapes, $25.00 to $95.00; sable, $5.75 to $65.00; $12.50 to $35.00.

SPOKE IN THE SLUMS

Rev. John Callahan Returns From Trip to New York.

Says Dr. S. P. Long Is Greatly Improved In Health.

After holding evangelical meetings in the slums of New York and Brooklyn and speaking in the oldest methodist church in the United States, Rev. John Callahan of the Star of Hope mission, has returned from the East.

Mr. Callahan went to New York at the request of some prominent mission workers there for the purpose of holding meetings, and speaking on his experienses in Duluth.

"At the meeting a week ago Sunday in the Janes Methodist church in Brooklyn, there were more than 1,000 men in the audience," said Mr. Callahan today, in telling of his trip.

"There is a great deal of mission work being done in New York and there is a great field for it there.

"Another interesting experience I had was to preach in the oldest methodist church in the country. It is the old John street church in New York city, and is known as the 'mother of Methodism.'

"I also spoke several times in the McAuley mission in New York, Bishop C. H. Fowler presiding at one of the meetings.

"On my way home from New York, I stopped at Union City, Pa., and saw Dr. Long, the former pastor of the First Methodist church here. The stories about his illness are not correct. It was rumored that he was suffering from an incurable disease but when I saw him he was in the best of health, and ready to take up his work again. I notice that he has been appointed presiding elder of the Minneapolis district, and will assume his duties in the near future. He was living on his farm when I saw him, and the outdoor life had evidently done wonders for him."

CHANGE TO BE URGED

Mayor Cullum To Advocate Reform in Civil Service.

Present System Of Examination Said To Be a Farce.

On the ground that the chiefs of the police and fire departments are given practically a free hand in making appointments under the present system of examination, it is understood that Mayor Cullum will ask the civil service board to change its methods of conducting examinations.

In examining candidate for positions in the police and fire departments, the written examinations count for very little, and at these alone is the civil service board fully represented.

In the fire department examinations, the written test counts for but fifteen per cent of the total. Experience counts for a like amount, and the physical test counts for seventy per cent.

In the police department examinations, the written test counts for but forty per cent, and the physical test counts for sixty per cent.

The physical tests in both departments are conducted by the chiefs.

In this way the chiefs of the two departments are given the power to make any person head the examination lists, and while it is not claimed that they use this power in an improper of unfair manner, such could nevertheless be done, and with a dishonest or an unfair chief at the head of either one of these departments, the civil service examination would, it is claimed, develop into a howling farce, as the chief could give the candidates whatever markings he choose on the physical tests.

No promotions have yet been made as a result of the recent examinations, but it is understood that Officer C. E. Wilcox will be chosen police sergent. He is now acting sergent, and he headed the list of the four officers who were successful in the examination for promotion.

Chief Black has announced that he will take no action in regard to the promotions in his department until November 1. A. A. Ebner will probably be promoted to the vacant captaincy at Lakeside, and H. C. Merriman, the only one to pass the examination for lieutenant, will doubtless be appointed to one of the vacancies now existing.

BAPTISTS' CONVENTION

State Gathering Will Open With a Large Attendance.

Many Delegates Arrive In Duluth to Attend Sessions.

Many delegates to the forty-sixth annual convention of the Baptists of Minnesota, which will open in Pilgrim Congregational church this evening, arrived in Duluthh over the Great Northern this afternoon and others are expected to arrive on the Northern Pacific a little later in the day.

The local Baptists are making plans for entertaining about 250 delegates Members of the assignment committee, of which G. K. Riess is chairman, met the delegates who arrived on the Great Northern, a few miles down the line and had assigned them to the homes at which they will be entertained during their stay at the Head of the Lakes before the train reached Duluth. The Great Northern, being the official route, brings most of the ministers and lay delegates.

The opening session of the convention will be called to order at 7:30 this evening in Pilgrim church. Z. D. Scott will welcome the visitors on behalf of the local Baptists and on behalf of the city, and Carey Emerson of Minneapolis, moderator, will respond on behalf of the delegates from outside the city.

Perhaps the principal event of the opening session this evening will be the preaching of the convention sermon by Rev. L. A. Crandall of Minneapolis.

The first real business session of the convention will not be held until tomorrow morning and from that time until Friday evening, the delegates will be very busy.

Sessions will be held mornings and afternoons and services will be held every evening. Some very strong addresses will be made during the convention as some of the most prominent Baptists in the West will be present. Among these are Rev. Erle B. Hulburt, D. D., dean of the divinity school at the University of Chicago; Rev. S. T. Ford, D. D., pastor of the Englewood church in Chicago; Rev. Frank Peterson, D. D., of Minneapolis; Rev. E. R. Pope, superintendent of the state missions; Rev. George E. Holt of Minneapolis; Rev. Theodore Heyshamm, Ph. D., of Minneapolis; Rev. A. T. Crandall and Rev. W. B. Riley of Minneapolis; Rev. R. M. West and Rev. R. M. Marth of St. Paul and Dr. M. B. Price of Pillsbury academy, Owatonna, Minn.

Several missionaries will also be present at the convention and will tell of their work. Miss Rose Glenn Webster will outline her work in Utah; Miss Gerta Paulson will tell of the work in Japan; Mrs. C. A. Salquist will tell of the progress made by missionaries among the Chinese and Rev. L. W. Cronkhite of Burma will address the convention.

Among the important proposed steps which will come up for consideration at this convention will be the establishment of some Baptist churches on the iron ranges. At present there are no Baptist churches in this part of the state farther north than Duluth, but the Baptists have been planning to extend their work to the range towns and will probably do so before another year.

SAY CONTRACTS ARE NOT LEGAL

Chisholm Taxpayers Seek to Stop Payment on Street Improvement

Argument was made before Judge Cant, Saturday afternoon, in the question of validity of the contracts entered into between the village of Chisholm with the Crowdery Electric company and J. D. McConnell, the court taking the matter under advisement. A number of the residents of Chisholm have sought to restrain William Grant, president of the village, and other officials, from paying for the street work and from continuing the work under the contracts.

C. A. Baldwin appeared for the taxpayers and claimed that the village is not liable for the improvements, on the ground that the contracts were not legally made.

H. B. Fryberger, who represented the village officers, John Williams, for the First National bank of Chisholm and M. H. McMahon, for the contractors, claimed that the contracts are valid and that they were recognized by the village officers in passing estimates for the work already done. They claimed that the points on which the taxpayers' case hinges to be irregularities which do not impair the liability of the village to pay for the improvements.

The bank at Chisholm has $10,000 loaned on orders issued by the village officers to the contractors and was brought into the suit to protect its interests.

DR. LONG'S ELDERSHIP

Former Duluth Pastor Now to Preside Over Minneapolis District.

Friends at Eveleth Conference Seize Vacancy For His Benefit.

Friends of Rev. S. P. Long, formerly pastor of the First Methodist church here, are more than pleased at the appointments of the M. E. conference just ended at Eveleth because of the choice of Dr. Long for the presiding eldership of the Minneapolis district.

Dr. Fielder, who has been for years presiding elder of the Minneapolis district, resigned to take charge of a college in Texas and thus leaving an opening worthy of Dr. Long's capabilities, his friends immediately began a vigorous campaign for him which resulted in his election in the face of strong support for other candidates.

Duluth friends are largely responsible for the election of Dr. Long for whom they hold a pronounced affection. They knew that while Dr. Long is recovering from his break-down, he is not in sufficiently robust health to warrant him taking charge of a church worthy of his calibre; but this presiding eldership, coming as it did at an opportune time, is of a grade worthy the ability of the former Duluth pastor and yet is not too trying for his condition of health.

The doctor's Duluth friends are quite jubilant over the affair. Dr. Forbes, who has just returned from the East, during which he visited with Dr. Long, says the latter's health is good and getting better.

Can't be perfect health without pure blood. Burdock Blood Bitters makes pure blood. Tones and invigorates the whole system.

MANY ORDERS ARE RECEIVED

Loggers Are Opening Up Camps and Asking For Men.

Orders for woodsmen to work in Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin during the season of 1905-1906 are arriving in Duluth in bunches. The employment agents are exerting every possible effort to get men enough for the loggers, but are not meeting with as good success as desired. While new faces among the loungers on the streets are to be seen every day, the lumberjacks are not coming in nearly as fast as positions in the woods are opening up for them.

The first of the winter camps were opened last week, and now all of the companies, practically, are in readiness to begin the season's operations, and are sending in orders for men to work in the woods. The wages offered range from $30 to $35 a month. In an ordinary season this scale would be considered high, but with work as plentiful as it is now, and with railroad and other contractors paying good wages, the inducements held out to the lumberjack are not as attractive as would otherwise be the case.

It is expected that a little later in the season there will be enough men to supply all demands, but for a few weeks yet there is bound to be a shortage in many of the logging camps, and some of the employment agents, it is understood, are advising a higher scale of wages at the beginning of the season. A raise in the scale would naturally make the hiring of men easier.

RAILROADS

IMMIGRANT MOVEMENT

South Shore Road Has Largest Year In History.

Many Foreigners Come Into Northwest Over Its Line.

A heavy immigration movement over the South Shore road to Duluth, and thence west over other lines, and north on the range roads, has taken place this season. The movement is said to have been greater than ever before. It began early in the spring, and reached its height along in June. Every month since then, however, quite a number of the foreigners have come in over the road, and bunches of them are still putting in appearance every day or two.

Most of the immigrants bound for the country tributary to Duluth, and many going clear through to the coast, patronize the South Shore in reaching the Head of the Lakes. The total number this season surpasses any record established in the past. A good many of the foreigners have gone on the Iron ranges to work in the mines, and quite a few have settled on lands in the West. Some have stopped in Duluth and engaged in woods and railroad work.

The miners and farmers most of them have their families with them. The passengers of this class are composed largely of the wives and children of foreigners who have been in this country long enough to establish a home for their loved ones from across the sea.

The movement of foreign-born men East will begin next month. Every fall, usually starting along in November, there is a movement east of former immigrants, who are on their way to the old country to spend Christmas and probably the greater part of the winter. Not a few go with the intention of remaining for an indefinite period. This movement is a good deal more extended than is generally realized. While the average laborer who comes to this country to amass a fortune is very saving of his money, he is not at all stingy with it as a rule, when it comes to expending it for transportation to his old home.

By carefully hoarding his money he has quite a comfortable pile in the course of two or three years, and feels that he can afford to use some of it in getting back to his native land for a visit. The winter months are generally chosen for such trips. A good many of the miners cannot work at their regular employment during the winter and are forced to lie idle during the cold months. They can live very cheaply on the other side, very much more cheaply than they can in America. The amount saved in board bills, in fact, is almost sufficient to cover the cost of transportation over and back.

HARRIMAN GETS ON OPTION.

He Will Control the Astoria and Columbia River Railroad.

Portland, O., Oct. 9.—According to the Oregonian, today, E. H. Harriman has been given an option on the Astoria and Columbia river railroad and it will be decided within the next thirty days whether the road will be purchased by him or not. The price is said to be $40,000 per mile.

The Astoria & Columbia River road extends from Doble, a point forty miles north of this city, to the Pacific ocean, a distance of about 100 miles. It has a traffic lease over the Northern Pacific road by which it secures entry into Portland, running ninety-five years more, the annual rental being $26,000.

WEST DULUTH

DISAPPEARS COMPLETELY

West Duluth Man Missing From Home Seven Days.

When Last Seen He Was Intoxicated In Superior.

Leaving his wife and six children with no means of support, Charles Lintula, whose home has been on Sixty-fifth avenue west, between Gosnold and Nicollect streets has been missing for nearly a week, and it is feared that he has met with some accident.

Lintula has not been seen or heard of since the evening of Oct. 2. About 9 o'clock that evening he was encountered by a Superior policeman. The officer saw that he was intoxicated, and he was partly inclined to arrest him. Lintula seemed harmless, however, and after getting him headed for home, the officer let him go.

Since that time nothing has been heard of the missing man, and it is feared that he met with some accident on his way home. It is possible that he was wandering about the docks in Superior after leaving the officer and was drowned in the slip.

The missing man is described as being about 40 years of age. He was about 5 feet 5 inches in height, and weighed between 150 and 160 pounds. He wore a brown mustache and spoke English fluently, having lived in this country over twenty years. He was employed as a sawmill man at one of the West Duluth mills.

His wife and six children are left in a rather destitute condition. His wife fears that her husband has been drowned in the harbor, or has met his death in some other way. The police were notified of the man's disappearance this morning by a neighbor of the family, and both the Duluth and Superior officers are making a search for him. Up to the present time they have not been able to locate any person who saw the missing man after the officer left him in Superior, last Monday night.

CHANGE OF SHEPHERDS

Rev. F. G. Clark Will Go to Anoka, Leaving Asbury Church.

Asbury M. E. church is to have a new pastor, Rev. F. G. Clark, at present in charge, having been appointed by the Eveleth conference to Anoka, the charge which Presiding Elder Clemans formerly had. This is a promotion for Mr. Clark, but West Duluth will regret losing him.

West Duluthians are assured, however, that the new pastor, Rev. Thomas Grice, of Clear Lake, Minn., will fill the bill, and will become one of the most popular pastors Asbury church has ever had. Mr. Grice is an Irishman, having come from the north of Ireland less than a year ago. At the conference this spring he was appointed to the charge of Clear Lake, and Presiding Elder Clemans says that he has made an extraordinary success there.

Mr. Grice is married, is about 30 years of age, and gives great promise of developing into one of the most eloquent preachers yet heard in this district.

The change of pastors will come very soon.

LAYING THE RAILS.

Sreet Railway Company Getting Grand Avenue Line In Shape.

The street railway company is busy laying the extension of its Grand avenue line from Sixtieth to Seventy-first avenues west. The first crew put on the actual work of rail-laying started work on Saturday, and today has the rails laid across the bridge at Sixty-second avenue west, having thus finished about two blocks and a half.

The work of laying the rails will now be rushed, and with the wires up, that part of the work being practically complete, it will be only a few days before the street cars can run over the line to Seventy-first. There will be only a single track from Sixty-first, with a switch some place on the other side of the bridge.

NOT PUBLISHED IN THIS PAPER

No Notice of Marriage of Miss Lagrange In The Herald.

The News-Tribune yesterday morning contained the following:

"Miss Vivian Lagrange of 5015 Colorado street, Lakeside, has been caused no end of inconvenience during the week by the publication in an afternoon paper of her alleged marriage to Al Pinard, a member of 'The Jolly Widows' company, which played an engagement at the Metropolitan theater the week before last. The report said that the couple were married at Superior, Wis., Sept. 30, and that they are now traveling in the west."

The item then goes on to tell of the young woman's distress at the publication of the item; that she never met the man referred to, and expresses the opinion that she was the victim of somebody's joking.

As The Herald is the only afternoon newspaper published in Duluth, it will be generally conceded that it is referred to. A search of The Herald's columns fails to reveal the publication of such an item, and had the young woman consulted the files of The Herald—always open to the public—before causing the publication of a denial, she would have saved herself much unnecessary publicity.

Catarrhal Headaches Disappear
ENTIRELY AFTER TAKING ONLY TWO BOTTLES OF COOPER'S NEW DISCOVERY
SO SAYS C. H. POWELL, A WELL-KNOWN CITIZEN OF DULUTH, MINN.

His letter, which appears below, cannot fail to prove our claims that these miracle-working preparations are TRULY NEW DISCOVERIES in Medicines.

THE COOPER MEDICINE CO., Dayton, Ohio.

Gentlemen:—For six long years I suffered greatly with Catarrh of the Stomach and Bowels. I lost flesh and my appetite seemed to have gone altogether. I had a violent headache constantly. Someone told me of the wonderful cures the Cooper Remedies were effecting and after some thought I decided to try them.

You will perhaps be interested to know that I have taken only two bottles of "New Discovery" and my headaches have entirely left me. My appetite returned with the first few doses and my Catarrh is rapidly disappearing. I feel better than I have for six years.

I can only thank you for the benefit I have received. (Signed.)
C. H. POWELL,
13 Homson Addition, Duluth, Minn.

Who would not give two dollars to be cured of a constant Violent Headache? Surely no one who has ever had one would begrudge the price, but that is not the most important service these Famous Medicines performed in this case. They REMOVED THE CAUSE BY CURING HIS CATARRH and brought this suffering man back to a LIFE WORTH LIVING. Begin taking them today, no matter how bad your case may be. THEY WILL DO THE SAME FOR YOU.

Cooper's New Discovery costs $1.00 per bottle, three for $2.50, six for $5.00. Cooper's Quick Relief, the assistant remedy, costs 50 cents per bottle. Beware of canvassers and street fakers, claiming to sell Cooper Remedies. Buy only from our special agent, whose name appears below, or from legitimate dealers in medicines. Where we have no special agent you can secure these medicines, charges prepaid, by sending the price of the remedies you wish, direct to the Cooper Medicine Co., Dayton, Ohio.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Five-Year-Old Child Is Burned to Death Near Sheldon.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Sheldon — Albertina, the 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Fraedrich, living north of here, was burned to death this afternoon. While playing with matches her dress caught fire, and she was fatally burned before assistance could reach her. She lived but two hours and died in terrible agony. The funeral will be held Sunday.

Jamestown—In the spring of 1904 A. J. Ridgeway of LaMoure county seeded eighteen acres of timothy from which he has just threshed 150 bushels of clean seed. This proves that timothy can be made one of North Dakotas crops.

Plans have been submitted to the faculty for the new building for St. John's academy. The plans show a building of brick, with a handsome frontage and four stories high. It is expected the foundation will be laid this fall. The building will have a reception room on the left and a chapel on the main floor. The second floor will be devoted entirely to music and musical instruments.

Mayville—The regular fall term of the normal school began with an increase of over 43 per cent in attendance as compared with last year. A senior class of over fifty is enrolled, consisting of those completing the regular four years' course and graduates of high schools, colleges and normal schools. High school graduates are enrolled from Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois and from the principal cities of North Dakota.

Prof. C. K. Robinson, A. B., the new director of athletics, arrived on Thursday and practice has begun in his department. He was quarterback on the Miami football team and is an all-round athlete.

Work on the new building is being pushed in order to relieve the crowded condition, as the present building is hardly half large enough to accomodate the students enrolled. It is expected that the new library will be ready for use in a few weeks.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—Carl Moser of Walworth county has been brought to the Brown county jail for safekeeping pending the next term of circuit court for Walworth county. Moser and his wife were arrested last June for arson, the charge being that they set fire to their house, which was destroyed. Mrs. Moser has been discharged. The Mosers are religious fanatics and say they set fire to their house as a burnt offering. Moser says the world will come to an end in 1914. For a while he considered he was the reincarnation of one of the twelve apostles, but lately he has received a revelation from on high that he is Christ himself. He is a Seven Day Adventist.

About one-third of the seventy-five persons notified appeared before the county commissioners of Brown county to answer to the charge that they had failed to list their mortgage holdings with the assessors. Of those who failed to appear the commissioners took it for granted that their holdings as charged up to them by the commissioners are correct, and their assessments will be raised accordingly. The total assessed valuation of the county will be raised a little over $3,000 by the assessment of mortgages not returned to the assessor last spring.

Yankton—A curious relic was picked up on lower Broadway this week, and investigation revealed an interesting bit of light on Yankton's early history. The relic was an old five-shooting Colt of ancient make. A heavy rain had uncovered it, and some boys found it and sold it to a second-hand dealer.

Now it has been identified by Maj. J. R. Hanson as a revolver he was carrying in the fall of 1862, and which he lost in hasty flight from two Sioux Indians.

Lead—Charles Anderson, an employe of the Homestake mine, was hurt in a saloon in this city and died shortly afterwards from the effect of the wound. He received a three-inch cut on the top of his head and was unconscious most of the time until his death. There is some question as to whether the cut was received in a fall, or whether he was struck by some one. The coroner will hold an inquest to determine the manner of death.

Deadwood—The county commissioners have rejected the plans for the new courthouse, as offered by Bell & Detwyler of Minneapolis, because they were not in conformity with the plans as originally presented. They will be sent back for revision.

Watertown—The Oregon Feeder company has secured a site on West Dakota avenue and will shortly begin the erection of a building to house a manufactory of self-feeders in this city. The building will be 40 by 80, of cement blocks. The factory will employ forty-five men.

Wessington Springs—The adjourned term of the circuit court was held last week. Only three cases have been tried by jury. The Steere & Ballah vs. J. C. Gingery; the plaintiff obtained a judgment for $5,088, which he claimed was due him as commission in a land deal.

FINES BLIND PIGGERS.

Judge Cant Assesses Indicted Persons $100 Each on Guilty Pleas.

Fines aggregating $200 against blind piggers were imposed by Judge Cant this morning on pleas of guilty to indictment. Among the last two convictions on pleadings was Jack Murphy of Tower. There have been instances within the last year where a second fine for selling liquor without a license has been imposed, the law recognizing it as a misdemeanor, but provision is made that where a third conviction is had on the same offense it shall be termed a felony and shall be treated as such in the matter of punishment. The county authorities stand ready, should there be any cases of a third offense by the same persons, to see that the prosecution is based on a felony charge and that the punishment, if the court wills, shall be meted out on the same basis.

CORNERSTONE IS LAID.

Appropriate Ceremonies Held at St. John's English Lutheran Church.

The cornerstone of the new St. John's English Evangelical Lutheran church, Lake avenue and Third street, was laid with appropriate ceremonies yesterday afternoon.

The stone was put in place by Rev. J. L. Murphy, pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. W. D. Michael of Unity, Pa., formerly pastor of the church; Rev. M. Ahl of the German Lutheran church, and Rev. Willis Beck of Superior. The organ was brought into the open air and the assembled Lutherans sang "Eine Fester Berg."

A short sketch of the congregation, some coins, a Bible and copies of the daily papers were placed inside the stone during the ceremonies. A large crowd attended the exercises.

Light Demand For Licenses.

Only 276 hunting licenses have been issued thus far this season by the county auditor. One of these was taken out today by a resident of this county who expects to hunt large game when the season opens. It is believed that the scarcity of partridges this season is responsible for the light demand for licenses to hunt game birds, and that when the open season for deer and moose approaches it will show a substantial increase.

NORTHWEST IS BOOMING

Leroy Coons Says Reports Of Bumper Crops Are True.

Canadian Northern Road Within Fifty Miles of Edmonton.

"The stories of the boom in the Canadian Northwest are by no means exaggerated," said Leroy Coons, formerly the secretary of the health department, who has just returned from a two-months' trip to Alberta, where he has a large farm, which is being worked by his two sons.

"There were 600 new dwellings built in the town of Edmonton last year. The city has a population of about 10,000, according to the last census, taken this spring, while the population of Calgary amounted to about 13,000. Calgary has got a good start on Edmonton as a business center of the Alberta country, but the latter city expects great things when the new Canadian Northern road reaches it.

"The new road is now within fifty miles of Edmonton, and it will be a very short time before trains are running direct from Winnipeg to Edmonton over the new road.

"The right-of-way of the new road has been settled fifty miles in advance of the construction gang, right along, and the whole country for five or ten miles on each side of the new line is pretty well settled up. The land along that line is just as good as in the more southern part of the country, but the weather is a little colder, and the climate not quite so favorable for farming.

"Everybody up there seems to have the land fever, and they are all trying to get their hands on as much land as they can possibly secure. The boom may be followed by a slump in values, and that is the only thing the country has to fear. The danger is that they will try to rush ahead too fast, and that land values will be pushed up too high, which condition of affairs might be followed by a sudden drop. But the present era of prosperity there seems to be on a firm foundation. Bumper crops are a certainty all through that country, and the farmers are looking forward to at least one year of plenty."

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Italian Colony at the Soo Starts on a Man Hunt.

Sault Ste. Marie—The Italian colony here has started a man hunt for Joseph Leo, who is alleged to be the slayer of Frank Carlo, Sunday night in a saloon near here.

Matt Pennanen who, it is alleged, shot and killed Thomas Wilde at spur 495, near the Soo, on the night of Aug. 12, has been bound over to the next term of the Chippewa circuit court on a charge of manslaughter. Pennanen claims that he thought he saw an animal on the railroad track when he fired his rifle. After the man was killed he fled from the country and was afterward captured by Sheriff Lipsett at Port Arthur. He is a hunter and has a reputation in the locality in which he lives of being a crack shot. When he disappeared from home the only articles he carried were a sack of salt and his rifle. According to his own story he took a freight train and went to Duluth, later going to Port Arthur. When captured his appearance was much altered.

Marquette—A fire started by partridge hunters threatened the destruction of $100,000 worth of sawmill and timber property of the Northern Lumber company, north of here, and it was only after hundreds of men had fought the flames for two days that the blaze was brought under control. The loss is small.

Menominee—When Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Lindsley, who spent the summer at Alfred, returned to their home at Menominee, they found that their home had been broken into and thoroughly ransacked. They had taken the precaution of putting their silverware and other valuables in a safe place before leaving, so the burglers got very little booty for their trouble, the only article missed thus far being a pair of fine opera glasses.

Escanaba—Through the efforts of the Delta Hardware company and other Escanaba business men it is possible that the construction of a telephone line from Escanaba to Manistique will be undertaken this fall by the Michigan State Telephone company. The need of such a line has long been felt by the business men of both cities. A letter from President Jackson of the Telephone company shows that the desires of the business men are being given careful attention.

St. Ignace—Messrs. Hollister and Gorman of the auditor general's office at Lansing were in St. Ignace the other day, calling on County Treasurer Edward McNamara. Their errand was to view the premises and appraise the value of all descriptions of real property in St. Ignace which have been delinquent for taxes for five years, or longer. These parcels of land will be deeded to the state by the auditor general, and will become subject to private or public sale by the commissioner of the state land office, title thereto being warranted. In this way very many city lots will change owners, or, rather, the state will assert full ownership thereto, and sell them, the lots becoming again subject to taxation.

FIRE SUITS REACH JURY

Evidence Completed In Two Cases Where Damages Are Asked.

Injunctional Case Against Grocers' Association Will Start Tuesday.

The fire damage suits brought by John Sundquist against the Duluth & Northeastern Railway company and by Jans Ignasiak against the Jean Du Luth company, were given to the jury this afternoon.

Mr. Sundquist claimed that a fire set by section men along the railroad destroyed a quantity of his timber and he asked $970 damages, and Mr. Ignasiak claimed that a fire originating from a stump pile fire on the Jean Du Luth stock farm destroyed his timber, farm buildings and personal effects. He sued for a judgment of $4,000.

The defense by the Jean Du Luth company, and as indicated by the line of testimony of its witnesses, was that all due diligence was exercised when the fires were started, but that afterward the wind suddenly veered and came on with almost hurricane force taking the fire beyond control. The company protested that the fire which destroyed the Ignasiak timber and farm buildings was caused by a juncture of the stock farm fire with another fire that originated the same day near the Webber mill.

Only three or four more cases remain for jury trial, civil actions before the court having already begun in Judge Dibell's room. This morning Judge Dibell rendered findings for L. M. Linnell against Casper Salmmen, a civil action from the range. The court also ordered judgment for Thomas Finnegan, an intervenor in the action brought by Joseph Schober against the National Home Investment company, to recover on a contract.

Tomorrow morning it is expected that the injunctional suit of M. M. Gasser & Co. against the Retail Grocers' association and others, will be started for trial. In view of the claims made of conspiracy to hold up the public by high prices, to kill competition and keep independent dealers out of the local field, the Gasser case is likely to be one of the most important suits to be tried this term of court.

Journeymen Tailors Reply.

To the Editor of The Herald:

The Journeymen Tailors' Union of Duluth wishes to reply to an article which appeared in your paper a few days ago from Mellin & Co., custom tailors, located at 310 West First street.

The general idea which they try to convey throughout the article is that the members of the Journeymen Tailors' union are a lot of dissipated and incompetent workmen, while as a matter of fact they are the same class of workmen employed by other responsible custom tailors in town. Those men who have been in business here for several years know that these workmen are, generally speaking, competent and respectable men, or else they would not have tolerated them for so long a time. The mere fact of Mellin & Co. having probably secured one or two men who personally chose the method of living described by this firm, should not be taken as a fair sample of what any man in any union is. The same notable exceptions can be found among business men, who, strange to relate, conduct a successful business, even though their moral character is anything but desirable. This is reasonable and will appeal to any fair-minded man.

It is true that the Journeymen Tailors' union does not desire women as members of their union, although they are admitted if competent to do the work, but the experience of the past has shown that they are not usually up to the standard required. Hence this rule.

The real reason that Mellin & Co. are on the unfair list of the Journeymen Tailors' union and the Federated Trades' Assembly of Duluth is that Mellin & Co. desired to employ competent workmen of the union and the incompetent help they chose as well. After several conferences with committees from the Tailors' union and the Federated Trades' assembly, Mellin & Co. declined all suggestions and offers to "unionize" their shop, stating emphatically that they would run their place of business without trade agreements of any kind, or consultation of their employes. This is, of course, exercising personal liberty according to the "Trade Unionist" view, but a return to the conditions of "sweatshop."

The following extract from this article, "We employ only first-class tailors; each and every one are artists in their respective lines," is a statement that would only be made by Mellin & Co. Those employing this class of help show it in their work, without trying to circulate such a report.

TWO DOGS SAVE THEIR MISTRESS

From Strangulation By Burglars Who Entered French Store.

Paris, Oct. 9.—Two dogs saved their mistress, Madame Leduc, a young widow, from strangulation by burglars one night last week. The widow keeps a large forage and corn store in the Chapelle district. She was in her counting house, or office, busily engaged over her books and money, when she heard a noise behind her.

Looking around she saw two horrible men of the lowest class advancing towards her, one holding a leather strap in his hand, while the other had a soiled napkin. The fellows had entered the office, which is on the ground floor, by a window.

Madame Leduc understood the situation in a moment. She was to be strapped and gagged, after which her strong box was to be rifled of its contents. She cried aloud for help to her two assistants, but the men were in the yard, too far away to hear.

Before she could shout again, the two burglars were down on her and trying to strangle her, when in bounded her two Brie mastiffs, Bull and Theo. The dogs soon gave an account of themselves, for the burglars, bitten and torn, roared with pain and rushed out of the office, leaving Madame Leduc in a swoon. The dogs left the burglars and began to lick the hands of their mistress.

In the meantime Madame Leduc's two assistants, pitchforks in hand, were battling in the yard with four burglars, for the two who entered the counting house had confederates watching outside.

The widow's assistants, being reinforced by neighbors, all of the burglars decamped, but soon fell into the hands of the police, who know them well. The fellows are old offenders, and are known among their sort as Tintin, Charlot, Laluce and Patate. These are their picturesque professional names, and the men are between 25 and 30 years old.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—Arguments against the indictments of the packers, charged with conspiracy to monopolize the meat trade of the country, were begun today before Federal Judge J. Otis Humphrey. Attorney John S. Miller, counsel for the defendants, opened the arguments using the demurrer filed last Friday as a basis.

SANITARY CONVENTION OPENS AT WASHINGTON.

Washington, Oct. 9.—Delegates from twelve South American republics, from the army and navy and from the American public health and marine hospital service, attended the opening session of the second general international sanitary convention here today. Surgeon General Walter Wyman, chairman of the international health bureau, presided.

Surgeon Wyman asked consideration of the advantages of international agreements in the interest of the health of their people. With the growing sentiment in favor of a peace among the nations, he said, there should be developed a similar sentiment that would work for international health.

BEST STORE SERVICE—BEST MERCHANDISE VALUES.

Some dealers think that flattery and Bunco advertising is appreciated by the people. It may please a few, but the wise, intelligent women, who are in the majority, know better. The following statistics prove it—On last Saturday between 4:15 and 4:45 we sent a lady to count the number of people (large and small) in the five leading stores. The total aggregate in all was only 97, while at 4:30 we counted the total number of people in the Glass Block. On all floors we had 614. We could give you the individual number of people at each of these stores but we want to be charitable to our Brother Merchants.

TURN THE RASCALS OUT.

Governor Johnson has done well to take prompt action in accepting, contingent upon his eligibility, a membership in the committee which proposes to go after the New York and Mutual Life Insurance companies in the interests of the policyholders and see if these companies cannot be rescued from the hands into which their fortunes have unfortunately fallen and turned over to control that will use the power for the benefit of the companies and their policyholders instead of for private peculations.

The need of some such action is becoming more apparent every day. The revelations being made in the hearings before the committee of the New York legislature that was appointed to look into the life insurance business are astounding. In spite of the complacency of the chief offenders, to the general public what has been going on looks like nothing else but an orgie of crime. The statutes of New York describing larceny may not cover what has been done, but if they do not it is the fault of the statutes. While these big insurance companies have been collecting high premiums from the policyholders, and giving back driblets in the form of dividends, the ones in control have been helping themselves to prodigious sums, through outrageons salaries, inordinate commissions and crooked investments. There can be nothing honest about an arrangement whereby men in charge of trust funds speculate with those funds, even if they do give the owners, without whose knowledge the speculations were made, a small share of the profits, counting the company—the ostensible owner—as one member of a syndicate.

By the way, it is impossible to refrain from wondering whether all these deals have been profitable or not; and whether, if some of them resulted in losses, the other members of the "syndicate" contributed their pro rata shares of the loss. It would not be surprising to learn that the unsuspecting owners of the trust funds were made to stand the full loss. It would be quite consistent with the other methods that have been shown up.

The demand from various sources that the guilty officers resign is not intemperate and ill-considered; it is but just. The only way in which these companies can regain public confidence is by shedding these parasites and putting in their places honest, capable men whose ability to distinguish between meum and teum is greater.

The Herald takes pleasure in commending Governor Johnson for his prompt acceptance of the trust that has been offered him, and it hopes, in the interests of the public and the policyholders, that the committee it is proposed to form will be able to accomplish in short order the herculean cleaning of the insurance Augean stables. They need it, badly.

"GOTHAMITES."

Terms of sarcasm, contumely and reproach in one generation become accepted and even proudly-worn terms in another. For instance, the term "Gotham" for New York city. Today probably few people realize that when it was first applied it was intended as a means of poking fun at the residents of Manhattan, and that at that time the objects of it were very indignant about it.

The Boston Transcript tells the history of the term and of its growth from a resented joke to an accepted pleasantry. Washington Irving first applied the title in 1807. The people of New York did not recognize its meaning at first, but somebody looked it up. It was found that Gotham was an English village whose inhabitants, renowned for their stupidity, were the butt of English humor as far back as the Middle Ages. The famous nursery rhyme of later days, recording the ridiculous adventures of the three wise men of Gotham who went to sea in a bowl, illustrated this. In the early part of the eighteenth century, London laughed over the ludicrous incidents of a popular farce called "A Gotham Election."

So the residents of the Gotham of 1807 resented the term bitterly, and even permitted their resentment to extend to its author, the kindly humorist, the genial sun of early American letters. Today it is different. Residents of the island of Manhattan call themselves Gothamites with never a thought of the stupid people of the real Gotham, and the newest hotel in New York is called the Gotham.

Somewhat similar is the term "Knickerbocker," which Irving saw on a sign and appropriated it to his own use because it seemed funny. The old Dutch families of New York felt themselves satirized, and resolved to ostracise Irving. Now, New Yorkers are proud of being called Knickerbockers, and seem to think that the conferring of the title conveys some tint of aristocracy.

HYPHENATED AMERICANS.

Emperor William of Germany recently administered a rebuke to a well-meaning American citizen who deserved the rebuke, in spite of his good intent.

An American politician sought audience with him, and thinking that it would please the emperor and more easily gain him the desired audience, he described himself in his petition as a "German-American." The kaiser instructed that the petition be returned with the following message:

> His imperial majesty the emperor recognizes and appreciates highly a German or an American, but such a thing as a "German-American," according to the imperial view, does not exist. If, therefore, you will make your application either as an American or as a German it will doubtless be granted.

To say that this stinging rebuke was well merited does not mean in any sense to say that the American citizen of foreign birth who holds his fatherland in high regard, and whose love for his native soil is never permitted to interfere with his love for and loyalty to the land of his adoption, is inconsistent or unpatriotic. It is merely a question of degree with every American citizen. Whether he was born in the old country, or his parents, grandparents or ancestors farther back, some place along the line of descent comes the immigrant. And in this section where there are so many American citizens of foreign birth, it is common knowledge that loyalty and patriotism are not matters of how old the citizenship may be. Many citizens of foreign birth are more truly patriotic than others whose ancestors came over with the earliest pioneers.

But the hyphenated American is purely a product of politics. In every campaign efforts to line up the votes along lines of nationality are made, and it is due to this policy entirely that the use of the hybrid nomenclature of combining two nationalities with a hyphen has grown up.

Every citizen of this country is an American, whether he was the immigrant or a forefather half a dozen generations removed. No one begrudges the naturalized citizen his love for the land of his birth, and no one would deprive him of the opportunity to affiliate socially with those of his own race. There is no more objection, for instance, to the formation of a Swedish club or a Norwegian club in Duluth than there is to the formation of a club composed of people born in Ohio, or one composed of people born in New York.

But it is just as sensible to talk about Ohio-Americans, or Pennsylvania-Americans as Swedish-Americans or Polish-Americans. It is a privilege and a glory to be called an American, without diluting the title by adding a hyphen and the name of the race from which any particular American sprang.

BLIND PARTISANSHIP

> It must be apparent to intelligent observers that the noise about tariff revision is in substance and purpose a piece of Democratic free trade strategy.
> —St. Louis Globe-Democrat (Rep.).

It must be apparent to intelligent observers who do not wear opaque glasses that the noise about tariff revision is nothing of the kind.

The attitude of a paper that can make such a statement as that is nothing short of preposterously absurd, and that describes the attitude of the Globe-Democrat very closely. It is a survival of the day of the partisan organ, the newspaper that preaches party doctrine pure and undefiled, that will not admit that there is any possibility of a change between conventions, and that if the platform of one convention by a typographical error declared for free murder would go on enthusiastically preaching free murder until the next convention. Then, if the party leaders permitted the convention to declare for a doctrine quite the opposite, the partisan organ would as enthusiastically shout for the next four years along the lines laid down by the party leaders.

It is a mighty poor compliment to the real leaders of the Republican party, to such men as President Roosevelt, Secretary Taft, Secretary Root, Governor Cummins of Iowa, and dozens of others one might name, to say that they are puppets dancing when members of the other party pull the string; to say that the Democratic politicians are shrewd enough to pull the wool over the eyes of such men and make them believe they are talking an adjustment of the tariff to help instead of rob the people when in reality they are preaching free trade. Yet this is what the Globe-Democrat would have its readers believe.

It is such partisans as the Globe-Democrat that stand in the way of progress in this country, and that are working with misguided energy to perpetuate conditions under which the people are squirming most uncomfortably. It is quite as deep an argument to call the tariff revisionist a free trader and a Democratic tool as it was in the campaigns of 1896 and 1900 to call those who disagreed with the Republican party anarchists. It is, shorn of its politeness, simply the childish method of replying to argument by calling names.

The move for tariff revision is not political. For once, it appears that the people are flocking to a standard regardless of whether it bears a party emblem or not. Millions of people firmly believe that trust oppression and a considerable measure of the present unfair distribution of wealth are due simply to an unfaitly managed tariff. A protective tariff should protect the people, not surround them with a barrier that shuts out assistance and leaves them without defense from the attacks of the trusts. Tariff schedules should be implements made to work for the people's good, not gods to be set up and worshipped and shielded from profane touch.

The Globe-Democrat would be the better for it if it could mingle a little common sense and patriotism with its partisanship.

THE FIELD SURVEY

Some people are kept so busy crossing bridges before they come to them and crying over spilt milk that they never have time to do anything useful.

* * *

"Stop tariff agitation or it will hurt business," says the standpatter. The life insurance investigations are hurting the life insurance business. Should they be stopped? The grand juries are hurting the highway robbery business. Should the grand juries cease their pernicious activity?

* * *

The Washington Post notes an improvement in the editorial page of a neighbor newspaper, and incidentally remarks that the neighbor is scissoring the Post again. The editor of the neighbor newspaper shows good taste, anyway.

* * *

"Don't disturb the tariff or the government's revenues will be cut down," says the standpatter. Tariff for revenue? That is new doctrine from this source, but if that is what the standpatters really want, they might reduce the tariff so that it will not be unsurmountable, and then its increased use will swell the government's revenue.

* * *

When Secretary Taft gets into the Ohio campaign he will probably take the other side of the questions on which Senator Foraker has opposed the president's policy. So long as they insist in having the state campaigns run on federal issues, they might as well fight them out.

* * *

The late novelist George MacDonald had a large family, and when asked how many children he had he would always reply that the number was just on the wrong side of a dozen. How many had he?

* * *

The journals devoted to insurance are talking about "a licentious press" and "an intemperate clergy," because the newspapers and the preachers are saying what they think about life insurance magnates. That doesn't make the conduct of the magnates look any better to us.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Denver is a pretty decent sort of a city to live in, but I wouldn't want to go through with another experience like I had there a few weeks ago, while visiting with a brother," said N. E. Haste of St. Paul at the St. Louis. "It was my first visit to the town, and, of course, I wanted to see all there was to see. To better accomplish this purpose we hired a team or two on three different occasions and rode about the town and country.

"The last drive nearly resulted disastrously. It was on a Sunday afternoon, and when we asked the livery stable man for a team he informed us that they were all out. We appeared greatly disappointed, as we were, and were about to turn away when he asked us if we were experienced in handling horses. I informed him that I was an expert. As a matter of fact, I know almost nothing about a horse, and never had much to do with one. My brother knew even less, it possible. The fellow said he had one team in the stable that he very seldom let any one else drive. He said he used them himself, and made no pretense of hiring them out as a general rule, but, on this occasion, agreed to let us have them, so long as we were experienced horsemen. He remarked that they were rather skittish, and needed careful driving.

"My brother John advised giving up the drive. He was afraid I would make a poor job of handling the pair. I wouldn't listen to him, however, and a little while after we were driving through town behind a fine team of high steppers. They were good travelers, and it wasn't a great while before we were six miles out in the country, to the place where we were going.

"Everything went fine on the out trip, but while we were returning, and just after we had started, one of the animals became frightened at something or other and started off on the run. The other joined in, naturally, and a full-fledged runaway resulted. The road was smooth, but rather crooked. At every turn I expected something to happen. John was in favor of jumping out, but I refused to listen to any such proposition. I said we would stick to the ship, whatever happened. Despite my inexperience, it was rather a clever piece of driving I did. We passed several teams, narrowly missing a collision at different times. The farther we went the faster the horses seemed to go. For fully three miles they pounded along at top speed. Then I became possessed with a happy thought. On the way out I had noticed a good-sized pond (Swan, a sort of z reservoir, I guess it was), a short distance to one side of the road. Into this I steered the frightened steeds. It was a pretty deep hole, we soon found, the water coming almost to the backs of the animals. They pranced around pretty lively for a time, soaking us from head to foot, but I got them calmed down all right, and out of the hole without any particular harm done. After that everything went along fine until we reached the city."

"The women of California will never forgive Mr. Whiteside for buying the Calaveras grove," said F. H. Dakin of San Francisco at the Spalding. "In their estimation it was an unforgivable thing for a man to wander away out to the coast and buy the grove of which everybody in California was so proud.

"The state of California ought to own that grove, I believe, but it is the fault of nobody except the people of California that it doesn't. The state should have purchased it a generation or more ago, instead of waiting for some wise investor from the outside to come 2,500 miles and buy it from under their noses."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: The only one a girl can fool easier than a young man is an old one.

It is surprising how little a man has to spend on his clothes if he is rich.

Maybe it is so much easier to write telegrams than letters because they cost more.

It takes a girl to be so deceitful that she can turn a yawn over your story into a smile at it.

A good thing about having the children go to Sunday school is that it makes that part of the day so peaceful at home.

The Barefoot Trail.

Out of the dear front gate it ran,
Into the sun and dew and tan;
Traversed the dusty, peaceful street
Arched by maples (in mem'ry sweet);
Crossed the pasture, with clover lush;
Entered the copse, where trilled the thrush;
Rambled, loitered and played—and then
Turned to mother and home again.

Street and pasture and hill and vale—
Such was the course of the Barefoot Trail;
Pausing and veering for this and that—
Now for a game of one-old-cat,
Now for a rollicking butterfly,
Now for a nest hung just too high,
Now for a brookside haunt—and then
Back to mother and home again.

Never a sun for this trail too hot,
Never a nook that knew it not.
Twisting and turning from scene to scene,
It checkered the realm of the gold and green,
Passenger—courier boyhood, slim;
Passport—whistle and tattered brim;
Province—to beckon afar, and then
To lead to mother and home again.

Many a secret and many a tale,
Ours who followed the Barefoot Trail.
Wonders witnessed and marvels heard:
Kinship of squirrel and hare and bird.
The shortest route to the swimming hole,
The finny spoil of the swaying pole,
Care-free triumphs and joys—and then
(Best!) the "mother and home again."
—EDWARD L. SABIN in Saturday Evening Post.

Welcomed by the Captain.

Leesville, Mo., Light: Capt. Henry Saylor went down to the depot last night to meet his new cork leg, which arrived on the Kansas City train.

THE WEATHER

The remarkable stretch of fine weather which has prevailed for several weeks was broken into this morning by a northeast storm which brought a little rain with it. Yesterday the northeast wind blew freshly all day, but the sky remained clear, the sun shone with vigor, and it never became cold, not even as cold as a northeast wind will often make it in midsummer. When the rain began to patter against the window panes early this morning, those who remembered that the wind was northeast when they went to bed last night braced themselves for a real northeaster, but they were pleasantly disappointed to find the wind northwesterly.

The showery condition promises to be but temporary, according to the weather man. He expected the showers to keep on possibly tonight, but tomorrow he expects to be fair and cool. The winds will be fresh to brisk westerly.

Storms of moderate strength are central over Gulf states and to the northward of the Dakotas and Minnesota, causing precipitation in the gulf region, Nebraska, the Eastern Dakotas, Minnesota, Saskatchewan, Montana, Oregon and Washington; heavy at New Orleans. A high pressure area is central over North Pacific districts. Snow is falling at Battleford, and temperatures of 18 deg. occurred this morning in Nevada. The winds in the lake region are mostly southerly.

Leaders Gone Astray.

Minneapolis Tribune: The politicians begin to talk about the Republican candidate for governor next year. It is high time for Republican voters to begin to think on this subject. The choice of Republican candidates has been left too much to the politicians. The result is written in the recent political history of Minnesota. That is full of storm signals for the Republicans of the state.

Of four men nominated by the Republicans for governor in the last ten years, two have been defeated. During this period the state has been unfalteringly Republican in national elections. The delegation in congress and the legislature have been overwhelmingly Republican. There have been three presidential elections in the period. In 1896 McKinley's plurality in Minnesota was 53,000; that of the Republican candidate for governor was 3,000. In 1900 McKinley's plurality was 77,000; that of the Republican candidate for governor was 2,000. In 1904 Roosevelt's plurality was 160,000; that of the Democratic candidate for governor was 6,000. The situation is getting no better very fast.

There can be only one reason for this. The men who make Republican nominations for governor have gotten out of touch with the people. The people refuse to endorse their nominations. This is probably true of the whole state ticket, but public discontent concentrates upon the head of the governor. There is certain remedy in the hands of the people power to make nominations by making the state conventions representative.

The politicians in the legislature have refused to do this. They would not make state conventions representative of the people by extending the primary law to the choice of delegates. The politicians insist on keeping the nominating machinery in their own hands. They have insisted on nominating candidates for whom the people will not vote.

The law cannot be changed until the next legislature meets. It may be changed then, if the Republicans get another licking next year. They will get it if they repeat past blunders. Governor Johnson has given the state a good administration. He cannot be beaten with the kind of ticket and platform Republican conventions have been making.

Under the present system the primaries and conventions are in the hands of the politicians. They can pack primaries and steal conventions and be beaten. They can make them a full and free expression of the popular will and win. That is the plain warning of recent history.

SHEAR NONSENSE.

Philadelphia Ledger: Citiman—How old is Uncle St. Peters?

Josh Meddehs—Waal, he's old enough to know better. He was took in by a bunco man last week.

Citiman—Ah, then he has reached what you may properly call a "green old age."

Detroit Free Press: "I've bought an absolutely noiseless auto," said Mr. Newrich.

"But, Hiram!" exclaimed his wife, "if it doesn't make any noise how are we ever going to attract attention?"

Cleveland Leader: "Is there much jealousy and back-biting among the members of your chorus?"

"I should say so. Never saw such a set of knockers in my life. Why, they can't sing a note without slurring it!"

Philadelphia Press: "You creatures," complained the king of beasts, who had been boasting a little, "don't seem to be greatly impressed when I tell of my exploits."

"Oh, yes, your majesty," protested the laughing hyena, with a side-long leer, "we're duly impressed, but then, you see, we know you're a lion."

Washington Star: "When I started life," said the iniquitable insurance director, "I didn't have a dollar I could call my own."

"And now?"

"I have managed to call a lot of money my own, although there is a great deal of dispute about it."

Chicago Tribune: Sharpson—You seem disappointed with that new novel.

Platz—Disappointed! I'm disgusted. It's a fraud. It isn't even objectionable!"

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Excuse me, miss, but will you accept my arm and share the shelter of my umbrella?"

The fair girl looked at him haughtily.

"I will accept the shelter of your umbrella, sir, but I have all the arms I can make any use of."

And, seizing the costly rain shield she glided rapidly away.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of this date in 1885.

Yesterday morning there arrived at the railroad station at Tower the following gentlemen: Wo-gi-ma-web, Gema-wa-ba-nind, Awan-i-gwon, Kitchi-gi-ji-gwab, Besha-tu-na-kweb, Auji-gi-jig, Na-me-bin, Mi-sha-kwa-nibi-nes, Me-dwe-gwon and Kwe-ka-kanig. They were dressed in most varied and peculiar attire. We-gi-ma-web, the head of the younger chiefs, gloried in a bright red coat, with a long tail. The faces of the Indians were all painted in various colors. They came by train to Two Harbors, and thence by the steamer Dove to Duluth, and will be a leading feature at the county fair this evening.

The United States grand jury, at St. Paul yesterday, found an indictment against O. W. Saunders of Duluth for cutting and carrying away timber on government land. It is hardly possible that he will be convicted.

The resolution to disband the fire brigade, which some members of that company passed last Wednesday, causes no alarm. The conviction is strong that there will be plenty of volunteers to protect Duluth from fire after Nov. 1 as well as before. Mayor Moore regards the fire brigade as a good, efficient body, and would like to see some arrangement by which men who actually attend fires shall receive some compensation, but he feels that the city cannot at present afford a paid department, as the treasury is not in condition to stand the expense.

The United Empire, which arrived yesterday afternoon, had two adventures out of which she came all right. About midnight, while in the middle of Lake Superior, she fouled with the large schooner H. M. Scove, but both vessels received only trifling injuries. Among the passengers from Port Arthur were three men condemned to the penitentiary at Kingston, Ont. They formerly lived at the Sault, and had many pals there. Word had evidently been telegraphed ahead, and when the United Empire reached the Sault, an attempt was made to secure the liberation of the prisoners. Sheriff Newel, with Deputy Sheriff Stewart and several constables, boarded the boat and demanded that the prisoners be turned over to them. Capt. Robertson ordered the sheriff and the whole crowd to get off the boat at once. He pulled a gun to emphasize his order, and they cowed down instantly and made tracks for the gangway. The United Empire then moved out into the stream and proceeded to Sarnia.

Kennedy's saloon with two vacant buildings at Rice's Point were burned early this morning.

W. L. Jackson & Co. have sold their dry goods business to Mr. Leland of Minneapolis.

Monroe Nichols has returned after conducting the harvesting operations at his farm and giving some time to field sports.

Mr. and Mrs. Colson and child returned yesterday afternoon from Canada by the United Empire.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Aitkin Age: The state dairy and food department is doing some good work in clearing the market from adulterated food. If the stories are true, a fertile field for investigation is among the commission and cold storage houses that sell rotten eggs—yes, rotten eggs—to the bakeries and also among the big bakeries that buy them to put into food sold to an unsuspecting public that can't see through the icing on the tempting delicacies.

Brainerd Dispatch: Up at Aitkin the four doctors and the dentist have got together and rented the entire second floor of a new block being erected. They will maintain one waiting room with an attendant who will do duty for each one of the five. Aitkin is long on brotherly love.

Princeton Union: Upon departure from a visit to your home a stork usually leaves its long bill behind.

Elk River Star-News: Governor Johnson is right in condemning the rowdyism at the state university. The doings of the students over there on some occasions are a disgrace to the institution.

Faribault Journal: Tokio reports that the mikado has received forty protests over the peace treaty. Is that all? The president receives more than that over the appointment of a postmaster of an ordinary Minnesota town. Japan has no revolution.

Warren Register: The membership of the legislature is large enough now and there is no longer any good reason why every little county in Southern Minnesota should have one senator and at least one representative. Many of them should "double up" as we have been doing all these years.

Brainerd Dispatch: A North Dakota newspaper man has amassed a fortune in the business and this week returns to Duluth to settle up a long list of indebtedness which he left behind some years ago, and simultaneously with this report comes the news that an Iowa editor has died leaving an estate worth from $500,000 to $1,000,000. There is still hope.

Wadena Tribune: It is pretty tough on a "friend of the people" sort of politician when the salary of a postoffice prevents him from doing the obviously right thing.

Mankato Free Press: It is to be hoped that the next legislature will be made up of men possessed of the courage to tackle the present game laws, repeal some of them entirely and amend others so that they will not give the favored few all the advantage.

Fairmont Sentinel: Joel P. Heatwole continues to pour out hot stuff against the corporations, grafters, rebaters and other enemies of honest government. Bro. Heatwole is making himself very unpopular with the leaders in his party, but he is kindling some fires that promises to rid the state of influences that have long retarded its growth and prosperity.

ECHOES OF HARMONY.

Gray Eagle Gazette: While the days are growing shorter the list of gubernatorial possibilities is growing longer. There seems to be plenty of timber, but none seem to possess the proper seasoning to stand the test. If the several Republican leaders had remained loyal to the party, the present state of affairs would not now exist.

Ortonville Herald-Star: Those self-sacrificing state senators who went to the state fair and nominated a governor by mistake are receiving some hard jabs. Likewise those busy boys at Washington who try to boss Minnesota politics at long range.

Rush City Post: The Dunn supporters are the only ones to insist, the other fellows lost their rights as insistors. The Dunn supporters are doing no kicking, no threatening. They are enjoying a serenity of mind consequent on duty well done. They fought the good fight, they keep the faith and henceforth there is laid up for them the inestimable privilege of casting an untainted ballot in all future conventions. They have the right to name the next candidate for governor even to the renomination of Honest Bob Dunn.

Anoka Free Press: The Johnson Republicans, who get what they want from Johnson, while in position to throw all blame onto an alleged Democratic administration—these are evidently looking for a lamb to be slaughtered on the Republican ticket. There is no other explanation of their agitation in behalf of Treasurer Block for governor.

Lake Crystal Union: Robert C. Dunn can never be elected governor of the state of Minnesota and it's all foolishness to think he can.—Anoka Union.

This is to be determined. If Robert is not to honor the position no other Republican will. We propose to fight it out on this line if it takes a leg.

International Falls Border Budget: Some people might be mean enough to insinuate that Governor Johnson adopted pretty small tactics when he appointed Van Sant as his representative to the Upper Mississippi Improvement convention as a means of paying off political obligations, but we don't. The job was just about worth the price.

Rush City Post: Alvah is probably sorry he took the contract to run the Republican party, but he won't own it.

Sleepy Eye Dispatch: It cannot be altogether flattering to the bolters to learn that they were led astray by a lot of hungry politicians who wanted nothing but a cheap appointment somewhere around the capitol. But maybe they will know better next time. It's a poor plan for Republicans in a Republican state to go to the Democrats for advice as to how to vote.

He Understands the Game.

Utica Press: The young man who engineered that scheme in Wall street by which he secured securities valued at $300,000 has the stuff in him for the making of a high finance artist of the first water. If the authorities take his explanation of the affair—that he did it to show that it could be done—and let him off lightly, he may be heard from again. He evidently has a keen understanding of Wall street business methods.

In Woman's Sphere
Social, Musical and Club Circles

The physical culture and educational classes, which were formed at the Y. W. C. A. last week, are meeting with a most popular demand. The gymnasium classes are well filled, and more are constantly coming in. One of the most encouraging features of this department is the number of members who return each year to enter the classes. The large number of new members who have entered this year is most gratifying.

In the educational classes, the classes in English organized for the foreign young women who are anxious for a knowledge of the language, are always well attended, and already two classes have been formed. More will be organized if a sufficient number of applications are received.

This evening the German class, with Mrs. S. E. Matter teacher, will meet at 6:30 o'clock, at the rooms, and Friday evening the first meeting of the class for the study of current events will take place. Miss Noyes will be the leader.

At the devotional meeting, yesterday afternoon, at the Young Women's Christian association, about thirty members were present. The rooms were prettily decorated in brilliant autumn leaves, and the speaker for the afternoon was Mrs. W. S. Woodbridge. She spoke on the miracle of the loaves and fishes, and in an exceedingly helpful talk pointed out the application in modern life. The interest in the Sunday services is one of the most encouraging features of the association work, and the informal tea which follows is always a delightful feature of the afternoon.

Literature Class Meeting.

Tomorrow afternoon the first meeting of the Literature class of the Twentieth Century club will be held at the club room of the library at 2:30 o'clock. The leader of the class is Mrs. C. H. Merritt. The first half hour will be devoted to current events, and at 3 o'clock the program will be begun. The class has a most attractive program for the years, as follows:

1. Slavic race and languages. St. Cyril. Poland, from the development of literature to Cassimer the great, (1333).
2. The Russian language—(a) Its composite nature. (b) Characteristics. Condition at the time of Vladimir the Great. Nestor annals. National songs.
3. Poland—Second period from 1335 to 1622. Two-minute talks. Rey of Naglonic. Jan Kochanowski. Copernicus.
4. Russia—The revival of literature from 1468-1682. Influence of Peter the Great. Two-minute talks. Prokovitch, archbishop of Novogorod. Kantemir.
5. Lomonosof and his times (1711-1765). Derzhavin. Karamzin (1765-1826).
6. Close of Eighteenth Century—Fables, novels, etc. Life and influence of Madam Krudener.
7. Life and works of Pushkin. Contemporaries.
8. Milo—Russian legends. Gogol—life and works. Readings from Gogol.
9. Turgineff—life and works. Destroyski.
10. Tolstoi—his life and works.
11. Tolstoi—Review of works and readings.
12. Sienkiewicz—life and works. Gorky—his works. Minor writers.

Tomorrow afternoon the first outline will be studied and the papers will be read by Mrs. Merritt and Mrs. A. H. Smith.

Mrs. Seymour's Lecture.

Tomorrow evening Mrs. Robert Morris Seymour will give the first of the series of the season's talks in her course on art history. "The science of Design" will be the subject of the talk which will be illustrated by stereopticon views taken from objects in the Boston museum illustrative of the good and the poor in art. The lecture will be one of great help in viewing museum collections, in selecting or viewing works of art.

The Saturday Club.

At the meeting of the Saturday club which was held at the library Saturday the delegates to the federation meeting were elected. Mrs. H. S. Ely, president of the club will be one the delegates and Mrs. John C. Swan was elected the other delegate with Mrs. E. L. Paddack as alternate. The members of the Saturday club are particularly interested in the federation this year as Mrs. Washburn is a prominent member of their club.

A Card Reception.

Mrs. George H. Crosby has issued invitations for a card reception Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 18, in honor of Miss Grace Richards.

DEAD CHILDREN.

How Parents Do Not Always Do the Right Thing.

Louisville Courier Journal: Where do you suppose children get their queer ideas?" inquired an anxious mother of her elderly caller. "Jimmy came home from his walk in the park today, declaring there was a little girl living over there who made rainbows. Now, who do you suppose told him that?"

"Doubtless there is a statue in the center of the fountain, and the sunlight falling on the water at a certain angle causes a wee rainbow. His nurse, no doubt, told him that the statue made it. The wonder to me is that children ever secure correct ideas concerning what they see. Even parents begrudge an answer to the interminable questions of children.

"While I was in New York last week we passed Governors Island on a ferryboat. A small, excited laddie spied the sentinels marching to and fro and asked his mother what the place was. she frowned at being interrupted in her conversation with a friend, and replied shortly: 'That's the place where they take naughty boys and shoot them.'

"For years to come, until he is old enough to find out for himself, that New York boy will regard the beautiful military reservation which helps to guard the port of New York, as a place of horrors.

"We were waiting on a subway station platform for a train and a little girl became restless. 'Why don't the train come mamma?' she asked.

"Her mother was reading bargain sale advertisements and looked up from her paper impatiently to catch a benign-looking Jewish peddler watching the child with admiring eyes. She jerked the little girl's arm impatiently and replied: 'Oh, do stop chattering, Bessie, or that bad man will put you in his bag and drop you into the river.'

The peddler being Russian, understood not a word she said, and continued to smile benignly on the pretty little girl in her dainty white costume. Just then the train came along and I noticed the child hugged close to her mother, glancing with big, affrighted eyes over her shoulder, and sat thus, fascinated with horror, watching that man during the entire trip. Do you wonder that children fear those things which they should not, and step in where angels fear to tread, because they do not recognize danger?

"We were making a river trip on a handsome steamer, when I heard a small boy question his father: 'What makes the boat go?' 'Steam,' replied the father shortly.

"'What makes the steam?' was the next question. 'Fire,' replied the father without glancing up from his paper. The small boy turned thoughtful.

"'What sort of fire?' was his next question.

"'Coal,' jerked out the man impatiently.

"'Then if I put my engine into the grate fire I can make steam, too?' persisted the boy.

"'Yes, I guess so,' answered the father, unthinkingly. 'Now for goodness sake stop asking me fool questions and let me read.'

"The boy asked no more questions, but sat with his feet curled under him thinking deeply. Some day when I read that a child has set himself on fire playing around a grate fire, I shall think it is that laddie, trying to make steam with a toy engine thrust into the coals.

"It is a bother to answer childish questions when you have weightier matters on your mind, but, then, raising children is a weighty task. And I often think that many an accident would be averted, many a heartache spared, if we took time to answer childish questions correctly."

The young mother had been plaiting up an edge of her dainty handkerchief. Suddenly she smoothed it out in a determined way:

"I am going to find out about the girl who makes rainbows right away."

The Evening Story

ALLADIN AND HIS WONDERFUL WIFE

By Charles W. Cuno.

(Copyright 1905 by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

In the time of Alid Ben Theodore, peace to his strenuosity, there lived a man whose name was Alladin. To this man Fate seemed delighted to throw the dregs of her favor. He lived a meager life, dragging each day through a myriad of figures set neatly in ponderous volumes, and then reluctantly turned his footsteps toward his rooming house, where he renewed his strenuous combat with boarding house menu.

But to this man Fate one day turned her beautiful face and held out her hand, saying, "Come with me, Alladin, and I will reward you."

He stretched out his hand and took hers wonderingly. Childlike he followed her footsteps as she led him by devious ways and winding paths through the woods to the window of a lonely and isolated cottage.

"Alladin," said she, facing him and looking sternly into his eyes, "I am about to reveal to you one of my greatest treasures. Inasmuch as you guard it well will be your reward. Think deeply, therefore, and fathom well your courage ere you look through the window into the hut."

With that she disappeared and Alladin, whose curiosity had been well aroused, hastened to peep into the hut.

"Oh," he cried, disappointed, "it is only a woman!"

He went away angry at the trick Fate had played upon him, but the next day he returned, for the face, not beautiful, and the form, not ravishing, still held for him a subtle something upon which his mind dwelled and which drew him back again to the cottage. There was no resisting it.

He saw again and again. He grew to love. He wooed—and, finally—HE MARRIED—the woman. And thus Fate bestowed upon him, disguised, the most precious of her treasures upon this earth.

For a long time he lived in ignorance of the wonderful being that belonged to him. His thoughts never fathomed the wealth of gold in her love, nor the myriad jewels of her intellect; the glittering gems that fell from her lips, nor the magic light in her eyes.

He did not see how the touch of her magic hand transformed their little narrow flat into a wonderful palace; how each cheap little article grew, by her touch, into a precious thing; how she transformed the meager allowance of money that he was able to give her into a heaping mountain of comfort and happiness; how, with consummate skill, the evening meal became a feast for a king. He did not guess that each day he drank deeply from the wealth of contentment and cheerfulness in her face.

When a little son came into the world, he little thought of the marvel of it, of the magic of it. He dandled the boy upon his knee and loved it and coddled it, yet reckoned his wealth as little because he had not taken time to count and fathom it.

He did not think how the ministering care and her influence taught him to look for higher things. He did not mark how happy she was when he received his first advancemnt; how proud, as though she had had a hand in it. When advancement after advancement came easy and frequent, he forgot the magic of her touch in his fortune. He was too busy in doing to think.

He forgot to look back into the past and see how wealth, honor and affluence came, step by step, through the magic of her being, how she had planned and watched; how she had loved and ministered. He forgot to value the touch of her hand on his soothed brow, the welcoming smile, the farewell kiss, the children that she had given him; the home, the life and the courage that were conjured by the magic of her influence.

He forgot the hand in his hand through the shoals of their life-voyage, the tenderness, the faith, the love, until one day the precious wife grew sick and the doctor came, shook his head and went away again.

Then, indeed, it seemed to Alladin that he heard the evil magician crying through his halls, "Who will give old lamps for new? Who will give old lamps for new?" Before his anxious eyes, his palace, builded in such beauteous lines, seemed to crumble and disappear. He saw before him the dark, empty desolation as it had been before she had come into his life.

Ah, then he realized the wealth of golden love that he had squandered and shuddered when he thought that his precious treasure was forever to be taken from him. Then he realized the unbounded faith in his ability that had pushed him, step by step, up the ladder of fame. He saw the jewels of thought that, lavishly, he had allowed to be scattered to the throng instead of gathering them into the casket of his memory. Before his eyes came his children, precious jeweled treasures, like windows in the dome of his life, even one of which, being lacking, what artisan or jeweler could replace?

He realized for the first time the magic touch that had transformed the hut into the beautiful palace; that had made a man out of a driveling slave; that had cast before him jewels of precious life, gold of love and diamonds of sparkling faith. Precious lamp of his soul, she had lighted to him the magic of the universe; at a word she had conjured faith, life, love, wealth and honor, and now, at a touch, aye, at a thought, a sinister, unrelenting thought, all these things seemed to disappear from his sight forever.

Alladin sought out the doctor and cast before him all that he possessed. "Take them," he cried, "take all my treasures but save my wife."

The doctor shook his head and said: "I am but the slave of the Drug and have no power over the soul. What Fate decrees will be. I have done all I can do."

Alladin departed and it seemed to him as if he was wandering out into the wilderness. The world was desolate and dreary and seemed a vast desert to his weary eyes, but still he hoped on and, one day, after the doctor had come and gone again, it seemed as if he saw again in the distance the spires of his wonderful magic palace, but it was far, far away. He seemed to travel onward, hoping against hope. Each day hope grew nearer to his sight until at length, with a joyous cry, he ran to embrace his wife, beautiful in his own eyes, in the fullness of her restored health.

The dread disease was dead.

By the touch of this magic joy he was again transported back to his old happy self and the people that see him now wonder at the light in his eyes and the joy in his face.

He knows the value of his treasure, he can feel the magic in her eyes and touch and he has counted the wealth of her love in the measure of her beautiful deeds.

He sees, he is awake and he realizes.

He is tender, he is thoughtful, he is thankful.

Oh, thrice happy Alladin, what treasures, indeed, can compare to the magic of these?

ATHLETICS ARE VICTORS

Duluth Team Defeats Cloquet Eleven In Gridiron Contest.

Game Was Interesting In Spite of Warm Weather.

Nothing but their lack of condition kept the Duluth Athletics from piling up a one-sided score in the second half of yesterday's game with the Cloquet team. The Duluth men were not in shape for a hard game, and the stubborn resistance put up by the visitors in the first half left them badly winded.

The Athletics did not appear to get their formations into good working order until the second half, and then they were not able to hold the pace, and could score but twice.

Throughout the first half the defense was too strong for the back field, and both teams were repeatedly held for downs. The play was, if anything, slightly in favor of Cloquet. The visitors got the ball about three minutes before the whistle blew, and by several long gains through guard, got within striking distance of the Duluth goal, when time was called, with the ball on Duluth's five-yard line.

In the second half Aronson kicked out of bounds. On the second attempt the ball went to Heasley, who was downed before he had made five yards. The visitors worked the ball back about thirty yards, when they lost it on a fumble. Two or three line plunges took the ball to the three-yard line, and then Congdon went over for the first touchdown, which Aronson failed to convert.

Congdon kicked off to Gronin, and the runner was downed in his tracks. Cloquet worked the ball back to the half way line, when Duluth held for downs. Duluth was forced to kick, Gallagher sending the ball fifteen yards down the field. Congdon broke through and tackled for a loss on the next play, and Cloquet was forced to kick, the ball going out of bounds. Duluth secured possession of the oval, and was forced to kick, the ball once more going out of bounds. Peltier made a fifteen-yard gain, but on the next play McDonald tackled the runner for a loss, and the visitors were forced to kick. The visitors were penalized fifteen yards for interference with a free kick. Congdon got through for fifteen yards more, which brought the ball to Cloquet's one-yard line. Coleman went over, but was called back, and Mogford, a moment later scored the second touchdown of the game. Aronson once more failed to convert.

During the remainder of the game both teams were too badly winded to make very strenuous efforts. The play was kept well within Cloquet territory, but the Athletics were unable to score again.

Throughout the game the players were bothered by the spectators who crowded on to the field and followed the play up and down the lines.

The weather was too warm for good football, but in spite of these handicaps the game was an interesting one, and with a little more practice and a better understanding of the signals, the Athletics will make a showing.

Elmer McDevitt, captain of the high school team, acted as the Duluth official, and Durkee of Cloquet for the visitors.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Ashland, Wis., Oct. 9.—Freda, the 7-year-old daughter of Otto Johnson, living one mile south of Ashland, was burned to death Saturday afternoon. She was playing around a brush fire, and was fatally burned before help could reach her.

WERE WELL MATCHED

Duluth and Aitkin Teams Have Pretty Contest at Football.

Duluth Wins Easily—Both Teams Weak on Defense.

Saturday afternoon at Athletic park the local high school eleven encountered a strong team and did themselves and the school great credit. The boys from Aitkin played a great game from start to finish and fought like demons for every inch but the great weakness of both teams lay in defense and it was Duluth's slight advantage in this department of the game that gave her the game. The score was 18 to 6 in favor of Duluth.

For Aitkin, Spaulding, fullback, played a fierce game and his line plunging is rarely excelled on a high school team. The Aitkin captain, Liscomb, played an equally good game, but his lighter weight did not make him so formidable as Spaulding who went through the line time after time for gains. Altogether the little town of Aitkin sent a splendid bunch down here who gave the Duluth boys a hard rub for the victory.

The home team showed a decided improvement over the ragged game of a week ago. Whether this is due to Coach Phillips' work, the added experience, or the presence of McDevitt in the game is uncertain, but the game the boys played has put new life into high school football enthusiasm. In spite of a sprained shoulder Captain McDevitt went into the game and stayed just long enough to assure every one that he has lost none of his former ability. Crassweller played his usual star game and there was not a fumble that lost the locals the ball during the entire game. Earl Cummings showed that he had the same ability that has now made his brother Al famous. Lewellyn McKinley who played the other half made steady and consistent gains. Coventry at center proved that he was the real thing for the position, plunging over Aitkin's line and causing several costly fumbles on Aitkin's part. The Bowen brothers did great work and will not be found wanting when they come to run up against the big teams.

Aitkin kicked off to Duluth at 3:45. Crassweller caught the ball and ran it back ten yards. McKinley made 50 yards on the second down and Cummings made a long and brilliant run between tackle and end for the first touchdown. Time, three minutes and a half. McDevitt kicked an easy goal.

McDevitt kicked off to Spaulding who made a splendid run back with almost no interference. McDevitt's shoulder was hurt at the first down and he left the game. His absence was felt for the first few minutes after he left, Duluth's defense going to pieces very badly, but the boys soon got down to work again. Aitkin made steady gains through, Spaulding and Liscomb carrying the ball most of the time. Spaulding fumbled to Crassweller, however, and the Duluth team proceeded to rip up the Aitkin defense in great style. Cummings made two twenty-five yard gains, Roy Bowen made another of almost equal distance and Spencer who had moved back to fullback when McDevitt went out, carried the ball over for the second touchdown. He kicked goal making the score 12-0. Time for the first half was called after one down had been played after next kick off.

In the first part of the second half Duluth went up in the air and in the first five minutes of play Liscomb broke away from the bunch and made an eighty-yard run for the only touchdown Aitkin made. Spaulding kicked goal. Score 12-6. This seemed to wake the boys up and they held Aitkin for downs. Crassweller ran thirty yards and Aitkin, forced into the vicinity of its goal compelled the Duluthians to kick. Spencer punted finely and Bowen got the man in his tracks. Umpire Haroldson penalized Aitkin for interfering with a Duluth line man and they kicked very strenously soon at last gave in. Duluth held them for downs and as soon as they gained possession of the ball put Spencer over for the last touch down of the game. He kicked the goal, the ball barely crossing the bar.

Coach Phillips expressed himself as well satisfied with the work of the boys and it is certain that he wrought wonders with them in the last three days. The line-up of the two teams was as follows:

Duluth.	Position.	Aitkin.
Roy Bowen	left end	Lowell
Spencer	left tackle	Leonard
Dudgeon	left guard	O'Fallum
Coventry	center	Richmond
Crawford	right guard	McPheeters
Forsyth	right tackle	Watson
H. C. Bowen	right end	Erickson
Crassweller	quarter	McKay
McKinley	right half	Baube
McDevitt	full back	Spaulding

DISMISS CONTEST

The register and receiver of the Duluth land office have dismissed a contest case filed by Oscar F. Ahmstrom against Olaf Shirley, involving rights to a homestead described as the northwest quarter of 35-52-15. The contestant claimed that Shirley had deserted his claim for more than six months at a time, and had, therefore, forfeited his right to it.

It was shown at the hearing that Shirley has been, since March 14 of this year, town clerk of the town of Fredenburg, in which the claim is situated; that prior to that time was chairman of the board of supervisors of the town, and that the books of the town are kept in his house, and most of the town meetings held there; that Shirley has expended in improvements on the claim about $800 or $1,000, and has kept his sister and her husband there at all times since he took the claim, he being unmarried until recently. He has had to be away earning his living by taking small contracts for getting out posts and ties, and doing other jobs.

LEAGUES END SEASON

Regular Schedules of Both Big Leagues Are Completed.

National Championship Series Will Commence at Philadelphia.

Both the National and American league seasons closed yesterday, doubleheaders being played at Chicago, St. Louis and Cincinnati.

The pennants were won by the New York Nationals and the Philadelphia Athletics, the race in the National league having been practically settled three weeks ago, while the American league pennant was not won until within three or four days of the close of the season.

The feature of the closing weeks of the National league season, was the wonderful spurt made by the Chicago club. The Microbes came up with a rush, and with a few days more play might have nosed Pittsburg out of second place. During their spurt they took three straight games from the Giants.

Detroit and Boston had a very pretty fight for third place in the American league, the position being finally won by Detroit.

Today the national championship series will open at Philadelphia, with the first game between the Athletics and the Giants.

The games on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday will be played in New York and the games today, Wednesday and Friday will be pulled off in Philadelphia.

Preparations are being made to handle the largest crowds in the history of the game, and the players should net a snug sum out of their share of the gate receipts. Philadelphia in particular is baseball mad, and they should turn out as large or larger crowds than the metropolis.

Manager Comiskey of the Chicago team in the American league, proved himself a good loser, by sending a telegram to Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, expressing his congratulations, and best wishes for success in the post-season series.

Other clubs in the two leagues are also planning post-season series. The Chicago Microbes and White Stockings will come together, and the games should be almost as interesting as the national championship series, from the kind of ball both Chicago clubs have been playing during the last few weeks.

The two St. Louis teams have also arranged a series of games, and Cleveland and Cincinnati will settle the Ohio championship.

FIRST OF BIG SERIES.

New York Giants to Meet Philadelphia's Champion Athletes.

New York, Oct. 9.—New York champion Giants and their horde of loyal followers will descend upon Philadelphia, today, intent upon scoring the first victory in the series for the world's championship at the expense of Connie" Mack's American league champions, the Athletics.

The Giants go to Philadelphia slight favorites for the series and in the best of shape for a hard struggle.

It is extremely likely that "Christy" Matthewson will be sent into the box to handle the first contest, which the Giants are determined to win.

Few bets were recorded, yesterday, mostly small. These were in some cases at even money on the first game and 5 to 4 on the Giants on the series.

Last night the Giants were given a benefit at the Majestic theater by members of the theatrical profession.

ORGANIZE FAST TEAM

Former College Football Players Will Don Moleskins Again.

Game Has Been Arranged With Superior City Team.

The fastest and heaviest football team that ever represented Duluth will hold its first signal practice this evening in the Armory building.

The team has been organized by some old college players, who are working in the city, and who were anxious to get back into the game again. The chief object in view is to defeat the Superior City team, and if that can be accomplished games may be arranged with some of the smaller college teams in the Northwest.

A game has been arranged for next week, and the team will hold signal practice every afternoon or evening this week.

On paper at least the team looks like a very strong organization. In the back field there are three old college players. S. D. Ward played one season with Yale, making the eleven for the West Point game. Elmer Whyte is an old member of Yost's Michigan squad, and Frank Bradley played with the Exeter academy team.

Walter Brewer will play at quarter, and for the line there is a choice of ten or twelve good men, including the following: Chester Whyte, Ogle, Church, Rondeau, Prescott, Peterson, Haroldson, Mallett, Sarvela, Bennett and Marshall.

The team will not run very much to weight, but all the men in the line are in fairly good condition, and speedy. They will average about 175 pounds.

Nearly all of the men on the team have been either rowing or playing baseball this summer, and they are in fair condition.

The Superior team has been at work for a week or ten days, and it is reported to be even stronger than last year, most of the old players being back. If this is the case, the game next week will be the best gridiron contest seen at the Head of the Lakes in years.

VICTIMIZED BY WOMAN.

Who Claims to Have Power Over Evil Spirits.

Berlin, Oct. 9.—The police of the town of Erfurt are engaged in investigating the career and operation of a certain "wise woman" residing at Langensalza, who claims to have power to exorcise evil spirits.

Her case has come prominently forward owing to the complaints of a farmer, near Erfurt, who has been victimized by her.

This man and his family had for some time been troubled by evil dreams and harrassed by various minor misfortunes. They naturally came to the conclusion that Satan had his hand in their affairs, so they consulted the wise woman of Langensalza.

She prescribed that the family should repair to a certain spot among the neighboring hills, where they were to bury a new earthen pot containing several gold coins.

The devil, attracted by the money, would empty the pot and leave the family in peace.

A novelty introduced by the "wise" woman was the letting off of fireworks from the spot where the money was buried as soon as the duped family had returned on their way home. These satanic pyrotechnics were managed by an accomplice, the "wise" woman explaining that they were caused by Beelzebub's departure with mammon. But these offerings to the evil one brought no relief, although the sums in the earthen pot went on increasing.

Light at last dawning on the brain of the idiotic farmer, he put the matter in the hands of the police.

His offerings to procure release from Satan's attention amounted to the respectable sum of $25,000.

MINNESOTA IN THE LEAD

In Number of Points Scored Against Other Football Teams.

Dr. Williams' Machine Made a Good Showing on Saturday.

Minneapolis, Oct. 9.—(Special to The Herald.)—Minnnesota won the football game from North Dakota by a score of 45 to 0. As a little curtain raiser the Freshmen won the game from the Wisconsin Business University by a score of 28 to 0.

The Freshman team has been coached all season by Sig Harris, and they are a fine bunch of players. The boys from Wisconsin put up a very plucky fight, but were never in the game. The day was exceedingly warm, and even the lightest wraps were uncomfortable to the spectators. The players were not able to do much heavy work, and time was taken out at frequent intervals where on ordinary occasions it would have been unnecessary.

The Freshman game was of unsuual interest, as it was the first appearance of Dr. Williams' kindergarten. Although the team work was crude, it was fast and snappy. The defects will be remedied by practice and experience. The rooters were well satisfied, for it convinced them that Dr. Williams has discovered a way to overcome the effect of the rule not allowing a freshman to play on the regular team. If the men who distinguished themselves Saturday on the Freshman team will all try to make the regular team next year, it will certainly place the Maroon and Gold among the top notchers, so far as material is concerned.

The game between the 'varsity and North Dakota teams was somewhat of a procession in the first half. The score in this half was 34 to 0. The second half was better, and the boys on both sides played harder and fiercer. Dr. Williams' machine is working smoother every Saturday. In this game there were but one or two fumbles, which is the best record of the season.

The Gopher line-up was changed almost entirely, and it seemed to work to advantage. Irsfield was out of the back field, and Cutting played back of the line. Ittner was put in at end, and later, when Oech retired, Ittner took his place, and Burgan came in and played end. He looks heavier than last year, and certainly has lost none of his speed. He is probably a fixture. Safford went in at center, and Dan Smith played guard.

The battle was almost all in Fliekestail territory. But a very few times were the Gophers held for downs. North Dakota was forced to punt and it was well done. In this department of the game they excelled Minnesota but it did not do them much good. Kremer and Joe Cutting divided the honors in bringing back the ball. Kremer is big, swift and strong. When he gets under full sail he is a hard man to stop. When he comes tearing down the gridiron he reminds you of a steam engine in pantaloons. Joe Cutting is just the opposite. Not very large and as slippery as an eel, he has the motion of a jackrabbit. If he ever gets a clear field, he will make the touchdown. He always out-runs his interference.

Brush played another ripping game. He is a corker when he gets under way. The hole he plows with his massive shoulders is a caution. He undoubtedly has broader shoulders than any man on a Western gridiron. He is one of the best men that ever donned a moleskin East or West.

In the first few minutes of play the boys from Grand Forks didn't know they were in the game. The first touchdown came within a minute after the whistle had sounded.

One thing must be said of North Dakota. Her team is always composed of big men who play a fast game from start to finish. They are one of the teams that the Gophers like to meet and the time is rapidly coming when they will prove a big factor in Western football.

As all of the big nine had games Saturday it gave the dope fiends a chance to figure out the championship. Minnesota, Michigan and Chicago in the order named seems to be the result of comparing scores. Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois and Northwestern are hardly in it, while Purdue and Indiana are as yet an unknown factor. Whether the Badgers will round out into first-class shape is yet to be determined. King is something of a wizard and he may turn out a team that will surprise everyone. Either the Hawkeyes are pitifully weak or Stagg has a team that must be considered in the race for the Western championship. In number of points the Gophers are at the head of the list. In hard games they are also so far ahead. Impartial critics would undoubtedly all agree that the teams so far met by the Minnesota team have been uniformly better than the teams met by the other big elevens. However, the Gophers have played all their games at home while some of the other institutions have not. That this is a very large advantage is not to be denied.

One thing is certain. Dr. Williams has built up a system that is known all over the football world as the "Minnesota system." It used to be that Western collegs and universities adopted the so-called "Yale system" or "Harvard system" or "Pennsylvania system." Now it is the "Minnesota system" which is in the limelight and likely to stay there for some time to come.

The crowd Saturday was the largest and noisiest of any so far this season. The boys from Grand Forks had a good many friends in the crowd and they were not slow in showing their enthusiasm. Governor Johnson and a party of friends viewed the game from one of the boxes and he was apparently much pleased with the result. He is not a college man, but he does enjoy college sport of every kind.

Judge Page Morris of Duluth, who is on the federal bench here, was at the game with a party of friends. He seemed to be pretty well pleased with the prospect of three Duluth boys getting on the big team.

Coach Ristine of Ames watched the game from the sidelines. He was exceedingly interested in the game, for his bunch meets the Gophers next Saturday. He knows his football book pretty well, and Minnesota knows it. Ames is a hard proposition and the Gopher admirers always feel that they can never get a correct estimate of the team until this game is played.

The request of the management that peanuts, popcorn and cigars be dispensed with is a move in the right direction. The grandstand is certainly made more comfortable for all concerned.

The line-up Saturday was as follows:

Minnesota.	Position.	Dakota.
Smith	Left guard	Swenselde
Safford	Center	Wells
Sanborn	Right guard	Du Wesse
Brush	Right tackle	Burtness
Marshall	Right end	Davis
Larkin	Quarterback	Counny
Kremer	Rt. Halfback	Peterson
Cutting	Left Halfback	Brannon
Current	Fullback	Bates

Touchdowns—Brush, 3; Kremer, Oech, Smith, Ittner 2.

Goals from touchdowns—Cutting, 5.

Misses for goal—Cutting, 3.

Officials—Umpire, Allen; referee, Force.

Time of halves, 10 and 15 minutes.

PRIME CAUSES OF INSANITY STATED

To Be Civilization, Cigarettes and Drink In England.

London, Oct. 9.—Civilization, cigarettes and drink are the three great causes of insanity in England, according to the famous brain specialist, Dr. Forbes Winslow, formerly of New York.

The remarkable report just issued by the lunacy commission was being discussed, and when Dr. Winslow's attention was drawn to the fact that he had omitted love from his list of causes, he said:

"The proportion of insane because of love affairs is small—0.5 per cent, and 1.7 in women. We are getting better in this respect. At the present moment there is not so much sentiment as there used to be. I do not really think, except in the case of the silly attachments of boys and girls, that there is much real love nowadays.

"Matrimonial matters are regarded more rationally. Blind, unreasoning devotion is a thing almost of the past.

"A good deal of madness," continued Dr. Winslow, "is governed by the laws of heredity, and, although a person predisposed to madness may successfully undergo enormous mental strain, the collapse must come—not because of the strain, but on account of the predisposition."

"And what, in your experience, are the prime causes of insanity at this day?"

"Alcohol must be given first place. No one could be found mad enough to deny that it is a brain poison, and the insanity due directly or indirectly, to drink is appalling.

"Then there is the use of tobacco—in the shape of cigarettes particularly; I do not say pipe smoking is harmful unless carried to excess. But the use of cigarettes—especially on an empty stomach—is a very potent factor in the making of a lunatic."

Dr. Winslow contended that his experience, and the statistics of lunacy throughout the world prove conclusively that the more civilized the area the more insanity there is produced.

"There is," he said, "practically no lunacy among Asiatics or the natives of Africa, or other extensive territories, but sparsely populated."

"Wherever the arts and sciences are studied to the highest perfection lunacy must abound. Where the mind is comparatively free—where persons are able to enjoy the beauty and the repose of nature, and at the same time participate in the health giving sports of the river and field without the struggle for a living and the unhealthy amusements of the town involve—there is bound to be less lunacy."

DOG BARBERS ARE MUCH OPPOSED

To Swimming Baths For Dogs Being Erected In London.

London, Oct. 9.—Professional dog barbers view with disfavor the suggestion made by a lady owner that the London county council ought to follow the example of the Dresden and Paris authorities and erect comfortable swimming baths for dogs and appoint experts in combing, "crimping" and perfuming the coats of the pampered pets of West end rate payers.

"There is a widespread desire among the women that the council should provide such accommodations for their dogs," said Mrs. White-Pearce in an interview, "but we trained experts in the 'barbering' of pets realize that such institutions would lead to the dissemination of disease among the council's four-footed patrons."

Mrs. White-Pearce spoke with authority. She "does" for the dogs of many titled people in addition to conducting at Pinnar a week-end fresh air resort or stylish house for dogs whose delicate constitutions are not equal to the continuous strain of the London season.

"Ladies," she added, "are now seeking my advice as to what their little darlings shall wear in winter. For driving in the park or making calls I am recommending that 'doggy' should wear a neat tailor-made coat to supersede the sealskin jacket of last winter. The new coat is designed especially to protect the dog's chest while in the carriage or motor car.

"The handkerchief, by the way—and every well cared for pet has one—is now sometimes carried in a purse at the end of the leash. It is the newest thing of the kind and comes from Paris.

Then again to be thoroughly in fashion the dog's silk or satin bow must be of rather massive proportions and worn at the side of the face under the ear, not on top of the head. That style has now gone out. Besides the shade of the dog's bow must match some prominent feature in the attire of the mistress, generally the trimming of her hat.

This rule often causes great anxiety, because only certain colors will match the coat of the pet. Blue, pink or red goes well with a black poodle, blue is preferred for Blenheims, but any color may be used for black and tans except green. Lady dog 'barbers' make a special study of this color matching.

"Perfumes are simpler. A lady invariably has her darling perfumed with the scent that she herself uses.

"There is little new to report in the matter of dog jewelry. In some cases gold bracelets set with gems are worn on the forepaws, and, of course, jeweled collars bearing the owners' crests—when there are crests—still remain quite stylish. Boots have quite gone out of fashion; it was found that they made a dog's foot look longer than they actually are.

"I cannot say that I approve of the newest style of motoring costume for dogs," proceeded the lady expert. "I saw one the other day on a terrier belonging to an American woman automobilist. He sat in the car between his mistress and the chauffeur. The poor dog looked rather ridiculous with a pair of "goggies" over his eyes and a hood over his head. The hood was made so that the dust could not get in, and the coat was 'built' of the usual material worn by automobilists. I understand the dog's suit cost $50."

Yesterday afternoon ordination services were conducted by Bishop W. F. McDowell, John M. Blackhurst, Thomas Grice, Jonathan A. Hays, John S. Ketlewell, James A. Lewis, William A. Plumb, Hollis R. Scott and Alvin E. Worman were ordained as deacons; John J. Parish and Ezra R. Stevenson were ordained as elders. Following the ordination, Bishop McDowell delivered a sermon into which many of his personal experiences entered.

Memorial services were held for the following: Bishop Isaac Joyce of Minneapolis; David Tice of Minneapolis; M. O. McNiff of Santa Caula, Cal.; Joseph Thompson of Grand Forks, N. D.; Charles N. Tilton of Wadena, Minn., and Mrs. H. A. Cleveland of Glencoe, Minn.

The committee on church and state reported resolutions which were adopted reciting the failure of Joseph Smith and the Mormons to keep their solemn pledges to the effect that they would cease plural marriages and memorializing the senate of the United States to declare Reed Smoot's seat vacant and petitioning congress to submit to the people of the United States an amendment to the constitution prohibiting polygamy in any state or territory of the Union.

The report of the committee on resolutions was read. Congratulations were extended the conference for having been so delightfully entertained, and appreciation of and thanks for the kindnesses and favors on the part of the two railroads, the people of Eveleth, and Superintendent Harding, were expressed.

The conference decided to meet at Minneapolis next year.

Dr. Bridgman, president of the Hamline university, gave the conference the following financial statement of the university by the treasurer, E. W. Mearkle of Minneapolis:

"The university opened at Hamline in September, 1880, with Dr. John as president, and with one building—the university building. In 1882 the trustees decided to erect a ladies' hall. Very soon after that improvement was begun President John gave notice that he would leave the university at the end of the year. Early in the year 1883 the university hall burned to the ground. The trustees, deciding to proceed at once to erect a new university hall and also a small laboratory building, called Dr. Bridgman to the presidency in 1883. The new buildings, completed at a cost of upwards of $25,000 more than the amount realized from the insurance on the old building, were dedicated in the early part of 1884. Their cost had to be raised by subscription, and was substantially paid by the summer of 1887, when the hall of science and an enlargement of ladies hall called for the raising of about $8,000 more. Meantime the income of the university from students' fees, interest on endowment, etc., each year fell several thousand dollars short of paying the current running expenses of the university, leaving a large annual deficiency to be made up by subscriptions. To speedily complete the hall of science and the enlargement of ladies' hall made it necessary for the trustees to borrow largely and pay interest. Just then the real estate boom of the '80s waned rapidly and deprived many friends of the university of ability to contribute its needs. Early in 1893 the panic of that year settled down on the country, and the trustees, seeing no prospect of presently paying off the debt, which then amounted to $30,000, gave a mortgage on the university property for that amount. At the first sign of improvement in the business of the country President Bridgman set to work to raise the money to pay off that mortgage and an accumulated deficiency of $5,000. By July, 1898, the $35,000 in cash had been collected.

"Although the friends of the university had been so recently asked to pay its debts, a movement for an annual deficiency had to be provided for, President Bridgman undertook to raise an endowment of $250,000, and after some three or four years' effort, secured satisfactory written subscriptions for that amount. When the subscriptions were taken it was understood that it would not be convenient for some of the subscribers to pay in cash at once. However, the greater part of the amount has been paid in cash and is invested at interest, and nearly all those subscribers who have not paid in cash have, in order to make the endowment presently available, given their interest-bearing notes, which the trustees consider good.

"In addition to the cost of the buildings and improvements, and the raising of the yearly deficiency, many thousand dollars have been raised and expended for books and magazines for the library, and for equipment for the museum.

"The property of the university is estimated as follows: Presidents residence, campus, buildings, furniture and apparatus, $186,000; other real estate, $74,000; special fund real estate, say $85,000; notes and securities, $246,000. Indebtedness about $4,000.

"In recent years the cost of running the university, including salaries, fuel, insurance, repairs and incidental expenses has been a little above $25,000 a year. The income from students and endowment has averaged some $50,000 a year less than the expenditures. The deficiency has had to be made up by subscription. Since the new endowment has become available the difference has been much less than formerly. But the rapidly increasing number of students in the college proper will inevitably call for a larger teaching force and more extensive apparatus and facilities. We cannot reasonably hope to keep the running expenses down to the past average. If the university is to properly do its work, it will still have to appeal to its friends for help. We are glad it has the students, and the opportunity. Its friends may see encouragement for them to do their part, in the fact that others appreciate the work of the university. During the current conference year (including the amounts paid to the university by the conference treasurers last fall) $4,961.78 was contributed for current expenses and payment of indebtedness. President Bridgman raised more than one-half of this sum among people of other denominations than our own. But our people having just contributed to the endowment, could not be expected to do as much last year as they will do in the future. The financial outlook is good, but the university still needs, as it will surely receive, the hearty support of its friends.

"Permit a few words on another subject. Our supreme court holds that under the constitution and laws of this state an educational institution is not a charitable institution. Consequently the law does not permit the university to undertake nor carry out certain benevolent purposes of a charitable nature, although they appeal strongly to those who cherish them. It is vitally important that the university faithfully observe the limitations of the law and of its charter. The trustees give careful consideration to every offer of gifts for special purposes, and always accept them when they can properly do so. We regret the restrictions of the law, but we must obey them."

The following announcement of members to compose the standing committees was made:

ADOPT NEW DIKE IDEA

Government Engineers Have Provided Protection For Pier Work.

Will Utilize Old South Pier as Far as It Goes.

Another plan has been adopted by the government engineers in the way of a protection dike at Superior entry while the lakeward end of the new concrete pier is being constructed. Instead of establishing a dike way out in the lake, beyond the outer end of the proposed pier and exposed so much to the fury of the northeast storms, the engineers have planed and carried out another idea, that of utilizing the old wooden pier now in use, together with the remaining cribwork built the past summer to be sunk out in the lake.

In the construction of the new south pier at Superior entry the channel has been widened, that is, the new pier has been built outside the old pier, a distance of some fifteen to twenty feet. The government has sunk a 100-foot section of the cribwork at right angles to the outer end of the old pier, thus forming complete protection to the concrete work to be carried on parallel to the old pier, on two sides. The cribwork will extend so much farther beyond the proposed line of the new pier that no protection will be needed on the south side. The south end of the crib is securely held and protected by a pile dike.

The crib is one of the four big sections that it was planned to sink in the lake beyond the end of the proposed concrete pier. In August of this year three of these cribs, each 100 feet long by 30 feet wide and 30 feet deep had been sunk in position, and the government was about to place the fourth, when a northeast gale sprung up, one of the worst this end of the lake has had for a long time. When, after about four days of the storm, the waves subsided, it was found that the cribwork placed out in the lake had been totally destroyed. The government did not have time to put in rock rip-rack before the storm and the undertow washed the sand from around and out of the cribs, the waves afterward pounding them to pieces.

Without any extra expense the government has now provided sufficient protection so that the concrete pier work can start up next spring and summer and can continue without any interruptions from storms clear out to the end of the old pier.

The new pier is to extend lakeward 1,500 feet from the end of the completed section, or about 1,200 feet from the shore line. This will carry it about 500 feet beyond the end of the present pier, or 650 feet beyond the limits of the present protection dike. It is not thought probable that the government will attempt any further dribbling or protection dike building beyond the end of the old south pier.

Maj. Potter, engineer in charge of this district, under whose supervision the concrete pier work is being done, says that the last 600 feet of the concrete pier will be built without any protection dike, that the government will have to select good weather and push the construction work out as rapidly as it can during that period. There will be some thirty or forty of the big monolithic blocks to be constructed and this work, it has been demonstrated by the engineers, can be quickly accomplished by the plant and equipment already assembled at the entry.

INVESTIGATE ROTTENNESS

Painters' National Convention May Have Big Fight on Hands.

At the meeting of the local union painters, decorators and paper-hangers held Friday evening a warm contest was held to decide who would be sent to the national convention of the union which will be held at Memphis, Tenn., on the first Monday in December. There were about ten candidates for the honor and out of it T. G. Freshney and W. F. Moyer were elected.

The principal work of the convention it is expected, is to start a "house-cleaning" among the officers. The Eastern delegates have controlled the conventions thus far and have elected whom they pleased as officers. This year the Western delegations are uniting to try to change the matter about and get the West in control or at least enough Western men in office to reconstruct the head list and see that things run as they should.

It is openly charged, says, T. G. Freshney, business agent for the local union, that there is something rotten in the national organization as it stands now. For instance, he says that for years the members of the union have been taxed for a strike fund but that every time a strike seems to be pending, the national officers hasten to inform the officers of the local union where the strike seems imminent not to expect any aid as there is no money in the strike fund. Because the officers have been able to control, says Mr. Freshney, no report has been demanded.

It is to find out if there is any truth to the rumors which of course, follow such conditions, that the Western men want to capture the convention. It is expected that the fight will be a hard one.

THE ROOT OF THE MATTER.

He Cured Himself of Serious Stomach Troubles, By Getting Down to First Principles.

A man of large affairs in one of our prominent Eastern cities by too close attention to business, too little exercise and too many club dinners, finally began to pay nature's tax, levied in the form of chronic stomach trouble; the failure of his digestion brought about a nervous irritability making it impossible to apply himself to his daily business and finally deranging the kidneys and heart.

In his own words he says: "I consulted one physician after another and each one seemed to understand my case, but all the same they each failed to bring about the return of my former digestion, appetite and vigor. For two years I went from pillar to post, from one sanitarium to another. I gave up smoking, I quit coffee and even renounced my daily glass of two of beer, without any marked improvement.

"Friends had often advised me to try a well known proprietary medicine, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and I had often perused the newspaper advertisements of the remedy but never took any stock in advertised medicines nor could believe a 50-cent patent medicine would touch my case.

"To make a long story short I finally bought a couple of packages at the nearest drug store and took two or three tablets after each meal and occasionally a tablet between meals, when I felt any feeling of nausea or discomfort.

"I was surprised at the end of the first week to note a marked improvement in my appetite and general health and before the two packages were gone I was certain that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets was going to cure completely and they did not disappoint me. I can eat and sleep and enjoy my coffee and cigar and no one would suppose I had ever known the horrors of dyspepsia.

"Out of friendly curiosity I wrote to the proprietors of the remedy asking for information as to what the tablets contained and they replied that the principal ingredients were aseptic pepsin (government test), malt diastase and other natural digestives, which digest food regardless of the condition of the stomach."

The root of the matter is this, the digestive elements contained in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest the food, give the overworked stomach a chance to recuperate and the nerves and whole system to receive the nourishment which can only come from food. Stimulants and nerve tonics never give strength, they give factitious strength, invariably followed by reaction. Every drop of food, every nerve and tissue is manufactured from our daily food, and if you can insure its prompt action and complete digestion by the regular use of so good and wholesome a remedy as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, you will have no need of nerve tonics and sanitariums.

Although Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been in the market only a few years, probably every druggist in the United States, Canada and Great Britain now sells them and considers them the most popular and successful of any preparation for stomach trouble.

THREE KILLED IN COLLISION

Serious Wreck Occurs on the Pennsylvania Road.

Millerburg, Pa., Oct. 9.—Three men were killed, one man was injured, and a carload of race horses were either killed or so badly hurt that they had to be shot, as the result of a collision at the junction of the Lykens Valley branch of the Pennsylvania railroad, a quarter of a mile south of this place, yesterday. The dead are:

THEODORE SCOTT, Northumberland, fireman.

RALPH HENDERSHOTT, Northumberland, freight brakeman.

CHARLES E. BERRY, Sunbury, freight conductor.

The injured man is Julian Lesh of Sunbury, engineer, whose leg was crushed and body bruised.

The collision was between the fast No. 3 Erie mail train, westbound, and a caboose and box car containing a load of race horses. The mail train was bound from Harrisburg to Erie. It was preceded out of Harrisburg by a fast freight train, which, owing to a heavy fog, lost some time. The caboose and box car accidentally uncoupled at the junction, and the mail train overtook them. Berry and Hendershott were in the caboose when the crash came, and were killed instantly. Fireman Scott of the mail train was hurled into the midst of the wreck, and also killed, Engineer Lesh of the mail train was thrown under his engine. After the collision the wreckage took fire, and the bodies of Berry and Hendershott were burned almost beyond recognition.

There were 200 passengers on the mail express, but none was seriously hurt. A number were thrown into a panic until the full extent of the accident was known. During the excitement, scores climbed through windows.

The horses were bound for the Bloomsburg, Pa., fair, and belonged to several Eastern horsemen.

GRAHAM IS INNOCENT

Middleton, N. Y., Oct. 9.—All efforts of the police and local authorities of this place to clear up the mystery of the murder of Willis and Fred Olney and little Alice Ingerick at the Olney farm, near here, and the murderous assault on Mrs. Ingerick on Friday night have so far been fruitless. It was believed yesterday morning that some clue to the murder had been found when Alonzo Graham, an old man living near the Olney place, was arrested on information furnished by Mrs. Ingerick, the only member of the Olney household who escaped death, but who was found terribly injured and unconscious in the barn. After being in custody all night and closely examined, Graham last night conclusively proved his innocence and was discharged from custody.

Mrs. Ingerick was employed by him as a housekeeper until a few weeks ago, when she returned to Middletown and soon afterward went to live with the Olney brothers.

Mrs. Ingerick recovered consciousness for the first time since the assault yesterday morning, and although not able to speak, replied to the interrogations by District Attorney Rogers by nodding and shaking her head. What information was thus elicited was not made public, but County Detective Ward and Chief of Police Brinkerhoff at once hastened to Graham's home and conducted him to this place, where he was lodged in jail. Graham took his arrest coolly and said he would have no difficulty in establishing his innocence.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Walter Palmer of Athens was instantly killed, Chauffeur Blake of Kalamazoo, was fatally injured, and Mrs. Walter Palmer and her daughter, Frances, were badly bruised in an automobile accident Sundya, west of Athens, Minn. The automobile while traveling at great speed, swerved out of the road into a marsh and capsized.

Willie Fitzgerald knocked out Jack Clifford in the eighth round of a twenty-round go at Grass Valley, Cal., Sunday night.

Fire Sunday afternoon gutted the store of the W. K. Morrison Hardware company on Nicollet avenue, Minneapolis, causing a loss estimated at $75,000, covered by insurance. There was a considerable quantity of explosives in the stock and for a time it was feared the fire would spread to other buildings.

A street car accident occurred near the village of Winooski, Vt., late Saturday evening in which thirteen persons were injured, some of them seriously. Mrs. Morris Buckley and John Connor of Winooski were injured internally. A car carrying about fifty passengers crashed into a waiting car on a siding.

The Brantford lacrosse team of Brantford, Ont., defeated the all-Chicago eleven at Chicago, Sunday, 11 to 5.

As a result of a quarrel at St. Louis between Michael Kane and John Andle, who had been close friends, Kane was stabbed to death and Andle was arrested, charged with the crime. The quarrel is said to have been caused over the possession of 25 cents.

In a collision between an automobile and an electric car at Newton, Mass., Sunday, Senator George F. Fulford, a wealthy manufacturer of Brockville, Ont., was seriously injured while his chauffeur, Louis E. Verrat of Albany, N. Y., sustained a fractured skull and is expected to die. William T. Hanson of Schenectady, was also injured, but not seriously.

OLD SORES SAP THE VITALITY AND UNDERMINE THE HEALTH

Old Sores that refuse to heal are a constant menace to health. They sap the vitality and undermine the constitution by draining the system of its very life fluids, and those afflicted with one of these ulcers grow despondent and almost desperate as one treatment after another fails. They patiently apply salves, washes, plasters, etc., but in spite of all these the sore refuses to heal and eats deeper into the surrounding flesh, destroying the tissues and growing to be a festering, inflamed and angry mass. The source of the trouble is in the blood. This vital fluid is filled with impurities and poisons which are constantly being discharged into the sore or ulcer, making it impossible for the place to heal. It will not do to depend on external applications for a cure, because they do not reach the real cause, and valuable time is lost experimenting with such treatment; the most they can do is keep the ulcer clean. Any sore that will not heal is dangerous, for the reason that it may have the deadly germs of Cancer behind it. A cure can be brought about only through a remedy that can change the quality of the blood, and this is what S. S. S. does. It goes to the very bottom of the trouble, drives out the poisons and germs with which it is filled, and purifies and builds up the entire circulation. By the use of S. S. S. the sore is supplied with new, rich blood which corrects the trouble, soon stops the discharge, and allows the place to heal naturally and permanently. S. S. S. also reinvigorates the entire system, and where the constitution has been depleted or broken down it quickly builds it up and restores perfect health. Write for our special book on sores and ulcers, and any medical advice you are in need of; no charge for either.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wet Weather in the Northwest Gives Wheat Strength.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—Wet weather in the Northwest caused strength today in the wheat market here. Higher prices for wheat at Liverpool helped to increase bullish sentiment. Shorts and commission houses were moderate buyers. December opened ¼@⅜c to ⅝@½c higher at 85¼@⅜c, and sold up to 85½c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 1,289 cars against 1,470 cars last week and 1,857 cars a year ago.

The market continued to gain in strength. For December the highest point of the day was reached at 85⅞c. The close was strong with December up ¾c at 85⅝@⅞c.

Sentiment in the corn pit was bullish as a result of wet weather in various sections of the corn belt. A report that the Russian crop is a failure had considerable effect on the prices here. Shorts were the principal buyers. December opened a shade to ¼@⅜c up at 41⅜@41¾c and for a time held within the opening range. Local receipts were 433 cars, with 110 of contract grade.

The strength was well maintained the entire day. After touching 44⅜c December closed at 44⅞c, a gain of ⅝c.

Strength of other grain imparted moderate firmness to the oats market. Liberal receipts, however, has a depressing influence. Cash houses were the sellers. December opened a shade higher at 28½@⅝c and sold at 28⅝@⅞c. Local receipts were 586 cars.

Lower prices for live hogs caused easiness in the provisions market. Trading was very quiet. January pork was off 2½c at $12.40. Lard was unchanged at $6.87½. Ribs were up a shade at $6.50.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Today's market responded finely to the news, which was mainly bullish, and while prices eased off a little from the top, the closing was nevertheless strong. The large decrease on passage was favorably received by the bulls. The world's shipments were about as forecasted, and taking it altogether, the statistical news was strong, and coupled with the continued excellent cash demand, especially that reported by St. Louis, all did their part in making for a better feeling. As we stated the other day, sentiment is shaping better and the market itself seems to be gathering new strength. The weakkneed shorts have covered a part of their commitments, but it is generally believed that a large short interest still exists in December, and our leading elevator concern is popularly believed to be long a big line. Trade as yet is slow, but this persistent strength under present trade conditions seems to clearly show continued confidence by the principal holder. We advise buying wheat on the setbacks.

Corn—Market showed a firm tone throughout, but trade seemed in much the same rut, and aside from adding a small fraction to the price, apparently ignored the large decrease in the visible, which showed up in large volume. The market acts strong, but as yet its activity comes in spurts. We feel there is merit in corn. Underlying factors are strong and will in time be reflected in a bigger, broader market. On recessions we would buy corn.

Oats—Ruled firm, but dull. Sentiment is a shade more favorable, due to the continued good export demand. This feature has been overlooked in some cases, but in due time will assert itself.

• • •

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—Today's was a peculiar market. Every item of news received had a strong bullish tone, but while the market was steady the advance scored at the close was very disappointing to the holders of wheat. The market opened a quarter higher on the sharp advance in Liverpool, the slackening of Northwest receipts and wet weather over the shipping district. It advanced another quarter before the buying force was spent, and then held steadily until the close despite a further advance in Liverpool, half a million less increase in the visible than was expected and materially decreased world's shipments. With this bullish news there was seemingly to be no effort made to advance wheat several attempts were made to break the price. These were unavailing and the close was at the top for the day. This week usually marks the height of the wheat shipping season and the wet weather prevalent will probably have the effect of holding down shipments for a few days. There are a number of artificial influences at work in this market, and for the time being we rather look for a decline from this level before wheat takes much of an upturn. For this reason, we favor the selling side for the moment.

• • •

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: A letter from Liverpool to St. Louis says: "The great question at the moment is how much hard and soft wheat, winter and spring, are we to get from America and Canada. In any case, we are of a strong opinion that any surplus that can be got from your side will be required and will be taken care of at better prices than these ruling at present. Germany continued to import largely, and complaints of the quality and yield are increasing, threshing results being very disappointing.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer—Barrett & Zimmerman's weekly report: Influx of the latter part of the week shows fall receipts to be assuming spring proportions. Bulk of receipts of the heavy class and of good quality. Up to the latter part of the week impossible to supply demand for loggers and draymen, but, with the closing of the harvest season, shipments begin to pour in from all quarters in sufficiently large numbers to appreciably lower prices. Demand for general purpose horses and chassers light in comparison, they holding a relative one-fourth in shipment. Medium demand wholly local. Commoners find a slow movement at somewhat lower prices. A feature of the market is the large number of farmers in with small shipments of medium and common grade that find slow movement. FEELING IS IMPROVED

At the Close And Stocks Rally From Low Point.

The Industrials Again Received the Most Bullish Attention.

New York, Oct. 9.—Substantial fractional losses were scored in a number of stocks at the opening of the market today, especially in Southern Pacific, United States Steel preferred, Pennsylvania and New York Central. The general market opened slightly below Saturday's closing but Erie and Pacific Mail gained small fractions. Great Northern preferred and Atlantic Coast Line yielded a point each.

A rally of about a point by Metropolitan Street Railway and Brooklyn Transit checked the decline, but before the market made any appreciable recovery the selling was resumed more vigorously than before. Considerable weakness developed in different parts of the list. Pittsburg, C. C. & St. Louis yielded 2½, Reading 1¾, Westinghouse Electric and Canadian Pacific 1½ and St. Paul, Northwestern, New York Central, Louisville & Nashville, Kansas City Southern preferred, Amalgamated Copper, American Car, Locomotive, Smelting and Leather 1.

The market steadied momentarily and Metropolitan Street Railway, Pacific Coast and the second preferred were marked up a point or more over Saturday. Renewed selling before noon carried prices lower than before and added other prominent stocks to the list showing important losses. Reading, Atlantic Coast Line, Northwestern, Great Northern preferred, Smelting, Locomotive and United States Express made losses of 2 and 2½, St. Paul 1⅝ and Louisville & Nashville, Illinois Central and Copper 1½.

There were numerous other losses of a point or more. Bonds were heavy at noon.

Aggressive selling ceased after the forenoon flurry, but the demand was light and little recovery resulted. Atlantic Cost Line gave way 3 points in all.

Stocks moved slowly upwards in the latter part of the afternoon and a good part of the earlier losses were restored. Reading, New York Central, Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Copper, Smelting and Locomotive recovered 1 to 1⅝. Central of Jersey and U. S. Pipe rose 3 over Saturday.

The market held its recovery well, with the late running off in the money rate, but made very slight additional advances and trading fell into extreme dullness. The closing was somewhat unsteady.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed with an easier feeling, though with an improvement from the low point of the day. There seems to be nothing new in the situation worthy of comment. We continue to feel that until money rates become more steady, or until fears of a money squeeze have been dissipated that the market will not do much except in specialties. It seems reasonable under these conditions to look for a trading market, to be content with moderate profits for the present.

• • •

Dick Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: Stocks were quite weak this morning and although the money market showed no disturbance there was some rather heavy selling and rather sharp declines all through the list. There was moderate liquidation and more or less short selling. The close was quiet and firm with most stocks showing net losses. Again the industrials received most bullish attention. London was again a seller.

• • •

Walker Brothers to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market at the opening was quite weak and there was a good deal of selling. The decline did not extend far and the traders who sold short were inclined to run easily. Prices braced up in the afternoon and there was some short covering. The market closed at nearly the best and with a better tone.

• • •

Dick to Paine, Webber & Co.: The decidedly easier tone of the call money market is the bull influence at the moment. It has encouraged the bulls and started some short covering.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 9.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 1 to 8 points in response to higher cables and good spot sales in the English market. October notices were again in circulation and immediately following the call the gain was reduced to a matter of 1 to 4 points on the active months under bear pressure and liquidation, but when it was seen that spot people were taking up the October, the market turned steady again and worked to a net gain of about 10 to 12 points on covering. Big interior receipts caused renewed liquidation on the advance, however, and the market later reacted being nervous and unsettled at a net gain of 4 points during the middle of the morning.

Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 10.10; middling gulf, 10.35. Sales, 4,300 bales. Futures closed steady at the decline. October, 9.36; November, 9.48; December, 9.65; January, 9.75; February, 9.70; March, 9.87; April, 9.91; May, 9.95.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: There was considerable liquidation this morning, but prices held well and soon everything became dull. Tonight money showed its effect but does not bring much selling. The market will probably be dull this week with small fluctuations either way.

• • •

C. H. Paine of Paine, Webber & Co.: Copper is off 5 shillings in London, all the stocks are off a little; buyers are holding off and sales have to be made at concessions. Look for more selling and less buying. Our New York people advise that the commission houses here beginning to sell stocks in that market. There will be more of it as the realization in money gets to be better recognized.

• • •

C. H. Paine of Paine, Webber & Co.: With a strong 6 per cent money market in Boston and the coppers discriminated against in loans, how can we have an advancing copper share market. It cannot be done.

PREACHES TO THE BRETHREN

Rev. Roderick J. Mooney Addresses Masons of Two Lodges.

Taking the perfect ashlar used in the building of King Solomon's temple as the subject around which he wove his sermon, Rev. Roderick J. Mooney, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church, preached to his brother Masons of Ionic and Palestine lodges at St. Luke's church yesterday morning. Quite a number of the brethren from the eastern and central parts of the city went to the church which is at Nineteenth avenue west and First street and listened to the sermon.

The church was prettily decorated with flowers, the women of the church having spared no pains to make the place attractive. Over the altar was a square and compass and the letter "G" worked in pansies. The latter particularly was a beautiful flower arrangement. After the service W. D. Underhill, worshipful master of Ionic lodge sent these two floral offerings to sick Masons with the compliments of the lodge.

Dr. Mooncy, in his sermon, pointed out that the perfect ashlar of King Solomon's temple was fitted for its place in the building long after the site of construction was reached; was so perfectly fitted that it dropped into its groove a perfect fit. He pointed a moral from this—that every man has his niche in the world, his work to do and his place to take in the affairs of men. He is fitted for these things before he comes into the world and is expected to fill his place. Masons, Mr. Mooney said, should live up to the teachings of their order which would make them the reformers of the world and in referring to the expositions of crime now going on, he declared that greater Masonic training is needed.

THOSE WHO HAVE PASSED BEYOND

Bluffton, Ind., Oct. 9.—Judge Joseph S. Dailey, ex-judge of the supreme court of Indiana, died today of apoplexy. He was 69 years old.

Milwaukee, Oct. 9.—Robert C. Bradford, treasurer for Cudahy Bros.' Packing company and for thirty years identified with the packing industry in Milwaukee, dropped dead as a result of heart failure while calling at the home of a friend at a late hour last night.

GERMANY WILL ACCEPT INVITATION TO CONFERENCE

Berlin, Oct. 9.—The foreign office says Germany will accept Russia's invitation to attend the second peace conference at The Hague on conditions that the points to be discussed shall be arranged in advance by an interchange of communications among the powers so that the objects of the conference may be defined with precision thus avoiding questions upon which any power has reservations. Germany naturally will wish the question of disarmament left off the program as one which cannot lead to practical agreement. Great Britain, it is also pointed out, has a special position of certain neutrality practices, such as the length of time a belligerent may stay and coal in a neutral port.

THEATER FAKES.

The New York public is the easiest to fool in America, says the Brooklyn Eagle. The people of the metropolis think they are the smartest that ever lived, but they swallow things that wouldn't go at all in the provinces. For more than a month, an a Turkish painter has been the sensation of a roof garden and vaudeville house in Manhattan. With him are his three wives. Thousands of people see him every week and marvel at his wonderful facility at making pictures.

Probably not one person out of a thousand that has seen the man has detected the bold and glaring fake in his pictures. To the big audiences that have seen him nightly, the pictures have appeared to be absolutely genuine.

The truth is that a three-year-old child could put the life-like figures into the pictures as well as the Turk does it. The child would find it easy work because the figures are pasted on the "canvas." The Sultan's subject makes the public believe that he paints them in, but he doesn't.

Sunday night the Turk barely averted disaster. He was pasting on the figure of a man in the back yard of a house he had sneaked on the paper. The card-board man slipped and fell half way to the floor, but the "artist" grabbed it just in time and stuck it on again. With a quick movement of the brush he stepped back and the audience thought he had painted on the man that looked so lifelike. The Turk wears loose clothing and his big form hides his fake from the audience. A man sitting at the extreme right or left of the front row can easily detect the fake.

LOWEST NEWSPAPER.

Randolph R. Freeman printed the first newspaper issued below the level of the sea, says the Kansas City Journal. It comes out at Indio, a station in the Mojave desert, on the Southern Pacific railroad. He calls it "The Submarine." He once described his journal as "the low downest newspaper on earth;" he uses paper of a "submarine tint," and announces that his office "is located 212 feet from—." His editorial departments are called "Along the Coral Strand," "The Undertow," and his funny department is dedicated to McGinty. Another Mojave desert journal is published at The Needles, and is called the Needles' Eye.

GRASSHOPPERS LUCKY.

There is a regular business in Italy of making little wire cages for grasshoppers, says the Kansas City Journal. The insect is regarded as lucky, and if one can be kept alive in the cage for a month it is believed the year will be prosperous. The superstition arose from this incident A cardinal of the Medici family invited a bishop to dine with him in his garden. The cardinal handed the bishop a glass of wine. A grasshopper fell from a tree into the wine and the bishop did not drink it. The wine was afterward found to have been poisoned.

THE COPPERS ARE LOWER

Prices Fall a Little, One of Effects of Tighter Money.

Copper stocks are feeling the effect of tighter money as well as those in the New York market. North Butte opened this morning at $55, fell to $53 and then rallied to $54. The close was at $53.50 bid and $54.25 asked. Total sales for the day were 2,361 shares.

The Bisbee stocks were easier. Calumet & Pittsburg fell off 1 point, being 38 bid and $39 asked. NO TROUBLE AT SUPERIOR.

Wisconsin Inspector Unmolested at the Great Northern Elevators.

Two policemen chaperoned a Wisconsin grain inspector at the Great Northern elevators in Superior today, but the commission's employe did not attempt to inspect grain and he was not called upon once during the day to seek protection of his blue-coated guards. Some grain was inspected in the yards at Superior but the operation and his big form hides his fake from the audience. A man sitting at the extreme right or left of the front row can easily detect the fake.

The elevator and milling interests seemed to have determined not to use physical force to rid themselves of the Wisconsin inspection, depending entirely upon the ultimate outcome of their case before the higher courts to free them from it.

HEAVY RAIN

Again Causes Suspension of Sanitary Work at New Orleans.

New Orleans, Oct. 9.—New cases of yellow fever since 6 p. m. Sunday, 7. Total to date, 3,202. Deaths today, none; total, 410.

Rain has fallen here incessantly for twenty-four hours, and all sanitary work has again been suspended. The weekly statistics sustain Dr. White's assurance that the fever is being steadily wiped out. For the week ending Oct. 7 a total of 176 new cases and twenty-two deaths were reported, against 183 new cases and twenty-three deaths in the preceding week, the showing being the best since the first week in August. From all infected points in the country come reports of steady progress. The influx of people from Louisiana still continues.

That "There never was a good small-spaced ad. of a big store, nor a bad big ad. of a big store," is not quite true; but is as near the truth as Franklin's claim that "There never was a good war, nor a bad peace."

The New Raincoats for 1905-6

Made with and without belts. Length 53 inches. Back very full and loose and tight fitting.

A raincoat is like a revolver. When you need it, you need it badly. No matter how many coats you have, your wardrobe is incomplete without one of these never-can-tell-when-you'll-need-them garments. When Old Prob says: "Rain," put on your raincoat, and if his prediction doesn't come true, it will answer all the purposes of a coat, anyhow.

We've brought out a new model, that's as smart-looking as it's useful. Made entirely without lining, except in shoulders and breast. No belts and very full loose back and comfortable. Many fresh-air women will wear them all through the coldest weather. They like them, because they are not as clumsy as a regular coat, yet their length protects the limbs. All-wool raincoats, cravenetted, $9.75, $15, $20, $25, $30 and $35.

Better be cautious in buying a cravenetted raincoat. Lots of them floating around that look like all-wool, but they're not.

NEW YORK HAS LEAD

In First Game of $10,000 Series With Philadelphia.

Twenty-Two Thousand People Attend Game at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Oct. 9.—More favorable weather conditions for the opening today of the world's championship baseball series between the New York national league club and the Philadelphia American league club could not be desired. The final details for the series were completed today when the national commission met the two umpires who are to officiate during the games and later received the certified checks of the contesting clubs for $10,000 as a guarantee that the series would be played.

The New York club and a large number of enthusiasts from that city arrived here this morning. Owing to the intense interest that has been manifested in the series, elaborate preparations were made to handle the crowds. The ticket offices at the ball park were opened at 11 o'clock, and despite the fact that the prices have been raised, the admission being 50 cents, $1 and $2, an immense throng was in waiting when the sale of tickets began. The series is the most unique in the history of baseball. In former years' similar events all the details for the games were made by the contesting clubs. In this series all the rules and regulations have for the first time been adopted by the two leagues.

During the series Manager Mack of the Philadelphia club will depend upon Plank, Bender and Coakley to pitch for his team, and Manager McGraw of New York places his dependence upon Matthewson, McGinnity and Taylor. Waddell appears to be entirely out of condition and is not expected to participate in any of the games.

There were about 22,000 persons present when play began. The batting order of the leagues was as follows:

New York—Bresnahan, c; Browne, rf; Donlin, cf; McGann, 1b; Mertes, lf; Dahlen, ss; Devlin, 3b; Gilbert, 2b; Matthewson, p.

Philadelphia—Hartzell, lf; Lord, cf; Davis, 1b; L. Cross, 3b; Seybold, rf; Murphy, 2b; M. Cross, ss; Schreckengost, c; Plank, p.

John Sheridan of the American league umpired behind the plate and Hank O'Day of the National league looked after the base decisions. The umpires decided that a hit into the crowd should count for two bases. Play began at 3:05.

First inning: First half, Bresnahan was hit by the first pitched ball that was sent in but was forced at second by Browne, M. Cross to Murphy. Donlin flied to Davis, holding Browne on first. McGann hit into the left field crowd for two bases, Brown taking third. Mertes struck out. No runs. Second half: Hartzell out, Gubert to McCall on a close play. Lord flied to Donlin. Davis out, Mathewson to McGann. No runs.

Second inning: First half—Dahlen struck out. Devlin and Gilbert bunted safely and worked a double steal. Mathewson struck out. Plank purposely walked Bresnahan, filling the bases. Browne out, M. Cross to Davis. No runs. Second half—L. Cross out, Dahlen to McGann. Seybold flied to Dahlen. Murphy out, Gilbert to McGann. No runs.

Third inning, New York, first half: Donlin out on a grounder to Davis. McGann out L. Cross to Davis. Murphy threw Mertes out at first. No runs. Third inning, Philadelphia: M. Cross was out, Devlin to McGann. Donlin dropped Schreck's fly in short center field, Schreck reaching first safely. Plank hit into a double play forcing Schreck at second. No runs.

Fourth inning: New York—Dahlen was out, Murphy to Davis. Devlin struck out. Gilbert thrown out by M. Cross to Davis. No runs.

Fourth inning: Philadelphia: Hartzell singled to center the first hit for Philadelphia. Lord bunted to Gilbert, forcing Hartzell at second. Davis forced Lord, Dahlen to Gilbert. Dahlen threw L. Cross out. No runs.

Fifth inning: New York—Mathewson singled to center but was forced at second by Bresnahan; M. Cross to Murphy. Bresnahar stole second. Browne filed to M. Cross. Donlin scored Bresnahan on a single to left and took second on the throw in. McGann reached first on balls. Lord dropped Mertes' fly and Donlin scored. Dahlen flied to Hartzell. Two runs.

Fifth inning: Philadelphia—Seybold out, Matheson to McCann. The ball struck Mathewson and hurt him so badly that he quickly retired to the bench and McGinnity began to warm up. Mathewson soon recovered and resumed his place in the pitcher's box. Murphy struck out, first man that Mathewson fanned. M. Cross out, Devlin to McCann. No runs.

Sixth inning, New York: Devlin flied to Lord. Gilbert singled to left and was thrown out trying to steal second, Schreck to M. Cross. M. Cross threw Mathewson out after a sensational stop. No runs.

Sixth inning, Philadelphia: Schreck doubled to center and took third on Plank's sacrifice, Bresnahan to McGann. Harftzell bit to Mathewson, who threw Schreck out at the plate. Lord forced Hartzell at second, Dahlen to Gilbert. No runs.

Seventh inning, New York: Bresnahan flied to Lord. Brown out, M. Cross to Davis. Donlin bunted safely and stole second. McGann out, L. Cross to Davis. No runs. Seventh inning, Philadelphia: Davis struck out to Gilbert. Seybold was thrown out by Devlin. No runs.

Eighth inning, New York: Murphy threw Mertes out. Dahlen flied to M. Cross. Devlin struck out. No runs.

Eight inning: Philadelphia—Murphy hit into the right field crowd for two bases. M. Cross struck out. Schreckengost flied to Brown, holding Murphy on second. Plank struck out. No runs.

Seventh inning, New York: Bresnahan flied to Lord. Brown out, M. Cross to Davis. Donlin bunted safely and stole second. McGann out, L. Cross to Davis. No runs. Seventh inning, Philadelphia: Davis struck out to Gilbert. Seybold was thrown out by Devlin. No runs.

Eighth inning, New York: Murphy threw Mertes out. Dahlen flied to M. Cross. Devlin struck out. No runs.

Eight inning: Philadelphia—Murphy hit into the right field crowd for two bases,

RAMSEY CAREFULLY EXAMINES EVERY PROXY VOTED AT ANNUAL MEETING OF THE WABASH ROAD

Will Try to Checkmate Attempt of Gould to Oust Him From Directorate.

Believes He Can Re-Elect Himself By the Cumulative System of Voting.

Scrutinizing of Proxies May Take the Time of Meeting For All Day.

Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 10.—The annual meeting of the Wabash railroad opened at 9 o'clock this morning, in the offices of Smith & Beckwith, the local attorneys for the railroad. Of the directors of the road there were present when the meeting opened, George J. Gould, Joseph Ramsey, Jr., Edgar T. Welles, John T. Terry, Winslow S. Pierce, E. T. Jeffery and S. C. Reynolds. All of these with the exception of Mr. Ramsey were outspoken in their determination to support Mr. Gould in everything Mr. Ramsey was equally explicit in his declaration of opposition. The situation did not change over night in the slightest degree and there was no apparent abatement in the confidence of either side. Mr. Ramsey claims that it will not be possible to retire him as a director for the reason that he controls at least one tenth of the votes and under the cumulative system of voting permissable in Ohio, he will be able to re-elect himself. The Gould party, however, regard Director Ramsey as something to be remembered and not considered. They look upon his connection with the board of directors as a matter to be spoken of in the past tense only. "Mr. Gould has fully determined that there shall be a change in the board of directors," is the way they put it.

There were rumors early today that legal steps would be taken by Mr. Ramsey's attorneys to prevent the re-election as directors of the Wabash of George Gould, Russell Sage, and James H. Hyde on the ground that they are also directors of the Missouri Pacific, which line parallels the Wabash between St. Louis and Kansas City, but up to the time of the opening of the meeting nothing had transpired in this direction.

At the opening of the meeting, Col. Doyle, acting for Mr. Ramsey, offered objections to Mr. Gould as presiding officer, on the ground that he was director of the Missouri Pacific, a parallel line to the Wabash road. He also offered objection to the three inspectors of election, Messrs. Reynolds, Colton and Newton. Mr. Ramsey, arising from his seat, said:

"I also offer objections as a stockholder."

On motion of Mr. Greer of the firm of Pierce & Greer, Mr. Gould's legal advisers, the objection was spread on the record.

After the transaction of some routine business, the regular meeting was adjourned to permit of the caucus of the bondholders. This caucus convened in the same room as the general meeting. Under the law the bondholders have the right to choose six directors, the stockholders six, and the twelve, the thirteenth.

Mr. Greer nominated as directors for the bondholders, E. T. Welles, Winslow S. Pierce, W. B. Saunders, R. C. Clowry, Russell Sage and R. M. Galloway. Col. Doyle for Mr. Ramsey demanded that the directors be chosen by ballot. This was voted down, and the men were chosen by roll call. Mr. Ramsey's attorneys demanded that a proxy be shown as each name was called. There were great numbers of these, and the operation consumed much time.

Mr. Ramsey and his attorneys insisted upon examining every proxy as the name was called, and checking it up with the list of their own proxies. The process was slow and tedious, and one and one-half hours was consumed before the letter "B" was exhausted. The probability at 11 o'clock was that the checking up of the proxies would consume nearly all of the day.

MUTUAL LIFE HAS CONTRIBUTED $90,000 TO DEFEAT DEMOCRATS

MONEY TAKEN FROM A CONFIDENTIAL FUND

Payments Justified as Being of Benefit to Company's Policy Holders.

Company Spent $250 a Day For Luncheons For Its Clerical Force.

New York, Oct. 10.—Walter R. Gillette, vice president of the Mutual Life Insurance company testified before the insurance investigation committee today that the Mutual Life contributed $40,000 to the Republican national committee campaign fund in the last election in 1904.

Vice President Gillette also stated that the Mutual Life Insurance company contributed $35,000 to the Republican National committee in 1900, and $15,000 in 1896.

He justified these contributions on the same ground as did President John A. McCall of the New York Life in the contributions of that company, saying that the St. Louis platform of the Democratic party and the free silver issue were a menace to the policy holders. Dr. Gillette said he authorized these expenditures after consultation with the president, vice presidents and some members of the board of trustees of the Mutual Life. The campaign contributions, Dr. Gillette said, came from the fund controlled by the committee on expenditures.

Vice President Gillette of the Mutual Life Insurance company testified before the investigating committee today that the Mutual Life paid $72,861 last year for luncheons for its clerical force in this city. This was at the rate of almost $250 a day.

New York, Oct. 10.—Sir John Leng, member of the British parliament, was a guest of the insurance investigating committee, at its session today. The first witness was Robert Oliphant, chairman of the expenditure committee of the Mutual Life Insurance company. From him it was expected to learn what became of $75,000 charged to legal expenditures. This sum was spent in three installments of $25,000 each, the last installment being paid the day after the presidential election, last year.

Mr. Oliphant said there was no limit to the money the committee on expenditures may authorize to be paid out. The Mutual Life maintains a confidential fund for legal expenditures. The details of payments for this fund were not brought before the board of trustees, but merely the total amounts.

Bills came to this committee from the law department, after being duly authorized by the executive officers. The moneys were usually drawn in cash.

An entry of $25,000 on the books, Jan. 30, 1904, witness said, was paid to him in cash. He was assured this was needed for the policy holders' benefit, and that all was regular.

Dr. Gillette, one of the vice presidents, told it was for law purposes. Witness did not feel responsible to the company, an executive officer having told him it was perfectly legal. He took no vouchers for this payment, nor for others in August and December, 1904.

Money was similarly expended, Mr. Oliphant said, in the term of office of his predecessor, J. Hobart Henrick, and it never occurred to Mr. Oliphant to ascertain to whom the money went, beyond the word of an executive officer. Mr. Hughes then read the by-laws governing the expenditures committee, and calling for reports of expenditures to this committee. Witness said no reports were made. In reply to questions by Mr. Hughes, the witness said he had heard contributions were made to campaign committees, and he supposed they came out of this confidential fund. Dr. Gillette had told him that campaign contributions had been made, and there was no other fund that this money could be taken from.

Mr. Hughes then asked that Dr. Gillette be summoned.

James M. Beck, counsel for the Mutual Life, asked that Mr. Grannis be excused if Dr. Gillette appeared, as there were already present the president, two vice presidents and the general manager of the company, and somebody was needed to run the business.

Mr. Hughes insisted, however, that he could excuse nobody, but would put the company to as little inconvenience as possible.

Questioning Mr. Oliphant further, Mr. Hughes brought out that there were five payments in 1903 of $25,000 each, all made in the same way as those in 1904, and out of the confidential fund.

VERY STRONG EASTERN INTERESTS ENTER THE WISCONSIN CENTRAL

New Plans of the Company Will Now Be Pushed With Renewed Vigor.

Construction of Line to Duluth Will Be Entered Upon In Near Future.

Milwaukee, Oct. 10.—"New and strong interests have come into the Wisconsin Central property. No change is intended in the plans or policies of the company; on the contrary the company will be enabled to push its plans more vigorously. Two changes have been made in the board of directors to give these new interests representation. Messrs Newton Erb, of New York and G. M. Cumming, president of the United States Mortgage & Trust company, New York, are members of the board of directors." The above statement, as a result of the annual meeting of the Wisconsin Central company, today, was given out at the conclusion of the meeting.

Mr. Erb succeeds John Crosby Brown, of New York and G. M. Cumming was elected to the place formerly held by Joseph S. Dale, of New York. These were the only changes effected in the board of directors. The board of directors will elect the list of officers at a meeting to be held in New York next month. Among the largest stockholders present at the meeting were Newton Erb of New York, Rudolf Kleybote of New York and W. A. Bradford of the Cincinnati, Cleveland & Louisville railroad. After the meeting the board of directors started on a trip of inspection over the system in President Whitcomb's private car.

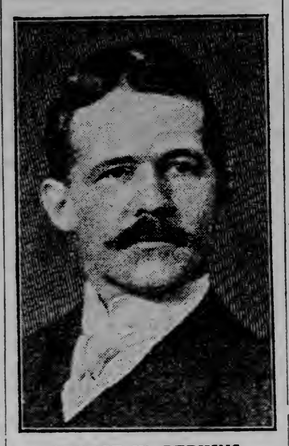

The gross earnings for the year ending June 30, 1905, were $6,650,883.56, against $6,466,176.58 for the previous year. The net earnings were $2,276,547.49, against $2,123,737.21 for the year ending June 30, 1904.

With regard to the new line connecting the system with Lake Superior points, the report says:

"During the year, contracts were entered into for the construction of 45½ miles of road from Owen, a point on the main line, twelve miles west of Abbottsford to Ladysmith, a station on the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie road.

"A survey has been made for a line from Ladysmith to Superior and Duluth, a distance of 112 miles, and it is expected shortly to enter upon the construction of this line. Real estate for terminals in Superior and Duluth has been or is being acquired, and the location secured is a suitable one for the business of the company. The line from Owen to Ladysmith will be opened in January, 1906. This line is being constructed by the Owen & Northern Railroad company and the line thence to Duluth by the Lake Superior & Southeastern company. The entire capital stock of both these companies is owned by the Wisconsin Central company."

GEORGE W. PERKINS SAILS FOR EUROPE

GEORGE W. PERKINS.

New York, Oct. 10.—George W. Perkins of J. P. Morgan & Co., and vice president of the New York Life Insurance company, who recently testified before the insurance investigation committee, sailed for Bremen today on the Kaiser Wilhelm II.

INTERCHANGE OF AMENITIES

Chicago Press Club Goes to Visit Eastern Brethren.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—The first interchange of amenities ever attempted between press clubs of the East and West as organizations was initiated, today, with the departure of a delegation of seventy members of the Chicago Press club en route to visit Washington, Baltimore and New York. In making the unique trip nearly every member of the delegation was accompanied by his wife or sister. The visitors include some of the best known newspaper men of Chicago. When the train reaches Washington tomorrow, automobiles will be in waiting to convey the guests about the city. At 12 o'clock they will be given a reception at the White House, when Opie Read will introduce the delegation to the president.

A committee of the New York Press club, composed of President George H. Rowe, St. George Kempson, E. F. Ingraham and Fritz Maurice, will meet the delegation at Washington and accompany the Chicagoans to New York. At Baltimore the party will be welcomed by Governor Edwin Warfield of Maryland, Hon. E. Clay Timmanus, mayor of Baltimore, and by a committee of the Travelers' and Merchants' association. This will be followed by a drive through the business section of the city, and an exhibition of the new buildings that have taken the places of those destroyed in the great fire of February, 1904. On the arrival of the train in New York the delegates become the guests of the New York Press club.

FORMER N. Y. BANKER GOES TO POOR FARM.

New York, Oct. 10.—Jefferson P. Raplee, once a wealthy New York banker and business associate of Jay Gould, Commodore Vanderbilt and John P. Blair, went to the poor house here yesterday.

Replee was one of the best known men along Broadway in his days. His father, who was Judge Raplee of Yates county, N. Y., left him a large fortune. In 1856 he opened a banking house at 137 Broadway, which was capitalized at $200,000, and did a yearly business of $500,000 which was a large sum at that time. Since 1867 when this bank made an assignment after some unfortunate speculation, Mr. Raplee's fortune, although invested in a new banking venture, steadily diminished. Three years ago he closed his last offices at 136 Liberty street, and began to live on the remnants of his former wealth. He was unmarried.

Yesterday, Mr. Raplee, carrying a dress suit case entered the office of the superintendent of the outdoor poor, who is an old acquaintance of the banker, and who greeted him, saying: "What can I do for you, Jefferson?"

"I have only one friend left," said Mr. Raplee, "but he won't help me any more, and I've got to live."

The superintendent had a special messenger escort the former banker to the farm colony at Staten Island, where he will be given some light employment for the remainder of his life.

REMOVAL OF MARTIAL LAW

At Tokio Has Put People In More Cheerful Mood.

Tokio, Oct. 10, 3 p. m.—Admiral Saso, inspector general of naval construction, is dead. His demise is deeply lamented in naval circles, as a heavy loss to the nation.

The abrogation of martial law has had the effect of removing, to a great extent, the business depression in this city, and the public is now feeling in a more suitable mood to extend the heartiest kind of a reception to the British fleet, which is expected to arrive at Yokohama tomorrow, Oct. 11. The officers of the American cruiser Cincinnati will be invited to attend all the functions arranged in welcome to the British officers.

PROF. BEHRING OFFERED $50,000 TO MAKE PUBLIC HIS NEW CURE

New York, Oct. 10.—Prof. Behring's announcement to the International Tuberculosis congress in Paris of a cure for consumption has aroused widespread interest in America, says today's Herald. The full reports and comments, which have been fully cabled from Paris, have interested one of New York's wealthiest and best known citizens, whose name is withheld for the present. He has authorized the Herald to announce that he will contribute $50,000 to a fund to present to Prof. Behring if he will at once announce to the world his treatment, and not withhold it for a year.

The only qualification to this offer is, that the treatment must first be pronounced successful by a competent committee of physicians, of which the donor's physician is to be a member.

FIGHT AGAINST YELLOW FEVER OVER

New Orleans, Oct. 10—The announcement by the Marine hospital service that the work of fighting mosquitoes, in which the forces of the government have been engaged since Aug. 8, as well as the fumigation of squares in which a case of fever appears, will be permanently discontinued, beginning today, is accepted as a declaration by the federal forces that the fight against the fever is about over. The cases now appearing are so few and so mild that very little difficulty is experienced in handling them.

The state board of health yesterday wrote to Governor Blanchard, requesting him to issue a proclamation withdrawing the proclamation of quarantine against ports to the south of New Orleans, which went into effect May 1.

REVOLVER SHOTS AT WEDDING FEAST

Two Guests Seriously Injured at a Manitoba Marriage Celebration.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 10.—As a result of a fight at a Galician wedding celebration that lasted till the early hours of Sunday morning, two guests, John Kirat and J. Myean, are suffering from injuries from which they may die. Two men, Mike Shumansik and J. Masinck, have been arrested as the aggressors in the fight.

The celebration was being thoroughly enjoyed until two unbidden guests appeared and began to raise a disturbance, insisting on dancing with the bride. To enforce their demands, they kept the rest of the crowd at a respectful distance by firing their revolvers in the air. When their weapons were empty, the crowd rushed in, but the two reached for other weapons and in the melee, Kirat received a nasty blow from an axe on the forhead just above the left eye and Myean was stabbed in the arm.

BOY SHOT WHILE HUNTING.

Chaska, Minn., Oct. 10.—Willie Manzik, the 16-year-old son of Mrs. M. Hunter, was accidentally shot while hunting with companions. The bullet passed through the bone of the upper arm, necessitating an amputation slightly below the shoulder. The accident was caused by the boy carelessly grasping his brother's gun by the hammer.

APPLES OF PARIS

Not So Valuable as One Owned By Colorado Man.

Denver, Colo., Oct. 10.—One apple, $4,000! Louis Lowry of this city is asking that sum for the only one of its kind in existence, and some of these days he may find some one to pay the price he demands. The apple is petrified. It was found by an Australian miner, sixteen feet below the surface of the ground, and turned over to Mr. Lowry.

"I have been offered $1,500 for the apple," says Mr. Lowry, "but I will not sell it for twice that amount."

The peculiar relic is as hard as any rock, and has a glossy brown skin like that of a russett. It is much heavier, however, than any ordinary apple of its size.

TOWNSITE PATENT FOUND.

Lost Paper Found After Search of Forty Years.

St. Cloud, Minn., Oct. 10.—After forty long years the lost townsite patent of Clearwater has been discovered in an old soap box among a lot of waste paper, and was in excellent condition.

The patent was issued May 1, 1860, to Simon Stevens as president of the village council, and bears the signature of James Buchanan, president of the United States. Instead of having it recorded with the register of deeds of Wright county, Mr. Stevens mislaid the document, and search as they did for forty years the paper could not be found. Owing to the loss of the patent considerable annoyance had been experienced of late years in making transfers of village property.

While the government patent was on file at Washington, there was nothing of record in Wright county. Clearwater townsite comprises between 200 and 300 acres.

THE WOMEN GIVE EXCELLENT EXHIBITIONS OF GOLF PLAYING

New York, Oct. 10.—There was no falling off in the attendance of spectators and if anything, keener interest was shown by everyone concerned in today's rounds of the match play for the women's national golf championship on the links of the Morris county golf club at Convent station, N. J., than during the qualifying round of medal play yesterday. The weather conditions were summer-like, with a little breeze, which on some of the holes added to the lengths of the drives.

The quality of golf exhibited by Miss Georgina Bishop of Brooklyn, Conn., and Miss Margaret Curtis of Poston in the preliminary round was probably the best ever shown by women in America. These two are tied with scores of 87 each for the low score prize. The previous women's record for this course was 89.

At the conclusion of today's round for the championship division there will be a consolation handicap for those who failed to qualify for the championship.

THE GREAT NORTHERN ISSUES NEW STOCK

Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Shares Offered Stockholders at Par.

New York, Oct. 10.—A new issue of 250,000 shares of Great Northern railway stock, to be offered to stockholders at par, was announced today in a circular, signed by J. J. Hill, president of the company. Shareholders may subscribe to the new stock to the extent of 20 per cent of their present holdings.

The funds provided by the sale of the new stock are to be used to keep up financial arrangements of a temporary character made during the Northern Pacific-Great Northern litigation and also furnish money for acquirement of new property and securities, as may be ordered by the board of directors.

Mr. Hill in his letter to the shareholders says:

"Since March, 1901, when the last issue of the capital stock of this company was offered to you for subscription, the rapid expansion of the business of your company has made necessary large expenditures, for new lines and property. For a portion of such expenditures your directors authorized financial arrangements of a temporary character, on account of the litigation in which your company was then involved. That litigation being ended, it is considered advisable that permanent provision should now be substituted for such temporary arrangements and that funds be provided to pay for additional equipment for the stocks and bonds, or both, of your subsidiary companies, and for such other securities and property as expansion of the system may require, and your board of directors may authorize from time to time be acquired.

"Believing that funds for these purposes may best be provided by an increase of the capital stock of the company your directors have adopted resolutions, subject to your ratification, providing for the issuance at par of 250,000 additional shares of stock at $100 each, alike in all respects to that now outstanding.

"This stock is now offered to stockholders who may appear of record, at the close of business, Nov. 8, 1904, for subscription pro rata to their holdings at par.

"Stockholders will be entitled to subscribe for $20 of new stock for each share of their holdings of the stock now outstanding."

FIRE HAS FATAL ENDING.

St. Paul Man Dies From Shock and Inhaling Gas.

St. Paul, Oct. 10.—Charles Joy, of the Joy automobile firm, on Minnesota street, died suddenly yesterday afternoon. He was standing near the garage on the sidewalk when an explosion occurred within. He ran upstairs with an extinguisher and then came down. He came to the front of the store, was pointing to the fire and fell to the ground.

A number of people ran to his assistance, and the aged man was carried across the street to L. L. May's store.

Here several doctors worked over him but he died within fifteen minutes.

It is believed that death was due to the shock and the inhaling of gas.

But little damage was caused by the fire at the garage, which was promptly put out by the department.

Mr. Joy was about 67 years of age and was the father of Charles P. and Samuel Joy.

JOHN W. GATES IS NOW A RESIDENT OF NEW YORK.

New York, Oct. 10.—John W. Gates, the multi-millionaire, is now a citizen of this city and state, says the World.

Last night he went to the registration place, where he gave his name, avowed his citizenship, and enrolled himself as a voter in the coming municipal election.

"Now I feel better," said the reformed Chicagoan.

FARMER'S HEAVY LOSS.

Stephen, Minn., Oct. 10.—Frank Campbell, living six miles west of here, Sunday night lost by fire his barn, containing eight horses, harness, 2,000 bushels of wheat, oats and hay, and wagon.

MINNESOTA INVENTORS.

Washington, Oct. 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following patents have been issued: Frank J. Baker of St. Cloud, guard for fish hooks; John J. Galway of Duluth, set and receding mechanism for sawmill carriages; Hugh Miscampbell of Duluth, concrete mixer; Nathan W. Warren of Austin, block molding machine; Charles O. Wyman of Anoka, harvester.

TRIES TO SAVE MOTHER.

Son Fails To Rescue Parent, Who Burns To Death.

Butte, Mont., Oct. 10.—Mrs. John Long was burned to death in a fire which destroyed her home and her 15-year-old son was seriously scorched in a heroic effort save her. Another child was rescued with great difficulty.

Mrs. Long was asleep when the fire broke out and was overcome by the smoke. Her husband and their son were returning from work when they discovered the house was on fire. The father succeeded in carrying out the younger child, and the boy made a futile effort to reach his mother's room.

NOT A STICK OF PROVINCIAL TIMBER FOR UNITED STATES

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 10.—The provincial government has seized six large booms of logs that had been sold to United States mills and were being exported. The legislature has announced that not a stick of provincial timber shall go into the United States, and that Americans must manufacture here if they use British Columbia timber. Cedar is scarce in Puget sound and is routing in the woods here, only clear cedar being taken from the tree for shingle bolts. An enormous smuggling business was being carried on, which is now being stopped by the government.

POSTPONED TO OCT. 25.

Cincinnati, Oct. 10.—The matter of hearing the application for the appointment of a receiver for the Little Kanawha syndicate, in which George J. Gould and John Ramsey of Wabash railroad fame was postponed by United States Circuit Judge John E. Richards until Oct. 25, instead of Oct. 21, as at first announced.

KING-EMPEROR DISSOLVES AUSTRIAN PARLIAMENT

Cries of "Scoundrels" Greet the Reading of the Royal Rescript.

Budapest, Oct. 10.—Parliament was prorogued today by royal rescript until Dec. 19. Acting Premier Baron Fejervary and his colleagues did not attend the brief sitting of parliament. The baron merely sent the president of the lower house the rescript signed by the king-emperor, Francis Joseph, proroguing parliament and explaining that the step was necessary from the fact that no success had been attained in forming a new cabinet on a basis which would secure parliament against disorder.

Shouts of "scoundrels" and similar epithets, mingled with queries of "Where is the constitution?" greeted the reading of the rescript, but there were no cabinet ministers present to take note of the insults hurled at them.

Count Julius Andrassy rose and denounced the ministers, who contrary to precedent, failed to appear before parliament.

"The government," he said, "has thereby shown contempt of the house and has abandoned all pretense of conforming with the laws."

Why Is our $15 Suit Just a Little Better?

FIRST—Its general effect shows no fashion plate freakishness, but thoroughbred style gentility.

SECOND—It is designed by the expert hands and brains of the foremost clothes designers in America.

THIRD—Its construction is more perfect than any suit we know of at the same price. It has hand-felled collars, natural-curved, non-breakable shoulders, bar-tacked pockets—hand-tailored buttonholes, hand-turned coat edges, one-piece-cut non-bagging trousers and its seam tapes are boiled twelve hours before being used, to prevent wrinkling.

LASTLY—It is lined with Venetian, a thoroughly dependable material which looks like satin and wears better. The entire suit is made of yarns that won't cockel, and it is practically shiny-proof.

SEE AMALGAMATION OF TWO DENOMINATIONS

Baptist Clergymen Urge Closer Relations With Free Baptists.

State Convention Adopts Resolution Bringing About a Change.

Another step toward the ultimate amalgamation of the Baptist and Free Baptist churches was taken at the session of the Baptist state convention in Pilgrim Congregational church this morning, when a resolution was adopted, at the recommendation of a committee which had conferred with a similar body from the Free Baptists, urging closer relations between the two denominations.

Such a resolution was adopted by the state convention of the Free Baptists, held in Winona in June, and the passage of both is of great significance, as Dr. L. A. Crandall, chairman of the Baptist committee, declared this morning. He and a number of other leading clergymen, who spoke in favor of the adoption of the resolution, looked upon it as another move toward the close affiliation of the denominations some time within the next few years. All of those present at the session this morning seemed to view the close relationship with pleasure, feeling that it would benefit all concerned.

"This movement for the affiliation of the Baptists and the Free Baptists is going through the entire country, and it is a good one," said Dr. Crandall. "Neither denomination can lose anything by it, and much good can come of it."

The credentials in the hands of the chairman of the enrollment committee this morning indicated that 115 delegates were entitled to vote, but some of the authorized delegates neglected to turn in their slips until this afternoon, and others did not arrive until late today, because of delayed trains.

Rev. Erle B. Hulbert of Chicago was to have delivered the principal address at this morning's session, but he did not reach Duluth until this afternoon. Rev. L. T. Ketman, also of Chicago, was not presetn to address the convention this morning on "Efficiency in the Rural Districts," and his talk will be given later.

In the place of Dr. Hulbert, Miss Gerda Paulson, a returned missionary, told of the work of the missionaries in Japan. She was to have delivered the address before the women's mission work meeting this afternoon.

Miss Paulson proved a very good talker and she made a strong plea for more money with which to carry on the work in the Far Eastern empire.

"You have been watching the great struggle between Japan and Russia in the Far East with a great deal of interest," said Miss Paulson, "and all the time another struggle has been waged, a struggle against the blackness of heathenism.

"Some people imagine that there is no longer any need of missionary work in Japan. They are mistaken for there is greater opportunity now than ever before. The people of Japan have begun to doubt their own religion and they feel that their beliefs have been merely superstition. The atheists have told them that there is no God and some of them believe that as their Gods are mere idolic superstitions, so is the God of which the Christians speak. They need to be corrected.

"But since the war, there has been a sort of religious awakening in Japan and much good work is being done. Missionaries were allowed to go among the soldiers on the battle fields after some little dickering with the government. At first, the government feared that the missionaries of one denomination could not be given the permission to go because all of them would claim the right and then it was decided that all should go in the capacity of comforters to the men. And they were comforters!

"Bibles and tracts were given to the soldiers and they did not scoff; they read them and many have been converted to Christianity.

"The missionaries saw another great opportunity for work in the military hospitals, and the women took charge. Different denominations took different hospitals and hospital ships and the wounded and sick soldiers were taught the gospel of Jesus Christ. Fifteen hundred men were thus reached in each hospital every month.

"Great work is beng done among the women of Japan. For a long time, women occupied a low station in Japanese life, although of course they were not as poorly thought of as in some of the far Eastern countries The schools have done much to enl[illegible] the Japanese women and many have been converted.

"It is not possible for the missionaries to call at homes; knock at the door; gain admittance and begin at once the work of converting the people. The Japanese would deem this rudeness and other methods have to be adopted. Many women are reached through their children. They are asked to attend mothers' meetings and in this way the missionaries become acquainted with them.

"Many girls attending the big university in Tokio and in schools at other places are converted and return to their homes during vacation times to be the only Christians in the place, perhaps. They often succeed in leading others to Christianity, however, and I recall one instance where a father, impressed by the change that Christianity had made in his daughter, asked the girl to teach him the gospel of Jesus Christ.

"The way of the mission workers is open in Japan, for the government allows the people to have their own religious ideas and Christianity has just as good a chance there as heathenism. Money is needed to carry on the work, however, and more missionaries should be sent as soon as possible."

Rev. M. Cooker of Minneapolis pointed out the need of continued work among the students at the state university in Minneapolis and told of a plan that is on foot to enlarge the scope of the university Y. M. C. A. and to induce the students to attend church services while they are at school. A committee will probably be appointed by the convention to co-operate with similar bodies from the other denominations to look after this work.

E. S. Stucker of Owatonna read the report of the committee on spiritual state of the churches, which was adopted as read. It contained no recommendations.

Three strong addresses were delivered this morning by Minnesota pastors. Rev. C. F. Bronson of Worthington, took for his topic, "True Efficiency, What is It?". Rev. E. M. Hulett of West Concord, spoke on "The Spiritual Need of Efficeint Service," and Rev. E. H. Rasmussen of Kasson lead the prayer service with an address on "Efficiency in Prayer."

The convention board is in session this afternoon and considering among other things, better methods of handling the credentials of delegates. The women's mission work is being discussed this afternoon.

Mrs. F. B. Lathrop read the report of the committee on women's foreign missions and Mrs. W. S. Barrett, the report of the committee on women's home missions.

Among the addresses this afternoon were those by Mrs. C. A. Salquist of China, Miss Rose Glen Webster of Utah and Rev. E. B. Hulbert, dean of the divinity school at the University of Chicago, who will also talk this evening, on "Factors Needful to Efficient Pastorial Work."

Dr. A. T. Fowler, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, Minneapolis, will make a plea for efficiency in city evangelism this evening. His topic is "Saving Energy of the Church in Society."

A meeting of the education board of the convention will be held at 5 o'clock this evening. The business of the Minnesota Baptist Education society will be taken up tomorrow morning, and the election of convention officers will also take place then.

A number of addresses will be given in the morning, and Wednesday afternoon will be given over to a discussion of "Efficient Evangelism," which will be participated in by Messrs. R. N. Martin, St. Paul; E. M. Atwood, Little Falls; W. T. S. Spriggs, Montlvideo, and O. A. Williams, Minneapolis. The report of the evangelistic committee will also be heard.

The annual report of the state convention board will be read at the session tomorrow evening, and G. Nygren of Duluth will discourse on "Northwestern Minnesota."

Sunday school work will be taken up Thursday, and Pillsbury academy and the Young People's society, Friday, which will be the last day of the convention.

Thursday afternoon will be devoted to sight-seeing.

WIS. CENTRAL HAS BEEN SOLD

And New Interests Are In Possession, Says Milwaukee Dispatch.

Milwaukee, Oct. 10.—The Journal today says: The Wisconsin Central has been sold and the new interests are in full control. They represent big Eastern financiers, and the change means that the line will finally enter Milwaukee, possibly by means of the Milwaukee Southern, and that it will become part of a great railroad system. The transaction is one of the biggest that has affected Milwaukee and Wisconsin commercially in many ways.

As sized up by Milwaukee financial interests and railroad men, the changes indicate a desire on the part of the Erie road to get control of the Wisconsin Central in order to get a short route by car ferry to Manitowoc for a connection with the Great Northern railroad at Minneapolis and Ashland.

Former officers of the Pere Marquette road have obtained interests in the line. The Pere Marquette was recently absorbed by the Erie. It is now figured out that the Erie also wants the Wisconsin Central, with which they connect both at Milwaukee and Manitowoc by means of the Pere Marquette ferries.

"Newman Erb, of the new directors, is a well known figure in Eastern railroad circles, and is the man who engineered the deal resulting in the change of ownership of the Central.

The Evening Wisconsin says the new interests in the Wisconsin Central present quite clearly the probability of a big combination of traffic interests which will eventually form a strong, direct through route from Duluth and Minneapolis to the seaboard at the East. The combination of lines, each practically operating individually and as a separate road, will be formed by the Wisconsin Central, operating west of the great lakes, the Pere Marquette road, operating to the eastern shores of Lake Michigan and across the lake to Manitowoc, and the Erie continuing the route to New York.

PRESBYTERIAN SYNOD

Of Wisconsin Is Holding Annual Meeting at La Crosse.

LaCrosse, Wis., Oct. 10.—The Presbyterian synod of the state of Wisconsin met here today with 170 delegates in attendance. The first day was occupied with preliminary work and the synod will not get down to business before tomorrow. The most important development of the day was reached at a meeting of the home missions committee at which it was decided that the Presbyterian missions in Wisconsin would be supported by the synod hereafter and that the general missions board for the United States would be relieved of this burden.

Dr. Moffitt, president of Washington and Jefferson college, will address the synod tomorrow.

UNANIMOUS RATIFICATION

Of Karlstad Treaty Is Now Certain By the Riksdag.

Stockholm, Oct. 10.—The probabilities now point to the practically unanimous ratification of the Karlstad treaty by the riksdag, Oct. 13. At secret sessions of both houses today details were furnished regarding the clauses relating to the manner of the destruction of the Norwegian fortifications, which appeared satisfactory to the members of the riksdag.

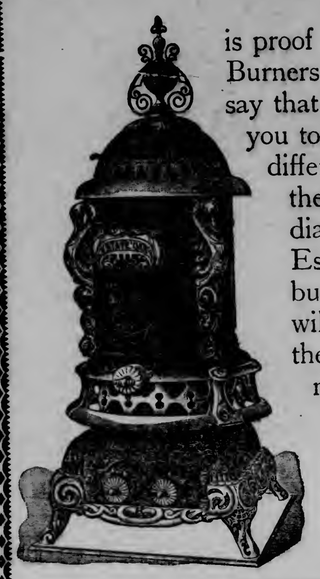

Christiana, Oct. 10.—Premier Michelsen today closed the session of the starthing which was called to consider the dratt of the treaty of Karlstad which was subsequently adopted by the Norwegian parliament. Replying to a question he said that in his capacity as a chief of state, he had not communicated with the Danish royal house regarding the throne of Norway. The regular session of the storthing commences tomorrow.

MAY LAST ALL NIGHT.

Checking Up Wabash Proxies Is a Long Job.

Toledo, Oct. 10.—At noon the caucus of Wabash bondholders was still in session, with every prospect that the examination of the proxies would continue until late in the afternoon. At the conclusion of the caucus of bondholders the caucus of stockholders was called, and it is said that this will consume twice as much time as the checking up of the proxies of the bondholders. It is probable the session will last all night.

BURNING AT THE STAKE

May Be Fate of Wenzel E. Kab at Kaukauna, Wis.

Milwaukee, Oct. 10.—A special to the Evening Wisconsin from Appleton, Wis., says: Burning at the stake, it is feared, may be the fate of Wenzel E. Kab, when he is taken before a justice in Kaukauna tomorrow morninhg to answer to a charge of murdering Michael McCarty.

District Attorney Krugmeir was warned, today, of the alleged formation of a mob of farmers north of Kaukauna assisted by a number of Kaukauna friends of the murdered farmer, who, it has been learned are planning to take the suspected man and put him to death.

Excitement prevails here and in surrounding towns since last night, when it was learned that the axe and saw presumably used to cut up the body before burning has been found on the McCarty farm and violence is now thought to be probable.

STATE BANK CLOSED.

New York, Oct. 10.—The Copper Exchange bank, a state institution at No. 20 Avenue "A", on the East side of this city, was closed today by order of the state banking department. No reason was given by the banking department for its action. An official of the bank, however, said that the closing of the institution was due to heavy withdrawals by depositors since the death a week ago of its cashier, George F. Krapp, who was killed by falling from a window of his home.

Why Is our $15 Suit Just a Little Better?

FIRST—Its general effect shows no fashion plate freakishness, but thoroughbred style gentility.

SECOND—It is designed by the expert hands and brains of the foremost clothes designers in America.

THIRD—Its construction is more perfect than any suit we know of at the same price. It has hand-felled collars, natural-curved, non-breakable shoulders, bar-tacked pockets—hand-tailored buttonholes, hand-turned coat edges, one-piece-cut non-bagging trousers and its seam tapes are boiled twelve hours before being used, to prevent wrinkling.

LASTLY—It is lined with Venetian, a thoroughly dependable material which looks like satin and wears better. The entire suit is made of yarns that won't cockel, and it is practically shiny-proof.

SEE AMALGAMATION OF TWO DENOMINATIONS

Baptist Clergymen Urge Closer Relations With Free Baptists.

State Convention Adopts Resolution Bringing About a Change.

Another step toward the ultimate amalgamation of the Baptist and Free Baptist churches was taken at the session of the Baptist state convention in Pilgrim Congregational church this morning, when a resolution was adopted, at the recommendation of a committee which had conferred with a similar body from the Free Baptists, urging closer relations between the two denominations.

Such a resolution was adopted by the state convention of the Free Baptists, held in Winona in June, and the passage of both is of great significance, as Dr. L. A. Crandall, chairman of the Baptist committee, declared this morning. He and a number of other leading clergymen, who spoke in favor of the adoption of the resolution, looked upon it as another move toward the close affiliation of the denominations some time within the next few years. All of those present at the session this morning seemed to view the close relationship with pleasure, feeling that it would benefit all concerned.

"This movement for the affiliation of the Baptists and the Free Baptists is going through the entire country, and it is a good one," said Dr. Crandall. "Neither denomination can lose anything by it, and much good can come of it."

The credentials in the hands of the chairman of the enrollment committee this morning indicated that 115 delegates were entitled to vote, but some of the authorized delegates neglected to turn in their slips until this afternoon, and others did not arrive until late today, because of delayed trains.

Rev. Erle B. Hulbert of Chicago was to have delivered the principal address at this morning's session, but he did not reach Duluth until this afternoon. Rev. L. T. Ketman, also of Chicago, was not presetn to address the convention this morning on "Efficiency in the Rural Districts," and his talk will be given later.

In the place of Dr. Hulbert, Miss Gerda Paulson, a returned missionary, told of the work of the missionaries in Japan. She was to have delivered the address before the women's mission work meeting this afternoon.

Miss Paulson proved a very good talker and she made a strong plea for more money with which to carry on the work in the Far Eastern empire.

"You have been watching the great struggle between Japan and Russia in the Far East with a great deal of interest," said Miss Paulson, "and all the time another struggle has been waged, a struggle against the blackness of heathenism.

"Some people imagine that there is no longer any need of missionary work in Japan. They are mistaken for there is greater opportunity now than ever before. The people of Japan have begun to doubt their own religion and they feel that their beliefs have been merely superstition. The atheists have told them that there is no God and some of them believe that as their Gods are mere idolic superstitions, so is the God of which the Christians speak. They need to be corrected.

"But since the war, there has been a sort of religious awakening in Japan and much good work is being done. Missionaries were allowed to go among the soldiers on the battle fields after some little dickering with the government. At first, the government feared that the missionaries of one denomination could not be given the permission to go because all of them would claim the right and then it was decided that all should go in the capacity of comforters to the men. And they were comforters!

"Bibles and tracts were given to the soldiers and they did not scoff; they read them and many have been converted to Christianity.

"The missionaries saw another great opportunity for work in the military hospitals, and the women took charge. Different denominations took different hospitals and hospital ships and the wounded and sick soldiers were taught the gospel of Jesus Christ. Fifteen hundred men were thus reached in each hospital every month.

"Great work is beng done among the women of Japan. For a long time, women occupied a low station in Japanese life, although of course they were not as poorly thought of as in some of the far Eastern countries The schools have done much to enh nce the Japanese women and many have been converted.

"It is not possible for the missionaries to call at homes; knock at the door; gain admittance and begin at once the work of converting the people. The Japanese would deem this rudeness and other methods have to be adopted. Many women are reached through their children. They are asked to attend mothers' meetings and in this way the missionaries become acquainted with them.

"Many girls attending the big university in Tokio and in schools at other places are converted and return to their homes during vacation times to be the only Christians in the place, perhaps. They often succeed in leading others to Christianity, however, and I recall one instance where a father, impressed by the change that Christianity had made in his daughter, asked the girl to teach him the gospel of Jesus Christ.

"The way of the mission workers is open in Japan, for the government allows the people to have their own religious ideas and Christianity has just as good a chance there as heatheanism. Money is needed to carry on the work, however, and more missionaries should be sent as soon as possible."

Rev. M. Cooker of Minneapolis pointed out the need of continued work among the students at the state university in Minneapolis and told of a plan that is on foot to enlarge the scope of the university Y. M. C. A. and to induce the students to attend church services while they are at school. A committee will probably be appointed by the convention to co-operate with similar bodies from the other denominations to look after this work.

E. S. Stucker of Owatonna read the report of the committee on spiritual state of the churches, which was adopted as read. It contained no recommendations.

Three strong addresses were delivered this morning by Minnesota pastors. Rev. C. F. Bronson of Worthington, took for his topic, "True Efficiency, What is It?". Rev. E. M. Hulett of West Concord, spoke on "The Spiritual Need of Efficeint Service," and Rev. E. H. Rasmussen of Kasson lead the prayer service with an address on "Efficiency in Prayer."

The convention board is in session this afternoon and considering among other things, better methods of handling the credentials of delegates. The women's mission work is being discussed this afternoon.

Mrs. F. B. Lathrop read the report of the committee on women's foreign missions and Mrs. W. S. Barrett, the report of the committee on women's home missions.

Among the addresses this afternoon were those by Mrs. C. A. Salquist of China, Miss Rose Glen Webster of Utah and Rev. E. B. Hulbert, dean of the divinity school at the University of Chicago, who will also talk this evening, on "Factors Needful to Efficient Pastorial Work."

Dr. A. T. Fowler, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, Minneapolis, will make a plea for efficiency in city evangelism this evening. His topic is "Saving Energy of the Church in Society."

A meeting of the education board of the convention will be held at 5 o'clock this evening. The business of the Minnesota Baptist Education society will be taken up tomorrow morning, and the election of convention officers will also take place then.

A number of addresses will be given in the morning, and Wednesday afternoon will be given over to a discussion of "Efficient Evangelism," which will be participated in by Messrs. R. N. Martin, St. Paul; E. M. Atwood, Little Falls; W. T. S. Spriggs, Montivideo, and O. A. Williams, Minneapolis. The report of the evangelistic committee will also be heard.

The annual report of the state convention board will be read at the session tomorrow evening, and G. Nygren of Duluth will discourse on "Northwestern Minnesota."

Sunday school work will be taken up Thursday, and Pillsbury academy and the Young People's society, Friday, which will be the last day of the convention.

Thursday afternoon will be devoted to sight-seeing.

WIS. CENTRAL HAS BEEN SOLD

And New Interests Are In Possession, Says Milwaukee Dispatch.

Milwaukee, Oct. 10.—The Journal today says: The Wisconsin Central has been sold and the new interests are in full control. They represent big Eastern financiers, and the change means that the line will finally enter Milwaukee, possibly by means of the Milwaukee Southern, and that it will become part of a great railroad system. The transaction is one of the biggest that has affected Milwaukee and Wisconsin commercially in many ways.

As sized up by Milwaukee financial interests and railroad men, the changes indicate a desire on the part of the Erie road to get control of the Wisconsin Central in order to get a short route by car ferry to Manitowoc for a connection with the Great Northern railroad at Minneapolis and Ashland.

Former officers of the Pere Marquette road have obtained interests in the line. The Pere Marquette was recently absorbed by the Erie. It is now figured out that the Erie also wants the Wisconsin Central, with which they connect both at Milwaukee and Manitowoc by means of the Pere Marquette ferries.

"Newman Erb, of the new directors, is a well known figure in Eastern railroad circles, and is the man who engineered the deal resulting in the change of ownership of the Central.

The Evening Wisconsin says the new interests in the Wisconsin Central present quite clearly the probability of a big combination of traffic interests which will eventually form a strong, direct through route from Duluth and Minneapolis to the seaboard at the East. The combination of lines, each practically operating individually and as a separate road, will be formed by the Wisconsin Central, operating west of the great lakes, the Pere Marquette road, operating to the eastern shores of Lake Michigan and across the lake to Manitowoc, and the Erie continuing the route to New York.

UNANIMOUS RATIFICATION

Of Karlstad Treaty Is Now Certain By the Riksdag.

Stockholm, Oct. 10.—The probabilities now point to the practically unanimous ratification of the Karlstad treaty by the riksdag, Oct. 13. At secret sessions of both houses today details were furnished regarding the clauses relating to the manner of the destruction of the Norwegian fortifications, which appeared satisfactory to the members of the riksdag.

Christiana, Oct. 10.—Premier Michelsen today closed the session of the starthing which was called to consider the draft of the treaty of Karlstad which was subsequently adopted by the Norwegian parliament. Replying to a question he said that in his capacity as a chief of state, he had not communicated with the Danish royal house regarding the throne of Norway. The regular session of the storthing commences tomorrow.

It is probable the session will last all night.

BURNING AT THE STAKE

May Be Fate of Wenzel E. Kab at Kaukauna, Wis.

Milwaukee, Oct. 10.—A special to the Evening Wisconsin from Appleton, Wis., says: Burning at the stake, it is feared, may be the fate of Wenzel E. Kab, when he is taken before a justice in Kaukauna tomorrow morninhg to answer to a charge of murdering Michael McCarty.

District Attorney Krugmeir was warned, today, of the alleged formation of a mob of farmers north of Kaukauna assisted by a number of Kaukauna friends of the murdered farmer, who, it has been learned are planning to take the suspected man and put him to death.

Excitement prevails here and in surrounding towns since last night, when it was learned that the axe and saw presumably used to cut up the body before burning has been found on the McCarty farm and violence is now thought to be probable.

STATE BANK CLOSED.

New York, Oct. 10.—The Copper Exchange bank, a state institution at No. 20 Avenue "A", on the East side of this city, was closed today by order of the state banking department. No reason was given by the banking department for its action. An official of the bank, however, said that the closing of the institution was due to heavy withdrawals by depositors since the death a week ago of its cashier, George F. Krapp, who was killed by falling from a window of his home.

THE PETER WHITE, NEW STEAMSHIP NAMED AFTER NOTED CITIZEN OF MARQUETTE AND PIONEER OF LAKE SUPERIOR REGION.

Accompanying this picture is a picture of the new steamer Peter White of the Presque Isle Transportation company's fleet which made her first trip here Saturday. The Peter White was built at the Ecorse yard of the Great Lakes Engineering works this year, and was launched there on Aug. 3. The White and the Powell Stackhouse, which were launched the same day at different yards, are identical in dimensions, which are 524 feet over all in length 504 feet keel, 54 feet beam and 30 feet deep. They are equipped with triple expansion engines, 23, 38 and 63-inch cylinder diameters, by 42-inch stroke, supplied with steam from two Scotch boilers, 14 feet 9 inches diameter and 12 feet long, fitted with induced draft, and allowed a pressure of 175 pounds a square inch. Each is designed to have a capacity of 9,000 tons.

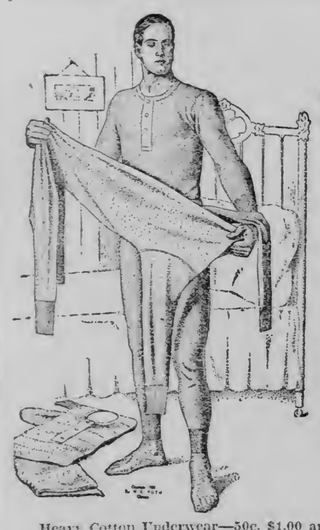

An examination of the White shows to what pains the large operating companies go to entertain their occasional passengers on these freight steamers. The passenger accommodations on the White are elegant, though by no means the most complete among the vessels of the fleet. It is doubtful, however, if any vessel on the lakes has her passenger accommodation furnished in such exquisite woodwork. The woodwork is of dark oak and of beautiful design.

Capt. S. N. Murphy will command the White, and Fred D. Philip will be her first engineer.

SALOON LAW IS TESTED

Ordinance Regulating Sale of Liquors Attacked in Supreme Court.

Cases Brought By W. C. T. U. Women Are Fought to Finish.

The Duluth saloon ordinance was attacked yesterday in the state supreme court by Attorney Alexander Marshall, acting for Julius Abrahamson, a Superior street liquor dealer.

The case was one of those that arose out of the crusade headed by the W. C. T. U. women, in which a number of saloon men were arrested for keeping their places of business open on Sunday.

The dealers caught in the raid were brought into the municipal court, tried before Judge Windom, and convicted. Mr. Marshall, acting for the dealers, asked for a stay of judgment until an appeal could be taken, and the case of Julius Abrahamson was carried to the supreme court.

The attorney asks that the decision of Judge Windom be reversed on two grounds; first, because the verdict was not warranted by the evidence; and secondly, because the ordinance under which the conviction was secured, is illegal.

The point raised against the ordinance is that the title does not properly express the subject matter of the law, and that therefore it is invalid under the constitution.

The ordinance is entitled an ordinance to regulate "the sale of intoxicating liquors." In the body of the ordinance is a provision that says that saloons shall not be kept open on Sundays, and it was under this clause that the conviction was secured in the municipal court.

Mr. Marshall argued that this clause of the ordinance is not in keeping with the title, and that no hint of it is given by the title, and that the ordinance is therefore invalid.

Assistant City Attorney McKeon had charge of the city's side of the case, and he argued, under recent decisions handed down by other state supreme courts, that anything that could reasonably come under the title of an ordinance could be included, the intent of the law being that any person looking for the law on any point could find it under the proper head. He argued that regulations regarding the closing of saloons on Sunday could very properly come under the head of an ordinance regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors.

The question was taken under consideration by the court, and a decision will be handed down later.

You may safely plan vacations for yourself and for every one of your employes—if you do, not give your store advertising any vacation.

CLAIM TO BE FIGHTING BIG GROCERY COMBINE

M. M. Gasser & Co. Begin Action Against the Alleged Trust.

Firm Would Secure an Injunction Against Leading Firms.

Preliminary skirmishing in what is likely to be a long-drawn-out legal battle between M. M. Gasser & Co. and an alliance comprising the Retail Grocers' association, the Michigan street commission houses and the wholesale grocery companies of the city, was begun before Judge Cant this morning. When the noon adjournment was taken only one witness had been called, and his testimony was very brief.

The opposing forces in this suit, in which M. M. Gasser & Co. are asking for an injunctional order against each and every one of the defendant individuals or corporations, are represented as follows: M. M. Gasser & Co., by John B. Arnold; Duluth Retail Grocers' association, by H. B. Fryberger; Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company, by Mr. Fryberger; Gowan-Peyton-Twohy company, by Arthur Crassweller, and the Michigan street commission houses, several in number, by H. H. Phelps, A. Booth & Co. and the Stone-Ordean-Wells Co., both defendants, were not represented this morning by counsel, nor did either file an answer to the complaint.

As a conspiracy is charged contrary to the state anti-trust law, the state is represented by County Attorney John B. McClintock.

The case was opened by Mr. Arnold, who read the complaint, a document of some length, which sets forth the allegations, in general, that the members of the grocers' association have combined and conspired to hold up the public in the matter of prices; to fix and limit prices of groceries and produce; to prevent competition; to monopolize the retail grocery trade; to force out of business independent dealers; to compel any persons going into the grocery business to pay a tax.

It is also alleged that the association has attempted to intimidate the plaintiff company and has threatened to place pickets in front of the Gasser grocery, send out circulars to customers and to cause wholesalers to discriminate against the Gasser company in the matter of wholesale prices for groceries and produce.

M. M. Gasser & Company claim they have been injured in business and that they will be forced out of business unless the court grants a restraining order.

Mr. Fryberger read the answer of the Grocers' association in which a general denial is set up of the charges made in the complaint. Denial is made of knowledge of the solvency of M. M. Gasser & Company. The association claims that M. M. Gasser & Company charged fancy prices for their goods; advertised fake sales, and that M. M. Gasser, during the last election did a great deal of public letting.

The association denies that it is a secret organization, but that it has been organized to protect its members from bad accounts; that it does not attempt to fix prices at which goods must be sold.

Mr. Freyberger stated that the association, since this action was started, has eliminated the price card for the reason it might be in violation of the state laws of 1899.

The defendant association alleges in its answer that it is necessary for grocers to get 18 to 20 per cent profit on their goods in order to meet and continue to do business. Denial is made of any attempt at conspiracy, to boycott or to picket any place. The association also denies that there was any agreement that the wholesalers were to discriminate between independent dealers and members of the association.

The answer alleges M. M. Gasser & Company are not honest grocers. Denial is made that the association ever interfered in the business of M. M. Gasser & Company and allegation is made that the plaintiff company made false charges in its complaint.

Mr. Phelps, representing the commission houses, including Fitzsimmons-Derrig company, Victor company, Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit company, and others, entered a general denial to the complaint wherein it affects the commission houses. The commission concerns deny any knowledge of a combination or conspiracy of the retail grocers, or that they have ever entered into any agreement to refuse to sell to Mr. Gasser or anybody else.

Mr. Fryberger called attention to the answer of Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company, denying the charges of the complaint.

Mr. Crassweller read the answer of the Gowan-Peyton-Twohy company, which was practically a general denial of the allegations as affecting the specific defendant.

Mr. Fryberger moved for a judgment for the association on the pleadings. This was followed by similar motions by the other defendants represented. Judge Cant denied all the motions.

Mr. Phelps and Mr. Crassweller objected to any testimony on the ground that there was nothing in the complaint to justify the action. Mr. Fryberger objected on the same grounds in behalf of the association and the Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company. Judge Cant overruled all the objections.

A. W. Harper of Plainfield, Ill., who is advertising agent for a large soap company, was the first witness called by M. M. Gasser & Co. Mr. Harper said he had a talk about a month ago with Charles Phelps, salesman for the Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company, in which Mr. Phelps said Gasser was cutting prices on goods, particularly soaps, and it would be a good plan not to take any order from him. Objection was made by the opposing counsel to any testimony by Mr. Harper or to anything said by Mr. Phelps, but was overruled by the court. Mr. Arnold's contention was that he would show a continuance of the alleged conspiracy since the case has been started.

Mr. Harper denied having a conversation on the subject of M. M. Gasser & Co. with anyone else.

Questioned by the court, Mr. Harper said his house did not care to do business with firms cutting prices on its goods. He said he had information that M. M. Gasser & Co. was cutting prices on one brand of his company's soap.

Mr. Harper was a most unwilling witness for the prosecution, all his answers being given with evident reluctance.

A motion by Mr. Crassweller to strike out Mr. Harper's testimony was denied.

The court then adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

NORTH BUTTE VERY GOOD

W. E. Upham Inspects Mine and Returns Very Enthusiastic.

Also Visited Diggings In Arizona—Showing Up Well.

William E. Upham, son of E. S. Upham of 1427 East First street, has just come here from the West and Southwest, and on the way inspected different copper properties, and is enthusiastic over the prospects of the North Butte claims. Mr. Upham is a mining engineer and was able to better appreciate what was being done and what was going to be done than a layman making the same trip would.

"One vein averaging thirty feet in width contains wonderfully rich values in chalcocite over a length of about 450 feet," said Mr. Upham, in discussing the North Butte properties this morning. "Another vein, averaging eighteen feet in width, contains rich values in energite. This is opened for a length of about 400 feet. They have not reached the confines of the veins on either claim yet, and they will probably find just as rich deposits on the other North Butte properties.

"The ore shipped from the North Butte claims averages 9 or 10 per cent copper and contains good gold and silver deposits. North Butte stock should be a very good investment now.

"I spent an entire morning at the claims with the manager. The Speculator shaft is being repaired and the manager told me it would be running by Dec. 1. He expects that the extraction will increase from 600 tons daily to something like 800 or 900 tons daily.

"I also spent three days at Bisbee and looked over most of the claims there. The Calumet and Arizona seemed to be opened up the most except, of course, the Copper Queen. The Calumet and Arizona company has been opening up new bodies right along and so have the Lake Superior and Pittsburg and the Pittsburg and Duluth people.

"The Junction and Calumet and Pittsburg districts seemed the most promising to me although the Oliver shaft on the Calumet and Arizona property is showing up very well. The Warren claim is a very promising one, but it will probably not be worked much until more work is done at the Calumet and Pittsburg and Junction claims.

"When I was in Bisbee last May, the Calumet and Arizona smelter was being enlarged and is probably refinished by this time. It will probably be able to handle ore from the Lake Superior and Pittsburg and the Pittsburg and Duluth claims, too.

"I also visited mining properties at Globe, Clifton, Jerome and Morenci, but did not go below the ground at any of those places I merely looked at their surface plants. The Globe properties looked very promising to me then. Of course I saw the new smelter of the Old Dominion Copper Mining and Smelting company. The company spent two millions in improvements in one year and at the end of that time only had to pay off an indebtedness of $400,000, which shows that their claims are worth something. I was also favorably impressed with the Green Consolidated company's claims at Cannea, near Bisbee."

WHERE ICE KING SITS ON THRONE

Georgetown, Colo., Oct. 10.—Away up on the top of McClelland mountain, a dozen miles from Georgetown, and at an altitude of 13,600 feet above sea level, is one of the most picturesque bits of scenery to be found in the whole of Colorado. It is a perpetual palace of ice, formed by nature in the abandoned tunnel of what was the first silver mine ever discovered in this state. The ice crystals, formed by the percolation of water through earth to air in the intense cold of a high altitude, have taken all sorts of weird and peculiar forms. There are bears and elephants and turtles and other animals, birds and human figures galore. At one point in the tunnel a grim white figure, with arm upraised and knife in hand, seems to be pursuing the figure of a girl, whose long, flowing hair is fluttering in the wind as she runs, and the whole is pictured with such apparent fidelity that one is reminded irresistably of rocks carved by ancient Aztecs in regions farther south.

The history of this tunnel is coincident with the discovery of silver in Colorado. Early in April, 1859, placer gold was discovered in Clear creek canon, near the present site of Idaho Springs, and for several years thereafter the sluice boxes of the miners dotted every available bar for miles up and down the little stream. At first the Clear creek prospectors hunted gold only, the existence of silver being unknown. On Sept. 14, 1864, however, Governor Robert W. Steele, with two companions, discovered the outcrop of what was afterward called the Johnson lode, and a little investigation showed that it assayed from $200 to $500 in silver per ton. The resulting excitement flooded every hill in the vicinity with an army of picks and shovels, and the future of the Clear Creek district became assured.

A number of years ago, however, the old Johnson lode, after a production of millions in silver, was practically abandoned by its owners as worked out. Then the ice crystals began to form from percolation. It is always cold on the mountain top. The temperature goes away below freezing every night of the year, and zero weather is constant for months at a time. Season by season the ice becomes more beautiful and enchanting, though the crystal palace is absolutely unknown as yet by the casual tourist. At present an electric railway, running from Silver Plume to the top of McClelland mountain, is under construction, and it is expected that by next year the old Johnson mine will be thrown open to those harder tourists who are willing to brave the altitude for the sake of a new sensation.

THE PETER WHITE, NEW STEAMSHIP NAMED AFTER NOTED CITIZEN OF MARQUETTE AND PIONEER OF LAKE SUPERIOR REGION.

Accompanying this picture is a picture of the new steamer Peter White of the Presque Isle Transportation company's fleet, which made her first trip here Saturday. The Peter White was built at the Ecorse yard of the Great Lakes Engineering works this year, and was launched there on Aug. 3. The White and the Powell Stackhouse, which were launched the same day at different yards, are identical in dimensions, which are 524 feet over all in length, 504 feet keel, 54 feet beam and 30 feet deep. They are equipped with triple expansion engines, 23, 38 and 63-inch cylinder diameters, by 42-inch stroke, supplied with steam from two Scotch boilers, 14 feet 9 inches diameter and 12 feet long, fitted with induced draft, and allowed a pressure of 175 pounds a square inch. Each is designed to have a capacity of 9,000 tons.

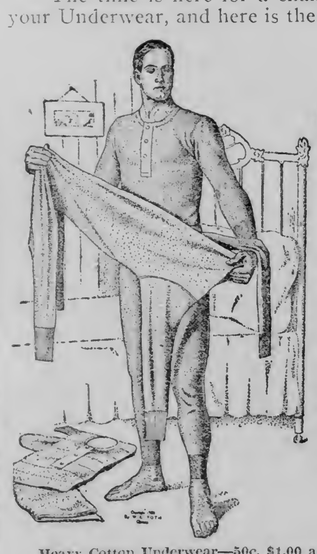

An examination of the White shows to what pains the large operating companies go to entertain their occasional passengers on these freight steamers. The passenger accommodations on the White are elegant, though by no means the most complete among the vessels of the fleet. It is doubtful, however, if any vessel on the lakes has her passenger accommodation furnished in such exquisite woodwork. The woodwork is of dark oak and of beautiful design.

Capt. S. N. Murphy will command the White, and Fred D. Philip will be her first engineer.

SALOON LAW IS TESTED

Ordinance Regulating Sale of Liquors Attacked in Supreme Court.

Cases Brought By W. C. T. U. Women Are Fought to Finish.

The Duluth saloon ordinance was attacked yesterday in the state supreme court by Attorney Alexander Marshall, acting for Julius Abrahamson, a Superior street liquor dealer.

The case was one of those that arose out of the crusade headed by the W. C. T. U. women, in which a number of saloon men were arrested for keeping their places of business open on Sunday.

The dealers caught in the raid were brought into the municipal court, tried before Judge Windom, and convicted. Mr. Marshall, acting for the dealers, asked for a stay of judgment until an appeal could be taken, and the case of Julius Abrahamson was carried to the supreme court.

The attorney asks that the decision of Judge Windom be reversed on two grounds; first, because the verdict was not warranted by the evidence; and secondly, because the ordinance under which the conviction was secured, is illegal.

The point raised against the ordinance is that the title does not properly express the subject matter of the law, and that therefore it is invalid under the constitution.

The ordinance is entitled an ordinance to regulate "the sale of intoxicating liquors." In the body of the ordinance is a provision that says that saloons shall not be kept open on Sundays, and it was under this clause that the conviction was secured in the municipal court.

Mr. Marshall argued that this clause of the ordinance is not in keeping with the title, and that no hint of it is given by the title, and that the ordinance is therefore invalid.

Assistant City Attorney McKeon had charge of the city's side of the case, and he argued, under recent decisions handed down by other state supreme courts, that anything that could reasonably come under the title of an ordinance could be included, the intent of the law being that any person looking for the law on any point could find it under the proper head. He argued that regulations regarding the closing of saloons on Sunday could very properly come under the head of an ordinance regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors.

The question was taken under consideration by the court, and a decision will be handed down later.

You may safely plan vacations for yourself and for every one of your employes—if you do, not give your store advertising any vacation.

CLAIM TO BE FIGHTING BIG GROCERY COMBINE

M. M. Gasser & Co. Begin Action Against the Alleged Trust.

Firm Would Secure an Injunction Against Leading Firms.

Preliminary skirmishing in what is likely to be a long-drawn-out legal battle between M. M. Gasser & Co. and an alliance comprising the Retail Grocers' association, the Michigan street commission houses and the wholesale grocery companies of the city, was begun before Judge Cant this morning. When the noon adjournment was taken only one witness had been called, and his testimony was very brief.

The opposing forces in this suit, in which M. M. Gasser & Co. are asking for an injunctional order against each and every one of the defendant individuals or corporations, are represented as follows: M. M. Gasser & Co., by John B. Arnold; Duluth Retail Grocers' association, by H. B. Fryberger; Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company, by Mr. Fryberger; Gowan-Peyton-Twohy company, by Arthur Crassweller, and the Michigan street commission houses, several in number, by H. H. Phelps. A. Booth & Co. and the Stone-Ordeun-Wells Co., both defendants, were not represented this morning by counsel, nor did either file an answer to the complaint.

As a conspiracy is charged contrary to the state anti-trust law, the state is represented by County Attorney John B. McClintock.

The case was opened by Mr. Arnold, who read the complaint, a document of some length, which sets forth the allegations, in general, that the members of the grocers' association have combined and conspired to hold up the public in the matter of prices; to fix and limit prices of groceries and produce; to prevent competition; to monopolize the retail grocery trade; to force out of business independent dealers; to compel any persons going into the grocery business to pay a tax.

It is also alleged that the association has attempted to intimidate the plaintiff company and has threatened to place pickets in front of the Gasser grocery, send out circulars to customers and to cause wholesalers to discriminate against the Gasser company in the matter of wholesale prices for groceries and produce.

M. M. Gasser & Company claim they have been injured in business and that they will be forced out of business unless the court grants a restraining order.

Mr. Fryberger read the answer of the Grocers' association in which a general denial is set up of the charges made in the complaint. Denial is made of knowledge of the solvency of M. M. Gasser & Company. The association claims that M. M. Gasser & Company charged fancy prices for their goods; advertised fake sales, and that M. M. Gasser, during the last election did a great deal of public letting.

The association denies that it is a secret organization, but that it has been organized to protect its members from bad accounts; that it does not attempt to fix prices at which goods must be sold.

Mr. Freyberger stated that the association, since this action was started, has eliminated the price card for the reason it might be in violation of the state laws of 1899.

The defendant association alleges in its answer that it is necessary for grocers to get 15 to 20 per cent profit on their goods in order to meet and continue to do business. Denial is made of any attempt at conspiracy, to boycott or to picket any place. The association also denies that there was any agreement that the wholesalers were to discriminate between independent dealers and members of the association.

The answer alleges M. M. Gasser & Company are not honest grocers. Denial is made that the association ever interfered in the business of M. M. Gasser & Company and allegation is made that the plaintiff company made false charges in its complaint.

Mr. Phelps, representing the commission houses, including Fitzsimmons-Derrig company, Victor company, Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit company, and others, entered a general denial to the complaint wherein it affects the commission houses. The commission concerns deny any knowledge of a combination or conspiracy of the retail grocers, or that they have ever entered into any agreement to refuse to sell to Mr. Gasser or anybody else.

Mr. Fryberger called attention to the answer of Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company, denying the charges of the complaint.

Mr. Crassweller read the answer of the Gowan-Peyton-Twohy company, which was practically a general denial of the allegations as affecting the specific defendant.

Mr. Fryberger moved for a judgment for the association on the pleadings. This was followed by similar motions by the other defendants represented. Judge Cant denied all the motions.

Mr. Phelps and Mr. Crassweller objected to any testimony on the ground that there was nothing in the complaint to justify the action. Mr. Fryberger objected on the same grounds in behalf of the association and the Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company. Judge Cant overruled all the objections.

A. W. Harper of Plainfield, Ill.; who is advertising agent for a large soap company, was the first witness called by M. M. Gasser & Co. Mr. Harper said he had a talk about a month ago with Charles Phelps, salesman for the Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company, in which Mr. Phelps said Gasser was cutting prices on goods, particularly soaps, and it would be a good plan not to take any order from him. Objection was made by the opposing counsel to any testimony by Mr. Harper or to anything said by Mr. Phelps, but was overruled by the court. Mr. Arnold's contention was that he would show a continuance of the alleged conspiracy since the case has been started.

Mr. Harper denied having a conversation on the subject of M. M. Gasser & Co. with anyone else.

Questioned by the court, Mr. Harper said his house did not care to do business with firms cutting prices on its goods. He said he had information that M. M. Gasser & Co. was cutting prices on one brand of his company's soap.

Mr. Harper was a most unwilling witness for the prosecution, all his answers being given with evident reluctance.

A motion by Mr. Crassweller to strike out Mr. Harper's testimony was denied.

The court then adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

NO DAMAGES FOR IGNASIAK

Jean Du Luth Company Wins $4,000 Suit By a Farmer.

The Jean Du Luth company won out in the fire damage suit brought against it by Jan Ignasiak, a settler who claimed that his timber and farm buildings were destroyed by a forest fire starting from a stump pile fire on the Jean Du Luth stock farm. He sued for $4,000.

The verdict in favor of the stock farm company was reached last evening and was returned in open court this morning.

IMPROVE THE MISSISSIPPI

The Slogan of Ninety Delegates In Session at La Crosse.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 10.—Ninety delegates, representing the states of Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois and Missouri, and fifty cities and towns on the river between Minneapolis and Cairo, were in attendance when the annual convention of the Upper Mississippi River Improvement association was called to order today. President Thomas Wilkinson of Burlington, Iowa, and Secretary L. B. Boswell of Quincy, Ill., submitted their reports, and the discussion of them occupied the greater part of the first session. The most important feature of the president's address was the report of the government engineers, who have estimated, under authority of an act passed by the last congress, the cost of deepening the channel of the upper river to a depth of six feet in low water. This report showed that the work would cost $19,860,348, and that the amount could be expended under the continuous contract system during a period of years.

John L. Vance of Columbus, Ohio, president of the Ohio River Improvement association, addressed the convention and promised the co-operation of the Ohio river interests in securing the necessary improvements on the Mississippi.

At the close of the afternoon session the convention in a body made an inspection trip of the Mississippi, in this vicinity, and noted where improvements were necessary. The convention will be in session two days.

MONEY TO FAMILY.

Dougherty Is Said To Have Transferred Large Sums.

Peoria, Oct. 10.—The investigation of the Dougherty case was brought to a temporary close by the failure of H. F. Merle, secretary of the A. H. Andrews Furniture company of Chicago to appear before the jury, in response to a summons issued for him last Friday.

The splendid home of the Dougherty's was attached by the sheriff this morning, together with everything else of value belonging to the accused in Peoria. Search will be made in other places for property, which will also be attached as fast as discovered.

It is reported that Dougherty recently transferred $25,000 to each of his sons, and a still larger amount to his wife.

HALF BACK IRSFIELD ILL WITH PNEUMONIA.

Minneapolis, Oct. 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—James Irsfield, star half back of the Minnesota football team, and selected by Camp in 1903 for all-Western right half back, has fallen ill with pneumonia, complicated with pleurisy, and will be out of the game this year. He went in after practice Saturday and stood while heated under a cold shower for twenty minutes.

The Japs Are Expert Gunners.

Most of the recent fighting in the Sea of Japan was at a distance of five miles and with a heavy sea, yet the Japs succeeded in sinking nearly all of the Russian ships. The size of the navy is not nearly so important as having good men behind the guns. The claims made by many medicines are not very important unless they are backed by a substantial record of cures. Such is the case with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. During its 52 years' experience it has cured hundreds of persons who suffered from dyspepsia, indigestion, costiveness, headache, bloating, heartburn, biliousness, insomnia, kidney troubles or malaria, fever and ague when other remedies failed. There is no reason why it should not benefit you as well. Try a bottle today and let it prove its merit.

ALD. GETCHELL RETURNS.

Back From Extensive Trip Through West---Duluth Good Enough.

Alderman W. B. Getchell of West Duluth returned last night from a month's trip through the West. He headed into the Southwest by way of Omaha, Denver, Colorado Springs, skipped along the coast to Portland, Or., and Seattle, Wash., where he visited for a time, and then came back over the Canadian Pacific. Mr. Getchell says that the West is a wonderful country, is developing rapidly, and is making wonderful strides in the way of progress; but—

Here the alderman gazes out lovingly on muddy Central avenue, and says:

"After all, don't you know, you can look around wherever you wish, and there's no place like home. Duluth is plenty good enough for me. I suppose that 'grass looks green on hills that are far away,' but at any rate I have heard a great deal about the West, and would not have been satisfied until I had seen it. Now that I have seen it I admire it, but I like Duluth better, and believe we have a greater future here."

RAILROADS

CONTRACT AWARDED

Work on the Southeastern Road Expected to Begin Soon.

Serious Shortage of Cars Will Continue For Several Weeks.

Although no official announcement has been made, it is said to be known for a practical certainty that contracts have been awarded for the construction of the Lake Superior & Southeastern railway from Ladysmith to Duluth, and that work will be carried on in the heavy cuts during the winter, so that the completion of the road next summer will not be delayed by the heavy work.

It is now expected that the Owen & Northern railway, as the Lake Superior & Southeastern is known south of Ladysmith, Wis., will be completed as far as Ladysmith before winter sets in sufficiently to stop the work. The contracts called for the completion of the line to Ladysmith by Oct. 1, but the weather during the summer was so bad that the work of construction was slow, and for a time it was feared that it would be impossible to complete that portion of the road this year. The Western harvest called away many laborers, cutting down the railroad crews, and the contractors have had a lot of trouble in keeping full crews. A good many laborers for the work have been shipped into Wisconsin by the Duluth employment agents.

The labor situation became so bad that the railway company issued an edict that compelled the contractors to advance wages and scour the cities for additional help. This had the desired effect, and for the past few weeks the crews have been practically as large as desired.

The weather of the last three weeks has enabled great progress to be made. The work of laying the rails has been begun at Owen and will soon be started from the Ladysmith end of the line. It is understood that rails also will be delayed from points where other roads cross the Owen & Northern.

That trains will be running between Duluth and Chicago over the new line before the end of next year now seems to be an assured fact.

CAR SITUATION UNCHANGED.

Grain Rotting in the Northwest Because of Car Shortage.

"No improvement in the car situation will be noted for at least a month, and probably it will be a longer time than that before there is any material change," said W. L. White of Minneapolis, commercial agent of the Pere Marquette system, who is in the city today. "The shortage on all the grain-carrying roads is quite serious just now, and the companies are entirely unfitted to cope with the situation.

"The regular commercial shipments are affected to some extent by the shortage. This is more noticeable in Duluth, perhaps, than in any other city of the Northwest, for Duluth is out of the regular line of travel, and the number of foreign cars coming here loaded fall short of the number required to care for the shipments from here to outside points. In the Twin Cities there are enough cars coming in all the time to handle the outgoing shipments. They are pressed into service, both going and coming, but many of the cars brought to Duluth come this way empty. At this busy time it is very difficult to prevail upon the different foreign companies to send empties to the Head of the Lakes, and consequently the shortage of cars for commercial purposes is more marked here than elsewhere."

Local freight officials of the several roads entering Duluth are exerting every effort to keep the regular trade supplied with the necessary foreign cars, but they are having a hard time accomplishing this end. The shipments of lumber and coal out of Duluth are heavy just now, making the shortage all the more apparent.

The following report of Hankinson, N. D., is about what one can find anywhere in the Northwest:

"Farmers throughout this section are complaining of the lack of cars in which to ship their grain. A large quantity of wheat has already been threshed out and is now at the stations, but the railroads are unable to furnish means of transporting it further. At some points the grain is left beside the track in wagons, each wagon being loaded to its utmost capacity with sacks of wheat. At other places, where the wheat was brought to town in the wagon boxes, the grain has been dumped in huge heaps beside the track, and is rotting from exposure to the weather and contact with the ground."

BUYS CALIFORNIA ROADS.

L. E. Hanchett's Purchases Believed To Be For Western Pacific.

San Francisco, Oct. 10.—A railroad deal affecting this city and San Jose and the intervening peninsula has been perfected here. L. E. Hanchett has bought for $500,000 in cash the Santa Clara Interurban Railroad company. He has also purchased for $800,000 the San Jose and Santa Clara railroad. Of the purchase price, he has paid down $50,000 in cash to bind the bargain.

The presumption is strong that Hanchett is acting for the Western Pacific people and that they intend to have an electric system south from this city as a feeder for their main line.

The franchise for the entire distance, including the streets in San Jose, is for an electric road for the handling of freight, passengers and express. The company has a stock issue of $5,000, none of which has been sold to outsiders, and all of which was turned over to Hanchett yesterday. The franchise in question and the right of way bought across private property are the two valuable assets which Hanchett has bought.

BUYS TERMINALS AT TACOMA

Milwaukee Now Owns $1,000,000 Worth of Property There.

Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 10.—The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway company yesterday afternoon purchased more than 100 acres of tide land property located on the water front, for which they paid in excess of $750,000, making almost a million dollars worth of terminal property now owned in Tacoma by the Milwaukee. The property adjoins the holdings secured secretly at a cost of $100,000 more than a year ago.

ALLEN GETS A PROMOTION.

Made City Passenger Agent of Baltimore & Ohio at Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Royal Allen has been appointed city passenger agent of the B. & O. road at Chicago, succeeding Frank C. Wells, who has been retired. Mr. Allen has filled the position of secretary to B. N. Austin, general passenger agent for a number of years, and his promotion is a recognition of merit and in line with the policy of President Murray in filling vacancies with men in service. He entered railroad work as a messenger in the accounting department of the Rock Island road at his home, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and later served under J. Francis Lee of the Canadian Pacific.

LINE IS A PAYING ONE.

Minnesota & Rainy River Railway's Yearly Earnings Were $82,374.

St. Paul, Oct. 10.—The Minnesota & Rainy River railway, in its report filed with the state railroad commission, shows that its passenger earnings for the year ending June 30, were $4,519.42, and its freight earnings $77,855.31, making the total earnings $82,374.73. The operating expenses were $53,755.95, the income $28,618.78, and the net increase $8,762.17, which is also the surplus for the year, as no dividends were paid.

BIGAMIST GIVEN PARDON BY BOARD

On Condition That He at Once Remarry Second Wife.

St. Paul, Oct. 10.—On condition that he re-marry wife No. 2, who is waiting with open arms to receive him, John Hebard, sentenced to one year in the state prison last April for bigamy from Redwood county, was yesterday pardoned, and will this week walk from the prison cell to the marriage altar to perform the condition placed upon his pardon. When young, so stated C. T. Howard, county attorney of Redwood county before the pardon board, John Hebard had married an Indian girl, but they soon were separated and his redfaced bride went to live with another man. Hebard was soon informed that she had secured a divorce, and upon that supposition he married one of the young ladies of Redwood families. The two lived happily for some time, when Hebard learned that, although his Indian wife had started proceedings to secure a divorce from him, the decree had not been given until a day or two after his second marriage. He was technically guilty of the crime of bigamy, and the county attorney recommended that he plead guilty and promised that he would try to secure a pardon for him. Hebard's wife No. 2, with her child, appeared before the board and declared that she would re-marry him as soon as he is liberated from prison, as she regards him innocent of any crime. He was sentenced for one year, and has served half of that time.

The only other pardon granted by the board was that of William Malon. He was sentenced to the state training school from Wright county, Dec. 7, 1904, for assault with attempt to rob. Frank M. Nye appeared in his behalf and stated the mother of the boy, who is a widow, and the uncle have a home for him in North Dakota. He said that it would be a crime for the state to insist that the boy, who is only 12 years old, stay in the school until he is of age. All other petitions were denied.

An Awful Cough Cured.

"Two years ago our little girl had a touch of pneumonia, which left her with an awful cough. She had spells of coughing, just like one with the whooping cough and some thought she would not get well at all. We got a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which acted like a charm. She stopped coughing and got stout and fat," writes Mrs. Ora Bussard, Brubaker, Ill. This remedy is for sale by all leading druggists.

SENTENCE COMMUTED.

Chief Justice Comments Sarcastically on Enforcement of Laws.

St. Paul, Oct. 10.—Chief Justice Start at a meeting of the state board of pardons yesterday, declared that the game laws of Minnesota are enforced more relentlessly than are the laws upon its statute books for the protection of children. He thought that moose, deer and caribou, which roam the northern woods, are more protected out of season than were many children all the year round.

The declaration was provoked when the application for the pardon of E. O. Tilden, a Minneapolis commission merchant, came up for hearing. He had been sentenced for $50 days in the Hennepin county jail for having eleven deer in his possession. He was given the option of paying $250 in fines, but went to jail in preference to paying the sentence. His sentence was commuted to ninety days. T. B. Walker of Minneapolis spoke in his behalf.

The theater-going public does not always exercise a fine sense of discrimination as to where its patronage should be placed, and possibly that was the reason why "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots" did not fill the Lyceum theater last evening instead of playing to half a house. It was hardly without excuse, too, for in these days it has come to be very well known that anything that comes to us headed with "Mr. Charles Frohman presents," is of the very best. Then, too, the fact that the play was by Augustus Thomas should have been enough, for few failures ever come from his pen, and some of the most successful of modern plays have originated in his fertile brain.

"Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," is a very clever comedy, natural, full of laughter and funny situations, and while there are some situations that could be coarsened and rendered offensive by anything but discriminating players the splendid treatment given the play by the very capable company provided by Mr. Frohman made every moment a delight. The story is one of jealousy. A young architect, Walter Corbin, has been placed in an embarrasing position in a Bar Harbor hotel by the finding in his apartments of a pair of boots belonging to a Mrs. Leffingwell. They were placed there by a malicious mischief-maker and Corbin unjustly suffered the consequences, which are the severing of his engagement with a young woman whom he loves and the approbrium which naturally falls upon one guilty of such an offense. Mr. Leffingwell, a jealous man at best, hushes the matter up and forbids his wife to ever again be in the same company with Corbin.

All this is prior to the opening of the play, which first presents a scene in a dining room in the home of Thomas Bonner, an artist, who also possesses a jealous wife, and is himself somewhat troubled that way. It is the night of a fierce blizzard in New York and the guests expected at the Bonner home do not all arrive. Walter Corbin happens to be driven into the Corbin home by the storm and is made to take a place of another who has disappointed the hostess. In the home is Mabel Ainslie, the young woman with whom he had been engaged, and finally comes Mrs. Leffingwell, but without her lord, Mr. Leffingwell learns through the telephone that Corbin is at the house where his wife is, and the distress of that lady and the angry charge of the jealous husband over the 'phone provide a series of laughable situations. In the end all works out happily, and Corbin is cleared of the odious cloud under which he has been laboring.

The company is a splended one, so evenly balanced that no star can be selected, but so generally capable that every player is a star. Especially delightful was the work of William Courtenay as Corbin. He makes the part a manly one, very natural and sympathtic, and especially pleasing is the fine repression which is evident in his work. Louis Payne, as Leffingwell was about as fine a type of a jealous, absurd and impetuous husband as one could find, and delightfully "twentieth century" in his mannerisms and expressions. Vincent Serrano carries the role of a young man injured in youth h, an accident that dulls his moral faculties, who is cured through the work of an osteopath, and though it is an unpleasant part, he plays it finely and gives it Mr. Thomas' idea that it should be one that attracts the sympathies, rather than repels them. Henry Harmon, as the physician, is strikingly natural and convincing. Harry Lilford, as a butler, was no less capable than the others.

The female portion of the cast is of equal strength, from Mrs. Dorothy Hammond who plays Mrs. Bonner with much grace, and Miss Grace Heyer, who is a most satisfactory Mrs. Leffingwell, to Eva Vincent, who is a capital Nora, an Irish servant of the heavyweight type. Jane Laurel, as Mabel, the young woman in love with Corbin, is an attractive and very capable young woman. She plays the part with much sweetness throughout, but makes her decided hit in the final act where she cross questions Leffingwell with an energy and aggressiveness that are delicious. Mrs. A. A. Adams, is very pleasing as Mrs. Rumsey, wife of the doctor.

"THE TIGER LILIES."

New Company Delights Large Audience at the Metropolitan.

Last evening marked the opening of an engagement of five nights and three matinees of "The Tiger Lilies" at the Metropolitan and a crowded house was on hand to greet them and vote them even better entertainers than "The Jolly Grass Widows," who made such a hit at this popular theater some weeks ago.

"A Temporary Husband" introduced the company and Richy W. Craig, a comedian who is funny. He is aided and abetted in the funmaking by the large company in which pretty girls predominate. "A Temporary Husband" is adapted from the French and when given with some catchy songs on the side, is very satisfactory.

The olio brings out a galaxy of vaudeville stars. Cunningham & Lord are clever dancers and Carrie Ezler and Josette Webb are merry young women and they made a hit last evening. Richy W. Craig has a clever musical turn; La Veen and Cross, exponents of physical culture, are really athletic marvels and "The Tigerscope" pictures give an exciting reproduction of the big battle between "Jimmie" Britt and "Battling" Nelson.

"The King of the Coffee Fiends" is a laughable affair in which Alex. Carr, who is as clever a Yiddish comedian as there is on the stage, has an important and a suitable role. His song, "Coffee," makes a big hit and last night's audience simply could not get enough of "I'm a Disappointed Girl," as sung by Carrie Ezler and chorus.

"HELLO BILL."

Tonight, at the Lyceum, "Hello Bill" will be presented. It is a musical farce which is said to be very funny.

OREGON IS WITHOUT A U. S. DISTRICT JUDGE.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 10.—That Oregon is without a United States district judge and that the signature of such officer is necessary to the extradition of Frank Lambert, wanted in Omaha, Neb., to answer to a charge of subornation of perjury, was the plea made by Lambert's attorney yesterday before United States Commissioner Sladen. As Lambert refuses to return to Nebraska voluntarily, it will be either necessary to bring a number of witnesses from that state to Portland or Lambert will be compelled to remain in jail until the president appoints a district judge.

DISTRIBUTING STATION FOR THE POWER COMPANY

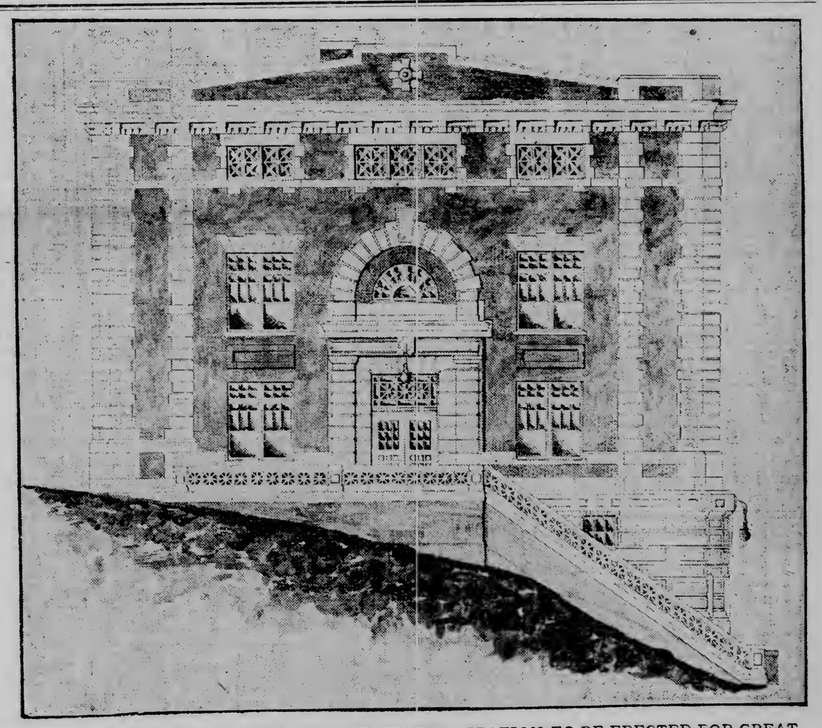

Hundred Thousand Dollar Building To Be Erected On Fifteenth Avenue West.

The contract for the construction of the Great Northern Power company's large distributing station, to be located at Fifteenth avenue west, running from Michigan to Superior street, has been let to J. W. Hilliard of this city. Mr. Hilliard is one of the best known builders of Duluth. The Wolvin building, Marshall-Wells buildings and several other substantial blocks were erected by him.

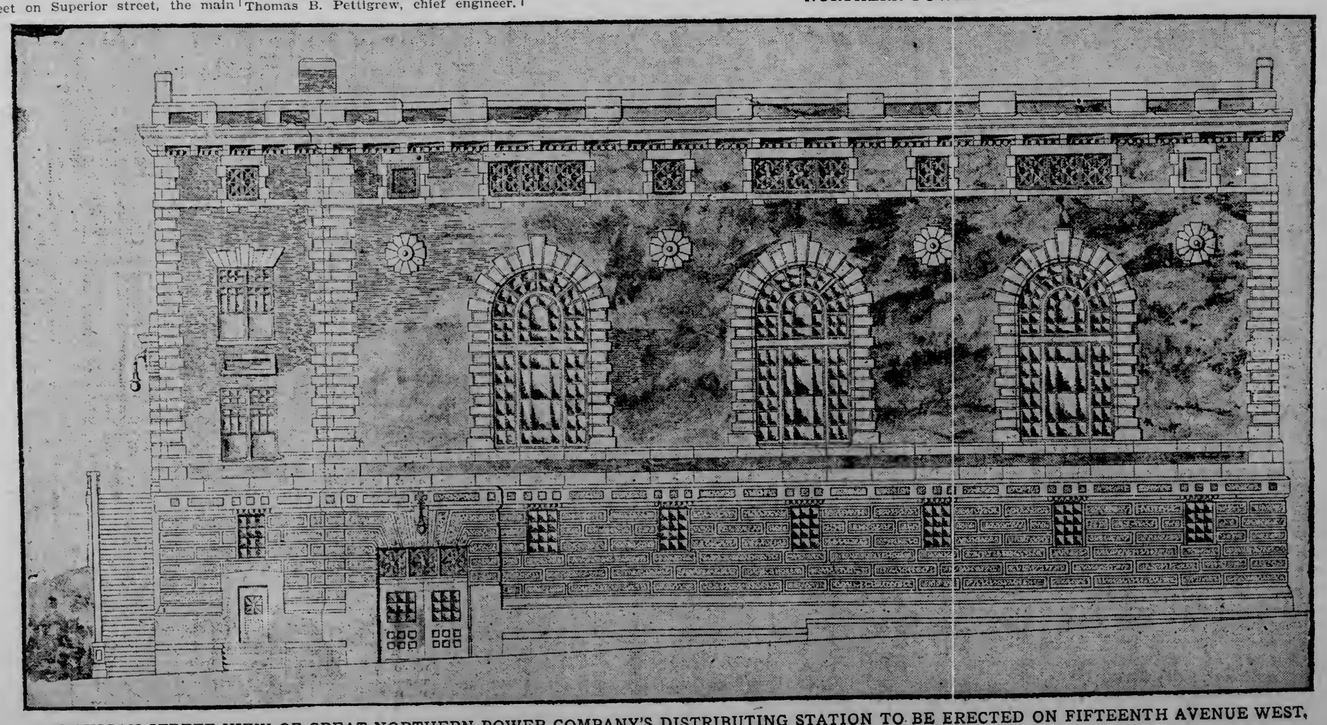

Plans and specifications for the power company's distributing station were completed about Sept. 1, and a number of local parties have recently submitted bids for its construction, resulting in the contract being let today to the party named. The building will be a very substantial and imposing structure, costing nearly $100,000, independent of the electric equipment, for which orders have been placed with the manufacturing companies in the East, and which will be installed upon the completion of the building. Mr. Hilliard has taken the contract to complete it not later than May 1 next.

The building will have a frontage of seventy-two feet on Fifteenth avenue west, 144 feet on Michigan street, and 144 feet on Superior street, the main entrance being from Fifteenth avenue west. Besides the electrical equipment to be installed, such as transformers, rotary converters, etc., for adapting current to the various needs of local consumers about Duluth and Superior, a machine shop, testing laboratory and convenient suite of offices for the use of the superintendent and operatives in charge of the station will be included in the building. A fourteen-mile steel tower transmission line over a private right of way 100 feet wide, extending back over the hill will connect this building with the main generating station now under construction on the St. Louis river.

The distributing station, an elevation of which is shown herewith, was especially designed by A. H. Albertson, architect of New York city, under the direction of F. A. Cokefair, chief engineer of the Great Northern Power company at Duluth, F. O. Blackwell, chief consulting engineer of the Great Northern Power company at New York, and E. C. Bacot, chief electrical engineer. The work of construction will be under the direct supervision of the National Railway Construction company of Boston, Thomas B. Pettigrew, chief engineer.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

When eight more states request it, a constitutional convention to amend the federal constitution by arranging for popular election of United States senators will be in order. Very likely few people have realized that the end so many citizens desire is so near, but near it is, and probably it will be but a short time before the eight states necessary have taken action. A provision of Article V of the constitution says that a convention to amend that instrument is imperative when the legislatures of two-thirds of all the states have demanded it. This action has now been taken by twenty-two states, and as the present number of states is forty-five, and two-thirds would be thirty, only eight more are needed.

It has been a long time since it was recognized that under the present method of selecting United States senators they are removed too far from popular control, and that in order to secure better results for the people it was necessary to place them where, like the representatives, they can be made to feel the impulses of public opinion. The present condition, where the railways keep senators to block railway legislation, the express companies keep senators to block parcels post legislation, and gigantic business interests retain senators to prevent interference with their overgrown enterprises, is preposterously and insufferably inconsistent with the theory of popular government. While there are theorists who argue against popular election of senators in congress, they have a hard task to convince anybody, in the face of the evidence to the contrary, that the present method is best.

The early attempt to secure the reform were by asking congress to enact the necessary amendment and submit it to the legislatures for ratification. Four times the house of representatives acted favorably, and four times the senate refused to act. This method failing, the alternative of compelling action through legislative initiative was taken, with the result that in a comparatively short time the convention will be necessary.

The following states are on record favorably in the matter: Montana, Iowa, Nevada, Wisconsin, Oregon, Colorado, Washington, Idaho, Nebraska, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Minnesota, South Dakota, Utah, Kentucky, Indiana, Florida, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio and Wyoming. Most of these states have formally demanded action; the rest will do so at the earliest possible moment. There will be little difficulty in procuring action by the other states, or enough of them to bring about the desired result.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

Germany furnishes some interesting exhibits of the municipal ownership idea. United States Consul Liefeld of Freiburg, in the grand duchy of Baden, has just given the state department a description of the manner in which that city, a community of 70,000, has adopted the idea, and of the manner in which it is carried out, showing that Freiburg has the record, so far as yet appears, for municipal ownership.

Among the things owned and managed by the city in the interests of its citizens are the following: Street railway, gas, electric light and power, water, theater, slaughterhouse, pawnshop, building lots, savings bank, cemetery, schools, forests, gardens, vineyards, a daily newspaper, a city orchestra, and a volkskueche or people's kitchen.

These utilities are all conducted not with a view to profit, but to provide the people with the best service in each particular line at the least possible cost. Thrift of the highest type appears to be the rule in every detail of municipal life, which in this case appears to include things not dreamed of elsewhere except in the visions of the public ownership theorists.

For instance, the city garbage, usually an expense and a more or less troublesome problem, is a source of profit in this German city. In 1904 the garbage department turned over to the city a profit of $517, after competently handling all the duties of its office. The city orchestra not only plays at entertainments, but gives regular concerts at a small admission price week days and free Sunday afternoons. The sewerage of the city is also made to minister to the city's financial welfare, being conducted to irrigated fields a few miles away and used to fertilize them.

The municipal theater is not made self-supporting, but, according to Consul Liefeld, is considered an essential element for educating the people. The mayor told the consul that the people would as soon think of trying to manage their schools at a profit as their theater.

The "people's kitchen" is an interesting thing. The receipts from it last year amounted to $27,816, mostly for small things, such as buns at 7 mills each, soap at 1.4 cents a bowl, coffee at 1.7 cents per cup, supper at 4.8 to 5.9 cents, dinner at 5.9 to 7.1 cents, etc.

The profits on the self-supporting institutions are small. For instance, the profit from the electric railway was but $3,300. Presumably, though the consul does not give information on this subject, fares, rates and charges are low and taxes almost nothing.

THRIFT AND MEANNESS.

Not long ago Alpheus D. DuBois, an eccentric New York city school principal, died, apparently in circumstances rather squalid than otherwise. Upon the appearance of his estate in probate court, however, it developed that he was worth $500,000, all of which he had accumulated upon a salary of $1,200 to $3,000.

This was no sudden fortune, reaped through a risky speculation, but the slow, careful, certain accumulation and growth of jealously guarded savings. It shows what one in ordinary circumstances can do by saving—if he has a mind to do it that way. DuBois died wealthy, for in spite of the commonness of millionaires nowadays, half a million is a large sum. At 4 per cent interest, a modest return, it will draw $20,000 a year. Yet DuBois lived like a man whose income was more like $300 a year, and denied himself everything that he might watch that tenderly nurtured fortune grow.

While it is a useful example of the value of saving, and a proof that mere carefulness about expenditures will in the end bring wealth, the greater lesson is in the price DuBois paid for it. A local story in the New York Sun of the trial of a suit over the will is headed "Stories of Stingy DuBois." That is illuminating. DuBois was stingy; he was niggardly; he was, in short, a miser. That was the price he paid for his wealth. It appeared from the testimony that in spite of his wealth, he lingered in solitude during the last years of his life in a little hall bedroom at a cost of $3.50 per week. When he grudged himself a cheap vacation, he climbed solemnly into the express wagon and sat upon his trunk. It held securities worth hundreds of thousands. Yet he was shabbily dressed, and would not wear collars or ties. He would not afford the luxury of a fire in his room, but would sit on cold days with his hat and overcoat on and a rug spread over his knees.

The testimony of his wife showed that the entrance of a baby into their lives horrified him at the expense of caring for it, and finally led him to drive both mother and child away, that he might save more money. DuBois gave himself the luxury of a trip to Iowa and a divorce, that his wife and child might not be able to get at his hoarded gold.

At the sacrifice of everything that makes life worth living, this man, apparently, hoarded up a fortune that gave him no comfort. While the story of how he acquired such a sum of money by mere saving and investment in safe interest-bearing securities is eloquent of the value of frugality, his story is more eloquent still of the evil of carrying frugality too far and permitting it to become meanness.

LEARN YOUR BUSINESS.

If one attempted to tell some people who had succeeded in life but indifferently that the reason they did not do better was that they did not know their business, no doubt they would be insulted. But the fact remains, just the same, that a large proportion of failures in life are due to incomplete knowledge of the particular business each was engaged in.

Why is it that one man does better in a given line than another? The lazy man says it is luck. Some believe it to be due to a superior mental equipment, but that cannot be invariably true when sometimes the failures are infinitely brighter mentally than some of the successes. Many a man is well equipped mentally who lacks the faculty of putting his talents to use. There are numerous reasons, of course, but none more important than this: that some men study their business more closely and carefully than others, and act upon what they learn.

Given two men, of equal opportunity and equal brain value, engaged in the same line of work. One is in it because he happened to land there somehow; he takes no particular interest in it beyond the fact that it gives him his living, and his ambitions scatter themselves in vague dreaming about falling into something that will make him quickly rich. The other is in it because he likes it, and his ambition takes the definite form of being a success in it, and doing it better than others do it. He studies that business, from A to Z, and after he has its rudiments learned, he studies its details one by one. Perhaps in one of these he sees a chance to specialize, and by giving to that detail his whole energy and intellect to be able to do that particular feature of it better than anybody else has done it before him. Or, perhaps, by giving himself a deeper knowledge of all its details than others have, he becomes one of its generals, and is able to assume a position of command.

The first man fails in that business, as a matter of course. He deserves failure. He has wasted his talents and his opportunities. If that was not his business he should have found out what was, and in his chosen line have done as the second man did. The second man, equally as a matter of course, has succeeded. He succeeded because he deserved to succeed and because he earned success. Luck? There was no more luck about it than there would have been had the choice between success and failure been plain before them, and one had chosen success and the other failure. That is what they chose, and that is what thousands of young men are choosing every day.

And generally the failures are explaining to their friends how lucky the successes have been, and how misfortune and bad luck have haunted their own footsteps.

Most men make their own luck.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"Texas is rapidly turning out a prohibition state," said B. McKenzie of Milwaukee, at the Lenox. "The last time I was down there six months ago, but then all the little country towns were voting to go dry. Fortunately for the liquor men, the larger cities have not yet turned prohibition, and it is up to them to supply the wants of the thirsty residents of the neighboring towns.

"Such close watch is kept, and fines for violations of the law are so heavy, that there are practically no blind pigs anywhere in the state. When they do things in Texas no half way measures are taken. The backers of any move see it through to the finish. Where prohibition laws are in effect they are enforced to the letter, and one might say that now there is no attempt to break the law.

"There is no law prohibiting the resident of a dry town sending to some other place for his liquors. This is done quite extensively. At Dallas, for instance, if you watch the wagons of the express companies, you will see, every day, scores of mysterious packages being sent out. They are addressed to various small towns along the line, and investigation will show that they contain intoxicating liquor, and that they are consigned to private parties. It is the same as if Cloquet were a prohibition town and Duluth the way she is now. A Cloquet man would be at liberty to bring the orders of his friends for drinkables to Duluth, fill them here and then ship the bottles back to Cloquet. In this way he would be getting around the law. That is how they work it in Texas.

"Texas is an interesting country. Northerners are to be encountered there at every turn. Northern capital is continually seeking investment there, and in the oil fields much of the money is sunk from the North. Oil talk is to be heard on all sides. There are kinds of schemes, legitimate and otherwise, to get the money of the people.

"Cotton is to Texas and the Southwest what wheat is to the Northwest. A poor cotton crop means hard times. A cotton field is a pretty sight, and some of the storehouses present a remarkable sight. Negroes are employed altogether in picking. They barely receive living wages, I understand, but their wants are few. The plantations, as in the olden days, each have a great number of huts for the negro hands.

"The vacant land through the Southwest is being rapidly taken up, and the values are steadily increasing. In Oklahoma land that was selling a very few years back for $6 or $8 an acre now brings from $25 to $40 an acre, and it is getting more valuable all the time. Oklahoma City is one of the best cities I ever saw. Everything there is on the go, and the town is clean and neat in the bargain. It appears to be larger than Duluth. Its growth has been very rapid. It is a good business town all the way through."

* * *

"All the Northern Minnesota towns I visit in the capacity of salesman for Fairbanks, Morse & Co. appear to much better advantage in a business way than do the towns in the other states I travel through," said H. J. Rich of St. Paul, at the Lenox. "All lines of business are more prosperous. A material difference is to be noted even by the casual observer. In many instances it is as pronounced as the difference between Duluth and Superior.

"Duluth is a good town. I like it here first rate. The weather of yesterday is not exactly suited to my tastes, but, after the many fine days we have been enjoying, no one can reasonably offer an objection because we have a day or two of rain."

* * *

"A short time ago certain business interests of Seattle began to worry for fear Seattle was in danger of losing a material portion of its trade with Alaska," said D. H. Grover of Seattle at the Spalding. "This fear appears to have been without foundation, according to the latest figures published by the government.

"The domestic shipments of merchandise to Alaska in July were 43 per cent larger than during the same month in 1904, and nearly seven-eighths of all the shipments were sent from Puget sound. Furthermore, the percentage of the total shipments to Alaska which went from Puget sound increased from 84 to 86 per cent. More goods were shipped from Seattle to Alaska in August than were shipped from the entire Puget sound district to Alaska in August, 1904."

* * *

"The average railroad brakeman, working on a freight train on one of the Northwestern roads, makes more money in August, September and October than he does in any other six months of the year," said R. S. Howard of Grand Forks, N. D., at the St. Louis. "His wages are about double what they are ordinarily, because of the extra time he puts in, and then he gets a generous rakeoff on the side from the hoboes. Hundreds of men travel to and from the harvest fields on the freight trains, and while many of them ride for nothing, the big majority are ferreted out by the brakemen and made to pay a small sum for the privilege. One man may pay anything from 50 cents to $2 for riding over a division. If a couple of brakemen can get twenty or thirty pay passengers on one run they make a neat little sum on the side, you see. They are really entitled to what they make this way, too, for they work hard enough keeping the ordinary tramps off the trains that they should be allowed such additional compensation as they can pick up in this manner. Looking at it from the standpoint of the railroads, though, I don't know as this would hardly be right, either, for the practice is bound, to a certain degree, to lessen the profit of the operating company. More men would patronize the passenger trains if it were more difficult for them to ride on the freight trains at smaller cost."

THE WEATHER

"Fair and colder" today, said the weather man yesterday, and fair it was, and colder too. In the night the thermometer sank rapidly, and this morning, in houses where the furnace has not yet been started, the movements of those who rose early were very lively indeed. The floors were cold, the air was cold, and until a roaring fire had been set going, chattering teeth and cold-impelled rapidity of motion bore evidence that fall, much delayed, was here. It was clear as crystal out of doors, however, and it was not long before the sun's unabated warmth turned the air warmer again. But last night's touch of chill was an unmistakable hint that summer is over, and that while there will be much fine weather yet, there will be little occasion for alarms about an ice famine henceforth.

The coolness lasted longer than the fairness this morning. About 10 o'clock, in accordance with northwest storm signals hoisted at the weather station last night, thick, black clouds impelled by a northwest wind came up, blusteringly and threateningly. It seemed like nothing permanent, however, and the outlook is still for fair weather, though cold. Last night the thermometer here reached 36 deg., about the coldest yet, and the highest yesterday was 56.

Generally fair but cold for tonight and tomorrow is the local forecast, with probably a heavy frost tonight. Says the weather man of conditions:

"Slight barometric depressions, whose easterly movements are slow, are central over Gulf states and north of Minnesota, and are attended by areas of rain that extend from the Gulf of Mexico over the Mississippi valley and western lake region to Canada, turning to snow in the Red river valley. An area of high barometer covers the plateau region, Rocky mountains and Northwest generally, accompanied by freezing temperatures. Storm northwest warnings were ordered in the Duluth district at 10 p. m. Monday. Generally fair and chilly weather may be expected in this vicinity tonight and Wednesday, attending present barometric conditions."

SMILING LINES.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Yes, whenever I can I bring home to my wife the freshest bank bills that the banks can deal out."

"What's that for?"

"Why, the money is so pretty that she hates to spend it."

Philadelphia Press: "Want any typewriter supplies?" asked the peddler, sticking his head in the office door.

"No," replied the young business man, absent-mindedly, "I just got her a box of bonbons only an hour or so ago."

New York Sun: The Moralist—The busy bee improves each shining hour.

The Plain Citizen—As though a shining hour wasn't good enough for any one; you never can make some folks leave well enough alone.

New York Sun: Damocles saw the sword suspended by a hair.

"I would have given $1,000,000 for that once," he observed; "you see, my mother made me wear long curls."

Then indeed the king perceived it had no terrors for him.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: He—I see that Prof. Loeb's efforts to create life have resulted in nothing more serious than a primordial protoplasm that cannot be developed into manhood in much less than 20,000,000 years.

She—Think of waiting for a mere man all that time!

Philadelphia Ledger: "He's tiresome, isn't he?"

"Oh, the worst kind of a bore. He's the sort of fellow who says: 'Heard a funny story about an Irishman today. It's the brogue that makes the story funny, but I can't imitate the brogue,' and then tells the story in his own way."

Sounds Like Van Sant.

Boston Herald: When the present King Edward as prince of Wales was visiting this country, many years ago, a great ball was given in his honor at St. Louis. Governor Stewart of Missouri came down from Jefferson City to attend it, and in the course of the evening became very happy, very proud, not to say enthusiastic. He and the prince were stationed where the beauty and brilliancy and blue blood of St. Louis swept by them in dazzling review. The spectacle elevated Stewart's feelings several inches. Finally he administered a mighty slap to the royal back, and exclaimed, "Prince, don't you wish you was governor of Missourah?"

A Brief Parable.

San Francisco Call: A certain man carried a sack containing a heavy burden, and he had borne it many weary years.

Then, as he journeyed, the Angel of Knowledge came to him and spoke to him, saying:

"What dost thou carry?"

And the man replied, "It is a heavy, heavy burden."

"Of what does the burden consist?" the angel asked.

"Of my worries," the man made answer.

Then the angel smiled pityingly upon the man and said:

"Let us look into the bundle of thy worries."

And they looked, and lo! even as they looked the contents of the sack dwindled into nothingness.

For when the Angel of Knowledge teaches a man to look aright he perceives that his worries are but tiny and useless things, and the burden of them grows inconceivably light.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Kenyon Signal: A political boss lasts only until the people begin to take notice. They are taking notice rather well these days.

St. Peter Herald: Republican gubernatorial candidates are still as plentiful as indictments in Milwaukee.

Perham Enterprise: Secretary Wilson says the cost of living will be cheaper next year. Did he consult the beef trust before making that statement?

Little Falls Transcript: Jim Hill and Tom Lowry have each killed one of their Twin City dailies. Their other city papers are trying to be bad enough to live.

Two Harbors Iron Trade Journal: Well, if the big insurance companies did let the campaign managers have a little of the necessary, it seems to be about the best thing they did with a whole lot of that policy holders' money which is unaccounted for.

Sleepy Eye Dispatch: Talk and preach as they will, the voters cannot get rid of the corrupt senate until they clean out their state governments. Every state and every county has a part to perform in purging the country of graft in public office—but it must begin at home.

International Falls Press: One of the latest rumors is that John Lind will endeavor to wrest the senatorial toga from Senator Nelson when the next legislature convenes. It will be a battle royal.

Preston Times: Secretary Shaw has given out that he will quit the cabinet February first and will then feel free to push his presidential candidacy. He will have to do all the pushing himself, no doubt, and will find it an up hill job. Of course it is possible that his stand pat friends may take a hand in his behalf and it is not unlikely that they may dictate the actions of the convention as they do those of congress, but we hope not.

Winona Independent: Robert C. Dunn's assertion made not long ago, that "any man the party nominates is good enough for me," does not seem to have struck such a happy chord as it would have in this state a few years ago. The voters are beginning to realize that conventions are just as apt to make poor selections as an individual would be, and, further, they have come to an awakening to the fact that good principles may be prostituted in the hands of poor executors.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: It is awful hard to believe all the things you want your children to.

Once in a while two people stay married because they love each other.

There is always some part of a woman's figure that she feels is a great credit to her.

A man has to love a girl an awful lot to think that a cold in the head is becoming to her.

A bachelor thinks that running an automobile is very extravagant until he tries to run a family.

Infantile, Incapable Man.

New York Post: The "self-made" man is doomed, says a professor of the University of Chicago. Efficient manhood can no longer be home made. But Pliny the Elder preceded Prof. Butler: "Man is the only one that knows nothing without being taught. He can neither speak nor walk nor eat, and, in short, he can do nothing at the prompting of nature but weep."

What Shall It Profit a Man?

Kansas City Star: Now, don't laugh at John D. Rockefeller's assertion that "money is not all there is in this world." The sobs that choked his voice when he said it, and the tears that gleamed in his eyes, may not have been the expressions of a self-deceiving piety. For if there is a man on earth who has learned from the bitterness of isolation and popular denunciation that money is not all there is in this world, that man is John D. Rockefeller.

DULUTH AND THE HERALD.

Owatonna Journal: It is up to the Duluth authorities to remove the bear crop and give Minnesota a better standing in the East.

Sauk Center Herald: The Park Rapids Enterprise says Northern Minnesota should be developed at the pace Dan Patch made at the state fair. Not bad; but just as good would be to have it developed at the pace of a good, old family driving horse that is good for a long distance every day instead of a spurt in quick time now and then.—Duluth Herald.

It would be hard to compress more horse sense in a single paragraph than is contained in the above. It is not the Dan Patches that have made Minnesota a great state, but the Dobbins.

Crookston Journal: Reported President Roosevelt will settle in Duluth in 1909. Town has already passed an ordinance to save bear cubs till he gets there.

North Branch Review: Rice county offers free marriage licenses at its county fair, and The Duluth Herald says that is one way of booming immigration. The Review would say that was one way of making more work for the census enumerator.

East Grand Forks Valley View: Wild bears are interfering with the street car traffic in Duluth. Still, that may be just a ruse to indice the president to return from his New Orleans visit by way of Duluth.

Anoka Herald: At first it was one bear on the track at Duluth. The latest report is a whole herd stopping street cars. Careful now gentlemen!

Ripple Compass: "Government is about the only thing that costs more made by machine than it does by hand," says Mr. Field Survey of The Duluth Herald.

International Falls Press: The view expressed by The Duluth Herald on the proposal to send a drainage lobby to Washington seems reasonable and suggests the wisdom of being guided by the desire of the Minnesota delegation in the matter. If they want the lobby we should send it, and their opinion should govern.

Deer River News: The Duluth Herald advises selecting representatives now instead of letting the representatives select themselves and letting the people elect them. A good idea.

CARLOAD OF TROUT FRY

Rainbow Variety Will Be Planted Along North Shore.

Big Game Is Very Plentiful, Says S. F. Fullerton.

Samuel F. Fullerton, executive agent of the Minnesota state game and fish commission, who arrived in the city last evening from a tour of the ranges, this morning received from Washington a communication announcing that the government would furnish a car load of rainbow trout fry for planting in one or more of the streams emptying into the head of Lake Superior from the north.

Mr. Fullerton asked for the fry some little time ago, but hardly knew whether to expect a compliance with his request or not. He is well pleased with the government order, but has not yet decided just where the fry shall be planted. The date of the arrival of the car at Duluth was not given in the letter. Today the state game warden is getting the views of local fishermen regarding the best place to put the fry, which will probably be planted in accordance with their wishes.

"I am in favor of putting the whole lot in one stream," said Mr. Fullerton today. "I think better results can be obtained that way. My plan would be to select some suitable stream along the north shore, where conditions appear to be well suited for planting the fry, and on which most of the local fishermen could agree. It is poor policy to mix rainbow and brook trout, and I do not believe that very good results could be obtained from putting the fry in several streams. I think the best plan is to keep the whole lot together. In three years the fish will be large enough to catch, for their growth is rapid."

Mr. Fullerton says that he found conditions on the ranges satisfactory. The observance of the game laws appear to be general, and there is little trouble this season with violators of the law, he stated, although a few convictions have been secured. He complained that where convictions had been secured the punishment meted out to the offenders by the court was too light.

"It looks now as if the big game hunting through Northern Minnesota would be the best in many years," remarked the chief executive of the game commission. "All varieties of big game are on the increase. The moose and deer have been multiplying rapidly, and are now more numerous than I have ever seen them in the past. Hunting will be exceptionally good in consequence.

"Owing to the wetness of the season, feathered game offers poor sport at present. The partridge, grouse and prairie chickens were literally drowned out, and the hunters have not been having much fun with them in consequence. There are some caribou in the extreme northern part of the state, but they are in regions little frequented by the white men. The Minnesota caribou are the same kind of an animal as the reindeer imported by the government two or three years back and sent to Alaska.

"As usual, there will be a great many outside hunters in the state this year to hunt big game. They will not be as plentiful as they would be if Minnesota would adopt the Maine system of handling guides. In Maine every guide is licensed, and his name is on file with the game and fish commission. A sportsman desiring to employ the services of a guide in hunting in Maine can very easily be accommodated. He writes to the commission and is furnished with the name and place of residence of a competent guide in the district where he desires to hunt, and is also furnished with any other information which might be of interest to a hunter entering that particular district for the first time. In this manner he is saved considerable trouble. In Minnesota no such system is in vogue, and the Easterner who comes here runs a chance of not getting a guide at all, or of employing some man who knows nothing whatever about the business or regarding the places where good hunting is to be found. This fact prevents a good many of the rich Eastern sportsmen from visiting Minnesota in the fall."

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Cario's Murderer Captured and Makes Confession of Shooting.

Sault Ste. Marie.—Joseph Lee, who shot and killed Frank Carlo at West Neebish, Sunday night, was captured Monday morning while coming to the Soo in a boat. The capture was made by Deputy Sheriff Andrew F. Arnott. Lee has admitted that he killed Carlo and is locked up in the county jail to await a hearing. The men engaed in a quarel in a saloon at Neebish and Lee states that Carlo drew a knife and he was compelled to kill him in self-defense. Carlo was shot in the back three times. Both men are Italians employed by Grant Smith & Co., contractors, doing government work on the river. Lee disappeared in the bushes after the murder, and wandered about until he could secure a boat. When nobody was looking he left the settlement under cover of darkness.

The Soo fire department was called to the home of Capt. Charles Ripley on Park Place to extinguish a small fire. The blaze started from a lamp in the hands of Miss Mary Ashmun, who was curling her hair at the time. The principal damage done was to lace curtains and wearing apparel in the room.

The board of public works at the Soo is going to compel merchants to desist from their practice of sweeping litter from their stores into the streets, a thing they have been accustomed to do. The city is paying a lot of money out to keep the streets clean, and it is now proposed to see that the merchants don't make the work any more difficult than it is under the most favorable circumstances.

Escanaba—Fire early Monday morning destroyed property valued at $5,000, and the police are making an investigation. A Spiritualist, Mrs. A. S. Warn, said she was warned by two visitations three months ago, that there would be a fire in the town.

The woman's prediction resulted in insurance policies being taken out completely covering yesterday's loss.

Daggett—Albert Broberg, a bachelor living with his father a short distance from Daggett, Menominee county, hung himself the latter part of last week. He had been demented for some time, and was accustomed to retreat to the attic of the house whenever anyone approached, fearing all strangers had designs on his life. Broberg failed to come down stairs after one of these retreats to the attic, and when his father investigated he was found dead.

Baraga—The Nester estate has started a large logging camp about five miles southeast of Baraga, in which about 150 men will be employed. Another camp is being opened about ten miles west of Baraga. A number of jobbers will also put in logs for the Nesters this winter, and it is stated that there will be sufficient logs next season to run the mill day and night. Logs are now being received at Baraga by rail. They will be sawed this season.

WOMAN DRIVES OFF ASSAILANT

Mrs. Frank Eischen Defends Herself From Assault.

Attacked by a strange man in a lonely spot west of the Seventh avenue incline station on the hilltop. Mrs. Frank Eischen bravely defended herself with her fists and fingers, and succeeded in driving the man off.

Mrs. Eischen, who lives at 119 Seventh avenue west, was on her way to her husband's hothouse, located about a mile and a half from the incline terminus. She arrived at the incline station about 5 o'clock, and started to take a short cut which led her away from the main road. The man followed her, and just before she came to the road, he caught up with her and seized her. She fought and struggled frantically, tearing at his hair and scratching his face, until ho finally released his hold and fled.

She hurried on to the hothouse and told her story there. Some of the men immediately started in pursuit of the assailant, but he could not be found.

Mrs. Eischen believes that the man came up on the same car with her and got off shortly after she did. The police have been furnished with a good description of his appearance and are trying to locate him.

A LITTLE STEALTH.

"Let Not Thy Left Hand Know What Thy Right Hand Doeth," Especially When the Left is a Bit Cranky.

Some of the most lovable and best people in the world are cranky, and a "leetle" hard to manage, particularly when you want to do them good. Then it is that justifiable and righteous artfulness may be resorted to. As, for instance, wife and mother, in Iowa:

"This spring my daughter, who is a teacher, became convinced that coffee was doing her harm, as it caused distress and belching after eating. She felt that she needed a warm drink in the morning but disliked hot water or milk. Then our daily use of Grape-Nuts suggested Postum.

"For some time my husband, who has been a user of coffee from his youth, had been more than usually troubled with sleeplessness and nervousness and I felt that Postum might be helpful to him. The question was, how to persuade them to leave off drinking coffee and try Postum, against which they had repeatedly expressed prejudice. I resolved to try an experiment and make the test.

"Without acquainting them with the fact I made Postum according to directions, but added a teaspoonful of good coffee. I poured it out with some misgivings, but was delighted to see that no one could tell from its appearance that it was not rich, strong coffee. Its use was continued for a week with the coffee addition, then that was gradually withdrawn, until only the pure Postum remained, and still the change had not been detected.

"Two things are very noticeable, however, that my daughter had begun to rapidly improve in health, her dyspepsia left, and my husband was enjoying sweet, refreshing sleep.

"When I ventured to tell them what I had done, he asked for a return to the coffee, and I gladly made it for him; but one day satisfied him, the old sleeplessness came back and he told me he liked the Postum better. So we have used it ever since to the benefit of the whole family." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The night of the meeting of the evening Browning class has been changed from Tuesday to Monday evening, and the first lecture will be given next Monday evening at the club room of the library. The course of lectures will be identical with that delivered before the morning class, which will meet as usual at 10 o'clock, Thursday morning. The first lecture will be given Thursday morning of this week. The demand for the evening class was large enough to make it possible to form the additional class for the study of the poet. Men are invited to join this class, and already a large number of people, who are unable to attend the morning class, have sent in their names for the evening study. Any desiring to join may send their names to Mrs. H. C. Marshall of 2302 East Fifth street, or Mrs. A. H. Smith of 6 Chester terrace.

CRADLE OF SORROW.

One In New York Before Which Many a Tragedy Is Enacted.

There is a cradle within the door of one of the great institutions of New York before which a constantly recurring tragedy is being enacted. It is a plain cradle, quite simply draped in white, but with such a look of cozy comfort about it that one would scarcely suspect it to be a cradle of sorrow.

And this cradle is the most useful and, in a way, the most inhabited cradle in the world. Day after day, and year after year, it is the recipient of more small wayfaring souls than any other cradle in the history of the race. In it the real children of sorrow are placed, and over it more tears are shed than if it were an open grave, says Watson's Magazine.

It is the place where annually 1200 foundlings are placed—the silent witness of more truly heartbreaking scenes than any other cradle since the world began. For nearly thirty-five years it has stood where it does today, ready-draped, open, while as many thousand mothers have stolen shamefacedly in and, after looking hopelessly about, have laid their helpless offspring within its depths.

For thirty-five years, winter and summer, in the bitterest cold and the most stifling heat, it has seen them come—the poor, the rich; the humble, the proud; the beautiful, the homely—and one by one they have laid their children down and brooded over them, wondering whether it were possible for human love to make so great a sacrifice and yet not die.

Still the tragedy repeats itself, and year after year, and day after day the unlocked door is opened and dethroned virtue enters—the victim of ignorance and passion and affection, and a child is robbed of an honorable home.

STANDPATTERS SCARED

By Massachusetts' Declaration For Early Tariff Revision.

Washington, Oct. 10.—Surprised and swearingly sour are the standpatters over the declaration of Massachusetts Republican state convention, in favor of tariff revision by the Fifty-ninth congress.

Representative John Dalzell, who gave out a strong pro-patter program the other day, could hardly believe his eyes when he read Senator Lodge's declaration that now is the time to change existing schedules. Lodge has been regarded as belonging to the radical standpat element, and his conversion now to tariff revision is the most significant event that has occurred since Roosevelt caught the dove of peace at Oyster Bay.

Lodge's speech is regarded as foreshadowing the president's position. It is also regarded as another instance of the wise statesman giving ear to the voice of the people. Tariff revision by the Republican party is fast coming forward and those Republican members of the Fifty-seventh and Fifty-eighth congresses who had nerve to oppose the Payne-Dalzell program, can take courage. Whether or not the president will be able to have a tariff revision reported from the ways and means committee this coming session, the gage of battle is laid down, and must be taken up by the standpatters.

CHARGED WITH BURGLARY.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Oct. 10.—F. R. Frang, a prominent business man, has been arrested, charged with a long series of burglaries here. A large amount of stolen goods was found stored in his house. He was caught through shipping a stolen shotgun in a trombone case.

STRENUOUS GIRL TO WED A LORD

Engagement of Miss Breeze of New York Surprises Friends.

New York, Oct. 10.—New York society is discussing with the very keenest interest the engagement of Miss Eloise Breeze, the most strenuous girl in New York, to Lord Willoughby de Eresby.

Her most intimate girl friends had predicted that she would never wed at all.

She was too fond of athletics, she liked to be on the "go" all the time, and they said she had too many outdoor fads and fancies to be fettered down by a husband.

The reason for this general belief that Miss Breeze would not marry for a time at least lay in her strenuous devotion to those fads that a girl generally gives up when she marches to the altar.

Miss Breeze is known as one of the most enthusiastic woman automobilists in New York. She also owns several horses. She owns the yacht Elsa and is its commander. She is a flag member of the New York Yacht club, as well as a member of the Sea-Wanhaka-Corinthian Yacht club.

For her more staid moods she has memberships in the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Colonial Dames.

Lord Willoughby de Eresby enjoys the distinction of having jilted the famous beauty, Muriel Wilson.

Two other engagements likewise fell through.

TO PROTECT THE CITY

Mayor Urges Council to Take Precautions In Bridge Deal.

Water Department Upheld In Tilt With Civil Service Board.

Stating that six months' operation of the ferry bridge had not been satisfactory in all respects, Mayor Cullum, in a communication to the council last evening, urged that the city's interests be protected in every way possible before the final payment of $65,000 was made to the Modern Steel Structural company.

The mayor pointed out that the city had been put to considerable expense as a consequence of the delays experienced in getting the bridge into running shape, and he urged that the council take every possible precaution to protect the city's interests. The communication was referred to the proper committee.

• • •

The city engineer reported to the council that he had secured the services of M. W. Hughes, a Chicago expert mechanical engineer to inspect the bridge, and that he would report to the council as soon as he had completed the work.

• • •

Because he "handles money," Don A. Gearhart, an employe of the water and light department does not come under the civil service regulations, according to a report from the finance committee.

In a resolution introduced by Alderman Barnes, the opinion of the city attorney in the matter was sustained, and the council took the stand that Mr. Gearhart did not come under the civil service rules, in spite of the claim made by the civil service commission.

The committee, however, made the suggestion to the water board that it should designate the employes that handle money, and thus prevent all such complications in future.

• • •

At the request of the committee from the Builders' exchange, the new building laws were once more laid over a week. The members of the committee stated that they had not yet had time to thoroughly look into all the provisions of the ordinance, and they asked for more time. This was granted, and the hearing of objections to the new laws was postponed another week.

• • •

Alderman Wilson asked that the city engineer be given every means of making a most rigid inspection on the West Superior street pavement, owing to the fact that it will be a test of tar macadam for a business street. On his motion the city engineer was asked to report what inspection was being made, and whether or not the funds of the department were sufficient to make all the inspection he desired.

• • •

On a motion by Alderman Tessman, the city engineer was requested to furnish an estimate of the cost of improving Third street from Sixth avenue west to Tenth avenue east, with bitumen or asphalt. The alderman stated that he was desirous of securing an early start with the preliminary work for next year.

• • •

The following banks were named as depositories of the city's funds up to the amounts specified: American Exchange band, $212,500; First National bank, $212,500; City National bank, $125,000; Duluth Savings bank, $50,000; Western State bank, 10,000.

• • •

On a motion by Alderman Waugh, the city engineer was requested to report progress on the new reservoir which is under construction at West Duluth.

• • •

The board of public works reported that about forty per cent could be taken off the engineer's estimate for repairing the Lake avenue viaduct permanently, and that it can be made passable for about sixty per cent of the sum. No action will be taken, however, pending the decision in the case now pending in the district court.

• • •

In answer to an adverse report from the water board on the plan to lay water and gas mains from Garfield avenue to the new crematory, President Haven stated that the mains now laid on the surface of West First street could be used, and that this would not only give service to the crematory, but would give protection to the water front and would also furnish the required auxiliary line to the West end and West Duluth.

• • •

Secretary Haley of the free employment bureau was requested to report the cost of furnishing an electric sign for the bureau. This action was taken on a motion by Alderman McEwen in response to the request of the trades and labor assembly, which asked that some method be taken of calling attention to the location of the bureau.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

One workman was killed and five were perhaps fatally injured Monday in the second accident that has occurred at the old county building in Chicago since the work of tearing it down began. The dead man is John Nelson, colored. A girder which was being raised to the roof was at the third floor when it gave way and fell to the ground, crushing the men beneath it.

Fire in the Ludington company's lumber yards at Marinette, Wis., Monday caused a loss of $25,000 to the lumber near the docks. The mills were not damaged. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

Dekoven Hall, the main dormitory of St. John's Military academy of Delafield, Wis., was destroyed by fire Monday night, the loss being estimated at $80,000. The cadets who had rooms in the building all escaped without injury.

Wild with rage because of the ridicule of several small boys in front of the Bijou theater on Main street at Memphis, Tenn., Monday night, an unknown negro emptied his revolver into a mass of people. One boy is dying, one is dangerously wounded and a negro girl received serious wounds.

Patrick T. McGarry, president of the Washington boiler works, and a prominent member of several Chicago clubs, was struck by an electric street car at Chicago, Monday night and killed.

Former Representative Harry St George Tucker, dean of George Washington university of Washington, Monday formally accepted the presidency of the Jamestown Exposition company to succeed Gen. Fitzhugh Lee.

A bandit single handed held up the Redding-Delmar stage which carried money to pay off the employes of the Bully Hill mine near Reddington, Cal., Monday. D. N. Haskell, the express messenger, was shot through the abdomen, but will recover. When the driver whipped up the horses two more highwaymen appeared and there was a running fight for 200 yards, the stage finally escaping. A big posse is hunting the robbers.

John R. McLean of the Cincinnati Enquirer, Monday purchased from the Wilkins estate an even-half interest in the Washington Post company. The amount of the purchase money is not stated, but it is understood to be in the neighborhood of $600,000. Mr. McLean will be made president of the Post company and will take an active part, in connection with John F. Wilkins in the management of the paper.

ONLY ONE REMAINS

Of Those Who First Organized Swedish Baptist Society.

Others In Twenty Years Sever Connection With Church.

The arrangements for the twentieth anniversary of the Young Ladies' society of the First Swedish Baptist church are now completed, and the celebration, which will take place tomorrow evening in the church, at the corner of Nineteenth avenue west and First street, will be worthy of long remembrance. An elaborate program will be given and some of the leading talent of the city will take part. Among the speakers will be Rev. Dr. Frank Peters of Minneapolis, who is said to be one of the most eloquent Swedish divines in the country, and a man upon whom honors have been heaped, both here and abroad. Besides him there will be heard also Mrs. Solquist, a missionary to China, who is in America for a year's rest; and Miss Jerda Paulson, a missionary to Japan. Both these ladies are said to be excellent speakers, and are worth while listening to. Their experiences will doubtless be worth hearing.

The Young Ladies' society, which is celebrating the twentieth anniversary of its organization, was organized in May, 1885, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Fredin, in whose house the society has always had its meetings, monthly, for studying the Bible, and at which house the meetings are held now and have been every month for the past twenty years. In fact the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fredin is so closely identified with the society that the circle seems incomplete at any other place of meeting. The object of the society is stated in article No. 2 of its constitution, which says:

"Members of this society shall meet monthly to study God's word, to cultivate Christian love and to develop spiritual usefulness among the members; to help and interest new-coming young ladies; to make the society conform with the various branches of the work of the church."

The monthly meetings for Bible study have been of great benefit to the members. Most of these gatherings have been led by the pastor of the church, who would act as a guide in the study of the Bible. Besides these meetings for study, the society has held numerous sewing meetings, and has done considerable charitable work.

During the twenty years of the society's existence, its personnel has changed considerable and frequently. Most of those who organized the society twenty years ago have since changed the names which will be found on the original roster of the society, having been married since then, and most of them have moved away from the city, or died. Only one of the original organizers of the society is still a member of the church, and she is now Mrs. O. J. Hagberg of 1825 West First street. Following are the maiden names of some of the officers during the twenty years of the society's existence, and will be remembered by a good many of the old-timers:

Betty Roos, Lotta Stark, Hulda Nelson, Emma Hurtig, Hanna Ma Hammarback, Edna Rapp, Emma Johnson, Thilda Soderberg, Lena Gustafson, Nellie Rapp, Augusta Peterson, Christina Nelson, Alma Johnson, Amanda Hammarstrom, Anna Sjolund, Anna Johnson, Mary Loydgren, Regina Fredrickson, Lydia Johnson, Anna Stalz, Mary Nilson, Mary Anderson, Anna Carlson, Alma Anderson, Christina Bergquist, Sophia Kemp, Josephina Person, Kate Leanberg, Carrie Nilson, Anna Person and Hanna Gustafson.

TWO FUNERALS THURSDAY

To Be Held From Sorrowing Homes in West End.

Two funerals of young people will take place at the West End Thursday. Alvina Hendrickson, the 17-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hendrickson of 515 Garfield avenue died at St. Luke's hospital a few days ago and the funeral will take place Thursday afternoon from the family residence. Interment will be in the Lutheran cemetery.

Harry, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Foyen of 2201 West Eighth street, who died a few days ago, will be buried Thursday, the funeral to take place in the afternoon from the Norwegian Lutheran church, at the corner of Twenty-fifth avenue west and Third street.

HAD TO HIDE IT

A mother wrote us recently that she had to keep Scott's Emulsion under lock and key—her children used to drink it whenever her back was turned. Strange that children should like something that is so good for them. It's usually the other way. Scott's Emulsion makes children comfortable, makes them fat and rosy-cheeked. Perhaps that's why they like it so much—they know it makes them feel good.

SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl Street, New York.

Not Bragging About It.

Gust Hultquist, Ivan Lungren, Andy Otterson and Frank Hughes left Saturday night for Grand lake, apparently to hunt, for their equipment would so indicate. Their return was quiet and unobtrusive and nothing could be done to draw them out as to results. The matter was too quiet to pass unnoticed and intimates of the members of the party started an investigation, which discovered that the sum total of result of the hunting trip was one pickerel and one duck.

West End Shortrails.

John Vivin of the West End returned from a business trip to Fort William, Ont., yesterday.

Dr. Green and his friend, Mr. Ingersoll of St. Paul., have returned from a hunting trip to McGregor. They got seventy ducks, three grouse and two partridge.

Mrs. Gust Desjardines has returned from her summer's visit to Detroit, Cleveland and Sarnia.

Gust Desjardines has taken the position of cook in Camp 33, of the Tower Lumber company, just outside of Tower.

Wagner Bros., building contractors, are building a handsome three-story tenement building for Mrs. Tallock, on Twenty-sixth avenue west and Second street.

John Gilbert is building a large boarding house at 2618 West Second street.

Beneficent degree, Beta council, No. 2, Modern Samaritans, will give a shirt waist social dance at Columbia hall, Oct. 16.

The Young Ladies' Aid society of Bethany Lutheran church will give a social at the church Monday evening, Oct. 19. Rev. Dr. A. F. Elmquist will deliver an address, and a good musical program will be provided.

L. M. Johnson has sold his residence near Lincoln Park to Policeman Twohy.

John Lundberg bought a small cottage on the south side of First street and Twenty-third avenue west a few weeks ago and has had it moved across the street and made over into a fine seven-room house.

William McMillan has started the building of his two houses between Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth avenues west and Seventh street. The foundation for these houses will be concrete blocks, of Mr. McMillan's own make.

Albert Anderson sold his house and lot on Huron street last week and Nord & Jacobson have the contract and have started the building of another house for him on Exeter street, near Twenty-ninth avenue west.

James Sawyer has sold his cottage on First street to Mrs. J. Wedholin and has let the contract for the building of a seven-room house on Twenty-ninth avenue west.

B. E. Lachner, stenographer at the Northern Pacific railway yards, bought a house and two lots at West Duluth, from David Adams of the West End, and will make his home there in the future.

Dr. Bowers sold three lots in Wallbank's addition last week. The parties buying intend to build themselves homes at once.

The store building recently built on the corner of Twenty-ninth avenue west and Second street will be occupied as a grocery store.

Rev. Father Guillet of St. John the Baptist church has had the store building on the west side of the church, which was partly destroyed by fire a short time ago, removed and the ground leveled and sodded. It now presents a fine appearance.

RECORD OF THE PAST

No Stronger Evidence Can Be Had In Duluth.

Look well to their record. What they have done many times in years gone by is the best guarantee of future results. Anyone with a bad back; any reader suffering from urinary troubles, from any kidney ills, will find in the following evidence proof that relief and cure is near at hand:

Leander Sinotte, rug manufacturer and carpet cleaner, of 1701 Michigan street, Duluth, Minn., and living at the corner of Michigan street and Eighteenth avenue, says: "Some six years ago I gave a testimonial in favor of Doan's Kidney Pills, because I felt so well pleased with the prompt relief from trouble with my kidneys and back which the use of this remedy brought me. I had been annoyed with constant dull pain across the loins and through the kidneys. To stoop or attempt to lift anything was sure to bring on sharp twinges of pain. The action of the kidneys were irregular. I tried many remedies, until I got Doan's Kidney Pills, but found little relief and no permanent benefit. The treatment with this remedy completely drove out the whole trouble, and as six years have passed without any return of the complaint, I consider my cure a permanent one."

NEW YORK WINS OUT

Final Score In the First Game Was 3 to 0.

Other National League Teams Also Win Their Games.

Philadelphia, Oct. 10.—Great pitching by Christy Mathewson, backed up by the gilt-edged playing of the men behind him, gave the New York National league champions a victory yesterday over the Philadelphia American league pennant winners in the first of the series of seven games for the world's championship by the score of 3 to 0. Philadelphia failed to score, Mathewson allowing the home team only four hits while the New Yorkers managed to score three runs off Plank. Although defeated, Philadelphia played a brilliant game. It was a clean victory for the visitors, luck cutting no figure in the contest. The National league champions played a hard game and it was only their persistency in touching up Plank at the right moment that gave them the contest. The score:

NEW ORE DOCK FOR SOUTH SHORE ROAD

At Marquette—Hundred New Steel Cars For Ishpeming Road.

Negaunee, Mich., Oct. 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—A contract has recently been given to M. J. Peppard of Minneapolis, Minn., by the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railway, for the erection of a new ore dock at Marquette, Mich., which, with one exception, that of the Great Northern at Allouez bay, at the Head of the Lakes, will be the highest on Lake Superior. The height given in the plans, which were only recently completed, being 70 feet, 8 inches. From the water's edge to the terminus of the dock, the structure will be 1,350 feet long and contain 200 pockets with a capacity of 250 tons of ore each, or an aggregate total storage capacity of 50,000. The estimated cost is $400,000.

The ground work approach to the dock will begin at Third street, where two retaining walls will be constructed seventy-two feet apart, varying from two and one-half feet to six feet in thickness, and terminating at Front street, where solid concrete abutments will be built. The space between the two retaining walls will be filled in with rock and other material from the point on Third street where the approach begins, to the first abutment on the west side of Front street. The dock will be nineteen feet "in the clear" above Front street, and will rest on a steel plate girder seventy-two and one-half feet long. An abutment will also be built on the east side of Front street, and crossing Lake street there will be another steel girder thirty-five feet above the thoroughfare, and still another girder seventy-five feet long over the James Pickands company's coal sheds. The girders will rest on concrete abutments, and from the point where the last girder is built over the Pickands property the dock will be built on piles. The grade for the approach to the dock is given at 2 per cent.

The amount of lumber used in building the dock represents an amount almost the equivalent of the cut of a small sawmill for an entire season. The engineer estimates a total of 6,000,000 feet of plank and boards for cross bracing and platforms, and to be used in the entire construction work. Owing to its great tensile strength, the specifications name Washington fir as the lumber to be used and contracts have already been made for the shipment of the required amount of this kind from the Pacific coast.

Five thousands Norway pine and tamarack piles will be used for the underpinning of the structure. These will be driven by means of pile drivers, the clay bottom in the lake precluding the possibility of driving them by water jets, as in the case when sand bottoms are encountered. Without exception, the long timbers for piling will be the Michigan product, and a quantity has already been purchased here from local concerns.

A channel twenty-two feet in depth will be dredged at the new dock, and dredge No. 2, owned by McDonald & Whiteside of Duluth, arrived in Marquette, Friday, and will be used in doing this work.

The building of the new dock will furnish employment to a large number of men during the coming winter. The cement work will be done before the advent of winter weather, and it is understood that a large force of men will rush this work to completion.

In anticipation of an increase in ore traffic next season, the Lake Superior & Ishpeming railway has placed an order with a Pittsburg car foundry for 100 steel ore cars to be delivered at Negaunee, not later than April 1, 1906. The cars will be duplicates of the 150 steel cars purchased this spring, and each of the capacity of 100,000 pounds of ore.

In addition the company expects to order two new locomotives of the same type purchased this spring, which will also be built this winter for delivery at the same time the ore cars leave the shops.

The present season has witnessed a noticeable increase in ore traffic on the Lake Superior & Ishpeming railroad, and at the rate of increase recorded up to Sept. 1, the traffic will amount to over 1,750,000 tons for 1905. The rolling stock was increased this year by the addition of two heavy locomotives and 150 steel ore cars, which, with the new equipment ordered for delivery in April, will make it possible for the road to handle a total tonnage next year of about 2,500,000 tons.

CANNOT BREAK THIS MAN'S NECK

Murderer May Escape Hanging on Account of Ossification.

Chicago, Oct. 10—Because of a peculiar freak of nature, Robert Gardiner, a prisoner in the county jail here, charged with the murder of Agnes Morrison, may escape the death penalty. When he was arraigned in court yesterday, his attorney, William Buckner, startled the court by turning to Assistant States Attorney Barbour and saying:

"This is a case where it won't do any good to ask for the death penalty. They can't break this man's neck if they do try to hang him and you may lose him altogether by hanging him and failing to execute the sentence in full."

It appears that the prisoner is suffering from ossification of the vertebrae and tissues of the neck. According to Prof. Steffenson of Rush medical college, only five cases similar have ever come to the notice of the medical profession. Gardiner carries his head tilted forward and slightly twisted to one side. He is unable to move his head or incline it except with great effort and is hardly able to eat or speak owing to the effect of the ossification on the sympathetic membranes of the throat and bronchial tubes. Attorney Buckner declares that the hardening of bone and tissue has proceeded so far that it would be impossible to bring any strain upon the patient's neck that would be sufficiently severe to cause any discomfort other than a slight straining of the muscles.

PAT CROWE AT OMAHA

Famous Kidnaper Is Brought Back to Scene of His Crimes.

Omaha, Oct. 10.—Pat Crowe, shackled to Detective Helfeld of the Omaha detective department, and accompanied by Chief Detective Dunn, arrived in Omaha at 9 o'clock last night from Butte, Mont., where he was arrested a week ago. A crowd of 2,000 persons who had gathered at the Union station, filled the station and approaches in every direction, intent on securing, if possible, a glance at Crowe.

A large cordon of police opened an aisle from the platform of the train to a patrol wagon in the rear of the station, and Crowe, between the detectives, with a patrolman walking ahead and another behind, was marched to the wagon amid the cheers of some and exclamations of others.

The extraordinary precaution taken by the police department for landing Crowe safely behind the bars seemed hardly necessary, for he gave little heed to them, and apparently had no wish to make his escape.

In the patrol wagon, five officers and three reporters furnished company for the prisoner to the police station. A large crowd followed the patrol to the station, where another crowd had gathered to witness the return of the prisoner. Precautions were again taken to prevent friends from reaching the prisoner, and he was hurried into the captain's office, where he was registered. Opposite his name was placed the charge of shooting with intent to kill or wound. The prisoner shook hands with Chief of Police Donahue, Special Agent Vizard of the Union Pacific, and Benjamin Keegan, a life long Omaha friend. He was searched and allowed to retain a pencil and a few dollars in money. He ordered a supper of steak, coffee and desert, after eating which he consented to see a representative of the Associated Press.

Crowe was not inclined to talk of his past, and refused absolutely to speak of his alleged connection with the kidnaping of Eddie Cudahy. He declared that much had been published on his alleged doings, confessions and other matters, which was without foundation. Among these he mentioned a confession said to have been signed by him at Butte, implicating young Cudahy in a conspiracy in connection with the kidnaping.

"When this case comes to trial," said Crowe, "the truth will be known to the world. God will take care of me. He takes care of everybody and makes no mistakes. I don't feel nearly so anxious about securing my liberty again as I do to reform and get back to an honest life. I once did well in Omaha and if given a chance I believe I can do as well again."

"Is it true that you once offered to return to $21,000 to Edward A. Cudahy if he would not prosecute you?" was asked.

"I believe Mr. Cudahy has made the statement. If he did so, I do not thing he would lie for $21,000," he replied.

Crowe appeared nervous at first, and he hesitated about seeing anybody.

He recognized a reporter whom he talked to two monts ago, and he recalled an interview in a local newspaper office. In registering he was asked what his occupation was. Replying to this query, Crowe remarked: "Dodging you fellows has been about all I have done for the past six or seven years."

Crowe took particular notice of the crowd which had gathered at the station and remarked that it was a flattering welcome that Omaha was giving to one of its former citizens.

THEATER MANAGERS MAY CHOOSE PATRONS

Pittsburg, Oct. 10.—Justice J. Hay Brown of the Pennsylvania supreme court handed down an opinion yesterday in which he decided that a theater proper is a private individual engaged in a strictly private business and is under no implied obligations to serve the public.

The action was brought by Wilbur Horney against Nixon & Zimmerman, for an alleged wrong suffered by him and his family in not getting the seats for which they held tickets for a theatrical performance in Philadelphia.

In his opinion, Justice Brown says the entertainment is always limited to those whom he may agree to admit to it, and there is no duty as in the case of a common carrier, to admit everyone who may apply and be willing to pay for a ticket. The only remedy is assumpsit for the breach of contract.

Come Up Where You Belong.

Perhaps you know why you fail in the plans for money, fame and position.

Some don't.

Just why the brain does not produce practical money-making results is a puzzle to many men.

Strong, healthy natural brains cannot be made from the food most men eat, and good brains can't work sharp when slugged to weakness by coffee.

Unsuccessful brains come from improperly selected food and from coffee drinking.

Coffee affects the stomach and nerves, thence the brain and prevents proper digestion of even good food.

A distinct improvement in mental power will follow in a week or ten days after coffee is left off and Postum taken on.

The results are multiplied when the brain-building food, Grape-Nuts is used twice a day.

There are well established and very clearly understood reasons for these sure results from the change in food and drink. You can make Money, Position, Fame if you have the kind of Brain that works that way.

Postum well boiled produces a delicious beverage, satisfying and nourishing.

Quit dragging and poor food and Come Up Where You Belong.

HOPELESS STRUGGLE

In Philippines For Americans Who Go There Without Money.

Some Save Money, But Credit System Enmeshes the Majority.

Manila, Oct. 10.—In these days of riotous expansion many ambitious young Americans are turning covetous eyes toward the seductive shores of the Philippine Islands.

Manila, in particular, as the Mecca of the distinguished Taft party, and many lesser lights, has been brought conspicuously into the limelight.

Americans generally err in the supposition that the Philippines are a strange, unexplored Eldorado—a fairy land of promise, where even a mediocre could not ward off showering wealth if he wished. As a matter of fact, the islands—especially Manila—have been the center of commercial activity for generations. English and German traders have lived, died and been forgotten in Manila for eighty years past.

Exploiting the vast agricultural and forest areas is a process as involving long periods of time and immense capital. Enormous fortunes are not to be made quickly. The man of small capital had best remain away—if he be seeking investments in other lines than money lending.

And the penniless Yankee lad, who sails out of the Golden Gate today expecting to make a fortune in the Philippines, must needs bring grit and bumption to the amount of excess baggage.

Making money in Manila is not difficult, but getting away with it remains more a matter of accident than the realiatzion of well laid plans. Savings from salaries are not extensive. Many young Americans live in messes, in parties of from four to six or eight, with a Chinese cook and Filipino house servants. Rents vary from $45 to $100 per month, depending more on the degree of pretentiousness of the house than its location, since Manila is scattered over an immense territory. By this method of housekeeping actual living expenses may be reduced to a minimum, if it so desired. In too many instances, however, a profusion of dinner entertainments, well-stocked sideboards, etc., renders "messing it" rather an expensive mode of living.

Accommodations in boarding houses cost from $40 to $60 per month.

Washing is done at so much per month by Chinese and Filipino "lavanderos," who charge on an average $3.50 per month.

Clothing is a small item, since white duck is the universal garb, and will last an indefinite length of time.

Making all reasonable allowances for living and recreation expenses, a young man earning $125 to $150 per month should save from $700 to $1,000 per year from his salary. Unfortunately, however, few do so.

Like English colonial cities, Manila is developing into a famous club center. More than a score of clubs of varied character flourish, supported almost wholly by the young, unmarried Americans about town.

Then, too, there is that mysterious something in the enervating climate, or the tropics, which not only sooner or later, undermines the morals of the average unmarried white man, but engenders in him an absolute indifference to the value of money. The wisdom of saving is lost sight of, and the accumulation of financial obligations soon ceases to be a source of worry. It has been estimated many times that fully 50 per cent of the unmarried American population of Manila is constantly in debt.

An iniquitious credit system, known as the "Chit Habit," is largely responsible for this condition; under this arrangement one simply signs a small printed form, stating the date and amount of purchase at the club, cafe, or hotel—all of which are presented for collection at the end of the month. Under this seductive plan the debtor is seldom aware of the magnitude of his obligations until the bills are presented for payment.

Viewed from every point, however, the easy, irresponsible life of the Far East perhaps approximates Utopia as nearly as the nervous, ambitious Yankee could wish. Worry is almost an unknown quantity, and haste has been reduced to an indnity.

Men in the government's civil service, like those Englishmen who came out from London under five-year contracts with Eastern trading firms, enjoy the same sense of security as regards the future. With a medium amount of office duty under easy hours, with the government ready under any emergency of illness or accident to take care of him, the average employe's worldly worries are reduced to a minimum. Government service in the Philippines resolves itself into easy work, certain pay, and the assurance of being cared for in the event of distress. Discharges from the service are made only "for cause."

Healthy recreations may be conveniently and cheaply indulged in. Tennis, horseback riding and hunting are fairly popular. Outdoor games on account of the sun's heat, are seldom played until after 4:30 or 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Horsebacking is usually performed in the early hours of the cool mornings.

The almost primeval forests on the mountain ranges back of Manila abound in game, both large and small. Myriads of monkeys, gigantic lizards (iguanas) and countless flocks of wild duck may be found with small effort. In some of the more remote regions the wild duck, from being so seldom shot at, are quite approachable, forty or fifty being considered a fair day's bag for one hunter. No dog is used—a Filipino boy as wader doing the retrieving act.

The shooting of wild caraboo (water buffalo) and wild boar affords the keenest excitement to the nimrod in the Philippines. Not a few narrow escapes from violent death on the spreading horns of the ponderous carabou are reported every season. The latest fatality occurred recently in the southern portion of the island, where an American soldier was gored to death by a wounded carabou, whose unexpected rush he failed to dodge.

A very high grade of good American baseball has been played in Manila for several seasons past. The Army and Navy afford good players in abundance, and scores of 1 to 0, 3 to 2, etc., are common.

Football, owing, no doubt, to the absence of rival schools or colleges, is but little indulged in; though over in Singapore—the hottest white settlement in the world—the rugged Englishmen play barcheaded in their "old-fashioned association" football games.

This, then, is the sort of life young American exiles may lead in Uncle Sam's possessions over here across the sea. Really golden opportunities do not abound. A friendless, middle-class youth who comes to Manila "on spec" is very apt to find himself, "up against it," for awhile, till he has had a chance to demonstrate his worth. But many of those who come under the most favorable conditions, with positions assured, drift all too quickly to the "bowwows."

An encouraging percentage stay at home-nights, are cautious of associates, frugal and succeed in a reasonably short time in accumulating a pleasant bank account. Many young men by persist effort to please have won good posts in the government service, and are trusted implicitly as public servants. Many of Manila's leading merchants arrived here years ago without a penny, but they owe their present prosperity to the same qualities which would have made them successful anywhere else.

When a final balance is struck, it may be safely said that a young American, sans money, sans friends, and sans prospects, is about as well off in a good town in the United States as in this faraway Oriental city. Men of moral stamina—who can live here and remain decent and energetic—may find two or three years of Manila life not unprofitable. But the slight additional savings of a salaried man hardly compensate for the expatriation.

Wounds, Bruises and Burns.

By applying an antiseptic dressing to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, they may be healed without maturation and in about one-third the time required by the old treatment. This is the greatest discovery and triumph of modern surgery. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principle. It is an antiseptic and when applied to such injuries, causes them to heal very quickly. It also allays the pain and soreness and prevents any danger of blood poisoning. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money, not to mention the inconvenience and suffering such injuries entail. For sale by all leading druggists.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

THE HANKOW RAILROAD

Belgians Secured Stock Control and Chinese Objected.

Important Concession Annulled and Chinese Pay $6,750,000.

Pekin, Oct. 10.—Undoubtedly there are many things in connection with the cession of the Hankow-Canton railway to China not known in the United States—things which should be thoroughly understood before any attempts are made to draw any conclusion, either from the American or the Chinese point of view—when President Roosevelt announced the result of the negotiations, which have been carried on for more than a year between the Chinese minister at Washington and the representatives of the American—China development company with regard to the Canton-Hankow railway. In return for a payment by China of $6,750,000, the concession held by the company for the construction of this important trunk line is canceled and the Chinese obtain full ownership and control of the twenty-one- mile section of completed railway running from Canton. The result is of such immediate importance to the future of all railway and industrial enterprises in China that the matter deserves general attention.

It is unnecessary to recapitulate the history of the American concession. The main facts, briefly stated, are as follows: The contract was originally granted to the American syndicate because of the views held by Viceroy Chang Chih Tung and Wu Ting Fang, minister at Washington, that the contractors represented a bona fide industrial undertaking for the development of American interests, and because no suspicion of territorial ambitions could be attached to the representations of the United States government. Two considerations weighed chiefly with the viceroy in whose hands the mater virtually lay—first, that Chinese capital for the construction of the line was not forthcoming; secondly, that it was imperative for China's protection that the railway should not be controlled by any of the "earth hungry" powers. The fact that Franco-Belgian diplomacy, supported by Sheng Ta Jen and the pro-Russian officials at Pekin and Shanghai, exhusted every effort to prevent the American concession was appreciated by the viceroy, although the full significance of Russian conquest by railway and bank was at that date foreseen by few.

The manner in which the agents of King Leopold, frustrated at Pekin and Shanghai, attained their object, control of the majority of the American concession stock by quietly purchasing the original subscribers' shares, is well known in China. This delicate operation was completed toward the end of 1899 by an American—Gen. Whittier is the man who is given credit for organizing and effecting it. The Belgians naturally took certain things for granted—the continued predominance of Russia at Pekin, the inability of China to resist pressure, the complacent corruption of the court and provincial mandarins, the improbability of serious intervention by the Russian scheme for the specific conquest of China the Belgian middlemen had done their work, since the Cassini convention, with remarkable ability and secrecy, and if they omitted to reckon with Japan as a serious factor they were not alone in this mistake.

During and immediately after King Leopold's acquisition of the control of the capital stock in the American-China development company the agencies which served that monarch used every effort to disarm criticism and suspicion. The energy displayed in this direction and the assiduity shown in cultivating the good offices of Sheng Ta Jen were sufficient in themselves to alarm all patriotic Chinese, and, more especially, the Hu-Nan party, led by the late viceroy, Liu Kun-Yi. From the outset, it was the openly expressed opinion of the leading Hunanese that either the railway should be built as a bona fide American undertaking, or that the concession should be annulled if it could be shown that the control of the enterprise had in fact passed into Belgian hands, the Chinese were within their rights in cancelling the contract, inasmuch as one of its conditions was that the rights of the syndicate should never pass out of American control. It was only after the conclusion of the Boxer trouble, however, that Belgian rights of control began to assert themselves, gradually at first, carefully feeling the pulse of Washington and Pekin, and increasing in determination with the advance of the forward Russian policy in China. After the formal opening of the first section of the line at Canton—blazoned to the world as a triumph of American enterprise and the earnest of Chinese progress under American direction—further concealment of the fact appeared unnecessary. Accordingly, the Belgian hand was completely exposed and steps were taken to dismiss the American engineers and staff and to transfer complete control to Brussels. There can be no possible doubt, if it had not been for that neglected factor, Japan, China's southern trunk line would at this moment have been in the same hands at the northern trunk line from Hankow to Pekin, and the control of communication and in due course of trade, the control of commerce across China from north to south, would have been held in trust to the order of Russia. Neither Pekin's protest nor Washington's mild surprise could have delayed this inevitable result; nor is it probable that the Chinese government—as distinct from the southern provinces—would have raised any serious objections to the policy of Russia triumphant. All this because King Leopold's agents well understood how to practice the gentle art of overcoming patriotic scruples among Chinese mandarins.

With the first victories of the Japanese, however, the entire aspect of affairs became radically changed, and, as Russian influence dwindled in Pekin, so the prospect of undisputed Belgian construction of the railway diminished. Sheng Ta Jen, as usual, adopted Fabian tactics and pleaded frequent illness, while maintaining cordial relations with the Belgians, but, as the war progressed, more pressure was brought to bear upon him by the Canton and Hu-Nan parties; these eventually declared that they would raise in their own provinces the capital required for the railway, and they demanded the cancelling of the American contract. After considerable delay, due to the natural uncertainty of the pro-Russian party at Pekin, the Chinese minister at Washington was directed to negotiate with this idea in view

But the concession is a valuable asset, as the results of the working of the short completed section showed, and none the less valuable to its shareholders, American and Belgian, from the fact that its affairs continued to enjoy the benevolent protection of the state department at Washington and the United States legation at Pekin. This fact was realized, and, with a view to making it more effective, arrangements were made at the beginning of this year between the principal American shareholders and King Leopold to transfer a sufficient number of the Belgian-owned shares to the name of J. Pierpont Morgan, by which means the company was enabled to state, and the United States government to maintain, that the undertaking was once more a bona fide American enterprise. An intimation to this effect was conveyed by Mr. Conger to the Chinese government, but the statement was no longer sufficient to meet the views of the Chinese in the South. At a meeting held at Shanghai between the representatives of the Kwang Tung and the Nu Nan factions it was decided to insist either on the canceling of the contract, or on a specific utterance by the United States government that the latter would guarantee the maintenance of American responsibility and control of the undertaking. As no such guarantee was forthcoming, negotiations for the annulment of the contract proceeded. Sir Sheng Tung Liang, the Chinese minister at Washington, gradually increasing his offers up to the figure at which the matter has been settled. The net result appears to be that, after nearly seven years, this important concession has been annulled, a score of American and Belgian capitalists make substantial profit, and the Chinese get some twenty miles of railway for $6,750,000, and a practical working knowledge of civilized finance.

It is hardly fair to say that this is all that the Chinese get, for the effect of this matter on the development of railway communication in China cannot fail to be serious and far-reaching. To judge from the utterances and known tendencies of the Hunanese, their object in this matter is not to place the construction of this line in Chinese hands, but simply to recover the concession from those in whom they have paid for their experience must prove a very powerful obstacle hereafter in the path of any power, except, perhaps, Japan; that supports its subjects in offering capital for the development of China. In the future it must be admitted that the government which, under stress of economic pressure or public opinion, sees fit to obtain concessions from the Chinese government is morally and logically bound not to leave the honest fulfillment of these undertakings to the good will of speculators, no matter whether they are Chinese, Belgians or Americans.

IRON MARKET RULES STRONG

Bridge Contractor Says New Orders Call For July Delivery.

"The iron market rules very strong at the present time," said H. E. Hughes of the Chicago firm of Darst & Hughes, contracting agents for the Massillon Bridge company, who was a business caller in the city this week. Darst & Hughes have the contract for building the new $6,500 steel bridge over the St. Louis river near Floodwood and Mr. Hughes is there now superintending the construction work.

"There was never before such a heavy demand for steel," continued Mr. Hughes, "and the Steel corporation and the Carnegie interests are only taking orders for delivery next July. Unless the consumers have already placed their orders some months ago there is little hope for them to get out any new steel before the middle of next year.

"In the past six months steel has advanced $6 a ton from the mills and a cent a hundredweight from stock. Many of the structural steel corporations like the bridge concerns over the country carry as large a stock as possible, but even these carry all the stock that they need for their season's contracts and at the present time many of them are having great difficulty to keep up their contracts. Our company is no exception to the rule, but so far as the present contract is concerned we are all right for the stock was shipped some time ago and is already on the ground.

"The demand for steel and the advanced prices have naturally caused a stiffening of prices in the way of bridge construction and it is not likely that such structures can be built so cheaply in the coming year as this year or last."

THE WINNING STROKE

If more than ordinary skill in playing brings the honors of the game to the winning player, so exceptional merit in a remedy ensures the commendation of the well informed, and as a reasonable amount of outdoor life and recreation is conducive to the health and strength, so does a perfect laxative tend to one's improvement in cases of constipation, biliousness, headaches, etc. It is all important, however, in selecting a laxative, to choose one of known quality and excellence, like the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., a laxative which sweetens and cleanses the system effectually, when a laxative is needed, without any unpleasant after effects, as it acts naturally and gently on the internal organs, simply assisting nature when nature needs assistance, without griping, irritating or debilitating the internal organs in any way, as it contains nothing of an objectionable or injurious nature. As the plants which are combined with the figs in the manufacture of Syrup of Figs are known to physicians to act most beneficially upon the system, the remedy has met with their general approval as a family laxative, a fact well worth considering in making purchases.

It is because of the fact that SYRUP OF FIGS is a remedy of known quality and excellence, and approved by physicians that has led to its use by so many millions of well informed people, who would not use any remedy of uncertain quality or inferior reputation. Every family should have a bottle of the genuine on hand at all times, to use when a laxative remedy is required. Please to remember that the genuine Syrup of Figs is for sale in bottles of one size only, by all reputable druggists, and that full name of the company—California Fig Syrup Co., is plainly printed on the front of every package. ACTIVITY IS GREAT

In Nearly Every Class of American Imports and Exports.

Reflects the Prosperous Condition of Trade and Industry.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Oct. 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—The record of the foreign commerce of the United States during August strongly reflects the prosperous condition of trade and industry. Figures just published by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics, show that exports of manufactures during the single month of August have increased nearly $9,000,000, or about 25 per cent as compared with the same month of last year, and about $20,000,000 as compared with August, 1901. Meantime the manufacturers have increased their consumption of materials imported for use in the various processes of domestic industry, the August, 1905, imports of crude articles for use in manufacturing having increased nearly $2,000,000 over the imports of August, 1904, while there is an increase of about $50,000,000 when the eight months ending with August of this year are compared with the corresponding period a year earlier. That class of manufacturers' materials designated as wholly or partially manufactured" also shows increased imports—about $1,000,000 during August, and over $13,000,000 during the eight months ending with August.

The figures show also that more manufactures are being exported from than are imported into the country—a condition which has been brought about during the short period since 1897. Imports of manufactures (including in that term for this comparison manufactures ready for consumption, articles wholly or partially manufactured for use as materials in the mechanic arts, and articles of voluntary use and luxuries) aggregated during August last $45,00,000, while exports of manufactures during that month showed a total of $51,000,000. During the eight months ending with August, 1905, imports of manufactures, including all degrees of manufacture, aggregated $322,000,000, while exports of manufactures amounted during the same period to $376,000,000. As recently as 1897 the records of our foreign commerce show an importation of $283,000,000 worth of manufactures during the calendar year as against $380,000,000 worth of manufactures exported. The following year was the first to show exports of manufactures in excess of imports of manufactures, and since 1898 there has been a steady increase in the outward flow of the products of our manufacturing industries. During the eight-month periods of the years named exports of manufactures have increased from $190,000,000 in 1897 to $376,000,000 in 1905, while imports of manufactures have only increased from $212,000,000 in 1897 to $322,000,000 in 1905.

In nearly every class there is great activity shown both as to imports and exports. On the import side imports of animals and articles of food show for the eight months an increase of $10,000,000; crude materials for use in manufacturing, as already stated, an increase of $50,000,000; wholly or partially manufactured materials, $13,000,000; articles manufactured ready for consumption, $14,000,000, and articles of voluntary use, luxuries, etc., $16,000,000, as compared with the imports during the corresponding eight months of the preceding year. On the export side agricultural products increased $63,000,000; manufactures, $53,000,000; products of the mines, $2,000,000, and miscellaneous articles nearly $2,000,000. Products of the fisheries and of the forest each decreased slightly as compared with the first eight months of the preceding year, the former about $1,000,000 and the latter nearly $5,000,000.

The duties collected from customs have increased materially since the close of the fiscal year 1905, that year having shown no appreciable increase in customs revenue as compared with the preceding year. The total amount of duties collected from customs during the fiscal year 1905 was $262,069,528, as against $262,013,079 in 1904, the increase being very slight, while for June, the closing month of the fiscal year 1905, the total customs revenue was $22,564,652, as against $22,590,682 in June of the preceding year. The revenues derived from customs show a decided improvement since the close of the fiscal year. Thus the revenue derived from customs in July, 1905, amounted to $21,590,149, as against $19,483,750 in July of the preceding year, and in August amounted to $26,181,282, as compared with $22,417,674 in August, 1904. For the eight months ending Aug. 31, 1905, the total customs revenue aggregated $177,926,028, as against $170,475,016 in the same months of the preceding year, and of this increase of $7,451,015, $6,870,007 was accumulated during the two months of July and August of the present year.

Up to Aug. 31, 1905, imports amounted to $770,412,026, as against $667,269,364 in the preceding year; and exports were valued at $966,612,607, as compared with $851,208,457 in the first eight months of 1904. The value of manufactures exported during the first eight months of 1905 practically equalled the total exports of manufactures during the entire calendar year 1899, being $376,198,679, as against a total of $380,787,891 for the entire year 1899. Should the commercial activity indicated by the August figures continue during the succeeding four months, the calendar year 1905 will show the largest volume of commerce, both as to imports and exports, ever recorded.

DISPOSAL OF LAND TO BEST SETTLERS

One of Most Important Problems of Reclamation Service.

Washington, Oct. 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the most important problems connected with the operations of the reclamation service is that of the disposal of the lands to the best class of settlers. It is proposed under the requirements of the law to subdivide the irrigable land into tracts of such size as will, in the judgment of the secretary of the interior, support a family. This means intensified cultivation and diversified farming. At the same time it is not practicable to hold any considerable part of this irrigable land for grazing, as there is not sufficient land conveniently located to any one source of supply to permit any of the land to lie idle.

The settlers, especially those coming into a new country, must have open range for their horses and cattle, and at a distance not too far from their home farms. The tracts of land which are being reclaimed of acres of the public domain affording excellent grazing, but while this is theoretically open to all comers, it is practically parceled out among a few cattle or sheep men and the settlers are prevented from utilizing it to best advantage. That is to say, while they might wish to protect the grazing for their own cattle it is possible for the owners of large bands of sheep to put tens of thousands of them on the open range and destroy all of the grazing for miles around the new settlements.

The grazing lands belong to the government, and are practically monopolized by a few large interests, and the settler on the irrigated tract is hampered for want of space on which to graze his small herds or few animals. It is very important that the community which is operating the irrigation works exercise some reasonable control over the public range, and it is hoped that congress will take cognizance of this condition and authorize some form of lease or permit to be issued to the settlers or to the new community.

DEMAND FOR WOODSMEN

In Northern Minnesota Pineries Is Exhausting the Supply.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 10.—The amount of work which will be done in the pineries of Northern Minnesota the coming season will be far greater than of the past few years, and every effort is being made by the different logging companies to secure men. Very poor success has met their efforts thus far, however. Local employment offices have orders for over 2,000 men and representatives of these offices are scouring North Dakota in the effort to secure men from the wheat fields. The exodus of men from the wheat fields to the timber has begun, but the number arriving thus far is inadequate to supply the demand.

At Kelliher, fourteen camps will be maintained and this place will be the principal headquarters of the Crookston lumber company, which will this year log fully 50 per cent more timber than in any previous year in the history of operations in Northern Minnesota. If 1,000 woodsmen were in Bemidji today they could find immediate employment.

POINTS FOR SMOKERS.

Ways to Use Tobacco Without Injuring Your Health.

If you will observe the following rules you may smoke as much as you like without any harm.

In the first place, smoke a good cigar. In the second place never light a cigar the second time. The other rules are never to stay in a cloud of smoke, and never chew the end of a cigar.

The first rule to smoke a good cigar, of course, means to smoke a Wadsworth Bros.' Chico, for which S. F. Boyce is the local agent.

"Although the Chico cigar is made with a long clear Havana filler," says Mr. Boyce, the druggist, "and is equal in flavor, fragrance, and all qualities that go to make a good smoke to any of the ten and fifteen cent brands, yet it sells for only five cents.

"We buy direct from the maker, thus saving any middleman's profit, and in the Chicos give our customers the best smoke for their money that we have ever seen.

"If there is anyone in Duluth that has not yet tried the Chicos we want him to come in today and get one."

TALKS TO THE YOUNG

Dr. E. M. Randall, General Secretary of Epworth League, Speaks.

Lives Should Be Ruled to Aid In Saving Others.

"It is a solemn thought that in evangelizing this city at least four out of every five who find the Lord must find Him at the age of Epworth league association and fellowship,'" declared Dr. E. M. Randall, general secretary of the Epworth League union of this country, at the First Methodist church, last evening.

Dr. Randall came to Duluth as a guest of Dr. M. S. Rice, pastor of the First Methodist church, a personal and a college friend.

He gave an interesting and earnest talk to the Epworth League members of the Head of the Lakes and their friends.

The idea expressed in the opening sentence was the primary thought running through Dr. Randall's talk, that in the work of evangelizing any community or city nowadays it is necessary to reach out for and gather into the fold the young people who have not yet passed the Epworth League age.

In the course of his talk, for it was a heart to heart talk with the young people rather than a lecture or address, Dr. Randall said in part:

"We are facing the greatest opportunity that the Lord has ever given us and I hope that you as Christian workers are divesting yourselves of all errors in the way of the convential idea that surrounds our lives. We think it is a common thing to find members of the church, professing Christians who look on religious life as an experience. Our religious life is above all else a service, one in which we are to when we are converted, we think that is the end. It may be the end in a certain sense, but it is the small end. It is the beginning. It means an opportunity for growth, for a better acquaintance with the Lord, an intellectual growth, continued improvement. It means a life devoted to him.

"It is a common thing to find that, minister to souls.

"If the work of God is done acceptably in this city it means not only the bringing of young people to Christ but it means that we are to be the instrumentality, that is to reach out, touch and bring in other and rear up a citizenship from youth that will know the Lord Jesus Christ as their Savior. It must be done.

"You and I can bring our own chapter of the league up to this idea. We can rule our personal lives so that they may become tremendous factors for the saving of the young people of Duluth. This is our business. The Son of Man came into the world to seek and to save those who are lost. That was Christ's business. We are Christ's, and His business is, therefore, our business. We are His representatives to reconcile the world to God.

"Some people believe that the hardest part of the Lord's Prayer is 'forgive our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us.' Is it any use to utter a prayer and not do it in sincerity? The Lord sees into our hearts, and he sees the hypocricy there."

Dr. Randall related several appropriate incidents illustrating the tendency of people to covet the honors heaped on others, if they could have them without doing the work that was accomplished to secure such honors. He continued:

"It is better to remember that we have borne the burden and the heat of the battle. Over yonder the most honorable marks of our Lord will be the scars made by the nails in His hands, and the scars made by the crown of thorns on His brow. There is a tendency or a desire among Christians to have all the blessings possible come to the church, but we want the Lord to excuse us from the work. We are glad to see others consecrate themselves to the Lord's work, but we do not wish to have the Lord break up our own little family circle."

Dr. Randall drew comparisons of such lives with that of the unselfish life of Christ, and suggested the great possibilities before those who can enter into the Christ-like spirit in their work and example.

"Can we go before thet hrone of the Lord and say, 'thy kingdom come,' unless we can say, 'Lord, there is one spot I control. That is my heart. Take it.' If we cannot say that about our heart, can we say His prayer and mean it?

"Our organization is the means of co-operation in this work. The ruling idea should be to make league work an agency for Christ."

Dr. Randall urged the benefits of systematic methods in Epworth league work, a planning of a campaign for souls. He emphasized the social features of the department work of the league, and asked that the predominating idea always be, "gather young people of the country together and bring them to a saving knowledge of Christ." He said it is the place of the Epworth league to train young lives to symmetry and intensity in Christ, that this is an even greater feature than the bringing of such lives to Christ. "If we are doing the Lord's will," said Dr. Randall, in closing, "we are merged in His great providential design, and nothing can withstand us. One question is always before us. That is, whether our lives are conforming to themselves to bring others to Christ. An appeal to the young people to pledge Dr. Randall's talk was followed by his will."

John N. Smith of Duluth Sued for a Liquor Bill.

St. Paul, Oct. 10.—Because he claims Emma Brown sold him liquor illegally, John N. Smith, Duluth, is resisting payment of a $641 bill the Brown woman claims he owes her.

Smith's attorney, in a suit in the district court yesterday, set forth that the maker of the check was intoxicated when he drew the instrument, and also alleged that the Brown woman kept a house of prostitution, where it is claimed the bill was contracted for liquor.

After giving the check Smith stopped the payment of it, and the woman sued him.

BAPTISTS OPEN THEIR STATE CONVENTION

Large Gathering Hears Strong Opening Sermon By Dr. Crandall.

First Session In Pilgrim Congregational Church Well Attended.

Three strong addreses and a short session marked the opening of the forty-sixth anual convention of the Baptists of Minnesota at Pilgrim Congregational church last evening.

Delegates were present from all parts of the state. Some of them did not arrive until 7 p. m. and were obliged to go directly from the union station to the church. The Congregational house of worship was very well filled when the session was called to order.

Perhaps the most important event of the evening was the convention sermon, delivered by Rev. L. A. Crandall, D. D. of Minneapolis, who took for his topic, "If a Man Die, Shall He Live Again?"

"Death is a universal experience," said Dr. Crandall, "and there is not a fireside in the entire world that has not at least one vacant chair. We have all experienced sorrows which come with the taking away of ones we dearly love.

"We all have ancient man's longing for immortality. This longing is legitimate for it was put there by God. This is a very nice world and there are many bright days. We do not like to leave it. Did you ever hunt for violets in a meadow? It is good to live! Have you stood on the top of a mountain and loked down on the valleys below? It is good to live! Have you seen homes where love reigned supreme? Ah, it is god to live.

"A Christian woman—a very good Christian—came to me once and told me that she feared she was not a good Christian at all because she did not want to die. I told her that if a longing to die possesed every Christian, there were very few Christians in the world. I don't want to die. I should like to live.

"We look out beyond life and hope that death is not the end for we hate to give up the relations of this earth. The child to thep arents; the parents to the child; the brother to the sister and the husband to the wife. Ah, friends, there is nothing in life like these relations. We hate to think that our friends are gone forever, but there are times when this question comes out.

"A business man, a member of my congregation who I am afraid to mention, did ont think much of the future, lost his only son, a lad of 16, who sickened and died. This man came to me as his pastor, and asked me if there was any certainty that he would see his Harry again. It is a universal hope that we do meet again after this world and it was not disbelief which prompted this man to ask this, it was fear.

"While I was crossing the Atlantic recently, a Minneapolis woman confided in me that she never expected to see land again. She was mistaken. She did expect to see land again or she would never have started on the journey, but she feared that she might never see land again.

"Someone has said that poets are sure of immortality. Robert G. Ingersoll was a poet, only the trouble with him was that he tried to be a theorist. Ingersoll expressed his hope for a life to come when he said, beside the grave of his dead brother: 'The listening ear of love may hear the flutter of an angel's wing.'

"But I believe that many Christian people fear, somehow, that after all, they may be mistaken. If not, I do not understand why we shrink from death. If we are so sure of the future life, why do we feel as we do? This is not disbelief, it is fear.

"There is an argument which is clung to by young preachers, and in my callow days, I preached it myself, but I am not satisfied with it. Have you had people point out the shrubs and trees, bare in winter, and then tell you that with the warm winds and sunshine of spring, they will become green again? Ah yes, but they were not dead! I am not satisfied with that; I want the word of someone who knows, and that is why I believe in Jesus Christ. My faith in Him is the keynote of my hope for the life that is to come."

Dr. Crandall's sermon made a deep impression upon the large congregation. Following it, a prayer was offered by Rev. J. F. Hill of Northfield. Z. D. Scott made an appropriate address of welcome to the visiting Baptists. He said in part:

"It has been nineteen years since a state Baptist convention has been here, and we take great pleasure in welcoming all of you to Duluth now. Unfortunately, there is not a Baptist church in Duluth large enough to properly accommodate so large a gathering as this, and as our Congregational brethren kindly offered us the use of this church, we decided to hold the convention here.

"I am requested to warn the visitors to look out for bears. Don't walk too far from the beaten paths, for there are said to be no less that six within the city limits now. And don't mistake the aerial bridge for the Milky way or the incline railway for a toboggan slide. But seriously, we are very glad to have you all with us and we give you a hearty welcome to Duluth.

"I hope that before the convention adjourns, it will take some action protesting against the methods of high finance which are practiced so freely just now.

An appropriate response on behalf of the visiting delegates was made by President Carey Emerson of Minneapolis, who said:

"'Efficiency,' the watchword of the convention, is applicable to Duluth and the Baptists of the state are very glad to come to the Head of the Lakes.

"'Efficiency,' Japan has certainly proved efficient during the past year. The work of her people has proven most efficient. And why has little Japan taken such a high rank? Two words tell the story—preparation and co-operation. Theirs is an unexampled instance of preparation and co-operation, resulting in great efficiency."

Mr. Emerson dwelt at some length upon the efficiency of the Japs and said many nice things about the Baptists of Duluth. When he had concluded, Miss Turner of Duluth gave a soprano solo. Rev. E. C. Sayles of Austin read from the scripture and Rev. W. G. Clark of Northfield gave the opening prayer. A short business session was held last evening, during which the following committees were appointed:

Enrollment and credentials: E. Fagenstrom, A. J. Hoag, F. C. Schaffer, E. C. Sayles, J. E. Conant.

On arrangements: C. H. Giddings, W. G. Clarke, A. Edstam.

On finance: F. K. Pratt, E. A. Thayer, J. H. Irish.

From associations: R. L. Palmerton, F. T. Drewett, J. C. Curry, Mrs. G. Powers, W. B. Patton, F. A. Vanderpool, P. Lovene, M. A. Wesgaard.

On nominations for Pillsbury Academy, etc.: J. W. Loughridge, F. W. Jewell, H. W. James.

On place and preachers for next anniversary: R. N. Martin, Broomfield, S. McMinis.

After the adjournment had been taken to this morning, the delegates gathered in different parts of the church and were introduced to those who will be their hosts during their stay in Duluth.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Young Man Shoots Himself and Leaves Bequest to Teachers.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Miller—Dr. McWhorter held a coroner's inquest over the body of William Rymal, who shot himself in the head. The young man had been robbed, he said, of $70 at Orient a day or two before. A few moments before he shot himself he was sitting in the house with others listening to a graphophone. He called for a pencil and on a piece of paper wrote a will. Two schoolteachers were given $600—one of them receiving $400, the other $200. This was because they had been kind to his mother. A legal point is raised by the will in that the young man failed to date or sign his name to it. It has been turned over to the probate court.

Pierre—The state board of pardons has recommended favorable action on the applications of Henry Billett, sentenced from Roberts county on a charge of murder, and that of John Jungworth, Jr., sentenced from Hutchinson county on a charge of incest.

The application of Christian Christensen, sentenced from Clark county on a charge of wife-murder, was rejected.

The application of Edward Wilson, sentenced from Moody county on a charge of murder for the purpose of robbery, was rejected. Wilson was represented by Judge Aiken of Sioux Falls, who made a plea that his client had thoroughly reformed, and had made his time in prison count for future citizenship by the study of dentistry. The application was opposed by State's Attorney Coleman of Moody county, who was backed in his efforts by a long remonstrance against clemency, which was farther backed by letters from residents of that county giving their reasons why no clemency should be exercised.

Wilson is on a life sentence for the murder of a companion for a few dollars, the murder having been shown to be premeditated and a most brutal one.

The figures in the census office show that out of the total population of the state, 3,941 people over 10 years of age were returned as illiterate. Besides these, 4,402 were returned with the notation "unknown" in the literacy column. The total returned as in the illiterate class would be 1.2 per cent of the whole population. But Supt. Robinson classes one-half of the unknown with these, and shows the illiteracy to be 1.0 per cent. Of those returned as illiterate, 1,982 were males and 1,959 females. The illiteracy is principally among the older people, only 954 being returned as such between the ages of 10 and 17. Between the ages of 21 and 44 there are 1,990 in that class, and 1,072 are over 45.

Aberdeen—A strip of country, one-half mile wide and four miles long, northwest of Bath, was devastated by a prairie fire which started from a spark from a Great Northern engine. Over 100 men with teams and plows worked energetically to subdue the flames, but the fire was not stopped until it struck a forty-acre field of green flax stubble. Several hundred tons of hay were destroyed.

The organization of the Western Mutual Life Insurance company was completed by the election of officers and directors and the adoption of by-laws. The officers are: Ex-Governor C. N. Herreid, president; C. F. Easton, first vice president; C. J. McLeod, second vice president; Walter G. Jacobs, secretary; A. C. Witte, treasurer.

Guy Tower of Rondell township, the 10-year-old son of Representative I. D. Tower, is in St. Luke's hospital suffering from a fractured skull, caused by a kick fro ma horse.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—Dinnie Brothers have been awarded the contract for the construction of a new fire department building, to cost about $9,000. Upon the completion of this building, the fire headquarters will be moved to the new location, north of the Great Northern tracks, one team and a part of the equipment being kept at the present quarters south of the track.

W. N. Steele, commissioner in charge of the North Dakota exhibit at the Lewis and Clarke exposition at Portland, writes that the state has been awarded eighty-three gold medals, twenty silver metals and nine bronze medals, in addition to the grand prize for installation. North Dakota's exhibit at Portland has cost less than $10,000, and it is considered one of the best investments the state has ever made.

Forman—Andrew Gunderson, fireman of a threshing machine, fell between the engine and tender. A wheel of the tender crushed his head, killing him instantly. He was about 50 years of age. The accident occurred at the Lunneborg farm, half way between Forman and Milnor.

Mrs. Joe Gardner of Havana, this county, has applied for a divorce from her husband, a well-known contractor and builder of foundations. The complaint is incompatibility of temper.

Fargo—Fargo is to be the permanent headquarters of the state W. C. T. U. in a few months. The plan was started at the recent state meeting at Grand Forks and provides for the establishment of a permanent office here, with a secretary in charge at all times, through whom the business will be conducted. Fargo has the largest union in the state and the members are very active.

With a plea of guilty and throwing himself on the mercy of the court, Bruce Duncan, the defaulting clerk of the Grand Forks postoffice escaped with a six month's sentence and a fine of $850. The fine equals the loss of the government. The sentense will be spent in excited discussion, the storthing at 1:30 o'clock this morning proceeded to a division on the proposition of the minority to submit the Karlstad agreement concerning the dissolution of the union between Norway and Sweden to a referendum. The proposal was rejected by a vote of 105 to 8. The agreement was then accepted by a vote of 101 to 16. This is a signal victory for the government.

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL.

Mrs. E. Campbell, Ill, Suffering and Helpless, Went There to Die. Her Recovery a Miracle.

Lying helpless in her bed with every joint in her body badly swollen and suffering with Chronic Inflammatory Rheumatism, the agonies of a thousand deaths, Mrs. E. Campbell, of Duluth, Minn., could not move a muscle in her body and indeed one might think she were dead. Her friends thought her recovery hopeless and sent her to the hospital to die.

There, under the care of learned doctors and wise, tender nurses, she lingered between life and death. She did not improve. The awful disease and her terrible suffering was slowly but surely sapping away what little strength remained.

Some friends sent her two bottles of the wonderful Cooper Medicines that have been so miraculously curing all kinds of Rheumatism. It required but a few doses of Cooper's New Discovery and two applications of Cooper's Quick Relief to enable her to move her limbs and sit up in bed. She is still using these marvelous discoveries and is improving steadily. Her appetite is good, the swelling reduced and her strength is fast returning.

Her speedy recovery is certain.

Cooper's New Discovery cures Rheumatism, Catarrh, Deafness, Kidney and Stomach Trouble, Blood Diseases and Paralysis and sells for one dollar per bottle. Cooper's Quick Relief the assistant remedy, costs fifty cents.

S. F. Boyce Drug Store acts as Mr. Cooper's special representative in Duluth, where the wonderful medicines can be obtained.

PHILIES IN THE LEAD

At the End of Seventh Inning With the New Yorks.

Thirty-Five Thousand People Witness the Second Game.

New York, Oct. 10.—A crowd estimated at 15,000 persons was gathered at the gates of the Polo grounds today three hours before the time set for the beginning of the second game of the series for the world's baseball championship between the New York national league and the Philadelphia American league clubs.

The police formed the throng into three lines before the ticket booths and there was no disorder. The lines extended for many blocks down Eighth avenue. The adherents of the local team bet as good as eight to two on the New Yorks beating the Quakers and there was not much American league cash in sight at these odds. There were many cheers from the ranks of the Philadelphia supporters in the stands, when big Rube Waddell was seen at the head of the Philadelphia players. The batting order:

Philadelphia—Hartzell, lf; Lord, cf; Davis, 1st base, L. Cross, 3rd base; Seybold, rf; Murphy, 2nd base; M. Cross, ss; Schreck, c, Bender, p.

New York—Bresnahan, c; Browne, rf; Donlin, cf; McGann, 1st base; Mertes, lf; Dahlen, ss; Devlin, 3rd base; Gilbert, 2nd base; McGinity, p.

Umpires—O'Day and Sheridan.

By 2:15 o'clock every seat in the double decker grand stand and the uncovered stands as well as the bleachers, was occupied with a cheering throng of men and women, which overflowed into the field. Every seat had been sold hours before the gates were opened and the late comers were compelled to stand behind the ropes surrounding the outfield. Ground rules, which were established on this account at Philadelphia yesterday, had to be adopted here today.

It was evident that 35,000 people were present a half hour betore the game began.

One minute after 3, Umpires O'Day and Sheridan called the captains together at the home plate. Rube Waddell went to the coaching line behind first base, and Knight took a position behind third.

The score at the end of seventh inning was: Philadelphia, 1; New York, 0. The Athletics scored in the third inning.

MORE TESTIMONY AS TO MRS. SCHANDEIN.

Milwaukee, Oct. 10.—Testimony showing the change in Mrs. Schandein's character and her manner of treating her acquaintances and of conducting her business affairs during the latter years of her life was introduced at today's session of the trial of the will contest in the court. Gustav Frellson, agent of the Associated Charities, through whom Mrs. Schandein dispensed her charitable contributions for several years, and George Schenk, a draper, who was employed at the Schandein home from time to time, were the witnesses examined in this regard.

Mr. Frellson stated that in 1895 and 1896, Mrs. Schandein contributed $600, but that later the amount was cut to $100 per year, after Mrs. Schandein had consulted with Mr. Heyl.

Letters written from Mrs. Schandein to Mrs. Ella Frank during 1904 were read. One of these contained a significant reference to Mrs. Schandein's mental condition.

Mrs. Julius Frank testified to a faintning fit experienced by Mrs. Schandein while a guest at her house a year or two before Mrs. Schandein's departure for Europe the last time.

McCURDY ON THE STAND.

New York, Oct. 10.—Richard M. McCurdy, president of the Mutual Life Insurance company was a witness before the insurance investigating committee in its afternoon session today.

SELLING THEIR SPOUSES.

During the recent hearing of a case at Paddington police court, Sydney, N. S. W., it came out that the plaintiff had sold her husband, against whom she was now proceeding for using threatening language, to a lady to whom she had given an agreement "not to in any way hereafter molest the buyer or take any proceedings against her or join her in any proceedings in any court of law or equity."

The document went on to state: "In the event of any breach of this agreement by me, I do hereby bind myself, my heirs, executors and administrators, to pay the said purchaser the sum of £500 ($2,500) as and for liquidated damages." Despite this being duly signed and witnessed, the defendant's solicitor alleged that the wife had repented of the transaction and was taking proceedings for a judicial separation. The summons was eventually dismissed.

At Munich recently a woman sold her husband, a good-looking ne'er-do-well, to a neighbor for a small sum of money, and was pleased enough with her bargain until, on a distant relative's death, he came into a considerable fortune. Then she attemted to resume her marital rights, but was so effectually resisted by her ex-husband's present possessor that she resolved to have recourse to the law's intervention. To this end she consulted a lawyer, only to find that, through some technical flaw, her own marriage was illegal and her claims on man and fortune consequently invalid.

For 100 francs a Parisian laundress sold her husband, whose laziness and intemperance seemed incorrigible, to the proprietress of a rival establishment. Under the new regime, however, the man was compelled to turn over a new leaf, and soon became such a model helpmate that his legal spouse began to regret the transaction and made advances to regain possession. These the purchaser resented, and, on intercepting a letter from the seller to her husband, repaired to the former's house with a stick, which she wielded with such vigor that the victim's cries reached the ears of a passing policeman, whose authoritative appearance alone imposed peace.

In the early '80s a writer in London Tit Bits says he was present at an inn in Cracow when a woman put up her husband to auction. She herself acted as auctioneer, while the lot to be disposed of —a strapping young fellow of not unprepossessing appearance, who was evidently not averse to the proceedings—sat on a stool at her feet. Bids came briskly, and the man was ultimately knocked down to a comely, if mature, widow, with whom he left the hostelry, evidently on the best of terms with himself and his purchaser.

In England similar transactions are on record. The end of the eighteenth and the commencement of the nineteenth century afford more than one example of such illegal barter. In 1774 a Mrs. Cruttley of Leeds employed the town crier to make public announcement that she would on a day named sell her husband, described as a good carpenter and a faithful husband, to the highest bidder. Despite the eulogy bestowed on him, the man must have had grievous faults, for he fetched no more than five shillings and a gallon of gin.

A slightly better price was paid for a Southampton man who, in 1801, was sold by his wife, a Mrs. Bruce, at an inn in the Hampshire town. He was fastened round the neck with a halter, which was held by his wife, who, having assured those present that her husband was faithful, industrious and reasonably sober, invited bids. These came briskly, a guinea and a bottle of brandy ultimately placing the husband in the hands of the proprietress of a chandler's shop.

At Manchester, a few years previously, a man named Price was sold in the market place by his wife, who, to stimulate the bidding, first proclaimed his many accomplishments, whereof the wide range extended from bootmaking to flute-playing. This Admirable Crichton was the object of a keen contest, and it was not until a guinea, a new dress and a pair of fowls had been bid that he was knocked down.

STONES THAT TRAVEL.

Stones that travel are to be found in large quantities in Australia and Nevada. They are composed of magnetic ore, are as large as walnuts and as hard as iron, says the Brooklyn Eagle. They lie huddled in bunches on the rocks like eggs in a nest, and cannot easily be pulled apart.

In Nevada the magnetic stones can often be found at the bottom of little basins of a foot or so across, and a few are as much as eight inches in diameter. The majority of them, however, are no larger than walnuts.

If a dozen of these stones are distributed about upon a smooth surface, two or three feet apart, they immediately travel toward a common center, where they will remain unless a larger stone of more magnetic power is placed near them. In this case they will be drawn in a body to the big stone.

GOOD AS NEW.

William P. Averill, landlord of The Tavern, at New Boston, N. H., erected and formerly conducted by J. Reed Whipple, is a native of Peterboro, where his father was a leading citizen and a pillar in the church, says the Boston Herald. The New Boston landlord is not so pronounced in religious activities, and, after the death of his parents and the removal of the remainder of the family from town, advertised the family pew for sale in the local paper as follows: "For Sale—Pew No. 27 in the Congregational church. But little used; as good as new."

FALLS AT THE CLOSE

After Showing Much Strength Wheat Recedes In Final Hour

Flax Steady and Receipts Large—Steady Changing of Options.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 10.—The wheat market was again firmer today though not aggressively so. Trading was pretty quiet and at Chicago Armour had to support the price at times. The weather in the Northwest was somewhat wet, but the forecast was for better. Liverpool closed ¼d higher, Paris ¼c lower, Berlin unchanged, Antwerp unchanged, to ⅛c higher, and Budapest ¼c higher.

The government report was issued at about noon, but had not much effect upon the market.

The December option fell ⅛c in Duluth, Minneapolis and Kansas City, and ⅜c in St. Louis, while Chicago was a shade lower and New York unchanged.

Corn in Chicago market closed ⅛@¼c lower for the December option and in Liverpool ½d to 1¼d higher. December corn in Chicago fell ⅜c.

Car receipts of wheat were 499 at Duluth, against 516 last year, and at Minneapolis 386, against 602 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 885, against 1,118 last year. Chicago received 85, against 123 last year, Winnipeg received 284 cars, of which 3 graded No. 1 hard, 624 No. 1 northern, and 209 No. 2 northern. The total last year was 57 cars.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,135,000 bus, alst year, 1,403,000 bus. Shipments, 505,000 bus, last year, 440,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 129,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 421,000 bus, last year, 328,000 bus. Shipments, 431,00 bus, last year, 159,00 bus. Clearances of corn were 63,000 bus.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was very dull. The December option opened ⅛c lower at 80¾c, advanced to 81c at 10:15 and after holding there for some time fell off and closed ¼c lower at 80⅝c. The May option opened ¼c lower at 84⅝c, advanced to 85c and closed at 84¾c.

Cash prices were about 1¾c over Duluth December for No. 1 northern and offerings were not especially heavy. Durum wheat advanced 2c.

Flax was active all day and there was considerable changing from October to later options which kept the later ones pretty stiff. Offerings were liberal and Duluth had 248 cars reported today and Minneapolis 72, making 320 for the Northwest. October opened ½c higher at 98¾c, fell to 97¾c and rallied to 98c. It again weakened and closed ¼c lower at 97⅝c. November opened ¼c higher at 98¼c, fell to 98c and then bulged to 98⅝c. The close was unchanged at 98c. December's course was the same as that of November and it closed at the same price. May advanced ½c to $1.02½ and closed unchanged at $1.02.

Oats fell ⅛c and rye was unchanged.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Lower Liverpool Prices Offset Weather, Making Wheat Easier.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Lower prices for wheat at Liverpool offset today the effect of wet weather in the Northwest, causing an easier tone in the wheat market here. Pit traders and commission houses were fair sellers. December opened unchanged to a shade lower at 85⅝c to 85⅝@⅞c and sold off to 85¼@⅝c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 560 cars with 1,354 cars last week and 1,241 cars a year ago.

After December had touched 85¾c, the market experienced a considerable reaction, the government report showing a condition of 89 for spring wheat, was mainly responsible for the weakness. On general selling December declined to 85¼@¾c. A partial rally occurred on covering by shorts. The market closed about steady with December off a shade at 85¾c.

A sharp advance at Liverpool created moderate firmness in corn. Small receipts and wet weather were additional bullish influences. Shorts and commission houses were fairly active bidders, but offerings were small. December opened a shade to ⅛@¼c higher at 44⅞c to 44¾c and later sold at 44⅝@⅞c. Local receipts were 241 cars with 116 of contract grade.

The issuance of the government report had a weakening effect on values. Under selling due to this cause December eased off to 44¾c. The close was easy with December off ¼@⅝c at 44⅜c.

Sentiment in the oats pit was a trifle bearish as a result of liberal local receipts. Cashhouses sold freely. December opened ⅛c higher at 28¾c and sold off to 28¼c. Local receipts were 390 cars.

Increased receipts of live hogs had a depressing effect on the provision market. Trading was almost at a standstill. January pork was off 2½c at $12.37½. Lard was down 2½@5c at $6.82½. Ribs were unchanged at $6.47½.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The government report had but little, if any effect on price making, being just what the trade has been looking for. The market ruled quiet and up to the time of the government report held at yesterday's closing figures. The little dip that developed after the publication of the figures was stopped in the most emphatic manner, by the leading bull interests, who was reported a heavy buyer in the last quarter hour. This buying easily rallied the market back. Primary receipts were well under a year ago. Stocks are not piling up, and the continued demand from the milling trade offers much encouragement to believers in higher prices. While the market responds as readily as at present to the buying of the largest holder, we feel would continue to stick to the buying side on the recessions.

Corn—The market made a fractional gain early in the session, subsequently losing it on publication of government report, which showed condition about same as a month ago. Trade has been slow, but on the whole prices are well maintained. We see no occasion as yet to change our ideas. We feel there is merit in corn, and continue to feel that purchases made on the setbacks will bring home the profits.

Oats suffered from profit-taking late in the session. The strong factor in this market continues to be the lively cash and export demand.

Provisions—October closed about unchanged, with January 2½c lower, and this about tells the full story of today's market. Trade is very slow, with scarcely the dignity of a scalping affair.

H. Poehler, Minneapolis: The Northwestern movement of wheat is heavy, but now is the time for it to move, and it is the time when large mills buy their supplies and terminal elevators fill up. Some day farmers' deliveries will drop off just as they did in the Southwest. One weak feature at the present is the fact that Canadian wheat is offered for export at a big discount under our wheat, but in connection with this it is well to bear in mind that should Russian shipments drop off sharply any time, foreign importers would not only bid up Canadian wheat quickly, but would bid up for American wheat, too. The general situation therefore, rather warrants higher prices than lower ones. In other words, it looks as if wheat is low enough and should be bought for investment on the soft spots or small declines.

Chicago Record-Herald: "Flour demands are the lightest ever experienced at this season of the year," wired F. W. Thompson of the Ogilvie Mills company, Canada. "Am offering 200,000 bus on basis of 75 c Fort William for wheat. Had twenty cables today all running 6d to 1s too low. Winnipeg wires me tonight car supply inadequate and over 100 interior elevators blocked with wheat. Look for next week's receipts larger than ever. What we require is foreign buying for millions of our wheat; in fact, our enormous surplus. Do not think can expect them to buy freely as long as Chicago holds so high."

Broomhall, Liverpool: Condition of foreign crops as published today in Corn Trade News:

France and Belgium: Weather is moderately unfavorable for seeding. Offerings are small and buyers indifferent.

Germany: Weather unsettled but there are no complaints with regard to seeding.

Roumania: Rainfall has been light, but sufficient to permit seeding.

Bulgaria: The drought conditions hinder seeding.

Russia: Further good general rains have fallen.

Bulgaria: The drought conditions hinder seeding.

India: Shippers expect continued small shipments.

Argentine: Government is taking energetic measures to subdue the strike which is not expected to be of long duration.

WHEAT

A sharp break, such as we anticipated in our last review, has been experienced in the Wheat market. Declines have been sharp and of sufficient size to clear the situation of much of its weight. The most powerful and aggressive interests are now purchasing on such material decline, and this in spite of the big crops. The demand is wide and insistent. The undertone in the market is distinctly strong and healthy.

The true character of the market may be judged by the fact that while there is an apparent difference in favor of Canadian Wheat for export into several European states, liberal amounts of high grade American Wheat have been sold to those countries. This proves while the public markets abroad may show prices below an import level, they need our fine Wheat so badly that private prices are higher than the market.

If thus early in the season Europe is willing to pay a liberal premium for the best milling grades, what will be the situation when the present source of supply, the Canadian fields, has become exhausted?

We believe Wheat will advance materially as soon as the situation is a little better understood. Per a long pull, we favor purchases of May Wheat.

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR

But Close Was Strong and Higher In Most Cases.

Money Rates More Erratic But Lower Than on Monday.

New York, Oct. 10.—Prices started higher than last night at the opening of the stock market today on a moderate volume of business. The cheerful tone of the London market on account of a better feeling over the money outlook there was a helpful influence. Canadian Pacific rose 1½, and Erie, Atchison, St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred, and Smelting large fractions. Some of the Gould stocks showed small declines, and Smelting preferred was off ⅝. United States Pipe preferred lost a point.

Striking advances in a number of high-priced stocks infused greater strength into the market. Important advances were largely confined to the railroad list, but a number of the specialties were also lifted sharply. Great Northern preferred improved 4¼ on his announced new stock issue. American Foundry preferred gained 3½, Central of Jersey 3, Canadian Pacific, Northern Pacific and Delaware & Hudson 2 to 2½, St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred 1⅝ and St. Paul, Union Pacific, New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio, Northwestern, Locomotive and Steel Foundries 1 to 1⅜. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo lost 1.

Prices did not hold fully as the demand became languid at the higher level. Recessions were slight. Before the advancing tendency was checked, Reading got up a point. Other gains were Delaware & Hudson 3; Pullman and Consolidated Gas 2, Wabash preferred 2¼, and Tennessee Coal, American Tobacco preferred, North American and Union Bag. Wisconsin Central fell 1¾. Lands were firm. Stocks continued to give way slightly until the heavy buying of Reading stiffened the market. Large blocks of Reading changed hands after it crossed 122. Central of Jersey, which had reacted 3 points from the highest recovered sharply and there was a jump of 21¼ in Gas. United States Pipe ran off 3 points on realizing following the dividend announcement.

A few of the prominent stocks forged sharply upwards in the afternoon, but most of the market leaders moved very narrowly. L. & N., Philadelphia, Wisconsin Central, Pavilles, Manhattan, Bag preferred advanced 1 to 1¼ and Pullman 3½. Reading second preferred yielded 1 and American Express 5.

Advances of 1 to 1¼ were made by Copper, Smelting and Paper stocks, 2 by Wisconsin Central preferred, 2¼ by Union Bag preferred and Manhattan, 3 by Canadian Pacific and 5 by Delaware & Hudson. The general list sold off to some extent on room profit-taking. Corn products preferred lost 1⅛. The close was dull and irregular.

Stock Gossip.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market closed strong and generally speaking higher in all departments. Money rates were more erratic, but at no time did the call rates reach yesterday's high. Interest seemed to center in the low-priced issues, though trade was in much smaller volume than yesterday. We continue to feel it will be wise for the present to go along on the theory that this is a scalping mket, taking profits when in sight.

• • •

McIntyre to Paine, Webber & Co.: London sends higher prices for our securities and consols have had a substantial recovery. A narrow trading market appears to be the best that can be expected, but prices have had a substantial decline from the recent high level, and we favor purchases of the standard railroad stocks and the better class of industrials on any reaction from the present level.

• • •

Walker Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market today was dull and steady. Traders who sold early covered later in the day and were inclined to take the long side. Some of the specialties were manipulated and the trading mostly professional. The close was steady.

Treasury Balances.

Washington, Oct. 10.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $132,392,549; gold, $69,163,406; gold certificates, $50,175,180.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul: Barrett & Zimmerman's report: Receipts much higher than for the past two weeks; a few outside buyers in the market for loggers and drafters attracted by the recent fall in prices; common and medium arrivals still at an uneven point; all clear but a few commoners; local demand still good for expressers and drivers. All classes moving at the following values:

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 10.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 8@12 points, and advanced to a net gain of about 20@22 points on covering of shorts and some fresh buying inspired by better cables than expected, and predictions of frost in portions of the belt, together with a better understanding of the consus report issued yesterday. Liverpool was a seed buyer, but the chief support seemed to come from shorts and buyers for a turn who started taking profits on the advance and caused some irregularity during the middle of the morning when the market was about 12 to 15 points net higher. Trading was fairly active.

Spot cotton closed quiet, 10 points up; middling uplands, 10.20; middling gulf, 10.45; sales, 882 bales. Futures closed steady; October, 9.59; November, 9.67; December, 9.85; January, 9.95; February, 10.01; March and April, 10.12; May, 10.17.

JAY GOULD SALE SETTLED.

Kemp of Sault Has Investment of Four Thousand Dollars.

The matter of the sale of the steamer Jay Gould, formerly of the Lake Superior & Lake Michigan Transportation company is practically closed by United States Court Commissioner T. H. Pressnell distributing the funds of the sale among the claimants. Proceedings against the steamer were originally started by George Kemp of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., who claimed that he had furnished coal to the boat last year to the extent of over $3,000 and sued therefor. His claim, with interest and costs when the proceedings were through, amounted to $3,517.74, and when the boat was sold some time ago he bid her in at $1,700 which he had to pay in cash to the court.

Claims to the amount of $4,108.18, including Kemp's, were awarded by the court, but there was only $1,700, less the expenses which amounted to $322.05, leaving $1,375.50 to be distributed among the claimants. Out of this, Kemp got back $1,178.22 so that out of his $1,700 he was $521.18 in the hole. This, added to the bill he had against the Gould, made his investment in the boat, $4,038.92.

ASSISTS HIM IN PAYING FINE

Prisoner Borrows Money From the Victim of His Assault.

After being arrested on the complaint of John Pazynski for assault, Anton Schzypka borrowed money from the victim of his attack to pay his fine.

The forgiving spirit of Pazynski was further shown by the fact that he pleaded with the court for leniency to be shown the prisoner, stating that he was drunk at the time, and that he would probably never repeat the act.

The assault arose out of a neighborhood row in the vicinity of Thirty-second avenue west and Ninth street, last week. Following a drinking bout Schszypka is claimed to have been discovered beating in an old woman named Josie Kryski in the yard adjoining the house. The woman's screams were heard by Pazynski and he ran out to the woman's assistance in his night clothing, having already retired for the night. Schszypka is claimed to have struck him over the head with an empty beer glass.

Warrants were sworn out, and Schszypka was arrested charged with two assaults, one on the woman and the other on Pazynski. He pleaded not guilty to the charge, but was found guilty by Judge Windom this morning after the evidence had been heard.

Pazynski then interceded for the prisoner, stating that he was drunk at the time and did not know what he was doing. The woman also asked to have the prisoner let off without a heavy fine and Judge Windom assessed him $30 and costs for his assault on the woman and $25 and costs for his assault on Pazynski, making a total of $66.98.

Strenuous efforts are being made by the prisoner to raise the necessary funds, and a small loan from the victim of one of his assaults was extracted. He will probably succeed in getting together the required amount to secure his freedom.

OUT ALL NIGHT AND DISAGREE

Sundquist Fire Damage Case Comes to an Unexpected End.

After an all-night session, the jury in the fire damage suit of John Sundquist against the Duluth & Northeastern Railway company was unable to reach an agreement and was discharged by Judge Ensign. On the last ballot the vote is said to have stood 6 to 5, one of the jurors having been excused on account of a death in his family.

The action was one of seven or eight of a similar nature, two of which have already been tried and in which small verdicts were returned for the plaintiffs. Mr. Sundquist sued for $970.

WATER BOARD MAKES AN IMPORTANT STATEMENT

Replies to Some Pertinent Questions Put By Mayor Cullum.

Discusses Prospects of Making Desired Extensions on Hillside.

In answer to some pertinent questions from Mayor Cullum, the board of water and light commissioners today made public a statement which contains many facts concerning the department which will be of interest to the public.

In his letter, Mayor Cullum asked the board to state its plans concerning the extensions in the hill district, whether or not there was any truth in the rumor that the Zenith Furnace company had offered to sell the city gas at 20 cents a thousand, and whether it would not be possible to do away with the double meter system.

The letter was written before the last agreement with the company was announced, so that the last question is answered by that. The following is a copy of the mayor's letter:

"On the occasion of the real estate men's visit to our city, and at the time they were inspecting the coke ovens, I was told by a responsible citizen that the president of that company had made a public statement to the effect that they had a vast amount of gas going to waste, which they had tried to dispose of to the city at 20 cents per thousand. Similar reports have been made to me from various sources during the last six months. These reports reaching the ears of citizens generally, very naturally give the impression that we are not getting our gas as cheaply as we should. Now, I have not been able to answer all these inquiries to their satisfaction—hence I suggest that you make some public statement in regard to this matter, so that these misleading reports may not further mislead.

"Another inquiry. There are a large number of taxpayers and home owners above Fifth street, on the hill, who cannot at present be served with water. This is a very serious handicap, and it appears to me a very grave injustice. There are many new homes being erected in that vicinity. I have been asked why they could not get service. I have been unable to give them all the reasons. Will you kindly enlighten me?

"Another matter. I have been spoken to about the annoyance and inconvenience of double meters, one for light and one for heat. Now, while this may be necessary, is there not some way possible by which this annoyance could be done away with?

"Having the greatest confidence in your judgment and good intentions, I remain,

"Yours truly,

"M. B. CULLUM, Mayor."

The following is a copy of the water board's reply, received today by the mayor:

"When your communication of Sept. 23, 1905, was received, this board was negotiating with the Zenith Furnace company with a view to readjusting the contract price of gas between that company and the city, and we could not well answer some of your inquiries until those negotiations were completed; hence the delay in sending you this.

"On Sept. 29 a proposition was made by this board to the Zenith Furnace company, which the company accepted, whereby from and after Oct. 1, 1905, the city is to pay that company 40 cents per 1,000 feet for lighting and cooking gas, and whereby this gas is to be furnished to the consumer at 75 cents per thousand. By this new arrangement the inconvenience to both the department and the consumer of separate meters for cooking and lighting gas will be done away with, and all such gas will be furnished the consumer at one price.

"This board has, for a long time, striven to reach this result, but not until the Zenith Furnace company had consented to reduce its price for such gas to the city from 45 to 40 cents was the board able to make a cut to the consumer on lighting gas from 90 to 75 cents and leave the gas department of the city self sustaining.

"Under the new arrangement, the price of heating gas, (that is, gas for heating premises and parts of premises) is left entirely to the Zenith Furnace company. That company can fix any price to the consumer on such gas that it sees fit, the arrangement being that the city shall receive for distributing this gas, one-quarter of the amount that the consumer pays.

"In answer to your statement that the officers of the Zenith Furnace company have stated that that company has a large amount of gas continually going to waste that it has tried to dispose of to the city at 20 cents, we would say that in the first place we do not understand that that company has a large amount, or any appreciable amount, of gas going to waste, that is of a quality that would warrant its being received into the mains and distributed throughout the city for cooking and lighting purposes. As the city has only one set of pipes, and all gas, for whatever purpose used, must pass through these, it will be readily seen that no inferior gas can be received.

"In the next place, no such proposition as suggested, has ever been received by this board. This board is, and always has been, willing and anxious to furnish the people of Duluth with gas at the lowest possible price. All we desire is that the gas department shall be self sustaining and produce sufficient revenue to make ordinary extensions. The interest on the bonds must be paid and the plant kept up, and the cost of operation and ordinary extensions met. Beyond that the board desires nothing. Therefore, the power to reduce the price of gas to the people of Duluth rests at all times, under the existing contract, with the Zenith Furnace company. Whenever the company reduces the price to the city, this department will correspondingly reduce it to the consumer, and as much more as the cost of distribution will permit.

"Regarding the necessity of a gas and water supply to the inhabitants of the hill-side above the point where the present water flow reaches, we would say that this board has had the matter of such water and gas supply under consideration at various times during the last year. It has long been known to the members of the board that the district in question should be supplied with gas and water at the earliest time possible. The people in that locality pay taxes and help support the city and are entitled to all the comforts and conveniences that other tax payers have, so soon as it is possible to supply them.

"The power to furnish these conveniences rests, however, not with this board, but with the voters of Duluth.

"Under city ownership of the gas and water plants, large improvements and extensions can only be made by issuing bonds, the same as was done in purchasing the plant and extending it originally. To wait for the plants themselves to earn enough surplus to make such large extensions and improvements as the one in question, would be to deprive the people of the upper hillside district of gas and water for a long time to come. This board is ready to give the upper hillside district gas and water whenever the means shall be furnished with which to make the improvements, and the department is assured of a sufficient income therefrom to meet the interest and operating expenses caused by the installation of the system.

"At the last election quite an opposition was aroused to the issuance of more bonds by the city. It is probable that such opposition would again appear in case the city asked authority to issue bonds for the improvement in question. This board believes that caution should be exercised in increasing the bonded debt of the city, but when the money is used to make improvements, that themselves yield an income that pays all the interest on such indebtedness and a profit besides, we can see no reason for serious objection. Besides, as the city grows and its population is increased there is no way to give the newly settled territory the benefits enjoyed by the older inhabitants, except by using the same means that were used in originally buying and improving the plant.

"The upper hillside is an expensive district in which to lay gas and water mains. Much of it is rock. The water from the main reservoir of the present plant forces itself only to such localities on the several streets and avenues that are within the elevation of 290 feet above the lake. Beyond that the water will again have to be pumped the same as it is to the Woodland and normal school districts.

"The manager of this department has made an estimate of the cost and formulated a plan for supplying water and gas to all the property on the hillside above the present water supply and below Seventh street from Seventh avenue east to Twelfth avenue west.

"The plan contemplates the building of a reservoir of 500,000 gallons capacity at some convenient point and the pumping of the water thereto by means of the present pumping station at Fifteenth avenue east. Your commissioners desire to say in relation to the reservoir to be installed in this system, that, in the light of recent events, we believe it would not be wise to construct one of a less capacity than 5,000,000 gallons. This would increase the total expense, as shown below, from $15,000 to $20,000. From this reservoir will come at no distant day the supply of all the hillside further west.

"The pipe system planned requires the laying of 8,088 feet of 12 inch water pipe; 732 feet of 8 inch water pipe; 10,984 feet of 6 inch water pipe; 17,068 feet of 4 inch gas pipe; and also requires the building of an aerial frost box across Chester creek in the line of Fifth street, costing $1,020, or thereabouts.

"The estimate of the rock excavation is theoretical, as an estimate could only be obtained by frequently drilling along the lines. The total estimate of the work is as follows

For mains laid in ordinary soil..$38,444.88
Rock excavation, an average of 4,400 yards at $5.50 ..... 24,200.00
Reservoir 3,440.00
Reservoir lot 600.00
Frost box across Chester creek.. 1,620.00

Total $68,304.88

"With a reservoir of an increased capacity the aggregate expense, as your honor sees, will amount to about $100,000.

STARVING SCHOLAR

Stole For Wife, Was Arrested But Finally Released.

St. Louis, Oct. 10.—Oliver Hamilton, son of an English Episcopalian minister, graduate of Eton college near London, a handsome, athletic young fellow who speaks several languages, and bears unmistakable signs of a gentleman and a scholar, was arrested late Saturday night for snatching a purse from a woman. He confessed to the policeman that caught him and said he and his wife were starving, and he did not know what he was doing. He was detained at the Four Courts over night and Sunday morning, the woman whose purse he stole refusing to prosecute him, and the police verifying the young man's story of suffering, he was released with the injunction to go and sin no more.

For two weeks young Hamilton declared he and his wife had subsisted on bread and onions.

Racked in mind and body, too proud to beg and unable to find employment, he wandered the streets all of Friday and Saturday, until, half crazed with hunger and lack of sleep, he committed the first crime of his life.

Little Falls Makes An Arrest For Pierz Robbery.

Little Falls, Minn., Oct. 10.—The police of this city arrested Jess Neal on suspicion of connection with the robbery of P. A. Hartman's store at Pierz on the night of Sept. 27. The robbers secured about $12 in cash and notes to the amount of $4,000 and a number of insurance policies.

On the way to the station, Neal attempted, while crossing the Mississippi bridge, to throw some papers into the river. The wind, however, did not favor his purpose, as the papers were blown back on the bridge, and on being picked up by the officer were found to be the missing insurance papers taken from the Hartman store.

THE MAKING OF BARRELS

Three Millions the Annual Output of the United States.

One Year Regarded as Usual Life of a Barrel.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Oct. 10.—(Special to The Herald.)—The consular and trade reports issued this week by the bureau of manufactures, department of commerce and labor, contain some very interesting facts regarding the barrel industry of the country. It appears that three million barrels of all classes is the annual output of the United States, and that one year is the usual life of a barrel. The report, however, does not indicate how long a barrel owned by a presidential candidate or any other person who may enter his barrel and himself in a political "catch-as-catch-can" race, would last. Such a barrel it may be assumed would not under most favorable conditions extend its usefulness a full year.

The report relative to the cooperage industry in the United States in so far as the department is advised, follows:

"Few persons know that the manufacture of barrels in the United States is a very extensive industry, and that the introduction of improved machinery in their manufacture has made the cooperage business of this country the largest in the world. The Chicago Chronicle has been investigating this business, and furnishes figures that will excite general surprise. It appears that there are upward of 300,000,000 barrels and circular packages manufactured in this country annually, and the demand increases so that this output must be steadily broadened in order to keep pace with the growth of the business. The largest demand for barrels is in the cement business, which approximately amounts to 35,000,000 a year for the trade, while flour comes next with a demand for 22,500,000; fence staples, bolts, nuts, and nails require 15,000,000, and sugar 15,000,000. Roasted coffee, spices, crockery, and fruits and vegetables use up about 5,000,000 barrels a year each, while the glassware trade, baking powder companies, distilled liquor manufacturers, and candy, tobacco, and cheese packers are big users of barrels, averaging in each trade from 2,500,000 to 3,000,000 barrels. The demand for barrels for molasses, oil, lard, and pork is also enormous, while dry paint, glue, snuff, oatmeal, screws, castings, and general hardware articles annually increase the demand on the cooperage supply.

"While the amount of expenditure for barrels can be closely estimated for a given year, it is not possible to say how many barrels are in actual use. The life of a barrel is put down at one year by the trade, but that is far from true. The great majority of barrels are used many times. They begin as sugar or flour barrels and are sold to the farmer for shipping his produce to the market. It may be they are returned to him several times, carrying potatoes or pickles to market in the first trip and then cabbage or lettuce in the next, each cargo being lighter in weight than the previous one, owing to the weakened condition of the barrels. Finally, the barrel may serve out its life work as a garbage receptacle and be burned in the end in some tenement house to keep out the winter's chill. Thus it may be said that a barrel follows a more useful career than almost any other manufactured article, and its life is much longer than a season.

"The demand for barrels is steadily increasing, because modern machinery has made it possible to make them for the trade cheaper than almost any other form of package. That is the most convenient form of package has long been acknowledge. The ancient cooper's art was a skilled one, and the work of cutting out the staves and then assembling them required long practice and apprenticeship. Today machinery performs in a fraction of the time what hand labor did so slowly and clumsily.

The modern veneer machines have been instrumental in reducing the cost of barrels. Hand labor is eliminated here to such an extent that the work of feeding the machines constitutes most of the requirements of the operators. The staves are cut to the required thickness by the machines and then pressed into shape by hydraulic pressure until they are ready for the assembling machine.

A feature of barrel-making in this country is the grading of the circular packages so that all the lumber brought to the factories can be utilized. One class of barrels must be absolutely water-tight, without a flaw of any kind in their staves. Barrels made for oil, whisky and paint trade must not only be flawless, but they must have a resistance power equal to a lateral pressure of 500 pounds. In order to secure this the staves must be put to a rigid test beforehand, and they must be cured, so there will be no danger of shrinkage and damage when put into use. Lumber used for this work must be carefully selected, and it must be cured by nature's slow but sure process.

Consul General Guenther of Frankfort, in a recent report to the department of commerce and labor, says the world's largest steamship, the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, 684 feet long, 25,000 tons, was launched Aug. 24 at the Vulcan yards, Stettin. He writes that the new boat belongs to the Hamburg-American line and will have a net tonnage of 21,000. The engines indicate 17,200 horse power; the speed will be seventeen knots an hour, so that the trip from Europe to New York will be made in seven and one-half days. In addition to the regular dining room, the ship will be supplied with a restaurant a la carte and with electric elevators and an electrically lighted bathroom.

Consul Moorhead of St. Thomas, Can., reports that the Lake Erie Oil company, consisting chiefly of Pittsburg capitalists, has received option leases on the land lying along the shore of Lake Erie from Port Stanley to Port Burwell, Ont., with the intention of boring for oil. Contracts have already been let for three test wells, one near Port Stanley, another at Port Burwell and the third at some intermediate point. Should these tests be successful the options will at once be taken up, and this new industry will then be developed to the utmost.

JAPANESE TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF GREAT BRITAIN'S BACKING AND RULE KOREANS WITH A FIRM HAND

The Shadow of Present Government Will Be Swept Away.

All Foreign Ministers In Korea Will Be Withdrawn Shortly.

Diplomatic Rights Will Not Be Allowed Hermit Kingdom.

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 11.—A dispatch from Tokio by the Empress of Japan states that a stern Korean policy is to be adopted by Japan following the announcement of the anglo-Japanese treaty. Tokio publicists state freely that since the treaty guarantees the freedom of Japan in its prosecution of Korean interests the shadow of a Korean government will shortly be swept away, and practically suzerainty over Korea established. Several Japanese papers state that foreign ministers in Korea will probably be withdrawn shortly.

The Jiji of Tokio says it is necessary that a change take planee at once in Korea; that foreign ministers be withdrawn and Korean ministers abroad recalled for as long as Korea is in the position of wielding diplomatic rights she may be invelgled by ambitious diplomats, even if Japanese supervision be maintained and Japanese interests may be jeopardized. The return of Russian agents, the attitude of the Korean government regarding uprisings of Koreans in the north, and the formation of the patriotic societies in Seoul are among the factors calling forth demands from political leaders in Japan for rigorous measures in Korea. A Yokohama paper says a part of the Manchurian army may be quartered in Korea instead of being withdrawn to Japan as a concerted uprising of the Koreans, abetted by officials of the Korean government is considered too imminent a possibility to be treated lightly. The recent attacks upon Japenese administration in Korea by two newspapers published by Americans at Seoul have angered Tokio politicians and there is a demand for their suppression.

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 11.—Mr. Muribut of the Korean Review, according to advices by the steamer Empress of Japan, makes grave charges against the Japanese administration in Korea. He says thousands of Korean peasants are threatened with starvation, and heart-rending scenes are occurring daily, because the peasants are dispossessed of their lands without compensation.

Yi Yong Ik, the former Korean minister, who escaped to Shanghai in a junk, is stated by Shanghai papers received here to be on a secret mission to Europe. On arrival at Shanghai, he addressed a long telegram to the Chinese empress. The minister is believed to be a Russian agent, and Japanese officials sought to apprehend him before he could leave Korea.

INSTIGATED BY DR. SUN YAT SEN

Chinese Revolutionary Leader Responsible For Bomb Throwing.

Victoria, Oct. 11.—According to advices received by the steamer Empress of Japan the bomb outrage at the Pekin railway station which involved the death of the bomb-thrower and others, is alleged to have been instigated by Dr. Sun Yat Sen, ringleader of the revolutionary party in China. The Japanese Advertiser of Yokohama says that Sun Yat Sen, who is in Japan, has sent over thirty assassins to Tien Tsin since August. Following the outrage, the Chinese government telegraphed to the Chinese minister at Tokio asking that he secure the aid of the Japanese government to apprehend Sun Yat Sen, who escaped from prison in China, and escaped from the Chinese legation in London, when arrested there.

N. Y. POLICE RESERVES DISPERSE DEPOSITORS.

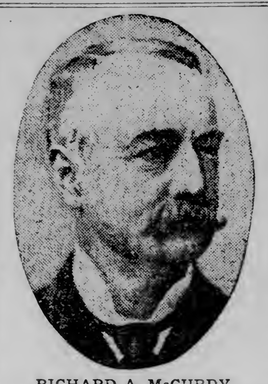

New York, Oct. 11.—Police reserves were called early today to disperse 500 depositors of the Copper Exchange bank, who were storming the residence of Samuel Gotthelf, the president of the bank, in Convent avenue, Harlem. The bank was closed yesterday by order of the bank examiner, who declared that the institution had been making bad loans with the depositors' money, and that its resources had been depleted by such management.

CANADIANS RELEASED.

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 11.—Two Canadians, one named Grant of Victoria, and another named Findlay of Pictou, N. S., have been released from prison at Medvid on application of the Canadian minister to the British foreign office. The men were captured by a Russian warship while on board a Japanese sealer.

ALFONSO TO VISIT BERLIN

The Spanish King Will Start For Germany Nov. 3.

Trip Believed to Be Connected With Matrimonial Projects.

Madrid, Oct. 11.—The palace authorities have been ordered to prepare for the departure of King Alfonso to Germany, Nov. 2. The king will remain in Berlin from Nov. 6 to Nov. 12, attending elaborate festivities, a military review and a hunt. The premier, Gen. Montero Rios, will probably accompany the king whose departure for Germany immediately following President Loubet's visit to Madrid attracts comment since the premier's accompanying his majesty indicates that questions of state will be considered in Germany. However, the king's visit to Gemany was arranged long ago and is generally believed to be connected with the matrimonial projects of the Spanish royal family. c

SUICIDE WAS METHODICAL

St. Paul Negro Makes Preparations For Death In Careful Manner.

St. Paul, Oct. 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—"Dey ain't no use mah tryin' to fight against it, ah'm sorry, but ah's got to do it. Ah kaint he'p maself."

This is what Henry Murphy, a dusky porter in a barber shop at 206 East Seventh street, said yesterday after he had declared he would kill himself. The men in the shop joked him about it, thinking Murphy was just talking to hear himself say something. Murphy kept on polishing shoes and swabbing up the hair on the floor until after business hours, and then began making preparations of his taking off. He filled a bath tub full of water, at a comfortable temperature, disrobed, and sat down in the tub. Then he fired a bullet into his head. Had the bullet failed he would have drowned, as his mouth and nose were under water when found this morning by one of the barbers, who, on seeing a light in the back room of the shop, opened the door at 8 o'clock. He found Murphy in the tub dead. Murphy had been drinking more or less since Friday. He came from Des Moines, Iowa.

BURGLARS HID LETTERS FIFTY-TWO YEARS AGO

Valuable Papers Stolen From Mail Sack Half a Century Ago Are Found.

Oakland, Cal., Oct. 11.—What is believed to be the clew to a postoffice burglary that occurred fifty-two years ago in Alameda county, was discovered today, by workmen engaged in demolishing an old building at East Twelfth street and Twelfth avenue, East Oakland. In 1853 the building was occupied by the Clinton postoffice and an express office. In December of that year, burglars robbed both offices, taking several thousand dollars in gold slugs. The government mail sack was rifled and its contents disappeared. The thief was never apprehended nor was the mail recovered. Today a moldy bundle of letters and papers was found when a wall of the old building was torn down. There was a draft for $100, addressed to Francis Stead, from the New Orleans banking house of Horace Bean & Company. It is dated Sept. 20, 1853, and was never paid. The draft was drawn on Jacob Little and Company, New York.

Other letters which are only in part decipherable, making inquiries about the California gold fields, were in the bundle.

CATT WILLS HIS BODY TO MEDICAL STUDENTS

Remains of Husband of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt a Subject For Dissection.

New York, Oct. 11.—In accordance with the provisions of his will, the body of George William Catt, husband of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, ex-president of the National Woman's Suffrage association and president of the International Woman's Suffrage association, will be dissected for the advancement of medical and surgical knowledge. Mr. Catt died on Sunday at his home, No. 205 West Seventh street, following an operation for gall stones, and a special permit was issued by the health department and the body taken to Cornell university and Bellevue hospital medical college, yesterday afternoon, after the funeral at his home. Various portions of the human body have been willed to medical schools from time to time, and it has not been unusual for men of science to will their brains to such institutions, but this is the first time in the remembrance of doctors in this city that a man of good position and generally normal conditions of health has given his entire body for the advancement of medical knowledge.

The study of Mr. Catt's body is expected to be of unusual benefit, because, except for the disease from which he died, it was in all respects normal and healthy.

THE CROWN PRINCE OF GERMANY ABSENT FROM A ROYAL WEDDING

Gluecksburg, Prussia, Oct. 11.—The Princess Victoria Adelheid, eldest daughter of Duke Frederick of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg - Gluecksburg and niece of Empress Augusta Victoria, was married to Prince Charles Edward, duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, a nephew of King Edward, at midday today in the beautiful little castle here in the presence of about fifty members of the royal families of Germany, among them being the emperor and empress and all the imperial children except the Crown Prince Frederick William. He and Prince Eitel Frederick are the young duke's intimate friends and no one seems to know precisely why the crown prince was absent. The castle was altogether too small to accommodate half the number of guests so they came in automobiles or carriages from country places in the neighborhood. The imperial party stayed over night on the imperial yacht Hohenzollern. The civil ceremony took place in the wide hall of the castle. Then as many of the royal guests and their suites as could be given space went to the little chapel upstairs where the religious rite was performed. A school and business holiday is being observed throughout this minature state and large crowds of the inlde and grooms subjects gathered and gave them an enthusiastic greeting when they appeared together on the balcony of the castle.

STEFFEN RETURNS TO CHICAGO AND SAYS HE WILL STICK THERE

Chicago, Oct. 11.—Walter Steffen, the freshman football star, has returned to the university of Chicago from Madison, Wis., determined never to leave Chicago until he secures his bachelor's degree. Steffen's return was as quiet as his departure. He arrived here yesterday and during the day he was about the campus as usual, attending his afternoon classes and reporting for practice with the freshmen football squad.

"I made the trip to Wisconsin entirely against my will," declared the young athlete.

"For a month I endeavored in every way to avoid going to Madison as a guest of the Wisconsin officials. The pressure became so strong that I could not resist. I told them before I went that I could not enter Wisconsin under any circumstances, and an hour after my arrival I told them that I would not remain.

"I made up my mind to enter Chicago last July and I intend to stick here until I get my degree."

HEIR TO FORTUNE.

Worry Over Young Man's Disappearance Sent Family to Grave.

Kaukauna, Wis., Oct. 11.—Arthur La Belle, formerly an employe of C. F. Smith's livery stable at Appleton, who recently fell heir to $70,000 by the death of his father at Quebec, has just been located in the Lake Superior region. His whereabouts had been unknown for nearly a year. He arrived in Appleton yesterday in company with William Vaughn, who had been searching for him six months. Vaughn found him traveling with a circus.

Upon being informed of his good luck La Belle returned to Appleton and will leave at once for his former home in Canada. Owing to a quarrel with his father, La Belle left home five years ago and since that time has been drifting about the country. During his long absence he had never written home and, notwithstanding that they searched for him constantly, his parents failed to locate him. Worrying over his disappearance, his mother passed away, then his sister, and finally his father. Shortly before the latter's death the attending physician succeeded in tracing the boy to Appleton and communicated with Mr. Vaughn, stating that the parent had only a short time to live and was anxious to secure his son's forgiveness. La Belle left Appleton about six months previous without informing his friends where he was going. Vaughn took it upon himself to locate him and finally succeeded. The father in the meantime passed away. La Belle is the only surviving member of the family. When informed of this he broke down completely. He has a college education and is naturally gifted, but never made use of his talents. For weeks prior to his departure he was employed as porter at the Northwestern house.

New Orleans, Oct. 11.—With a fall of 15 degrees bringing the temperature down to 61 degrees, New Orleans this morning, had its first taste of fall. Very much colder weather was experienced in other portions of the state while advices to the weather bureau brought reports of frost as far down as Fort Smith, Ark., the effect of the fall in temperature will be further to thin out the mosquitoes and tend to increase the improvement in the fever situation.

VAGARIES OF DOUGHERTY

Shown By the Forging of One Check For $1.57.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 11.—N. C. Dougherty realized $18,000 by using the name of A. H. Andrews & Co. of Chicago in three years. This was developed before the grand jury this morning, when H. J. Merle appeared before the grand jury and brought with him the books of the company. The vagaries of his actions are almost incomprehensible. In one case he forged a check for $1.57. In another a fit of unconscious humor developed when the name of "F. Dupe & Co." had been forged. Other fantastic names were used.

The members of the school board are following the theory that he lost between $60,000 and $100,000 in wild cat gold mining schemes. His real estate investments were, as a rule, successful.

The grand jury reported to the state's attorney that they would report at least twenty-four more cases against Dougherty today. All of them are of a serious character.

The latest estimate placed on his peculations by means of the padded pay rolls places the amount at a quarter of a million.

ELECTS SIX DIRECTORS FOR THE BONDHOLDERS

Inspectors Refuse Ramsey Right to Vote Under the Cumulative System.

No Prospect of Ramsey's Election as a Director By the Stockholders.

Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 11.—George J. Gould this morning won a decisive victory over Joseph Ramsey, Jr., in the contest for the control of the Wabash road, electing all of the six directors to be chosen by the bondholders. The vote cast by Mr. Gould was 228,510 against 31,840 for Mr. Ramsey. The latter claimed the right to vote under the cumulative system, which would have given him 191,040 votes. This was disallowed by the tellers, and Mr. Ramsey given but the 31,840.

When the meeting opened this morning, George Greer for Mr. Gould, withdrew the nominations made yesterday, and substituted the names of Thomas H. Hubbard, E. T. Jeffrey, John T. Terry, Winslow S. Pierce, R. M. Galloway and E. T. Welles. The names withdrawn were these of Russell Sage, Robert C. Clowry and W. B. Saunders.

Vice President Blodgett, as chairman of the bonholders' caucus, announced that the total vote cast by the bondholders was 260,350 and Mr. Ramsey at once offered objection, declaring that his private count differed from the number stated by Mr. Blodgett to the extent of 10,000 votes. He demanded the right to check his list with that held by the inspectors, but after a long argument this was denied him by the chairman. Mr. Ramsey was asked if he desired to make any nominations, but through his counsel, Judge Doyle, he declined, saying that he would vote for whom he pleased, and did not care to nominate anybody in advance of the vote.

When the result of the election had been announced by the tellers, Col. Doyle, for Mr. Ramsey, demanded that the ballots cast for Mr. Ramsey be given to him. He declined to say what he wished to do with them, and after considerable argument they were handed over. He then made formal protest against the action of the tellers in declining to allow Mr. Ramsey to vote under the cumulative system, and his protest was placed on record. Chairman Blodgett announced that the six directors of the bondholders having been elected, the caucus was dissolved.

Immediately afterward the caucus of stockholders was called to order, and the same tedious examination of proxies that consumed so much time in the bondholders' caucus was commenced. It promised to continue even longer than the examination of yesterday, for the reason that there is $62,000,000 of stock against $33,000,000 bonds, and it is even more widely held. Many questions relative to proxies that will come up in considering the stock were settled yesterday in handling the bond proxies, and this may shorten the meeting somewhat. It is generally believed, however, that the meeting will continue over into Thursday.

It is admitted by Mr. Ramsey's attorneys that his greatest strength lay in bond proxies, and inasmuch as he failed to elect himself a director this morning, he has no chance in the stockholders' caucus.

The cumulative system of voting is allowed in the stockholders caucus, but inasmuch as Mr. Ramsey could not have won, even under this method, in the caucus of bondholders he has no possible hope in the caucus of the stockholders.

Yesterday when objecting to the voting of the stock held by the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain roads, Judge Doyle, counsel for Ramsey, served notice on the caucus that if the stock was voted against his protest, that the election would be contested. After the election this morning, he declared that he was not prepared to say just when or where the contest would be made, but it was certain that one would be commenced in a short time.

"In view of the decision of Judge Taylor in the St. Louis case," said Judge Boyle, "it is difficult to see how the attorney generals of the states through which the Wabash runs, can avoid a suit to invalidate the election. Mr. Ramsey, however, has, so far as I know at present, no immediate intention of contesting the election. He may decide to start something later, however."

NEED REVENUE CUTTER FOR LAKE SUPERIOR

Congress Will Be Asked to Make the Necessary Appropriation.

Washington, Oct. 11.—A comprehensive program for the enlargement of the revenue cutter service will be laid before congress at the coming session. The service is in need of more vessels and additional officers, the commissioned personnel already being assigned to the full limit. Three additional cutters are needed on the Atlantic coast, and one and probably two more on the Great Lakes. Secretary of the Treasury Shaw and Capt. Ross, the chief executive officer, have been in conference in the last week, with the result that the book of estimates to be submitted to congress at the beginning of the coming session will call for generous appropriations for the service.

For some time a demand has been made for the enlargement of the fleet on the lakes, but the department has been unable to comply with it owing to the fact that adequate appropriations could not be secured from congress. Capt. Ross said yesterday that at least one more cutter should be authorized by congress for the lakes.

"The Tuscarora, stationed at Milwaukee," he said, "should be restricted to duty on Lake Michigan. That vessel, as a rule, is kept busy around Milwaukee and Chicago, but under present circumstances it must hold itself in reserve for duty on Lake Superior. We need a cutter on the upper lake, and if congress gives us another it will be assigned to Superior, with station headquarters probably at Duluth.

"At the present time we have four cutters on the lakes. Each one of them covers a wide area. While we could get along with one additional vessel on the Great Lakes, we really could use two, as the services of a boat are needed for exclusive work on Erie."

The commissioned personnel of the revenue cutter service now is reduced to 212 officers, both line and engineers. There are also forty officers on the retired list. Five more will retire for age within a year. If congress authorizes more vessels it will be necessary also to enlarge the personnel of the service.

CORBIN CENSURES MINISTER FOR LACK OF ATTENTION TO ALICE

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 11.—Mail advices by the Empress of Japan included a Manila dispatch to the Japanese Advertiser of Yokohama, which states that Gen. Corbin severely censures United States Minister Rockhill, at Pekin, charging him with dereliction of social duty in the provisions made for the reception and entertainment of the president's daughter and party at Pekin. The Advertiser says:

"Execrable mismanagement of the reception, and direct discourtesy on the part of the minister, are charges freely made. The returning party say the marked scantiness of attention paid them was sufficient to elicit surprise from the various legation staffs of the other Pekin embassies."

A REJECTED SUITOR MURDERS GIRL

Cleveland, Oct. 11.—With the bloody knife in his pocket with which he had stabbed to death pretty Mary King of 69 Franklin avenue, six hours before, William Towns, a boarder at the King home was placed under arrest in a restaurant at 613 Lorain street at an early hour today. When arrested he freely admitted that he was guilty of the murder.

Towns was a rejected suitor and had, it is said, frequently threatened the life of the girl. Miss King was 20 years of age. Towns, while in a jealous frenzy entered the house late last evening and in the presence of the girl's mother and sister and a man caller, plunged the blade of a big pocket knife into her breast, after which he fled. The young woman died almost instantly.

WHOLESALERS TALK IN GROCERS' TANGLE

Testify In Suit Brought By M. M. Gasser & Co.

Status of Local Association Is Aired In Court.

Several points of general interest to the public were brought out this morning with the resumption of testimony in the injunctional case of M. M. Gasser & Company against the Retail Grocers' association, and the jobbers.

C. R. Rust, who was on the stand yesterday afternoon was recalled this morning and, during his examination, stated that the wholesale grocery jobbers of the northwest were paying a tax of one cent on every sack of sugar that is sold in the state, that where the sugar is sold in Duluth, the tax is paid over to the local Retail Grocers' association and where sold outside the city it is paid to the state grocers' association.

Mr. Arnold, attorney for M. M. Gasser & Company sought to bring out testimony to the effect, that the price of sugar was raised to meet this tax and that, consequently, his client, by purchasing the sugar from the wholesalers, was forced to pay this tax, but the court sustained Mr. Fryberger's objection to that line of questioning. Mr. Rust testified that his company, the Stone-Ordean-Wells company has not been, nor is it now intimidate by any threats of withdrawal of patronage. Mr. Rust said the wholesale concern preferred that all the retail grocers belong to the association, but denied that his firm had ever refused to sell Mr. Gasser goods whenever he wanted them.

Edward C. McMinn, one of the defendant grocers called for cross examination under the statutes, admitted that before he could purchase goods without having to resort to secrecy and subterfuge, had to join the Retail Grocers' association. Mr. McMinn said he had no trouble getting all the goods he wanted after he joined the association, but claimed that he never cared to whom the wholesalers sold goods, whether it was to members of the association or to independent retail dealers.

Mr. Rust, when called this morning, was asked by Mr. Arnold if he understood fully the import of one of the questions asked yesterday afternoon, on cross examination, relative to any boycott of the jobbers against an independent retailer.

"I understood Mr. Fryberger to ask yesterday whether there was any boycott of the jobbers against the retailers, and I told him no," said Mr. Rust.

"State what you know of a withdrawal of patronage from the jobbers where goods were sold an expelled member of the retail association," said Mr. Arnold.

Objection to this was sustained.

"Was there any agreement between the jobbers and retailers of this city with reference to the payment of any moneys to the Retail Grocers' association?"

"Yes, sir."

"What is it."

"There was an understanding between jobbers members of the Northwestern Wholesale Grocers' association that they shall pay a tax of 1 cent per 100 pounds to the Retail Grocers' association on every sack of sugar sold."

Objection to the answer was sustained.

"Is this money paid to the local Retail Grocers' association?"

Objection to the question was overruled.

"It is," answered Mr. Rust, "covering sugar sold in the city, and is paid direct to the state association for sugar sold in the state outside the city."

Request by Mr. Fryberger to strike out answer was denied.

"Which local wholesalers paid this 1 cent tax on sugar?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"To whom is this money paid?" asked Mr. Fryberger.

"To the secretary of the state association," said Mr. Rust, "where sold outside city, and—"

He was interrupted by Mr. Fryberger.

"The individual members of the Northwest Jobbers' association pay voluntarily to the retail association 1 cent per 100 pounds for sugar sold in state outside city and 1 cent per 100 pounds to local Grocers' associations for sugar sold in the city," continued Mr. Rust.

"Then the cost price of sugar from the jobbers is raised 1 cent on each sack of sugar?" asked Mr. Arnold.

Objection to question was sustained.

Mr. Arnold offered to show that the 1 cent tax results in raising price of sugar 1 cent and that this tax is paid over to the local retail Grocers' association, that this tax is being levied on M. M. Garrer & Company.

Judge Cant sustained the objection by Mr. Fryberger.

Mr. Fryberger began cross-examination.

Showing the witness several postal cards, Mr. Fryberger asked if they had been received by Mr. Rust.

"They were."

"At your request."

"No, sir. I asked Mr. Holcomb to send lists of names of new members. So we could have record of members going into business."

"You were getting ready to help Mr. Gasser break up the association?"

"No, sir."

"When did you give these cards to Mr. Arnold?"

"I did not give them to Mr. Arnold. Mr. Gasser came to me and asked me how I received word of new members and I told him to look over files."

"You were not threatened, or frightened by this agitation?"

"No, sir."

"No retail grocer ever threatened to take his business from you if you sold outside the association?"

"I believe one time there was an ultimatum unless we did certain things with Mr. Sutton, trade would be withdrawn. This was at a meeting of jobbers with retailers two or three years ago."

"Two or three years ago you didn't want to sell to grocers outside the association you thought it a good thing for all to belong to the retail association?"

"I think so yet."

"You preferred all the retailers belonging to the association?"

"Yes, sir. It was a matter of choice and policy."

"You are not afraid of any threats?"

"No, sir."

"You were never intimidated in the least?"

"Not at this time."

"I want to know the names of the men who stopped business with you due to these proceedings. These were Osterby, Sjellius and Logan—"

"And Folz," added Mr. Rust.

"Folz owned you about $12,000 when this suit began?"

"Yes, sir."

"And after the suit began he bought only $50 or $75 worth of goods?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you told Henry that if that was the way he was going to do you wanted him to pay up his bills?"

"Not in that way. We wanted our money."

"Then your feelings with Henry were not pleasant?"

"Pleasant enough."

"He gave you to understand that you and Gasser were close together?"

"He told me what he had heard."

"He claimed he understood you were interested in Gasser's business."

"He had an idea we were backing Gasser financially that he owed us a large sum of money."

"Do you understand all these other men understand you were backing Gasser?"

"I don't know. I had no talk with them."

Mr. Crassweller continued the cross-examination and questioned Mr. Rust as to the extent of monthly sales of his house to Gasser. This was said to vary from $1,000 to $3,000 per month. Mr. Rust said Mr. Gasser had not been refused goods any time.

On redirect examination Mr. Arnold asked Mr. Rust as to certain brands of goods which the latter's house does or does not carry. Several of these Mr. Rust said he did not carry though they are regarded as staple goods for grocery trade. Certain brands of flour and matches, he said, are carried by some houses to the exclusion of other brands of the same article.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fryberger, Mr. Rust said some consumers demand certain brands.

"Will a grocer lose patronage by not supplying articles mentioned to his trade?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"I believe he would."

"Are any other of staple articles carried by other houses exclusively and you cannot deliver to Mr. Gasser? If so name them."

Mr. Rust named a brand of chocolate.

"Any other article you know of?"

"Yes, sir. A Dakota brand of flour. This is handled by Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company."

"Any other article?"

"Jaxon soup."

"Who handles that?"

"Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company."

"Any others?"

"I don't call to mind any other staple article."

"Will failure to obtain the articles mentioned create a loss of custom to the retail grocer not able to obtain them for sale?"

"I believe so; in a measure."

"Do you mean to say Mr. Gasser could not buy these articles from Wright-Clarkson any time?" asked Mrs. Fryberger.

"I never heard they refused to sell him."

Mr. Fryberger then called for witness' opinion as to whether there are not other brands of flour as good as that not carried by Mr. Rust's house. Mr. Rust said there were about twenty-five other brands sold in Duluth.

Mr. Crassweller asked if a successful retail grocery business could not be conducted without the special brands mentioned.

"They might continue along, but not for many years," was the answer.

"Some of those things are sold to only one retailer in one town?"

"They are sold generally in this city."

Witness said his house is not selling exclusively. He did not know what others are doing.

Edward C. McMinn was called for the plaintiff. Witness is one of the defendants and was called for cross-examination under the statutes. Mr. McMinn has been in business here about six years. He has been a member of the association that length of time.

"Before you became a member did you have trouble getting goods?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"Yes."

"To whom did you apply for goods?"

"Wright-Clarkson."

"With whom did you have conversation relative to it?"

"I don't know."

"Did you get the goods?"

"Not then."

"Any reason given?"

"They asked me if I belonged to the association. They said they could not sell me goods unless I was a member of the association."

Witness said he applied at Stone-Ordean-Wells company and got the same answer; that he afterward bought goods from a retiring grocery and smuggled them into his store and continued business for a few months and then joined the association, so he could buy goods. Witness said he had to buy goods secretly through other persons previous to joining the association.

"You could not buy in open market without being a member of the association?"

"No sir, so far as that went."

"When you joined the association with whom did you talk?"

"I guess I talked with the secretary, Mr. Holcomb."

"Did you pay anything for admission?"

"Yes. $5."

"Since becoming a member have you had any trouble getting goods from parties whom you asked before?"

"No."

Cross-examined by Mr. Fryberger, Mr. McMinn said he did not know whether the retail dealers asked the wholesalers not to sell him. Witness said since he has been an association member he has not asked any wholesaler not to sell another grocer, not a member, that he has not cared to whom the wholesalers sold.

"Is it not a fact the wholesalers have told you it was a good thing to belong to the association?"

"I never talked with them about it."

The witness said he did not try to buy goods of outside wholesale houses. Of his own personal knowledge Mr. McMinn said he did not know of any agreement of wholesalers not to sell any retailers outside the association.

"You understood there was such an agreement?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"I did not understand it so from the association. All I heard about it was outside talk."

Assid Saloom was called for cross-examination under the statutes. The witness runs a store at 906 West Michigan street and has been in business about two years. He said when he began business he went to Stone-Ordean-Wells company and others for goods and got his groceries just the same as after he "joined the union."

"Did you get any from Knudsen-Ferguson?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did he hold them over till you joined the association?"

"No, sir."

"Did you ever tell anybody else differently?"

"No."

Questioned by the court, witness said he got all the goods he wanted before he joined the association. He could not remember what he paid to John. Witness said he joined so he could make a living because some of his customers were union men and called him a "scab" until he "joined the union."

Burt Holcomb, secretary of the Grocers' association was recalled for cross-examination as to the records of the meetings of the association. Mr. Fryberger said the books were in his custody and he objected to having the books go out of his possession. He said there would be no objection to their examination in the presence of Mr. Holcomb.

Mr. Arnold claimed that the books should be produced in evidence.

The record book was produced. This book contained, Mr. Holcomb claimed, a record of all the meetings of the association during the time witness has been secretary.

The record book of Mr. Holcomb's predecessor was produced and marked as an exhibit, as were the accounts of the association, kept in two books.

Mr. Arnold offered the record books in evidence. Mr. Fryberger objected to their admission as irrelevant.

Mr. Holcomb was excused until Mr. Arnold had time to look through the records.

Edward L. Swope was called by the plaintiff. Mr. Swope said he sells vegetables in St. Paul and Duluth, and is not a member of the retail grocers' association, the jobbers' association, or produce exchange. Mr. Swope said he had dealings with Mr. Sutton about three years ago, whenever he wanted anything.

"What was the effect?" asked Mr. Arnold.

Objection to question was sustained.

"Was there any decrease in business from other grocers?"

"I don't think there was."

"Have you been selling Mr. Gasser?"

"Very little goods."

"At time of the commencement of this action?"

"He opened an account with us shortly before this case started."

"Did you get notice of expulsion of Gasser?"

"Yes, sir. From Mr. Holcomb."

"Did you have any conversation with Mr. Tidball, representing Mr. Gasser, with reference to the latter's expulsion from the association?"

"Yes, sir."

"What was it?"

Objection by Mr. Fryberger was sustained.

"Did you refuse to sell Gasser goods on account of this notice of expulsion?"

"Not Mr. Gasser. I told Mr. Tidball I would rather not sell him anything. The boys and me were pretty good friends and Gasser had not bought much of me and that is the reason I thought I had better stick to the boys."

"What do you mean by the boys?"

"All the grocers in town."

"And that was on account of the notice?"

"Mr. Holcomb gave me several notices that I never lived up to. If I wanted to sell a man anything, I thing I'd sell to him."

"Why did you not sell Mr. Gasser?" asked the court.

"I didn't want to sell to him."

"Had you been selling and delivering goods to the Gasser company till notice of expulsion.

"Three or four weeks before this came up I sold Mr. Tidball."

"Did Gasser pay you for goods delivered?"

"Yes."

"Then you did not refuse to sell him goods for fear you would not get your pay?"

"No, sir."

"You considered M. M. Gasser & Co.'s credit good for goods purchased from you?"

"Yes, sir."

Cross-examined by Mr. Fryberger.

"You knew Mr. Gasser was at outs with the other grocers in the city and calling them robbers and thieves?"

"Yes, sir."

"You said you did not care anything about the retail grocers' association?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then you did not refuse Gasser because he was out of the association?"

"Well, I was pretty freindly with the grocers."

"You didn't care much about Gasser's trade?"

"It did not amount to much."

"Did you tell Tidball why you would not sell him goods?" asked Mr. Arnold.

Objection to the guestion was overkruled.

"Yes sir, I think so."

"What reason?"

"I told Mr. Tidball that the boys and me were freindly and they were buying my goods and I would rather stay on good terms with them."

"Did anything about expulsion of Sutton enter into the conference?"

"I don't remember."

Adjournment was taken at this point until 2 o'clock.

THE WRONG BEARINGS

By J. C. Plummer.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Seven days in an open boat on that tropical sea. Seven days of pitiless sun, burning and charring our throats until the miserable pittance of water we had allowed ourselves had irritated rather than satisfied and now that was gone. Seven days of biscuit soaked with sea water, which made our terrible thirst more unbearable, and all around us that peaceful sea. When I thought of the awful storm in which the Iris had foundered and looked at the calm ocean I thought of my sister of years ago. She like the sea would have her storms of anger and cry and break her toys and then go to sleep with just such a smile on her face as the sea wore then. It was an odd thought for an old sea dog face to face with death, but then I expect my mind was wandering on account of the thirst and heat. Four of us had leaped in the boat the night the bark went down and there were only two now. One had jumped overboard in delirium and the other was curled up dead in the bow one morning. Mr. Pablo, the mate, and I were left to die by thirst if no other way.

"It looks cool down there," croaked the mate, staring into the sea. "No wonder Hans jumped into it."

"For God's sake, Mr. Pablo, don't get to thinking of that," I cried, for I had a horror of dying alone in that boat. Queer, isn't it, that a man always wants somebody around when he is dying.

"I've thought of it many a time, Bob," said he, "and when I wasn't in a fix like this. I've been tired of living these fifteen years."

He spoke in a calm way, but I thought he was losing his mind and shuddered again at the idea of being alone in a boat.

"I've never spoken of it to a mortal before," he continued, looking down into the water, "and I don't know why I'm going to do it now unless a man don't want too much ballast when he's going to die. I'm a Tyne man and sailed in the North Sea trade. That was fifteen years ago, and I used to look at a small cottage near Newcastle and dream about living there some day with a certain girl. You see you wave where it curls, what a deep blue it is? Well, her eyes were just like that, and blame me if anyone could look into them and lie to her. We were not engaged, but when one night I told her how I loved her and she slipped her hand into mine and I looked into her eyes and didn't want any other answer. God, what a happy night that was!

"I stood well with the company and had my mate's certificate, so it was only wait for a vacancy and then I'd be first officer and we could marry.

"Just then a fellow named Jack Bates, a distant relative of the family, came to live with them, and he and Bess became as thick as bees. They seemed to have some secret together, and would whisper and talk in a way which made me grit my teeth. Of course I got huffy and stayed away for awhile, but I couldn't stand it and came slinking back like a whipped dog to its owner, only to have another dose of misery. Bess was pleasant to me and civil, but when I began to talk about Bates she'd laugh and be as close as an oyster. She was very dear to me, but many a night when I paced the bridge with a German ocean gale battering my face I cursed her and Bates in my bitterness.

"Things were in this bad shape when just as I came back from a voyage they sent for me from the company's office and in a half hour I was mate of one of the tidiest steamboats that floated on the Tyne. Two months ago I'd made a course for the open country and shouted at the top of my voice to heave over the joy that was in me and now I was as gloomy as a fog bank. What was the good of living, I asked myself?"

"After I'd thought awhile I made up my mind to go to Bess and tell her of my promotion and ask her flat to marry me. It was no good hanging in the rigging as I was doing, so I started for the house. I had turned a corner when I saw Bess and Bates coming towards me and I stepped back into a doorway so they'd pass me. for it wasn't safe for me to have met Bates the way I was feeling. They were talking and laughing together and went into a jeweler's store near where I was standing. By and by they came out, Bess looking as happy as a lark and then a thought came over me that turned my blood to ice. I went into the shop and made out I wanted to buy some jewelry.

"'What did that fellow buy?' I asked, trying to seem careless; 'the young man and the girl who just went out?'

"The shopman smirked.

"'The old story,' he said; 'a wedding ring, and she had a time finding one to fit her finger. Pretty gal, wasn't she?'

"I went out in a hurry, leaving the man staring after me. My last sail was blown off the yards and I was shipwrecked. It was drag out a life with no good in it or kill myself, and, as I said, Bob, I've often thought of it."

"Well," I said, "did he marry her?" not that I cared a bloomin' but for a man starving for a drink of water not that I cared a bloomin' bit for a thought as long as he was talking he wouldn't jump overboard.

"I don't know," he answered; "that night I left Newcastle, and as I have no relatives and have never seen a Newcastle paper I've never heard, but of course he did. What did he want a wedding ring for, else?"

"The woman isn't launched yet that I'd kill myself for or even lose a meal on account of," I said crossly.

"I've been knocking about the world quite a bit and have seen all sorts," said Mr. Pablo, "but I never seen eyes like she had and never spoke to a woman since unless I was obliged to. I hated to come to Europe on the Iris, only I had promised to the skipper."

He was looking over the port quarter where the blue sky came down into the blue sea.

"Bates is a sailor-man," continued Pablo, and I've hoped I'd meet him some day. The Lord be good to him if I do. What's that just above the horizon?"

"Why," I screeched, "it's a sail and bearing our way; man, we're saved," and I began to sing, or I expect croak, for my throat was dry as powder.

Pablo said nothing, but kept looking over the sea as if he didn't care a bit of spun yarn if the sail saw us or no, but I yelped, though the vessel was miles away and jerked my arms in the air frantically. The bark bore steadily down on us and presently hailed. Then she lowered a boat and took us aboard for we were too weak to row.

A big broad-shouldered man stood at the gangway and as Pablo set his eyes on him he uttered an awful curse, whipped out his knife and made a lunge at him. I gripped him by the shirt and held him back.

"My God!" exclaimed the man, "if it isn't Tom Holmes or his ghost. Why, where've you been this fifteen years?"

"It's damned small matter to you where I've been," growled Pablo, with me hanging on to his shirt tail.

"Maybe not," replied the man, coolly; "but there's a woman in Newcastle who's been waiting fifteen years for a man named Tom Holmes, and I think it's a bloody big matter to her."

"Who's waiting for me?" croaked Pablo.

"Why, Bess Devon is."

"What are you talking about?" asked Pablo; "didn't I see you buy the wedding ring for her."

"If you had had a little patience and not flown off the handle so quick," retorted Bates, "you'd have found out that Bess was helping me to run off with a girl I loved. It was a dead secret and she dared not even tell it to you. I saw you glaring at us when we passed you in Newcastle that evening and when you were missing I guessed at the whole business. Well, Bess is waiting for you, and I don't know how you feel about it."

Mr. Holmes, as I ought to call him, ran to Bates and flung his arms around him and I believe he cried, but I was taking down a tot of grog then and might have been mistaken. At any rate the bark was bound for Liverpool and I never saw a man so anxious to get to port as Mr. Holmes, late Mr. Pablo.

BATTERED UP VICTIM

Fred Nelson Badly Beaten By Bowery Saloon Keeper.

Latter Claimed to Have Kicked Him In the Face.

With both eyes so badly puffed up and blackened that he had to grope his way into the assistant city attorney's office in the city hall, Fred Nelson appeared this morning to ask for a warrant against Hakan Swanson, a saloonkeeper on West Superior street, on the charge of assault.

The city attorney promptly issued the warrant, and Swanson was brought into the municipal court this morning. He pleaded not guilty, and the hearing was set for tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Nelson's face looked as if it had been run through a sausage machine. His eyes were nothing but tiny slits showing through two huge lumps of blackened flesh, and his nose was cut and scratched, with a big bruise on the bridge.

He also had several other scratches on his face, which he claimed were the result of Swanson's attack.

According to his story, he had been working for Swanson for three weeks, and had been paid only $10 of the amount due him. Last evening he went into the saloon to get a drink while Swanson was behind the bar. He laid down a $5 bill and after being served, he claims that Swanson held back the change. In the altercation which arose over the change from the $5 and the other money claimed to be due him, Nelson asserts that Swanson came from behind the bar and attacked him. He says that Swanson knocked him down, and then kicked him in the face with his heavy boots.

Swanson told an altogether different story when brought into court. He claims that Nelson was drunk, that he war ordered out of the saloon several times, and finally started to fight.

If this story is true, Nelson's fight was evidently a one-sided affair, as Swanson showed no signs of a bruise or a wound of any kind, while the complaining witness looks like the victim of a boiler explosion.

In Woman's Sphere

Social, Musical and Club Circles

The first session of the year of the Art History class under the leadership of Mrs. Robert Morris Seymour took place last evening at the club room of the library and a large audience listened to her introductory talk to the course of the year. Mrs. Seymour spoke of the work the class was aiming to do in its study year after year and then illustrated with many views the good and how to look for the pure and beautiful in art. In her short introductory talk she said in part:

"An anniversary of any kind is an important occasion. The completion of ten years of married life or the tenth anniversary of business life is like a period to a sentence, arounding up. It signifies that we have arrived at a certain degree of pump and power. And at this anniversary of the Art History class I think we have proved by our work that the study of art is not as impracticable as it seems. As I go about from day to day, encounter door bells, labeled 'Knock, the bell is out of order,' see the people who are fretted with a door which will not look or a window that sticks; oak beams used in construction of a house that soon before their purpose is acheived because of some flaw in workmanship, it seems to me that impracticability is not entirely confined to the realm of art. When the children all over the land are educated in the things beautiful as they are being educated in our own high school, at Columbia university and at Harvard college, into something more than mere machines, we will as a nation come to appreciate the beauty of art and its manifold returns for its study.

"To inspire and appreciate works of art, however, a nation must have peace, which we have and wealth which we have in immense quantities. We must have also a deep respect and appreciation for things beautiful and things historical. We must feel the ideal of repose and the repose in the ideal when we will come to a complete fulfillment in art education. We must realize that all true art is doing the best one knows in the best way one can.

"Since the first artists planned and executed their simple works up to the great cathedral builders, true artists follow certain universal laws which are found in nature and must exist to make art good. The first of these principles is unity. The artist must see life steadily and see it wholly and he must express himself in one complete thing. We turn to nature as the great teacher in this principle of unity. The flower is an example of a perfect thing in unity. A melody should be the same, a complete expression of individual experience. In a tragedy we have the same thing, one complete individual experience told us in five acts. It is complete in that, one more act would be superfluous, an act taken away would make it incomplete.

"Another great principle is subordination. There must be no fragments, meaningless and needless to distract our attention, nor detract from the dominant idea or thought expressed. When we have these principles followed with masterly executionand infused with a inspired thought, replete with suggestion to the audience, we have the poet's vision or the artist's masterpiece which has the power to thrill the world."

Mrs. Seymour explained with the aid of views of simple structural lines pictures of Byzantine ivories, Chinese metal works, Greek vases, public buildings and views of great sculptures and paintings, with others less great and good the application of the principles she had spoke of, or pointed out how the lack of these principles made the work a crude or disappointing one.

The lecture was a most helpful one and the idea expressed again and again that these great lines of beauty are found constantly in life as it exists about everyone, and that to see the beautiful one need not wait to set aside a certain time or look only at the inspired creations of the art world, was one of the things that made the lecture a most practical one.

The auditors last evening who will not see in those things which they have heretofore regarded as commonplace some of the great principles of art, presenting a really beautiful thing to their view, lost perhaps entirely the force and beauty of the talk.

VERDICT IS SET ASIDE.

Board of Trade Firm Wins In an Important Suit.

Word was received here today that the case of the Smith-Baker Commission company vs. H. B. Borneman, in which the plaintiff was defeated in a trial in June last by a Kittson county jury, has been reversed by order of the trial court. This is the case in which it was announced that the so-called Grindeland grain law, passed some years ago, had been upheld. The case was tried at Hallock, Kittson county, where the defendant resides, before Hon. Andrew Grindeland, the author of the law, and a jury of farmers. There were several causes of action and several counter-claims, the whole amount involved being about $5,000.

The decision does not in any way affect the validity of the law, but was made on the ground that the verdict is not sustained by the evidence, and other grounds. The law requires that all commission merchants shall be licensed, and that when they receive grain or produce from shippers they shall make accurate reports to the shipper, giving the day, hour and minute when sales are made, the price at which sold and a lot of other details for the protection of the shippers, who are, of course, mostly farmers.

Judge Grindeland holds that the law does not apply to the case in question, and sets aside the verdict and orders a new trial.

The Smith-Baker Commission company was represented by Attorney J. H. Whitely of this city, and the defendant by Congressman Steenerson of Crookston and Yetter & Blethen of Hallock.

A CHILD SWEPT AWAY BY STORM

At Galveston Restored to His Parents Safe and Sound.

Galveston, Tex., Oct. 11.—Little Alex. Wright, who was less than 3 years of age on Sept. 8, 1900, when he was swept from the arms of his mother and carried to sea by the hurricane which swept Galveston and vicinity, has been found and restored to his parents, Alex. L. Wright and wife, of League City, this county. The Wrights were then living at Virginia Point, a small railroad settlement across the bay from Galveston.

The hurricane swept the settlement out of existence, and a raging sea ten feet deep inundated the mainland for twenty miles from the shore. From their home, which was wrecked, the Wrights were driven to a freight car, which was destroyed and the child snatched from its mother and carried to sea. Never dreaming the child could live, the parents mourned it dead, but the tidal wave after taking the infant to sea brought it back and deposited it near Texas City, twenty-five miles from where the storm picked it up. Here it was found the morning after the cataclysm and nursed back to life. The child was not known and was sent to an asylum at Luling, Tex.

A few days ago a report of the child's story came to the ears of the Wrights and they found their long-lost son adopted by a wealthy aged couple ten miles from Brownwood, Tex. The 5-year-old boy is heir to a vast estate, but his foster parents agreed to give him up upon identification by birth marks.

Ten grown persons swept on the bosom of the storm from Texas City were killed and their bodies given up by the sea, but the 3-year-old child rode the hurricane and must have gone to sea fifty miles.

SHOT HIS ACCUSER.

Quarrel In Montevideo Saloon May Result In Murder.

Montevideo, Minn., Oct. 11.—Frank Slade of Dawson, Minn., shot and perhaps fatally wounded Aaron Kraft, a newcomer from Watson, Minn., in the saloon of T. K. Ellingbee yesterday.

Kraft came to this town Monday and cashed a draft for $56. He lost $45 and accused Slade of taking the money. Sig Queenmeen, a bartender, was the only witness. He says that while they stood at the bar he heard Slade say: "I'll shoot you," and immediately Slade drew a revolver, placed it close to the back of Kraft's head and fired. He then ran to the back door and escaped. Kraft walked out and asked for a doctor. The ball entered the neck at the base of the skull. Slade has not yet been arrested.

GREAT LIST OF VOTERS

Response to Bryan's Call For Pledges to Attend Primaries.

Uses That May Be Made of This Democratic Directory.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 11.—The departure of Mr. Bryan for the Orient will not cause any halt in the formation of the Bryan boom for the presidency in 1908. Here at the Commoner office the time of one man is almost constantly employed in supervising, tabulating and arranging the names of voters of the Bryan stripe that are coming in by each mail.

"A very clever scheme for securing at a minimum cost a list of active friendly Democrats in all parts of the country," say those who have had an opportunity to note the tremendous number of responses that have come to the request of Mr. Bryan to Democrats who believe with him to sign a pledge that they will hereafter make it a rule to attend every Democratic primary called and to see that nobody is selected as delegate who is not of their, tuction.

The pledge appeared first in Mr. Bryan's paper, but he has not contented himself with waiting for the printed coupons to be filled out and sent in. To each of the thousands of agents of his newspaper and to trusted supporters in various parts of the country he has sent blank pledges and secured their assistance in getting them signed.

The signers, it is needless to add, are men who are willing to vote right. As many as a hundred pledges come in a bunch, and the average will not fall below ten.

As each is received it is filed away in a card catalogue, and this enables Mr. Bryan or his assistants to turn at a moment's notice to any precinct in any county in any state and get the names of those Democrats who may be depended upon.

The idea is borrowed in part from the card catalogue road district census of voters, first invented and used by the Nebraska Republican state committee in 1900, and which was the most effective weapon in taking the state from Mr. Bryan. The tremendous effectiveness of this plan will be patent to every practical politician.

Yet Mr. Bryan insists that he is not trying to build up a machine. He rather resented the idea when some months ago this plan of his was referred to as intended to develop a machine for his own personal use.

"I am not seeking to build any machine," he said, recently. "I have but one object, that of getting the masses of the Democrats interested and awakened to the necessity of attending all caucuses and primaries. If they will keep the pledge I am asking them to sign I have no fears of the result.

"The element that controlled the last national convention was able to do so because of two facts, the hope and belief of a good many Democrats that by concession and compromise we might gain power and thus be able to do a little good, hoping later for greater blessings and opportunity, and because radical Democrats had little hope of success and allowed the old and skilled manipulators to put up delegations and write state platforms.

"At St. Louis we listened to those who promised to win if we ceased to offend. The result at the polls ended the hope of any so-called Democracy in this country.

"Democratic rule is rule by the people, and we can never hope for power until we can get the people to understand the principles we stand for and to accept them. I am simply desirous of getting Democrats pledged to keep their eyes open and see that every convention they attend makes a clear, honest and straightforward declaration of the party's position on every question upon which the voters of the party desire to speak."

Close to Mr. Bryan is James D. Dahlman, for years state chairman and later a member of the national committee. Mr. Dahlman's practical experience as a politician enables him to appreciate the value of Mr. Bryan's primary plan; and he it is who is directing how the directory of Democrats shall be employed.

He says that the chief weakness of Brayan's campaign against Parker prior to the national convention last year was that he had no direct means of communicating with his supporters in the various election districts, and against the plus as set up by the reorganizers his rhetoric availed little. By 1908 Mr. Dahlman expects to have a million Democrats pledged and catalogued, and with that nucleus he does not believe it possible to wrest control from Bryan at the next national convention.

Nearly every man who sends in one or more pledges takes the opportunity of writing Mr. Bryan a letter. Nearly all breathe admiration of Bryan, and most of them assert that Bryan must lead again, prophesying his election this time. A considerable percentage of them cling tenaciously to the money question, not a few suggesting that a bimetallic plank must be in the next national platform.

Their receipt is acknowledged in each issue of the Commoner. It has been pointed out that a very large number are Southern Democrats, and the politicians strongly suspect that Mr. Bryan is taking steps in advance to see that the support of that section, which he had reason to expect at St. Louis, is not switched over to the other side by the opportunist leaders.

As to the question of his own candidacy Mr. Bryan is quite frank. He says he is not a candidate, but he will not say that he will not be.

He has been approached by a number of Democrats in the interest of some one Democrat, the friends of Governor Folk of Missouri being most insistent, but he has told all inquirers that he will make no choice himself, and will await developments before he indicates his desires. Even then his influence, he asserts, will not be employed in behalf of any man.

TROOPS ARE CALLED HOME

Marks the End of the Norwegian-Swedish Dispute.

Stockholm, Oct. 11.—The special committee of the riksdag, appointed to consider the Karlstad treaty today unanimously reported in favor of its ratification.

The report which was presented at a joint session of both houses also recommends that the treaties to be concluded in connection with the dissolution of the union between Norway and Sweden be drawn up in French as they may sometime lead to questions which must be submitted to The Hague arbitration tribunal.

Orders were issued today calling home the troops and naval reserve men. This marks the end of the Norwegian-Swedish dispute. The troops detailed for duty on the western frontier have been ordered to be sent home at once, while the naval reserve men are to be disbanded as speedily as possible and no later than Oct. 18.

The Swedish coast squadron left Gothenburg today for Karlstrona, whence the ships will depart for their different stations.

FEARED PROSECUTION.

Hotel Domestic Takes Poison Rather Than Face a Court.

Dubuque, Iowa, Oct. 11.—Fear of prosecution on the charge of stealing two gold watches from the proprietor of the Dewey hotel, Miss Mae Steffins, a domestic, attempted to commit suicide. She drank half the contents of a two-ounce bottle of the fluid, and it is believed cannot recover.

The young woman was summoned by the manager of the hotel and accused of stealing the watches. She became so unnerved that she informed the manager she would end her life before morning. The manager advised her to return the watches and there would be no prosecution. She retired to her room, ostensibly to get the watches, and when the door was broken in a few minutes later she was found unconscious. She cannot recover.

ANOTHER SCORCHER

J. Sherman O'Gorman Arrested For Exceeding Speed Limit.

Pleads Not Guilty and Makes Complaint Against Officer.

Getting pinched for scorching is becoming fashionable in Duluth's automobile set, and the city is now becoming quite metropolitan in this respect.

J. S. O'Gorman is the latest victim of the speed laws. His machine caught the eagle eye of Patrolman Bob Smollett, who keeps the traffic steered right at the corner of Third avenue west and Superior street, yesterday. It appeared to be going pretty fast to "Bob" and he timed it for a block. His observations convinced him that the six-mile speed limit wasn't a snail's pace to the speed of the auto, and he promptly swore out a warrant for the arrest of the driver.

Mr. O'Gorman was hauled into the municipal court this morning, and he deviated from the custom established by his two predecessors, by pleading not guilty to the charge and asking for a hearing.

He signified his intention of securing the services of an attorney and fighting the case. The hearing was set for Monday morning at 10 o'clock and Mr. O'Gorman was released on his own recognizance, promising to appear at the proper time for trial.

In addition to announcing his intention of defending himself against the charge, Mr. O'Gorman asked the court where he could lodge a complaint against the officer who arrested him. He was directed to the chief of police as the proper person to hear any criticism of an officer's conduct. It is understood that "Bob" is claimed to have made use of some forcible language concerning autoists who travel faster than the law allows.

His arrest makes the third prosecution for automobile scorching this season. The other two prisoners were each fined $10 and costs, which is apparently the price set on the first offense.

MADGE CARR COOK.

Next to being the mother of the superlatively gifted Eleanor Robson, the one thing in life of which Mrs. Madge Carr Cook is proudest is her success as "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." Here was a role that it might truthfully be said everyone knew in detail, and of which every reader of the book had formed very definite ideas; it was therefore most gratifying to find that her interpretation of a character which has become a national possession, was eminently satisfying to those who had read Mrs. Rice's books, and a revelation to those who first made their acquaintance of the apostle of optimism in the theater. One metropolitan critic has gone so far as to predict that Mrs. Cook's name will be as inseparably connected with the role of Mrs. Wiggs as is that of Joseph Jefferson with Rip Van Winkle. Mrs Cook will be seen here as Mrs. Wiggs at the Lyceum, Friday and Saturday and at a Saturday matinee.

IS IN FAVOR OF DUAL CONTROL

Insurance Commissioner O'Brien Talks on Present Insurance Tangle.

St. Paul, Oct. 11.—State Insurance Commissioner O'Brien favors federal supervision of all big corporations, including insurance companies, but he does not want abridged the rights of the state to likewise control such companies.

"I have advocated such dual control ever since I became insurance commissioner of Minnesota," said Mr. O'Brien, "and I am now more than convinced of the correctness of such a policy.

"Further, I believe in a standard policy and the elimination of the investment features, such as characterize the companies being investigated. Simply return to the fundamental principles of insurance, and stay there.

"If the corporation and insurance laws are wrong now, a change of administration of the several companies will not mend matters. They may be more guarded in their actions, but the opportunity to return to old methods is just the same as ever.

"I speak for federal and state supervision, such as now controls our liquor traffic. A federal license covers any section of the country, yet it is subservient to the laws of every state. The same could apply in insurance.

"I am opposed to any hasty action in the life companies now being investigated. I believe they are all solvent, and the money invested should not be jeopardized. The New York investigating committee is doing good work, and the states should keep their fingers off until that investigation is completed. Then legislation necessary to wipe out any of the evils shown can be enacted, and it should be general and as uniform as possible.

"The inquiry we are making will not in any way interfere with the New York investigation. It has the committee's approval, and is designed to ascertain the financial standing of each."

ADJOURNED TO NEXT TUESDAY.

New York, Oct. 11.—The legislative committee to investigate life insurance adjourned its sessions today until next Tuesday, on account of the death of Speaker Nixon of the state assembly.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Forest Fires Are Raging Near Lumber Camps at Birch.

Calumet—Forest fires raging in the vicinity of the camps and mills of the Northern Lumber company at Birch, threaten the destruction of $100,000 worth of property.

Two hundred men employed by the company were engaged in fighting the flames two days.

Large quantitiess of timber cut during the past summer were piled up at various points and were saved with the greatest difficulty.

Ishpeming—Since the recent order reducing the hours of labor by one hour nearly every section man on the Northwestern road north of Escanaba has quit. The men were paid by the hour, and figure that this is a cut of 10 per cent in their monthly pay. There is a shortage of labor, men being in big demand in the woods.

Escanaba—In anticipation of street assessment taxes to the amount of nearly $100,000 the city council has voted to issue $85,000 of bonds to cover the cost of improvements under way.

Israel Brandenburg, 13 years of age, disappeared from the home of his parents at North Escanaba early last week. When he left he carried a loaded revolver in his pocket and said that with a companion he intended to start out to see the world. No trace of his whereabouts can be found.

Manistique—An addition is being built to the vat house of the tannery of the Northwestern Leather company here. It will be 58 by 108 feet in size, and contain seventy vats.

Engineer Harry Robinson of the Arnold line steamer Chequamegon, plying to St. Ignace, is minus the second finger of the right hand. The digit got in the way of the plunger of the feed pump. At Manistique, Andrew Johnson, while engaged at carpenter work at the tannery plant, had the misfortune to lose a portion of the middle finger of his left hand by contact with a saw.

Newberry—A small blaze occurred at the chemical plant of the Newberry furnace last week, but was extinguished before much damage was done. A spark from the furnace set fire to the wooden smoke main, but fortunately no smoke was being drawn through the main and the heavy shower of rain which occurred just at that time prevented the blaze spreading rapidly. Only a few feet of the main burned.

MAN SUFFERS TO SHIELD MOTHER

Nebraska's Governor Pardons Convict And Gives Him Money.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 11.—The clemency of Governor Mickey was exercised today in behalf of John Bailey, a convict at the Nebraska penitentiary, after he had served fourteen months of a three-year sentence on the charge of purse-snatching.

Convincing representations were made to the governor that he had pleaded guilty at his trial in order to shield his mother from the suspicion of being implicated in the theft of the purse. Before issuing the pardon, Governor Mickey ordered the prison warden to send the young man to the executive office in the capitol. There the governor gave Bailey a present of money, urging him to adhere closely to his resolve to lead a correct life and regretting the general tendency to overlook crime in high places. The governor said:

"Even if you were guilty, I think you have suffered sufficient punishment. It has become a dangerous practice to catch the little offenders while many of the big ones go free."

LAUGHED SO HARD HE COULD NOT RUN

Escaping Prisoner Recaptured With Volley of Blank Cartridges.

Minneapolis, Oct. 11.—Fort Snelling was the scene yesterday of an episode which rivals those pictured in the Sunday comic supplements. Sidney Hazelbraker, a giant prisoner, made an attempt to escape from his guard, but laughed so hard that he fell a prey to a detachment of soldiers armed with blank cartridges.

Hazelbraker, who is over six feet in height and a giant in strength, was one of the sixteen prisoners at work on a road on the reservation. Eight trusty privates, armed to the teeth, leaned languidly upon their rifles and watched the workers. Suddenly a daring impulse flashed through the gigantic prisoner. He would make a dash for liberty or death! Throwing down his hoe he started across a wide field like a half-back sprinting for the enemy's goal. Consternation struck the other prisoners and the eight guards. They stood speechless and motionless. Finally one of the guards, a diminutive soldier, barely up to the height required for admission to Uncle Sam's army, recovered his senses. Across the field he ran, firing shot after shot at the enormous infantryman. He could not hit the side of a barn, however, and the fleeing giant, looking over his shoulder at his short pursuer, laughed so hard that he could hardly run.

Far over on the other side of the reservation a company, under command of Lieut. Hugh A. Parker, was working out a complicated problem in tactics. Their rifles were loaded with blank cartridges. Suddenly there appeared to their startled gaze the huge refugee. He was loping along over the field, laughing so hard that he could scarcely stand.

"Halt!" commanded Lieut. Parker. The man still ran on and still laughed. In another moment a terrific volley of blanks fairly shook the earth. The huge runner thought he could hear the bullets whizzing past his ears. He gave one desperate dive into a haystack and lay there, still laughing. When he was led away and put into the guardhouse he was still laughing.

ATHLETICS WIN SECOND

American League Team Turns Tables on the Giants.

Bender, the Indian Pitcher, Shuts Out McGraw's Men.

New York, Oct. 11.—Connie Mack's Athletics got away with yesterday's game before a record-breaking crowd of 35,000 people at the Polo grounds, after smearing a coat of whitewash over the Giants.

The victory leaves the two teams tied for the world's championship, with one game apiece to their credit.

The visitors put in their Indian pitcher, Bender, with Schreckengost to handle him against McGinnity and Bresnahan. The visiting battery was excellently supported, as was the local end for two innings, but in the third Gilbert made a costly error, giving the visitors a lead which they never relinquished. McGinnity was relieved in the latter half of the eighth inning, Strange batting in his stead and Ames going into the box. The change did not prove effective, however.

There was a dingdong of fast plays until the seventh inning when it looked as though the home players might tie the score, but Doyle just got as far as third only to be left there after making a double and reaching that station on a fly to right field. This was the nearest point to the home plate that McGraw managed to get a man.

The Philadelphias went back to their home town last night, and the New York team will go to Philadelphia in the morning to decide the third contest in the series. Score:

New York	0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0	0	4	2
Philadelphia	2 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 2	6	3	2

Batteries—McGinnity, Ames and Bresnahan; Bender and Schreck. Umpires—O'Day and Sheridan.

ST. LOUIS AMERICANS WIN.

St. Louis, Oct. 11.—By winning yesterday, the local American league team made the post season series one each. A batting rally in the eighth followed by one in the ninth made the final score 8 to 3. Attendance, 2,500. Score:

		R.	H.	E.
Americans	0 0 0 0 0 0 0 6 2	8	9	0
Nationals	2 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0	3	8	2

Batteries—Glade and Spencer; Brown and Spencer.

THREE WOMEN AND FIVE MEN

Chosen to Receive Tablets In the Hall of Fame.

New York, Oct. 11.—Three women and five men were chosen yesterday to receive tablets in the hall of fame at New York university, when the canvass of the votes was completed.

Maria Mitchell was the only American scientist to be elected at this time, though Louis Agassiz with 52 votes secured admission, as a foreign born American. A curious commentary on Maria Mitchell's election is the fact that eight of the electors, chiefly scientists, refused to vote for any women, thus reducing the number of votes necessary to elect a woman to 47, while 51 were required for a man. Maria Lyon, founder of Holyoke college, and Emma Willard, author of "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," and a famous educator, were the other women honored.

Alexander Hamilton, with 87 votes, the highest number received by any candidate and John Paul Jones, with 58, share with Agassiz the honors of being the first American immortals of foreign birth.

Two American statesmen were chosen—John Quicy Adams, whose tablet will occupy a niche next to that of his father, John Adams, received 58 votes, and James Madison, who secured admission with 56 votes.

Patrick Henry, John C. Calhoun and Andrew Jackson fell half a dozen votes short, and Samuel Adams was again defeated. James Monroe's votes numbered only 23.

Seward, Sumner, Dewitt Clinton, Garfield, John Hay and Stanton were among the statesmen who failed to be elected.

TWO GAMES SCHEDULED

St. Paul Mechanic Arts Will Play High School Saturday.

Newly Organized City Team to Play Superior Sunday.

Two good gridiron contests are scheduled for Saturday and Sunday in Duluth.

On Saturday the high school team will meet the St. Paul Mechanic Arts team in what will doubtless be one of the hardest games on the schedule of the local eleven.

The Mechanic Arts always turn out a good team, and this year it is no exception to the rule. There is no doubt but they will prove a much more difficult proposition than either Two Harbors or Aitkin, and the game will be the first regular contest on the season's schedule.

No substitute team will make any headway against the St. Paul men, and all of the regular members of the Duluth team will be in the game. Capt. McDevitt, since he has been relieved of the duty of coaching the team, is getting into shape, and will be in condition to play Saturday.

The work of the team in the practices is now directed toward strengthening the defense, which was lamentably weak in the Aitkin game. A line like Saturday's would never hold against the St. Paul backs, and both the coaches and the players realize that.

• • •

On Sunday the newly organized Duluth city team is scheduled to meet the Superior city team.

The new team held its first practice Monday night in the Armory. A full team turned out, and the players ran through a hard signal practice for more than an hour.

A second practice has been called for this evening, and it is hoped to have two full teams lined up for signals.

It is possible that the game with Superior will be postponed a week, in order to give the Duluth men a little more time to get into condition. The Superior team has been hard at work for three or four weeks, and are in the best of shape for a hard game, while the Duluth players have scarcely learned the meaning of the signals as yet.

• • •

The Duluth Athletics have a return game with Cloquet scheduled for Sunday. The Cloquet team will endeavor to wipe out last Sunday's defeat, in the return match, which will be played at Cloquet.

WILL BOOST MOVEMENT

Public Affairs Committee Favors State Drainage Project.

Again Asks For Change In the Courthouse Site.

The public affairs committee of the Commercial club, at a meeting last evening, went on record as being in hearty sympathy with the movement to drain state and government swamp lands in Minnesota, and decided to help along the project in every way possible, even to contributing funds, if found necessary.

Voted in favor of appointing a committee to see what further could be done toward securing a downtown site for the courthouse.

Tabled the proposition relating to a change in the time of range trains.

Adopted a resolution favoring penny postage and opposing any changes in the present parcels post system, or a reduction in parcel post rates.

Voted to appoint a committee of three to investigate the merits of the "White City" plans and report their findings.

Voted to appoint a committee to represent Duluth at the interstate commerce convention at St. Louis, Oct. 26 and 27.

Chairman T. W. Hugo opened the meeting and briefly reviewed the work of the committee and the various sub-committees since the meeting last January. He said that, while no meetings of the central body had been held for several months, the sub-committees had frequently gotten together, accomplishing a good deal in the way of public improvements. The work of the committee as a whole was characterized as having been very successful. Mr. Hugo also remarked upon the number of conventions that had been held in Duluth during the season, a total of seventeen.

Several sub-committees made their reports. The committee on fire insurance reported that no progress had been made in securing better rates since the first concessions of the insurance companies early in the year. The members announced that before any more reductions could be secured in the business district of the city it would be necessary for the city to purchase a fire tug. The companies interested refuse to make further concessions until a fire tug is put in service on the bay. The absence of the tug, it was explained, affects insurance rates all through the business district.

The committee appointed last January to investigate the matter of disposing of the garbage of the city reported that, awaiting the outcome of plans of Health Commissioner Murray, who has a scheme of his own, nothing had been accomplished by the committee. The belief was expressed that the health commissioner's method of disposing of the city garbage would be entirely satisfactory.

A. H. Comstock, chairman of the industrial committee, reported progress in the committee's work. He said that a considerable sum of money had been expended during the year in advertising the resources of the city in papers and magazines where the advertisements would do the most good. The New York Commercial has published a good deal of matter pertaining to Duluth. Some of the literature, said Mr. Comstock, has been placed in the hands of every manufacturer in the East. While no very definite results in the way of new manufacturing institutions located here have as yet been obtained, the resources of Duluth are every week becoming better known throughout the country, and good results are expected.

J. J. Mee, chairman of the committee appointed to see what could be done in the way of paving West Superior street, reported that the work of paving the street from Eighth avenue west to Twenty-fifth avenue west was now well under way. The contractors are under bond to complete the job by Nov. 15. Tar macadam is being used, and the cost of the work will be $80,000. The committee was discharged, with the thanks of the public affairs committee for its good work.

At this point Chairman Hugo announced that four questions were scheduled to come up for discussion—the matter of a down-town site for the court house, the drainage movement, the "White City" movement, and a movement for a change in the time of running trains on the range roads.

The question of the "White City" was first taken up. Mr. Hugo explained that the objects of such a place of amusement would be to make more pleasant the stay of outsiders in the city, as well as to afford a legitimate place of amusement for residents of Duluth. He said that the Builders' exchange, the Real Estate exchange and the Retail Merchants' association had each appointed a committee of three to investigate the merits of the project, and that the public affairs committee had been asked to also appoint a committee of three to act in conjunction with the others. Members present expressed themselves as favoring the movement, if the plans projected were found feasible, and it was voted to appoint a committee as requested.

Members of the committee did not take kindly to the efforts being made to secure a change in the running time of the range trains. Chairman Hugo said there were two sides to the question, and stated that he understood the range interests would oppose the move to bring about a change in the servic. H. V. Eva, secretary of the Commercial club, said the range merchants do not want a change in the running time of the trains. He explained that the range towns were directly dependent upon Duluth, and that they should be given some consideration in the matter. Commercial travelers in the employ of the local wholesale houses are also vigorously opposed to a change, he said. The way things are now, a traveling man may leave Duluth in the afternoon, reach Hibbing at 7 o'clock in the evening, transact his business there that night and be in another town the next day to begin work.

J. A. Ferguson was against making a change. He said the time of the trains could not be arranged more advantageously. The range resident may come to Duluth and return the same day, being allowed five hours in the city. He said that time was sufficient in most cases, and where it was not the person usually remained here over night and returned home the following morning. Before taking any action he said the matter should be given very careful consideration. E. M. Ferguson, president of the Commercial club, said he had no set opinion on the subject. On motion of J. A. Ferguson the matter was laid on the table.

The question of drainage was next taken up. Chairman Hugo said the permanent development of Duluth depended more than the average person realizes on the agricultural development of the surrounding country. In this connection Secretary Eva explained that the club was making progres in its efforts to advertise the agricultural advantages of St. Louis and other northern counties. It was expected that a car similar to the Wisconsin "Grassland" would be ready to send out on the road this fall, but conditions up to the present time have been such as to prevent. Everything considered, it was thought best to postpone action on the car until next year, when everything will be in readiness for putting it in commission. Advertising literature and pohtographs are now being prepared for the car, and for advertising purposes outside of the car.

"All of this leads to the matter of the drainage of state lands," said Mr. Hugo. "The region directly tributary to Duluth can be improved a hundred fold by a judicious expenditure of state moneys for drainage purposes. The Commercial club can take up nothing that would be of greater benefit to the city of Duluth than this drainage movement. We should do everything possible to help the project along. It is proposed to have the United States government drain the Indian reservation lands at the same time the state is carrying on the work of draining its lands."

E. M. Ferguson said the question was one in which Duluth was vitally interested. He said Duluth should enter into the proposition with spirit and vigor, and help it along in every way possible, even to an expenditure of the organization's funds. Mr. Eva briefly explained the objects of the State Drainage league, which were already pretty well understood by members present.

The resolution of William E. Richardson, expressing the hearty sympathy of the committee in the work of the drainage league toward bringing about the drainage of state and government lands, was adopted unanimously.

Mr. Hugo said there was no reason why the wishes of the people in the court-house matter should be ignored. Everybody he had talked with, including practically every member of the legal fraternity, was in favor of the down-town site for the court-house. On motion of W. E. Richardson it was agreed that a committee should be appointed to see what could be done toward influencing the county commissioners to carry out the wishes of the people. The motion was put to vote after a brief discussion, in which all who expressed their views of the subject said they were in favor of a change in the site of the courthouse.

The report of Secretary Eva showed the finances of the public affairs committee to be in good condition. A cash surplus of about $1,400 is now in the bank.

There was some discussion as to how much money should be spent in securing and entertaining conventions. This will be left largely to the finance committee. George H. Crosby said excellent results had been obtained from the convention money thus far expended, and stated that the people generally were well satisfied with these results. In view of what had already been accomplished, he said the business interests of the city would be willing to contribute even more liberally toward a convention fund.

Mr. Comstock introduced a resolution placing the committee on record as favoring penny postage and opposing a reduction in parcels post rates, or a change in the present parcels post system, on the ground that such a change would work to the detriment of the retail business interests all through the country. The resolution was adopted with slight discussion. A committee of three will also be appointed to look into the matter of postal savings banks. A copy of the parcels post and penny postage resolution will be sent to Minnesota's representatives in congress.

Mr. Eva read a letter from the secretary of the National Board of Trade, which maintains offices at Washington for the purpose of influencing legislation, inviting the local club to become a member. No definite action was taken in regard to the matter.

A letter was read from the secretary of the interstate commerce commission, asking the Commercial club of Duluth to send delegates to the convention to be held at St. Louis Oct. 26 and 27. This if for the purpose of assisting in the enactment of legislation relative to the regulation of railway rates. The chairman will appoint delegates.

ARRANGEMENTS ARE COMPLETED

By President For Southern Trip—Will Not Ride Horseback.

Washington, Oct. 11.—The president has completed his principal arrangements for the journey to New Orleans, but hardly a day passes that he is not obliged to decline as tactfully as possible invitations from various cities and towns that desire his presence at fairs, horse shows, bazaars and similar exhibitions. His greatest cross, however, is the thoughtful mayor or horse show manager who imagines that the president is never happy unless riding a wild horse.

"I could not begin to tell you," said the president, today, to a caller, "how many invitations I have had to ride the best horse in the country, sir.' My friends in the South expect me to wear a high hat, a frock coat, trousers duly creased that stay down without straps, and patent leather shoes, and then ride some magnificent, spirited animal that I never have seen before, and must guide out into the fair grounds where there are a thousand or two small children to be trodden to death, innumerable dutiful members and not a few grandmothers, to say nothing of the men, all having a crushing good time.

"Why, when I made my Western trip a committee came on the train a few stations down the road before I reached a town of some size which for the purpose of illustration may be called X-burg. The committee members told me, with superlative pleasure, that they had the finest horse in the state all saddled and waiting for me at the station.

"Sure enough when our train pulled in, I looked where they pointed, and there was a magnificent big horse. As nearly as I could count, eight men were holding him. They wanted me to ride up the main street, and out to the fair grounds. I alighted and started to go over to the horse.

"Our train was just then pushed back out of the way in the car yard, and a big whiff of steam for a moment obscured my vision of the horse. Of course the locomotive puffed loudly. When the steam cleared away horse and men had disappeared as if swallowed by an earthquake. I think they caught him over in the next county a week later. No, sir, I shall ride no horses while I am down South."

ALERT PUBLIC OFFICIALS.

The Herald last evening published some interesting correspondence between Mayor Cullum and the water and light board. It is interesting both because of the subjects treated and the manner of their treatment, and because it shows that both the mayor and this important board are alive to the interests of the people.

In brief, the mayor propounded to the water board three questions which occurred to him as being of public importance. He had been given to understand that much gas was going to waste at the plant of the Zenith Furnace company, which the company would be willing to sell to the city at 20 cents per 1,000 feet. Wondering, therefore, whether the people were getting their gas as cheaply as might be, he asked the board to explain the matter. The board replied by stating that it seeks only to make the gas business of the city self-sustaining, that it has already made substantial reductions in the price of gas, and that the people shall have the benefit of any further reductions the furnace company may make. Furthermore, the board states that it does not understand that any considerable amount of gas of a quality suitable for lighting and cooking purposes is going to waste, and that it has had no proposition to sell the gas at 20 cents.

In behalf of the large population above Fifth street which desires water and gas service, the mayor inquired about the prospects for making the necessary extensions. To this the board replied that it recognized the need, and would like to make the extensions. This, however, would have to wait until the people vote a bond issue sufficient to pay the cost, which would be nearly $100,000. To attempt to pile up profits enough to take care of the expense would be to prolong the wait unduly, in the opinion of the board.

Also, the mayor asked about the possibility of doing away with the annoyance of double meters, one for lighting gas and one for cooking gas. The board explained that since the mayor's letter was written this had been done away with by fixing the price of cooking and lighting gas at the same figure, thus making the use of but one meter sufficient.

The correspondence is worthy of the attention of every citizen, and it should be read by all who are interested in the subjects treated. It shows that the mayor is looking out for the interests of the citizens, and that the water and light board, too, is handling its duties competently.

NEW EASTERN OUTLET.

The situation surrounding the construction of the new road from Ladysmith, Wis., to Duluth, the Lake Superior & Southeastern, has suddenly been illuminated by the discovery that it forms a link in an important new system by which Duluth will be given a new outlet to the East.

The absorption of the Wisconsin Central by the Erie road is the culmination of a series of events that brings into public notice the fact that there is a new through route from the Northwest to the East, one that will compare favorably wih any, and that will be of much benefit to Duluth.

Some time ago the Erie absorbed the Pere Marquette road, and for months there have been rumors from time to time that something was happening to the Wisconsin Central. The first definite intelligence came with the election of Newton Erb and G. M. Cummings, both of New York, as directors of the Wisconsin Central. Accompanying this election was the announcement that new and strong interests have come into control of the Central line. These interests are taken to be the Erie system. Announcement was made, too, of the new line from Ladysmith, a station on the Sault road, to Duluth, a distance of 112 miles, completing the chain, as follows: Lake Superior & Southeastern, Duluth to Ladysmith; Wisconsin Central, Ladysmith to Manitowoc; car ferries, Manitowoc to Ludington; Pere Marquette, Ludington to Lake Michigan; and the Erie continuing the route to New York.

This is a very important railway development, one that is taken to mean much that is good for Duluth. It brings the Wisconsin Central up from a vague and uncertain sort of position in the railway world to an important standing in a great new system. It opens up between Duluth and the East an entirely new outlet, giving dealers another choice of routes, always a convenient and helpful thing. It will add materially to Duluth's importance as a railway center and a shipping and distributing depot. It is, in short, a good thing, and Duluth is glad it happened.

A LIVE COMMITTEE.

The public affairs committee of the Duluth Commercial club took action last night upon a number of important public matters, showing that the club is taking an active and enlightened interest in things of moment to Duluth and Northern Minnesota.

The "White City" plan of providing amusement for visitors in the city during the summer was approved, and the naming of a committee to confer with other similar committees in getting the project under way was determined upon.

The committee decided to adopt the cause of drainage of state lands and make it its own, and to start the movement it will send representatives to St. Paul to attend a meeting of the Minnesota Drainage league tomorrow. The advisability of sending a lobby to Washington to work for government appropriations to drain government and Indian lands was left for further consideration. This action was proper, too. If the Minnesota delegation in congress asks for a lobby to help it get the necessary appropriations, then will it be time to think of forming one; not before.

It was decided further to appoint a committee to look into the movement for better train service between Duluth and its neighbor communities.

It was decided also to appoint a committee to wait upon the county board and see what it proposes to do about building a new courthouse. Another important and timely matter.

Besides, the committee decided to favor penny postage, to oppose a parcels post, to oppose the numbering of rural route mail boxes, and to send a committee to represent Duluth at the Interstate Commerce Law convention Oct. 26 and 27.

The penny postage matter is a good thing to favor, but The Herald hardly agrees with the committee's action against the parcels post plan, which it believes to be an inevitable reform in the interests of the people. The opposition to numbering rural route mail boxes is well advised, because it was intended to be in the interests of the metropolitan mail order houses. However, The Herald understands that the postoffice department has already rescinded its order to have the boxes numbered.

In taking action so promptly and vigorously upon these various important matters, the public affairs committee shows itself to be a live and energetic adjunct of a most useful institution.

LIFE INSURANCE MAGGOTS.

Equitable, New York Life and Mutual—apparently they are sisters three; sisters in iniquity and shamelessness; sisters in betrayal of trust. Yet in all discussions of the disclosures being made before the investigating committee of the New York legislature, it should not be forgotten that it is not the companies themselves that are at fault, but the officers who have come into control of them. To remove these officers and with them the practices that seem to have been common to the three companies, is to restore these companies to confidence once more. They are all three still sound financially, and while they are undergoing a difficult and painful operation, they will come out of it all the better.

The latest exhibit is the nepotism in the McCurdy family, which has apparently been fattening inordinately upon the resources of the Mutual. Their methods appear to have been a little bit more open than those of the other officers. Instead of bothering with real estate deals and speculations, they simply helped themselves, apparently, to whatever they desired.

Father McCurdy was president, and though Son McCurdy, who was general manager, did not know what his salary was and thought there should be no limit upon it, it developed that it was $150,000 a year.

Son McCurdy, besides his salary as general manager, thriftily made a contract with Father McCurdy by which he paid himself as foreign manager $1,268,390 in commissions.

By a further agreement between Father McCurdy and Son McCurdy Son-in-law Thebaud got $932,823 in commissions, too. Father, son and son-in-law made Brother-in-law Marsh medical examiner, and Cousin P. Stuyvesant Pillot inspector of risks. Son-in-law Thebaud's partner's brother became general agent for New Jersey, a niece's husband was made secretary, and another brother was Southwestern agent.

Between them the members of this interesting family, given the privilege of helping themselves to the policyholders' money, appear to have made good use of it. But like the others who have made good use of opportunities they never should have been allowed, they have had about enough, and it appears to be time to give the policyholders a little show at the trough.

HOTEL GOSSIP

A man with a singing jag was making quite a lot of noise in the bar room of a local hotel the other day. He is a person who does not get under the influence of liquor very often, but when he does imbibe too freely he is placed in a very cheerful frame of mind, and, to show his joy, begins to sing. He sings, so it is said, until he either sings himself sober or to sleep.

On different occasions he has different songs. In this particular instance "Everybody Works but Father" was the favorite. This popular selection was repeated again and again. Everybody who entered the room was greeted by the tipsy one and forced to listen until the song was ended. After this had been going on for some little time, the captain of one of the lake boats entered and walked up to the bar. Before he had a chance to give his order he was seized by the coat and backed into a corner by the man with the singing jag. There he stood, offering neither word nor smile, until the song came to an end. When he was released he was asked by the stranger how he liked the song.

"It seems to me," he replied, "that it would be a pretty good song if the words were only set to music."

"Many are the tricks and devices resorted to by owners of what are known as line houses on the border between the United States and Canada to escape the payment of liquor licenses," said W. R. Lewis of Bangor, Me., at the St. Louis. "One of the favorite tricks is to move a large stand holding a variety of intoxicants from one side of the line to the other. This can be done by building the house directly on the line. That is where they get their name.

"Twenty years ago the Vermont-Quebec border boasted of probably fifteen line houses, which kept officers on both sides busy all the time, and along the division marks between Maine and New Brunswick probably twenty more did business. During the past decade, however, the Vermont quota has decreased to six or eight, while in Maine there are not more than a dozen.

"The owners of these houses have been accustomed to finding a way to escape paying New Brunswick and Quebec for the privilege of selling intoxicating liquors, and to evade the United States customs laws relating to liquors. They are also charged with aiding other kinds of smuggling. Proprietors of these places are generally men who would commit almost any crime to gain an advantage over government officers.

"All sorts of illegal deeds have been laid at the door of these men, but it is very rare that sufficient evidence has been secured against them to bring a sentence for any length of time. Among respectable members of a community living in the vicinity of these dens a reign of terror constantly exists, and few there are who would dare to openly give evidence against any one of them, no matter what knowledge of crimes might be possessed, for fear that dire vengeance would follow the giving out of any information leading to a criminal prosecution."

"Vegetables have thrived well in Beltrami county this year," said R. H. Ball of Bemidji at the Lenox, "and the crops are large enough to satisfy the farmers. There has been a good deal of rain, but the soil up our way is of a sandy nature, and the water does not stand the way it does on firmer soil. Of course, there are pleaty of swamps where there is too much water to allow the raising of anything at all, but there are also thousands of acres of excellent farm land. There will be several thousand more acres available for farming when the state drains its lands, which it will certainly do within the next few years.

"The vegetable crops raised in Beltrami county are a surprise to outsiders. No better are to be seen anywhere in the state. The vegetables grow to monster size, and are sound all the way through. The lumber camps afford the principal market just now, and the loggers pay pretty good prices for these products of the soil."

Let Something Good Be Said.

When over the fair fame of friend or foe
The shadow of disgrace shall fall; instead
Of words of blame, or proof of thus and so,
Let something good be said.

Forget not that no fellow-being yet
May fall so low but love may lift his head,
Even the check of shame with tears is wet,
If something good be said.

No generous heart may vainly turn aside
In ways of sympathy; no soul so dead
But may awaken strong and glorified,
If something good be said.

And so I charge ye, by the thorny crown,
And by the cross on which the Savior bled,
And by your own soul's hope of fair renown,
Let something good be said!

Eddy's Drainage Platform.

Frank M. Eddy in Sauk Center Herald: It is the duty of the state to continue the drainage of swamp lands already begun and liberal appropriations should be made for such purpose and if necessary bonds should be issued to carry on the work. Prospective settlers should be employed to do the work as far as is practicable. As fast as the lands are reclaimed and made tillable they should be sold to actual settlers in tracts not exceeding 160 acres each for a reasonable price for the land and the cost of reclamation.

We request our senators and members of congress to labor diligently to secure an appropriation from the general government to drain the lands on the Indian reservations and the opening of the same to homestead settlement at the price per acre paid the Indians and the cost of reclamation.

Heart Is All Right.

Boston Globe: Mr. Bryan's metaphor may be a little mixed when he writes to President Roosevelt: "Stand by your guns"—"Go forward," but his heart's all right.

THE WEATHER

The furnace proves to be a mighty agreeable institution these mornings. A summer prolonged beyond its allotted span was suddenly turned into the most decided autumn weather, and the quickness of the change makes people more appreciative of the furnace than they would have been had the change been more gradual. The clouds that prevailed yesterday afternoon and last night, and even this morning, came from the northwest with occasional squalls of rain, and they looked very much like the same breed of clouds that a little later will be producing snow flurries.

For the first time the temperature in Duluth got down to the freezing point last night, its minimum being 32 deg. Its maximum yesterday was 42 deg., making it a pretty cold day. There will be another frost tonight, the weather man says, but it will be warmer tomorrow, and fair weather with westerly winds will prevail. Says the weather man about conditions:

"The barometric depressions central Tuesday morning over Gulf states and north of Minnesota have apparently united, moving to the eastern lake region and causing light to heavy rains in most districts east of the Mississippi river and snow flurries on Lake Superior. The cool wave attending the eastern movement of the western high barometer now covers all districts lying between the Rocky mountains and Atlantic states. Freezing temperatures prevail in the West and Northwest, but it is becoming warmer in Alberta country as a result of a low pressure area developing there. Prospects favor fair weather in this locality tonight and Thursday and somewhat warmer Thursday, in connection with the forward movement of the Rocky mountain high and Alberta low pressure areas."

LINES TO A LAUGH.

Cleveland Leader: "Here, waiter, there's something in this soup."

"Yes, sir. Evidently you got the oyster."

Detroit Free Press: "I don't want to live to be very old," observed Mrs. Fretful.

"There's no danger," observed her husband. "You'll soon worry yourself to death over other people's troubles."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Is my hat on straight?" she asked him.

He looked at her headgear in dumb amazement.

"I dunno," he answered. "When it's straight it looks crooked and when it's crooked it looks straight."

Washington Star: "What a beautiful home you have," said the old-time friend.

"You mustn't let mother and the girls hear you speak so patronizingly," answered Mr. Cumrox. "This ain't a home. This is a residence."

Philadelphia Ledger: "What do you think of that?" said the tiresome young father after narrating a smart saying of the baby. "Pretty smart, wasn't it?"

"Yes," replied the weary listener. "It reminds me of one of my children. He told me to 'quit chewing the rag' the other day."

"The idea! How old is he?"

"Only 16 years."

Chicago Tribune: Borus (with bitter sarcasm)—I suppose you think I ought to have killed off the hero and heroine, instead of letting them marry in the last chapter of that new story of mine.

Naggus (literary editor)—Quite the contrary, Borus. You did exactly the right thing in marrying them to each other. It was a more refined and artistic way of punishing them.

Folks in Ruts.

Th' world is full o' ruts, my boy, some shaller an' some deep;
An' every rut is full o' folks, as high as they can heap.
Each one that's a grovelin' in th' ditch is growlin' at his fate,
An' wishin' he had got his chance before it was too late.
They lay it all on some one else or say 'twas just their luck—
They never onct consider that 'twas caused by lack o' pluck.
But here's th' word of one that's lived clean through, from soup t' nuts;
Th' Lord don't send no derricks round t' hist folks out o' ruts.

Some folks has stayed in ruts until they didn't like th' place,
Then scrambled bravely to th' road an' entered in th' race.
Sich ones has always found a hand held out for them t' grab
An' cling to till they's lost the move peculiar to a crab.
But only them that helps themselves an' tries for better things
Will ever see th' helpin' hand t' which each climber clings.
This here's the hard, plain, solemn facks, without no "ifs" or "buts:"
Th' Lord don't send no derricks round t' hist folks out o' ruts.

The Sage of Sauk Center.

Frank M. Eddy in Sauk Center Herald: When a convention can find no other place for a man they nominate him for lieutenant governor. That suits the interests that desire to control the appointment of committees.

During all this discussion of gubernatorial candidates it is well to remind the voters that it is the legislature that makes the laws and not the governor.

What the country needs is officials with a "push" and not officials with a "pull."

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of this date in 1885.

The large number of men which it will be found necessary to employ here during the coming winter to make the many improvements projected will have a tendency to make business lively. The prospects are that Duluth will enjoy a season of activity and prosperity after navigation closes.

D. L. Stinchfield, formerly of Duluth, is now running a paper of his own, called the News, printed in New London, Wis.

All day yesterday people crossed over to Park Point to see the schooner Guido Pfister, as she lay stranded on the beach, near the lighthouse. The steamer City of Rome, with her consorts, Red Wing and Guido Pfister, which left Buffalo on the 23rd ult., loaded with coal, enjoyed good weather until the heavy nor'easter of Saturday on Lake Superior caused the captain of the City of Rome to cut loose from his consorts. He then hastened to this port, and Capt. Inman, in the tug Williams, and Capt. Coburn, in the J. A. Paige, set out in quest of the schooners. They hailed them about five miles from port. Capt. Inman succeeded in getting a line from the Red Wing and towed her into port. But Capt. Coburn was not so fortunate. Time after time the crew of the Paige got hold of a line from the Guido, but each time the strain was so great they had to let go. Then the tug returned, and Capt. Burke made sail for the harbor. He arrived at night in a tremendous sea and tried to make the entrance to the canal, but, in the fury of the storm, missed it, and the Guido struck on the south pier, where she will be a total loss. By the efforts of Capt. Alex. McDougall, E. R. Jefferson, the lighthouse keeper, R. J. Miller, Will Rice and Ward, the crew were saved.

George C. Stone, general manager of the Minnesota Iron company, came up from St. Paul yesterday.

L. H. Hawkins of Shakopee, and brother of H. H. Hawkins, well known here, was in the city yesterday. He is an attorney and was so impressed with Duluth that he has decided to come here and locate.

The commission to locate and prepare plans for a third hospital for the insane, have accepted an invitation by the chamber of commerce to visit Duluth. They will be here Oct. 15, and a strong effort will be made to secure the location of the hospital here.

W. A. Hutchinson will take his war sale to Tower for a run there.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Princeton Union: A man moving about in the bushes somewhere in the Michigan woods was mistaken for a wildcat and shot through the head. Next we may expect to hear of someone being shot for a squirrel or a gopher.

Elk River Star-News: There is a notable diffidence among politicians in announcing gubernatorial preferences. They act as though they thought they were waiting for something.

Fairmont Sentinel: Governor John Johnson continues to make good. When he scored the faculty of the state university for permitting the brutal slugging upon the campus incident to the cane rush foolishness he hit the nail squarely on the head.

North Branch Review: The Review bears the distinction of being one of the few papers of the state that has not brought out a candidate either for governor or for the legislature.

Virginia Virginian: With a new saw mill, public library and brewery in course of construction, Virginia will soon be able to furnish employment to the idle, knowledge to the illiterate and drink to the thirsty.

International Falls Border Budget: If Attorney General Young forces many more vindication suits he will land R. C. Dunn in the gubernatorial chair in spite of himself.

Brainerd Tribune: "What is the Democratic party going to do?" asks the Washington Post. Why, that's just what the Democratic party is wondering.

Rush City Post: The St. Paul Review favors trying Dunn again. That would certainly right one of the nastiest wrongs ever perpetrated.

Anoka Herald: This news of the editorial sanctums being invaded in dead of night and large sacks of money being stolen frightens us. We have instructed our office force to carefully sweep out the stamp drawer every night.

Ripple Compass: Contentment does not bask in the sunshine of a bay window as often as it lurks in the shady grime of a log hut.

Ripple Compass: The boy who was born with a gold spoon in his mouth has generally replaced it with a cigarette.

Cass Lake Voice: On account of the complete exoneration of Robert C. Dunn in the iron mining case recently decided in St. Louis county, there is a growing sentiment that he should be renominated for governor.

Red Lake Falls Courier: The Lakefield Standard criticises Governor Johnson because he has praised President Roosevelt. It is hard to suit the Standard, and it is not likely that it would be satisfied even though the governor should censure the president. The Standard is showing to what length insane partisanship will lead.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: It is generally unlucky to propose to a girl who is sure to accept you.

Before a woman marries a man she wants him to write poetry for her; afterward checks will do.

A woman's idea of having a good time is going off somewhere with all the family; a man's without any of them.

When a thin woman puts on her winter clothes she brags herself to death about the extra pound she has gained.

There is hardly any nightmare a man can have worse than to dream that he has started to stoke the furnace a month ahead of time.

Impressionistic.

Judge: Thomas stood beside Miss Brown, showing her how he'd draw a cow. As he did so he glanced from time to time at one grazing in a nearby yard.

"This is her nose I've just finished," he said, drawing a curved line.

"And her body you just make this way," he said, after a moment's observation, and added another curved line.

"Now, here's her tail," and he placed a third curved line on the paper.

He looked at the drawing for a short time and then an embarrassed smile spread over his face.

"Perhaps we'd better call it a pump," he suggested.

Afflicted With Fever and a Son.

Keene, N. H., Sentinel: The ambulance went to Spofford yesterday and brought to the hospital Mrs. Henry Derby, who is suffering from a fever, and her son, Paul.

Who Was She, John?

Gainesville, Ga., News: Ask John Smith what girl that was he was pursuing the other day in Gainesville. He says she was as pretty as red shoes.

BOOSTING NORTHERN MINNESOTA.

Princeton Union: Our Northern Minnesota exchanges are fast lining up in advocacy of swamp land drainage and it pleases us to see the agitation spreading. The papers in the southern part of the state, however, have as yet manifested but little interest in the project, probably from a nonrealization of the fact that the drainage of the swamp lands of the north would equally benefit the south. If all the papers in the state—regardless of location or political creed—would but enter into a vigorous campaign to bring about this vast improvement to the commonwealth the work would be rapidly accomplished.

Sauk Center Herald: The only way to secure drainage is to begin to drain, and every dollar expended in this project, if rightly expended, will come back to the state in ten-fold measure.

International Falls Border Budget: The drainage of the swamp lands is not only a money-making investment for the state, but an educational measure that will distribute beneficial results in every city, hamlet and school district in the state.

Olberg Journal: A rare specimen is the editor narrow minded enough to give vent to his ignorance by opposing drainage and boosting of Northern Minnesota lands. Any man with common horse sense, editor or no editor, will and can see the logic of the question. The development of Northern Minnesota means the enrichment of Minnesota as a whole, and the southern portion will be the gainer as well as the northern part. We are all working for Minnesota, and all of Minnesota, at all times, by expounding public questions which benefit the people of the state at large. The chronic kicker and sectional crank is a drawback to Minnesota, regardless of location, be he either in the south or north part of the state.

Red Wing Republican: It is estimated that 11,000,000 acres of land can be redeemed by proper drainage. This is about one-fifth as much as the government expects to reclaim by irrigation. Moreover it is splendid land for cultivation. Once rid of its surplus water, it will produce record breaking crops. It is not greatly different in quality from the famous Red River country, that has long been the granary of the Northwest. Minnesota has not yet begun to show what she can do. Give the northern portion of the state a chance.

Thief River Falls Press: People who do not believe in drainage should take a trip through the northern portion of the Red River valley right now and see the thousands of acres of choice grain that cannot be harvested. Enough grain has been lost this year to put a ditch through every half mile of land in this end of the state. And still drainage has it's enemies.

C. D. I. in Cass Lake Times: A land well tilled and well filled with sturdy settlers is the picture of the mind's eye today, for Northern Minnesota, and this mental picture will be a real one when this land is properly drained.

Very Unsportsmanlike.

Washington Post: An Oregon lawyer demands that the "hounds of the government" be started "after the big fish." There may be nothing in the game laws preventing the use of hounds in fishing, but it hardly seems fair.

We want you to investigate the "Bayha system" of selling stoves and ranges, and we believe you will say with us, it is far in advance and of far more benefit to you than any stove proposition you could possibly find outside of this store. We will sell you a stove or range absolutely guaranteed in every way, for positively less money than you would have to pay in "boot" money at the "trade-back-stores." We cannot take back your old stove for the reason that it will cost us as much to handle it as we could get for it, and besides, we do not sell second-hand stoves. But we will guarantee to sell you outright a handsome stove or an elegant steel range for less money than you would have to pay other dealers "to boot," that are willing to allow you something for your old stove—and besides, we will make you a present of your old stove, absolutely free, which you can sell to any second-hand dealer for $2.50 to $5.00. This, added to what you save at the start, you can make from $5.00 to $15.00 by buying your stove or steel range at this store—the store that always keeps the price down. Now, why send away to Chicago or anywhere else for a stove, when you can buy it here for less money than you would have to pay others, besides paying your freight and drayage and run the risk of breakage in transportation.

HULBERT GIVES GOOD ADVICE TO CLERGYMEN

Dean of Chicago University Divinity School Addresses Baptists.

Rose Glen Webster Discusses Mormonism at Mission Meeting.

Advancing no elaborate and intricate arguments, but giving some plain-spoken, helpful advice to the clergymen, the address of Dr. Erie B. Hulbert, dean of the divinity school of the University of Chicago, before the Minnesota state convention of Baptists at the Pilgrim Congregational church, last evening, was much enjoyed. Dr. Hulbert's topic was "Factors Needed to Efficient Pastoral Work."

"There is a distinction between pastors and preachers," said Dr. Hulbert, "and I propose to talk about the pastors. And, casting all the other factors aside, I am going to talk about one prime factor needful to efficient pastoral work.

"I have known men who were accounted good preachers. They got their discourse from their text—quite a remarkable thing, I know—and they succeeded in giving their sermon in more than the three stereotyped divisions, but they were not good pastors. He is a preacher, but not a pastor.

"But there is another man who is not accounted a successful preacher. Indeed, some members of his congregation declare that his wife could preach a great deal better, but they swear by him as a pastor. He is a good pastor. But I have found that nearly all great preachers are hard-working, faithful pastors.

"Pastors should not spend six days of the week in wearing intellectual toil in order to grind out two of these sermons, which will soar so high—too high. He should be out among the members of his congregation. Dr. Lawrence of the Second Baptist church of Chicago filled that immense house of worship twice every Sunday. He is a successful preacher and a successful pastor. He told me once that during a year he made 1,200 calls, 100 calls a month. George C. Lorimer was won't to ring about 100 door bells a month.

"Some of you pastors will probably say: 'Hulbert, I was hired for preaching and I am going to give what you urge the go-by.' The only thing I can say is, if you do, you are a goner. Remember, I am speaking from experience as a pastor. I tried both methods. I dug in and prepared the best sermons I knew how, but the church did not fill up on Sundays, so I decided that I ought to make more calls. I did and more people came for me to preach at right away. Here and there, there are rare exceptions to this rule.

"Although in my topic on this program, the word factor is given in the plural, there is but one prime factor in efficient pastoral work.

"Do you understand me, brethren? You are the shepherd of a flock of lambs. But you are sort of an undershepherd and you look for guidance to the over-shepherd and the flocks are His. We should know the over-shepherd and be in most perfect harmony with Him.

"You must get at every scrap of information concerning the over-Shepherd in order that you may know the mind and spirit of Jesus Christ. If you knew all the other truck and did not know the spirit of Christ, you would not be efficient pastors."

Dr. Hulbert's talk was much enjoyed. Many of the clergymen to whom he addressed his remarks attended the University of Chicago divinity school under him and they greeted him at an informal dinner held at the St. Louis this noon.

"Saving Energy of the Church in Society" was the topic taken up in an enjoyable discourse last evening by Rev. A. T. Fowler, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, Minneapolis. It was a strong plea for efficiency in city evangelism.

"We have suffered too much from a weak, detached evangelism that is neither biblical nor successful," said Mr. Fowler. "Apart from the church there can be no saving energy for society; apart from the church there can be no saving evangelism. For the church is to stand as a witness to the finality of Jesus; the church is not the light but the candlestick and, in brief, the church is God"s agent in carrying forward His principles.

"The church must solve society's problems. It should be like a fire engine, drawing in water at one side and spouting it forth on the other, quenching the fire started by the devil. Has the church the saving energy to lift life to the moral holiness of God?

"The question that we should ask ourselves is searching. What are we doing to help?

"The church must always be the guide in modern society. We have not realized the saving power of the church in her own life; too much dependence is placed on outside things. We have tried to purify the tenements; we have tried to secure shorter working hours for the tired toilers and we have tried to make the lives of the dwellers in the slums a bit brighter, but has the saving element of the church gone forth into society?

"Christianity has a practical propaganda; it is not a cure for social ills but a rectifier. And how shall the churches become strong evangelistic agencies? I will give four answers:

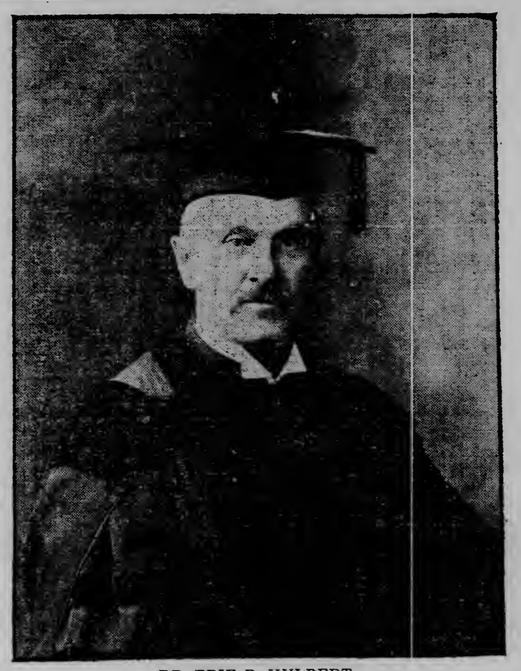

"First, we need a renaissance of Baptist convictions, I make no appeal to denominational prejudice but we need a denominational conviction. To be afraid of this is to reveal moral and intellectual indolence.

"Second, we need a deeper responsibility and a larger and more intellectual spiritual equipment. It is no fallacy that the general opinion is that because there is need, we should put zealous but unprepared men into our churches.

"The church should pay more attention to its members. Don't misunderstand me, I do not plead for congregational coddling of the clergy, but they should be recognized more as scholars, and proper recognition should be made of their ability. Ministry is perhaps the only profession in which a man may work a lifetime without being looked upon as an expert. The paramount need is efficient leaders in the churches, and they should be given the freedom which goes with intelligent leadership.

"The third answer is: There should be more work by the lay members. Laymen should possess the passion of Jesus for saving souls, and they should become individual evangelists. And the fourth answer is: We should need a vision of the supreme reality of God in real life."

The services last evening opened with song service, and several numbers were given during the evening by the quartet.

ATTACKS MORMONISM.

Miss Rose Webster Pictures Forcibly the Menace It Contains.

At the afternoon session yesterday of the Minnesota Baptist state convention, which is being held in the city, the women's mission work occupied the attention of those in attendance. The address of the afternoon was given by Miss Rose Glen Webster, who is working in Utah, and her talk on "Mormonism" was listened to intently, and although her address lasted longer than an hour, she was given the closest attention. Her knowledge of the subject and the conditions of Mormonism from all points is such that her word is taken as authority. She has worked in the cause of the church against Mormonism during the past ten years. Her talk dealt with facts and figures, and statement after statement with verified statistics were told one after another so rapidly that one could scarcely realize the immensity of the subject and the conditions as they are today. She said in part:

"I ask your closest attention to the talk I am to give you this afternoon, and ask you to try and remember the things I say. And if you quote me, try and do so correctly. Since the founding of the Mormon church in 1830 it has split into fourteen or sixteen different sects. The Josephites, whose headquarters are in Iowa, follow the teachings of Joseph E. Smith, and the Brighamites, with headquarters in Utah, have as their teacher Brigham Young. In my talk this afternoon I will speak entirely of the latter sect.

"This Mormon church is one of the most perfectly organized institutions that one can imagine. It is divided into priesthoods in different degrees of power and privilege. The priesthood is perfect, the priesthood is infallible; through the priesthood God speaks in matters temporal as well as spiritual. There are nine divisions, the officers differing in degree of authority and power. It has been stated that in the Mormon church there is one church official for every five members, and in a late utterance of one of the prominent men he said that there were three and one-half church officials for every five members. The careful detail as to organization is understood when one considers that the true Mormon looks forward to the time when the church is to be world-wide in extent and the religion universally accepted.

"That the Mormons are growing numerically will be readily seen, for their number now in all lands is 400,000, approaching closely the half-million mark. Geographically, the territory in which these people are found is divided into states which are about the size of a county. These states are often divided again into wards. In 1897 the church boasted of 60,000 converts, but at that time such good use was made of these statistics in the crusade against them that they have since refused to allow their figures in this particular to be made public. However, the followers of this belief are organized into the most perfect political machines, and are such commercial powers in the West that unless some radical move is made, and made soon, they will have control in the majority of the Western states.

"The Mormon leader is a most astute politician; he dominates men and parties, as was seen in recent years in his swinging Utah from a Republican majority at one election to a tremendous Democratic majority at the next. He will seat a Republican or a Democratic man in the senate, according to the party from which the greater good to the cause of the church may be secured. The Mormon is great in colonizing and often has a group of Mormons been sent to a community where the balance of power is always insecure, and this group of church followers will hold the deciding votes. He will work by devious and insidious methods, but he will work, you may be sure, for the advancement of the church.

"Commercially, the Mormon has made as great strides. Every church member pays tithes to the church of his surplus property. Exactly what this surplus is, I am free to say I don't know, for you will find Mormons with surplus houses, surplus lands, surplus mining stocks and surplus wives which are not given into the tithing fund. But the fact remains that between $1,600,000 and $2,000,000 is in this tithing fund, and although in former years the fund was used for caring for the poor and furthering the work of the church, no accounting is ever given now by Joseph Smith for this immense sum of money. A case is now pending in the courts whereby two former officials of the church are endeavoring by process of law to secure an accounting of this tithing fund.

"The Mormons are engaged in large enterprises in the industrial world, and their motive in gaining power commercially and politically is to secure church supremacy in politics, industry, society and in religion.

"The church also sends out its missionaries and elders. Young men and young women make a house to house canvass to distribute tracts and they sometimes leave tracts behind them. The young man is distinguishable by a silk hat, frock coat and a pious look. The first principles, so called, of the religion are left in this manner and it is not until the convert has been secured that the meat of the order is fed to the newcomer and I am inclined to believe that the strong meat is polygamy.

"Although the Mormon will often say that 'polygamy is a relatively insignificant feature of our religion,' it is widespread, and among their tenets it is stated most emphatically that the man who refuses polygamy shall be damned and the woman destroyed. They believe that God is an exalted man, but a man of flesh and bones, and that through the practice of polygamy he became powerful, and that the privilege awaits men of this earth. They believe in short, that the greatest polygamist is the greatest god. The difference between God and Christ to them is the difference of the number of wives. They believe not only of a Father in Heaven, but equally of a Mother in Heaven. Unless a blow is struck at this evil in our land, constitutionally, these people within a short time will hold the control in the Western states and can not be reached."

Miss Webster ended her talk with an earnest appeal for the assistance of every Christian against the evil threatened in the land.

Other speakers of the afternoon were Mrs. C. A. Salquist, who spoke on the medical work in China, and Miss Soderburg, a Finnish missionery of Duluth, who works among these people here. The reports of the committees of the Women's Home and Foreigns Missions were given.

DANCE
Given By Uniform Rank, M. W. A. 1585
At Great Eastern
Wednesday, Oct. 11.
TICKETS 50c.

THE ROOT OF THE MATTER.

He Cured Himself of Serious Stomach Troubles, By Getting Down to First Principles.

A man of large affairs in one of our prominent Eastern cities by too close attention to business, too little exercise and too many club dinners, finally began to pay nature's tax, levied in the form of chronic stomach trouble; the failure of his digestion brought about a nervous irritability making it impossible to apply himself to his daily business and finally deranging the kidneys and heart.

In his own words he says: "I consulted one physician after another and each one seemed to understand my case, but all the same they each failed to bring about the return of my former digestion, appetite and vigor. For two years I went from pillar to post, from one sanitarium to another. I gave up smoking, I quit coffee and even renounced my daily glass or two of beer, without any marked improvement.

"Friends had often advised me to try a well known proprietary medicine, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and I had often perused the newspaper advertisements of the remedy but never took any stock in advertised medicines nor could believe a 50-cent patent medicine would touch my case.

"To make a long story short I finally bought a couple of packages at the nearest drug store and took two or three tablets after each meal and occasionally a tablet between meals, when I felt any feeling of nausea or discomfort.

"I was surprised at the end of the first week to note a marked improvement in my appetite and general health and before the two packages were gone I was certain that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets was going to cure completely and they did not disappoint me. I can eat and sleep and enjoy my coffee and cigar and no one would suppose I had ever known the horrors of dyspepsia.

"Out of friendly curiosity I wrote to the proprietors of the remedy asking for information as to what the tablets contained and they replied that the principal ingredients were aseptic pepsin (government test), malt diastase and other natural digestives, which digest food regardless of the condition of the stomach."

The root of the matter is this, the digestive elements contained in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest the food, give the overworked stomach a chance to recuperate and the nerves and whole system to receive the nourishment which can only come from food. Stimulants and nerve tonics never give strength, they give fictitious strength, invariably followed by reaction. Every drop of food, every nerve and tissue is manufactured from our daily food, and if you can insure its prompt action and complete digestion by the regular use of so good and wholesome a remedy as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, you will have no need of nerve tonics and sanitariums.

Although Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been in the market only a few years, probably every druggist in the United States, Canada and Great Britain now sells them and considers them the most popular and successful of any preparation for stomach trouble.

SMALL LOSS ON BIG WORK

About $3,000,000 Spent By Government on Exposed Work.

Total Damage Loss By Storms Will Not Exceed $12,000.

During the several years that government improvement work has been going on in this district, there has been about $3,000,000 spent on construction work that was exposed to the storms on Lake Superior. With all that exposure there has been no serious loss in construction work due to the storms, except this year, and at this end of the lake. The damage done at Superior entry this season, through severe northeast storms, is said to figure about $11,000 or $12,000.

It is a matter of gratification to the engineering department of the United States that the percentage of loss is so small as compare dwith the immense amount of money that has been spent on improvement work in exposed places. The three notable pieces of work accomplished by the government engineers, or work that is in the process of completion are the Duluth ship canal piers, the Marquette breakwater and the pier work at Superior entry. In all three locations the work has been and is now exposed to the northeast storms on the lake, and it is regarded as a most fortunate thing that the pier and breakwater construction has so far been carried through to completion.

There yet remains a 1,500 foot section of the new concrete pier at Superior entry to be extended lakeward and steps have just been taken by the engineers to put in the protection work that will permit of the construction of the big concrete blocks out as far as the end of the old south pier head without danger from storms. At the beginning of the current year the engineers planned to put the protection work far enough out in the lake to protect the entire work while the pier construction was underway, but in this they were unfortunate. Two storms, the severest that this end of the lake had for years has, within a few hours, destroyed the preliminary work that it took weeks and months to accomplish.

It is a matter of some interest to know that had the storm in August been delayed just about two days the government could have completed its cribbing and have placed it in condition so that the storm could not have affected it. As it was, three 100 foot sections of new, heavy timber cribbing were totally destroyed. That the fourth crib was saved is due to the fact that it had not then been taken out.

Another interesting coincidence noted by the engineers was that while the weather continued favorable during all the time that the preliminary work was being done, there has been a northeast storm on every time that an attempt has been made to sink a crib at Superior entry. The government has now sunk four big pieces of cribbing altogether, though three have been destroyed, and every one of the four was put down when the sea was high to a greater or less extent by a northeast wind.

During the period this season that work has been in progress at Superior entry, there have been some good records made in spite of the fact that the dredging plants, when working on the outside, had to be held in readiness to come inside the bay on very short notice.

When the last crib, 100-foot long, was sunk at right angles to the pier head of the old south pier, 3,000 cubic yards of sand were deposited in the compartments or pockets in eight hours. This was done at the rate of six and a quarter cubic yards per minute, or, in even more common terms of measurements, about twelve wagonloads of sand per minute.

It is a matter of common knowledge to those who have resided about the Great Lakes for any length of time that the ice pressure every spring, during the period of "break-up," is something tremendous, and that it requires a very stable structure to withstand the strain. In past years the moving ice fields have been known to shear off big sticks of piling as if they were matches, and it is this danger that the engineers, in constructing the present protection dike at Superior entry, have had to bear in mind. It is believed that the crib work, which rises now fully six feet from the water, and which will be about eight feet above the ice this winter, will resist successfully any pressure that the ice field may have on it. With the pile dike construction, however, it is a different matter. The piles have been put in in two rows, lashed together, and the space between filled with rock, but there is a doubt if even those will hold if the wind should next spring veer a big ice field against it. The single piles that form a line from the pile dike to the shore line are believed to be safe enough unless the wind gets around in the southeast and drives a large ice field before it. In such case it is claimed the row of piles would disappear as rapidly as if they were nothing more than toothpicks.

After a hearty meal a dose of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure will prevent an attack of Indigestion. Kodol is a thorough digestant and a guaranteed cure for Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gas on the Stomach, Weak Heart, Sour Risings, Bad Breath and all Stomach troubles. Sold by all druggists.

TWO STATUES ARE DESTROYED

New York, Oct. 11.—Gutzon Borglum, sculptor of the "Angel of the Annunciation" and of the "Angel of the Resurrection," which were intended to have adorned the walls of the great cathedral of St. John the Divine, announced yesterday that he had destroyed the two figures.

Mr. Borglum did so because of a dispute which had arisen as to whether the figures should be masculine or feminine. The sculptor had created his conceptions of the two angels in the form of women and his work had been sharply criticised on that score.

"I went to the cathedral Monday and with a chisel and mallet smashed the angels into bits. Although I have done nothing in the past year into which I have put more care and thought, and although I felt like the veriest vandal in thus completely wrecking what I knew to be works of beauty and power, I did so to put a stop to a useless discussion and to prevent any use being made of the figures other than had been originally intended.

"I am absolutely astounded that any clergyman could stand in the presence of thirty or forty images of a purely religious character and see nothing in them but sex, and now that the whole unpleasant matter is over, I am just as sure as ever, that the feminine side of our race must continue to be our chief source of artistic inspiration and will so remain absolutely unaltered by all pedantic controversies."

NICE LOOKING BOY

Appeared Miss Jessie, Who Was About to Take Train.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 11.—On promise that she would never again don men's togs, Miss Jessie Marks, a North Memphis miss, was ordered released from the police station. The young girl, who is yet in her teens, was apprehended at the central depot dressed in the height of masculine fashion, with cigarettes in the pockets of her coat and a cane in hand. She told the policeman that she was on her way to Mississippi to visit her mother. She was locked up and was about to be released in the garb she was locked up in when Police Court Judge Floyd happened to come along and ordered Miss Marks to the room of the police station matron, where she changed trousers and coat for a skirt and shirtwaist. Under promise to be good she was allowed to go.

"It is of incalculable consequence to the man himself that he should be sober and temperate, and it is of even more consequence to his wife and his children; for it is a hard and cruel fact that in this life of ours the sins of the man are often visited most heavily upon those whose welfare should be his one special care."—President Roosevelt to the Miners at Wilkesbarre, Pa.

FEW BANK FAILURES

Of the Past Year Due Largely to Excessive Loans.

Bankers' President Recommends Changes In Banking Laws.

Washington, Oct. 11.—The thirty-first annual convention of the American Bankers' association was opened in the new National theater here today with more than 2,000 members present. Standing during the invocation of the Rev. Dr. McKim, the bankers repeated the words of the Lord's prayer at its conclusion. Welcoming addresses were made by John Joy Edson, president of the local bankers' association, and Commissioner MacFarland of the district government. The bankers applauded the mention of President Roosevelt's name as signifying civic honesty. Responding to the welcome, President E. F. Swinney of the association declined the "keys of the city" on behalf of his brother bankers, to keep their reputations inviolate should things be missing after they had gone. Mr. Swinney said:

We have cause to congratulate ourselves upon the abundant evidence that the past year has been, in the main, marked by prosperity in all lines of business, and comparatively few bank failures have occurred. All such periods have, however, produced a feeling of over-confidence and lead to the floating of unsound industrial enterprises. The few bank failures of the past year are mostly traceable to excessive loans made to such enterprises or their promoters. The present statutory provisions of the national banking act limiting loans to any one individual firm or corporation to 10 per cent of the capital stock of the lending bank seem to be inadequate. I would recommend a change in the banking laws permitting banks to loan one-tenth of their combined capital and surplus to one individual, firm or corporation, and provide suitable penalties for any bank violating the law. At the same time I would recommend that any funds passed to surplus be reported to the comptroller of the currency, and be not thereafter allowed to be in any way impaired, under the same penalties and conditions as now prescribed for impairment of capital stock. These amendments would tend to remove the incentive to excess loans and also provide a larger loaning power to the banks. Similar provisions in state laws could and doubtless would be enacted. A much more serious abuse lies in the not infrequent acts of managing officers of banks making large discounts to themselves out of the bank's funds. It is an observable fact that in a great number of bank failures there have been found among their assets the worthless notes of high officers of the bank, for large loans—frequently without any security at all, or with "straw" security, which proved to be absolutely worthless.

This is a most flagrant and reprehensible violation of law, to say nothing of business ethics. It is the essence of personal dishonesty. It is a wanton disregard of the fundamental conceptions that such officers are the chosen guardians of a trust fund. It opens wide the door to peculation and fraud, and it is a travesty upon legitimate banking. We should urge congress to deal rigorously with these abuses by pronouncing them as felonies, with extreme pains and penalties; and we should urge this association and the State Bankers' associations to take this matter before their respective legislatures, so as to compel protection where there is wanting official integrity and a proper sense of propriety.

On the ever present question of the country's currency system, this association spoke at San Francisco two years ago. We all agree that "quality" and not "quantity" comes first. Largely through the influence of our association "quality" has been forever assured. No currency in the world rests on a more firm and solid foundation today than does ours. On the question of "quantity" your voice will be no less potent and eventually decisive.

Financiers differ as to the proper methods of assuring at all times a currency ample but not redundant, elastic but not capable of ulterior manipulation. "Asset currency" and "emergency currency" are terms not yet capable of exact definition. It has been said that "fools often rush in where angels fear to tread." In considering the question let us not emulate the former nor arrogate to ourselves the wisdom of the latter, but as conservative, patriotic business men may we solve the question aright and having once made up our minds have the courage to enforce our convictions.

Interest was manifested in the annual report of Secretary James R. Branch, presented at the conclusion of the address of President Swinney.

The convention enthusiastically adopted a resolution thanking President Roosevelt for his action in bringing about peace between Russia and Japan.

Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury, was then introduced. Secretary Shaw was forced to acknowledge a rousing reception at the conclusion of his remarks.

The report of the treasurer was submitted and showed receipts and disbursements of $236,125, and a balance on hand of $142,674.

The report of the standing protective committee then was read.

The report of the executive committee was partly received by the convention, but its reading was suspended in order that Frank A. Vanderlip might address the assemblage.

COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN

President Taking Interest In Probable Changes In Senate.

Doing What He Can to Strengthen Hands of Friends.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Oct. 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—Chairmanships of at least thirty senate committeees, regular and select, will be changed when the Thirty-ninth congress meets in December next. Already many of the members of the upper branch of congress have been casting about to ascertain what other members desire in the way of committee chairmanships, so that they may take advantages of the knowledge thus gained for their own personal use. These inquiries, so far in advance of the meeting of congress, have had a tendency to focus the spot light on the reorganization of the senate committees, for it is generally conceded that in the upper body will come the supreme fight for many of the principles for which the president irrevocably stands.

As to these inquiries regarding chairmanships and chief committee places, the president, it is understood, has had full knowledge, and appreciating that there is a strong minority in the senate against many of the questions he will discuss in his forthcoming message, he has, as quietly as the senators, been looking after chairmanships with a view of helping his side when the battle royal is on.

One thing seems certain, when the curtain rolls up on the Fifty-ninth congress, that President Roosevelt will know where his friends are, and by the same reasoning will know where to put his finger on his opponents.

In view of the fact that the president has already commenced to enquire from his senatorial visitors as to the make-up of committees in the upper body, it has directed attention to the large number of chairmanships to be filled, larger than in any previous congress since the last Cleveland administration.

The committees that will have a new head, from the most conservative estimate are: Agricultural, audit and control of the contingent expenses of the senate; Canadian relations; census; claims; coast and insular survey; education and labor; engrossed bills; examine the several branches of the civil service; fisheries; geological survey; Indian affairs; Indian depredations; interoceanic canals; irrigation and reclamation of arid lands; judiciary; military affairs; mines and mining; Pacific railroads; patents; public buildings and grounds; railroads; transportation routes to the seaboard; university of the United States. These are the standing committees of the senate. Changes in the select committees, which were created to give every member of the majority a chairmanship and to take care of the leaders of the minority, will occur in the following committees: Examination and disposition of documents; industrial expositions; the Potomac river front at Washington; investigate trespasses upon Indian lands; national banks.

In these changes the president recognizes here and there a chance to help a friend and strengthen himself when help is needful to carry out the principles for which he stands.

No man more appreciates the divisional line between the executive and legislative branches of the government than does President Roosevelt. He has made politics the study of his life. He realizes that to start out boldly to capture the chairmanships in the conservative senate would end in failure, and so he is represented by those who have discussed the matter with him as being only anxious to have workers at the head of committees and not men who will take delight in never holding committee meetings.

The president, it has been represented, has no fear of the house. He believes that on rate legislation the lower body will stand to his views as expressed in his message. As to the upper body, however, there is a problem, and in order therefore to help the cause along it is quietly intimated the president is doing what he can to strengthen the hands of his friends, realizing that while the country is behind in his views, particularly on railroad rates matters there is a decided minority in the senate who do not agree with his position. To strengthen his hands the president is represented as taking this active interest in the reorganization of the senate committee possibly upon the theory that the "man who waits is lost."

The Northern poplar or pepple, of the Northeastern states is coming in for increasing study by the forester and lumberman. Not so very long ago the wood of the pepple was used only for excelsior. Some two or three years ago the pulp manufacturer added it to the list of species of supplying his mill, and is now generally and increasingly used for paper pulp of certain grades throughout the Northeastern states. It is a very rapid growing tree, with a prounced tendency to extend itself on old fields, so that a considerable area of unweeded land, sut-over lands, and burned areas are coming up to a growth of pepple which will figure importantly in the lumbering problems of the regions in which it occurs.

The Forest service has received a large number of applications for advice relative to the management of forest lands containing stands of pepple, and in consequence is making a detailed commercial study of the several species, with special attention to the reproduction, growth rate, market, value, and quality for pulp and excelsior use of each. In addition, the study will keep in view possible fresh uses for the pepple, and ways of preventing the injury of pepple stands from fire.

HAPPENINGS IN THE DAKOTAS

Ingenious Plan of Horse Stealing Discovered By Detectives.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—The horse-stealing sensation of the present generation is believed to be on the point of exposure in the western part of this state and in Montana. It involves many small stockmen, who, under the guise of legitimate business, have concealed their work and acted as the part of rustlers. A banker of Williston, N. D., is said to have been the real head of the business. He has been placed under arrest and is held for trial.

It is stated that hundreds of horses have been stolen and the detectives now have all the details necessary to make the wholesale arrests when the proper time comes. Some of the rustlers have left that section of the West, but the ringleaders are reported to all be under surveillance.

There is an epidemic of runaways among the youngsters of the city. Arlow Embretson and Claude Harrison started to go West and kill Indians. They were overtaken at Mandan by telegrams and arrested. They had tired of school life and Embretson conceived the idea of giving street exhibitions in tumbling and dancing and the Harrison boy was posing as his manager.

Two other boys, Breyer and Jacobson, took the Great Northern and so far have avoided arrest. They were about the same age and found school life too slow after their long vacation.

A divorce has been granted Mrs. Cox from Marvin E. Cox, the former proprietor of a magnetic healing establishment here, who has just been located in Seattle after a mysterious disappearance. Desertion was named as the cause.

The indictment finders in the United States court have adjourned after making a final report last night. The last case considered was that of Banker Erickson of Minot, whose institution was recently closed.

United States court officials were astonished Tuesday by a plea of guilty being entered in the case of Joseph Plante. The defendant had sold Florida water to Indians, which caused nine fatalities. Analysis showed that the liquid contained wood alcohol. It was expected Plante would make a big fight and the government had spent some time working up the case.

Two indictments were returned against J. A. Erickson, president of the defunct Minot National bank. On being arraigned, pleas of not guilty were entered.

Milnor—Milnor has experienced a real Carry Nation episode. The wife of a business man learned that her husband was in the interior of a blind pig in a drunken stupor, and she at once armed herself with a club, broke in every light of glass in the front, forced her way in through a window, beating the proprietor soundly with the club and took her husband home with the help of a bystander.

The Sargent county teachers' institute is in session at this place under the direction of Superintendent A. M. Simpson.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Vale—According to reports there was a fire at the ranch of William Waddell, near the Moreau river, which resulted in the burning of a number of barns and sheds. The fire is said to have been caused by a shot from a small rifle which was fired by Waddell in an attempt to kill a snake lying in the manger.

Yankton—A strange young man, who, in his ravings, talks of spending four years under Mayor Bookwalter of Indianapolis, attempted suicide in the jail here by hanging himself to the bars by his necktie. He was in custody, supposed to be drunk. He was revived, but has not yet been identified.

The Nineteenth Century club, the leading literary society of the city, has taken the initiative against the habit of spitting, and will attempt to pass an anti-spitting ordinance through the city council. The club will endeavor to establish a public rest room, to be maintained at public cost.

The club has just opened the year, and one of its first acts was to withdraw from the State Federation of Women's Clubs, after just joining. The Yankton club has stood for independence and has simply returned to its old opinion, after a brief experience of federation.

Pierre—The state board of regents of education is meeting at Sioux Falls with the heads of all the state normal schools and State Supt. Ramer, to consider the new five-year normal course which has been arranged for the state. Their work will also concern the study courses of the sectarian schools, which are by law placed on an equal footing with the state schools, where the course of study covers the same ground as that pursued in the state schools.

Assistant General Manager Aishton of the North-Western road was here and gave it out that a large force of men would be put to work this week to extend the yard trackage to enable the company to handle the bridge and extension material, which has already begun to arrive.

RESEMBLES FALL OF 1877.

Wild Strawberries Still Bearing In Otter Tail County.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Oct. 11.—C. F. Hanson came in from Jewett lake yesterday and brought with him a nice box of wild strawberries which he had picked on the lake shore on Oct. 8. The berries are fully developed and taste fresh and wholesome.

Corn and tomatoes ripened as never before, and the leaves of the trees are now ripening and falling off without changing to the bright autumn colors, characteristic of this season in ordinary frosty years. Old residents state that they have not seen such a fall as this since the autumn of 1877.

Former Congressman Boen, who was here at that time, describes the weather that year as follows: "The weather this far this fall has been just like the weather in the fall of 1877. That fall and the winter of 1878 were so mild that plowing could be done in every month. I finished my plowing on Dec. 25, 1877, and in January and February I built the second story of my log house. Edward S. Erickson, now of Twin Valley, worked for me much of the winter, and we never used mittens and seldom coats. I hope we are going to have another such winter this year."

BUILDING ACTIVITY

Affecting Supply of Material And Mills Working Overtime.

Never In History Has Lumber Been Quite So Costly.

New York, Oct. 11.—The tremendous and unprecedented activity in building operations in all parts of the country is affecting the supply of all building materials and giving the artisans of the building trades steady work at maximum rates of wages. Wholesale and retail lumber dealers find their stocks greatly depleted, and they are unable to fill many orders that are being received. The mills are working overtime, turning out their full capacity, but cannot supply the demand, and prices are steadily advancing.

Never in the history of the lumber business have prices been so high as they are at present, and higher levels will be reached, new records of prices will soon be established if the demand continues as it has done for the three months last past.

This demand is felt upon all classes of lumber, and from the most crude forms to the finest qualities. The demand comes from the farmers, from the home builders in the cities and the rural districts alike, from the railways in all their varied branches, from wood manufacturers of every kind of ware—yellow and white pine, cypress, spruce, hemlock, oak, walnut, maple, birch, mahogany, cedar, rosewood, ebony, for anything and everything in lumber or in timber form there is a steady, an increasing demand. So it is with cement, structural iron and steel, bricks, sewer pipe, roofing tin and slates, window glass and plumbing supplies—all materials that enter into the manufacture at highest prices, with the most extensive and widely spread demands.

Material men realize that the situation is for them one of profit, and probably of long-continued and steadily growing demand.

The farmers and planters of the country have now the money available from their crops to do business with, and they are improving their farms in the way of buildings of all kinds. They are erecting new houses and new barns, or they are reconstructing and adding to those they already possess.

A gentleman who passed through Texas, Kansas, and traversed Missouri from the western line to the eastern border of that state two weeks ago, informed me that though familiar with the growth of the West, and knowing it in the "boom" years, he was confident that never in the history of any of the three states named had there been as much building in any three years before as there was being done in those states this year. He said that even in the city of St. Louis, where dullness might well be expected after the vast expenditures of the exposition period, and the unusual activities of the two or three preceding years, there was excellent business being done in all branches of trade. This, being such a contrast with the Chicago situation after the 1893 exposition in that city, emphasizes the changed industrial and financial conditions since 1893.

It must comfort Chicagoans that it is now demonstrated that their slump after their fair was not from local conditions, but from general bad times brought on by changing the basis of payments upon all contracts. Gold and silver were obnoxious to the men who wanted gold as the only basis, so they changed existing contracts by legislation, produced bad times, ruined millions of their countrymen, and when they have completed their scheme, fortunately for the people en masse, gold is being dug up every month and every year in twice the value that silver is being produced. Chicago, unfortunately for her, had her boom just before money was made scarce by the so-called gold basis legislation. St. Louis had her fair and consequent activity in the midst of an era of expansion of the currency, and as the expansion still continues, St. Louis has no slump in values or in trade.

To apply the phrase that every Ohio Democrat knows by heart, Chicago had "less money and more misery," St. Louis has "more money and less misery," and the entire state of Missouri is experiencing the truth of the financial doctrines that Bland, Cockrell, Cochran, Stone and others of her sons so ably and faithfully upheld. Plenty of currency is building up the state and making the people happy and prosperous. One of the features of Missouri's advancement is the steady increase of her rural population and the remarkable growth of villages, towns and the smaller cities. The two great cities of St. Louis and Kansas City are keeping full pace with cities of the same classes in other states, but Missouri is becoming like Ohio, to be well filled with enterprising, thriving towns and cities, with populations ranging from 5,000 to 40,000, that in the aggregate counterbalance the influences of the very large cities and from these numerous centers of education, social and business activities there radiated a progressive spirit throughout the state.

Fifteen years ago there was no country on the face of the globe that was so low financially and commercially as the Argentine republic. Business men will readily remember that the disastrous failure of the great firm of Baring Bros. was brought about by the decline of values in Argentina. The firm's interests in Argentina and Argentina securities was so great and the losses so enormous that the entire business of the world received a severe and sudden blow.

Argentina, too, has recovered and is now keeping step with her sister nations in the march of progress and prosperity.

A recent report from that republic states that there appears to be no cessation nor limit to the demand of the farmers of that country for harvesters, binders and all other classes of agricultural implements. Last year's entire stock has been disposed of long ago, and new orders can be readily obtained.

Of course, the agricultural machine manufacturers of Ohio are not only from Argentina and from every part of our own country, but from all quarters of the world will come the orders that will keep busy the shops of Springfield, Columbus, Toledo, Hamilton, Canton, Mansfield and other cities of the Buckeye state, in which the agricultural machine and implements are manufactured.

All classes of labor in the United States have already work at the highest rates of pay ever recorded. Flour, corn meal, cereals of all kinds and the majority of vegetables are lower this year in price than they have been for the last two years. Ham, bacon and all pork products are much cheaper, while beef and mutton are some less than they have been during the period of time named.

Our workingmen are, therefore, getting maximum wages, with cost of living considerably reduced, and the savings banks of the country will soon attest to the results in their showing of increased deposits.

Alvin H. Saunders, chairman of the American Reciprocal Tariff league, from data received from Germany late, made this statement: "While our markets (United States) are glutted with cattle for which there is no adequate outlet a meat famine of alarming proportions is stirring the entire German Empire. Nearly 700 butcher shops in twenty-eight German cities of over 100,000 population have been forced into bankruptcy by this meat famine. The consumption of horse flesh in German cities has increased four fold."

It is not strange, therefore, that people of all nations flock to the United States, where peace and security reside, where plenty and prosperity abide; where wages are high and work is readily obtained. Contentment surely should be with our people under these beneficent conditions.

The ceremony will be performed in St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church, near Ashbourne, Saturday, Oct. 28, at 12:30 o'clock. The granddaughter of the financier will become a bride in the church founded by the financier himself, and her uncle, Rev. Henry Cooke of Warren, Ohio, will assist. Rev. J. A thousand invitations have been issued for the wedding. A reception will follow the ceremony, at Fildon, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Barney, the bride's parents.

FIRMNESS IN COPPER

Big Producing Interests Striving to Prevent a Runaway Market.

Walker Looks For Big Bull Movement in the Shares.

Walker reports the price of copper as continuing firm as that producing interests are bending their energies toward preventing a runaway market. Walker also is of the opinion that copper stocks are in for a bull market of large porportions and continuing over several months. His letter reviewing last week is as follows:

"Copper continues very firm. Lake and electrolytic are selling at 16½ to 16¾ cents per pound. While it is now generally conceded that considerable sales of the best grade of Lake have been made quite recently at 17 cents per pound for immediate delivery can be sold at almost any price up to 17 cents. Nearly all of the business now being done is for November and December deliveries, and prices run from 16½ to ¾ cents. No better index to the market can be had than the report of the Greene Consolidated company that during September it sold its output of that month for November delivery at an average of 16.60 cents per pound. This company's copper is refined electrolytically, and is not ready for consumption until about two months after the ore is smelted. In this company's report is found, therefore, conclusive evidence that present price of copper is above rather than below 16½ cents.

"A producer of Lake copper says: 'I have sold 600,000 pounds of copper for delivery next year at 16 cents per pound. This is to be delivered, 100,000 pounds in each of the first six months of the year, carrying the contract up to June. This was done as a sort of hedge. I could have sold more on the same basis, but I prefer to take care of my regular customers. This transaction should make it plain that there are some people at least who have confidence in the future stability of copper prices.'

"The largest dealers in copper are not encouraging consumers to buy supplies for next year. Producing and selling interests have not abandoned their efforts to prevent a runaway market. They are known to privately express fear that the price of copper may go temporarily to a higher level than it has yet reached; but all consumers with a reasonable quantity of copper at going prices. It is the consensus of trade opinion that the average price of copper during the first six months of next year will be at least 16 cents per pound. Few care to extend their predictions beyond that time, however, as too much depends on business conditions.

"A careful investigation of the low quotations and bearish reports put out recently in New York develops the fact that there are certain people who might be financially interested in having actual market conditions misrepresented. While it cannot be stated positively that the misinterpretation of market conditions was intentional and that it was prompted by mercenary motives, it is certain that there has been misrepresentation. There is a great deal of bitter feeling in the trade as a result, and the publications referred to have lost their previous standing as authorities on the copper metal market.

"So far as can be learned there is not an iota of basis for all the current talk about resales of copper bought long ago for Chinese account, or for the claims that copper is now being shipped from China to Europe. Some of the dealers who were excuting the heavy buying orders for China bought small speculative lots of the metal on their own account in anticipation of the coming advance in prices. These speculators have sold, and it may possibly be that their sales have been interpreted as Chinese selling. There is no other excuse that can be brought forward by the metal market bears.

Foreign business conditions are good and give promises of being much better in the near future. There will continue to be a big foreign market for copper. Chinese interests will probably be a factor in this market again. They are now making inquiries for a large lot of copper for shipment the first of the year.

Exports of copper during the first nine months of this year aggregated 188,751 long tons. This compared with 179,099 tons shipped in the corresponding months of last year. The largest previous export year was 1902, when shipments for the entire twelve months amounted to only 164,451 long tons. Of the 17,780 tons of copper exported during September 1,755 tons went to the United Kingdom, 2,572 to France, 4,521, to Germany, 4,830 to Holland, 120 to Belgium, 1,1187 to Austria, 695 to Italy, 1,295 to Russia, 908 to China and Japan and 87 tons to sundry other countries.

COPPER SHARES.

"The action of the market this week has been such as to confirm the belief held by many of the best judges of copper share speculation that we are only in the initial stages of the biggest kind of a bull movement. It is recalled that the 'Lawson disaster advertising' little more than 'made dents in the market,' each setback being allowed by a gradual advance of prices to a new high level. Wednesday of this week was a selling day, and the copper closed very heavy. To the surprise of almost everybody, however, there was no liquidation on Thursday morning, and prices rallied easily. A market that acts this way always gives the day-to-day trading element confidence, and growing activity naturally results.

"I have personally interviewed a majority of the leading copper men of New York this week, and I find that almost every one of them is buying or holding copper stock at the present level of prices. This fact, it seems to me, is the strongest possible evidence of their confidence in the general situation. Among the copper producing, selling and consuming interests, however, such stocks as Amalgamated, Anaconda, Calumet & Hecla, Copper Range, Greene, Mohawk, Osceola, Quincy, Utah and Wolverine are most favored. The big speculation in the low priced stocks of copper mining prospects is being carried on by a different class of people. It seems to me that the best policy for holders of those stocks, that have recently multiplied in price to follow for the present, at least, is to sell them and put the proceeds into the stock of more fully established copper mining companies, such, for instance, as Copper Range, Utah, Greene, Anaconda, Quincy, Osceola, Ahmeek, St. Mary's Mineral Land, Bingham, Centennial, Granby, Michigan and Mass.

"It is quite possible that the stronger tone of the money market may check the activity of the coppers for a short time, but this should occasion no uneasiness. Money will soon be plentiful again, and those who get frightened and sell their coppers on reactions may be unable to get them back except at an advance. There is every reason for the belief that the bull market will continue throughout the coming winter. Conditions were never before so favorable to a high range of prices as they are now."

HEARINGS ADJOURNED

Death of Speaker Nixon Causes Break In Investigation.

New York, Oct. 11.—The sessions of the insurance investigating committee were terminated for the week at the adjournment yesterday, because of the death of S. Fred Nixon, speaker of the assembly of the legislature of New York at his home in Westfield.

President McCurdy was on the stand all of the afternoon session. He detailed the manner of his entrance into the insurance business. He practiced law for nine years and was counsel for the Widows and Orphans Benefit Life Insurance company, of which C. H. Raymond was the president. When the company went out of business, Mr. McCurdy went with the Mutual Life.

Toward the close of the session Mr. McCurdy made the startling statement that an insurance company was not an institution founded to make money for the policyholders, but was, or should be, a great philanthropic enterprise founded to increase and spread its benefits over the entire earth.

"There has been a great mistake made," he said, "about the real province of life insurance companies in these latter years. People have been led to believe that the main purpose was to make money for its policyholders. In my view that is not the purpose of such companies. They are eleemosynary. When a man insures in a company he should take into consideration the fact that he has entered a great philanthropic concern that is in duty bound to spread itself, even though this growth prevents him from realizing as much as he expected."

HEARST ACCEPTS THE NOMINATION

Of Municipal Ownership League For Mayor of New York.

New York, Oct. 11.—William Randolph Hearst last night made public a letter addressed to Judge Samuel Seabury of the Municipal Ownership league, accepting the league's recent tender of a nomination for mayor of New York.

The municipal convention of the organization will be held Thursday but Mr. Hearst was offered the nomination at a meting some days ago. His acceptance assures three mayoralty tickets in the field this fall—the Democratic, Republican and Municipal Ownership league.

In his letter of acceptance Mr. Hearst said in part:

"I have felt absolutely unable and unwilling to accept the nomination you have offered me, but I have at length decided to defer to your wishes and not shirk a task that presents itself to me as a public duty.

"The situation in this city is so grave and the condition of the public in the face of organized bossism is apparently so helpless that no man has a right to consider anything else, least of all his private affairs or personal inclination."

The letter of Mr. Hearst was read at a meeting of the committee of seventeen last night. Former Senator John Ford was agreed upon for comptroller and James Phelps Stokes for president of the board of aldermen.

The committee announced that Mr. Ford had agreed to accept and that Mr. Stokes had tentatively signified his acceptance.

CLERK SKIPS WITH $100,000

Big Bundle of Money Stolen From Adams Express at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Oct. 11.—The startling discovery was made late yesterday that the Adams Express company has been victimized to the extent of $100,000, supposedly through the peculations of an employe. The following statement of the affair is given to the Associated Press for publication:

"At 4:15 p. m. Monday, Oct. 9, a bank of Pittsburg, Pa., delivered to the Adams Express company at their office in Pittsburg a package of currency containing $100,000, which was consigned to a bank in Cincinnati, Ohio.

"This package was received and receipted for by Edward George Cunliffe, who was then acting in the place of the regular money clerk, who was ill.

"Cunliffe left the office at the usual time Monday evening, and yesterday morning when he failed to report for duty a hurried examination was made of his department, and it was learned that about $1,000 of funds entrusted to his care were missing. General Agent Hinder of the Adams Express company immediately called in detectives and placed the matter in their hands. Later developments brought to light the fact that in addition to the $1,000 missing, the bank package containing the $100,000 had not been received at the money forwarding office at the union station, this city.

"Inquiries made at his residence showed that Cunliffe arrived at home at the customary time Monday evening, and after changing his clothes, bade his family good-bye, saying to his wife that he was going out for the evening, and nothing further has been heard from him.

"Cunliffe has been employed by the Adams Express company since March 1, 1904, and bore a good reputation. He was methodical, accurate and an excellent clerk.

"Edward George Cunliffe is described as 35 years old, looks to be 40; 5 feet 7 inches tall; weighs 170 pounds; medium build; dark brown hair, heavily mixed with gray; could raise a very heavy beard; has blue eyes.

"When last seen he wore a dark blue double-breasted sack suit, a black derby hat, turned collar and a black bow tie. He wears a silver ring with an acorn design. He is an inveterate cigarette smoker, and the second finger of his right hand is badly discolored with nicotine. Cunliffe is afflicted with what is known as the 'cigarette cough.'"

A warrant has been issued charging Cunliffe with larceny.

Full of Tragic Meaning.

Are these lines from J. H. Simmons of Casey, Iowa. Think what might have resulted from his terrible cough if he had not taken the medicine about which he writes: "I had a fearful cough, that disturbed my night's rest. I tried everything, but nothing would relieve it, until I took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which completely cured me." Instantly relieves and permanently cures all throat and lung diseases; prevents grip and pneumonia. At all druggists; guaranteed; 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

We Will Buy

You a Bottle of Liquozone, and Gitve It to You to Try.

We make few claims of what Liquozone will do. And no testimonials are published to show what it has done. We prefer that each one should learn its power by a test. That is the quickest way to convince you.

So we offer to buy the first bottle and give it to you to try. Compare it with common remedies; see how much more it does. Don't cling to the old treatments blindly. The scores of diseases which are due to germs call for a germicide. Please learn what Liquozone can do.

What Liquozone Is.

The virtues of Liquozone are derived solely from gases. The formula is sent to each user. The process of making requires large apparatus, and from 8 to 14 days' time. It is directed by chemists of the highest class. The object is to so fix and combine the gases as to carry into the system a powerful tonic-germicide.

Contact with Liquozone kills any form of disease germ, because germs are of vegetable origin. Yet to the body Liquozone is not only harmless, but helpful in the extreme. That is its main distinction. Common germicides are poison when taken internally. That is why medicine has been so helpless in a germ disease. Liquozone is exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying; yet no disease germ can exist in it.

We purchased the American rights to Liquozone after thousands of tests had been made with it. Its power had been proved, again and again, in the most difficult germ diseases. Then we offered to supply the first bottle free in every disease that required it. And over one million dollars have been spent to announce and fulfill this offer.

The result is that 11,000,000 bottles have been used, mostly in the past two years. Today there are countless cured ones, scattered everywhere, to tell what Liquozone has done.

But so many others need it that this offer is published still. In late years, science has traced scores of diseases to germ attacks. Old remedies do not apply to them. We wish to show those sick ones—at our cost—what Liquozone can do.

Where It Applies.

These are the diseases in which Liquozone has been most employed. In these it has earned its widest reputation. In all of these troubles we supply the first bottle free. And in all—no matter how difficult—we offer each user a two-months' further test without the risk of a penny.

RHEUMATISM

A NERVE-RACKING TORTURE
AN AFFLICTION OFTEN INHERITED.

No other disease causes such wide-spread suffering as Rheumatism. It is a nerve-racking and excrutiating torture, and so thoroughly dominates the system that its victims are complete slaves to pain. It afflicts the very young as well as those of middle life and old age, showing that it is not only an acquired disease, but also a hereditery trouble.

Rheumatism is usually brought on by indigestion, Stomach troubles, weak Kidneys, torpid Liver and general sluggish condition of the system. The natural refuse matter of the body, which should be carried off by the usual avenues of nature are left in the system to sour, and form uric acid and other irritating poisons, which are absorbed into the blood. This vital stream then becomes sour and unfit for nourishing the body, and as it circulates to the different parts, the poisons and acids with which it is loaded come in contact with the muscles, nerves, tissues and bones. The sharp, biting pains commence, the nervous system breaks down from the want of rich, pure blood; the skin becomes feverish, swollen and tender, and every part of the body throbs and twitches with pain. As the disease progresses, the bones are coated with an acid substance, and chalk-like deposits collect in the joints, drying up the lubricating oils and seriously interfering with their working and movements.

Gentlemen: For over four years I suffered with Rheumatism. The Rheumatism first troubled me in my hip, then spread to my shoulders, head, and finally all over my body. I became such an invalid that neither my family nor friends thought it possible for me to survive long. I had tried so many prescriptions given me by physicians (which contained so much potash), that my stomach was ruined, and there seemed no hope for recovery. I had been reading in the newspapers of S. S. S. and decided to try it, and to my joy, commenced to get relief before the second bottle was gone. After using S. S. S. a short while I was an entirely different man; I felt that I had a new lease on life.

Mt. Sterling, Ky. B. M. FRISBIE.

One may be born with a pre-disposition or tendency to Rheumatism, because like all blood diseases it can be transmitted from parent to child. With some it is manifested early in life, while others who inherit the disease feel no effects of it during younger, vigorous years, but when middle life is reached or passed, and all the vital forces begin to weaken and decline, this taint, which has lain dormant in the blood since birth, takes possession of the system and the latter years are made miserable by the tortures of Rheumatism.

The fact that the changes from warm to cold, or damp, foggy weather, or some slight exposure, increase the pains and aches of Rheumatism is not proof that it is due to outside causes. RHEUMATISM IS AN INTERNAL INFLAMMATION. The entire system is fired with the poisonous acids, and the changes in the weather are the matches which set the circulation aflame and bring on the distressing symptoms of the disease. Rheumatism has a well-laid foundation, and requires constitutional treatment. Plasters, blisters, liniments, etc., can never cure the disease; they relieve the pain and give temporary comfort to the sufferer, but do not reach the real trouble, which is rooted and grounded in the blood.

S. S. S. is the proper treatment for Rheumatism. It goes down into the blood and attacks the disease at its head, and by driving out every atom of the poison and strengthening and enriching the blood, cures Rheumatism permanently. When the blood has been freshened and purified by this great remedy, it circulates to the different parts, dissolving and carrying out the acids and irritating poisons responsible for the disease. Then the pains cease, the muscles regain their elasticity, the joints are limbered up and the pain-racked sufferer is completely restored to health. S. S. S. builds up every part of the system by its fine tonic ingredients and carries to the weak, sour blood, health-giving properties. S. S. S. reaches inherited as well as acquired cases, and completely removes the taint from the blood. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice desired furnished, without charge, to all who write.

IMPORTANT TESTIMONY IN THE GASSER CASE

C. R. Rust Explains Attitude of Wholesale Houses Toward Grocers' Combine.

Burt Holcomb, Secretary of Association, Questioned as to Its Methods.

At the afternoon session if the hearing of the suit of M. M. Gasser against the Grocers' association in Judge Cant's room in district court, yesterday, three important witnesses were heard, the more important being Burt Holcomb, secretary of the Grocers' association, and C. R. Rust, treasurer and credit man of the Stone-Ordean-Wells company. These two were put on the stand by the plaintiff and both gave important testimony.

Mr. Holcomb testified as to the methods pursued in case a member of the association was expelled and declared that the wholesalers and jobbers were notified of the expulsion of members as well as of the admittance of new members only in order that the request of the wholesalers should be respected. He declared that there is nothing in the rules of the association looking toward the boycotting of an expelled member. His testimony will probably establish a new phrase in the city. He declared that M. M. Gasser was expelled because of "unmercantile conduct" and defined the phrase by explaining that Mr. Gasser cut card prices.

Mr. Rust spoke of the boycott rule observed by the jobbers in the case of expelled members of the Grocers' association. He said that there has never been a written agreement or verbal one for that matter, but that the jobbers have always refused to sell goods to an expelled member of the Grocers' association from, as he termed it, "motives of policy." Asked whether or not the grocers had ever threatened the jobbers with refusal of trade in case they sold goods to expelled members, Mr. Rust testified as Judge Cant insisted on knowing, that there had been no official threat but that it was a matter of "common talk," among the jobbers and the retail dealers in groceries that those who sold to expelled members would be boycotted. Mr. Rust also asserted that since his company has shown a disposition to favor settling the case between Mr. Gasser and the Grocers' association, it has been boycotted by Henry Felz, whose account with Stone-Ordean-Wells has dropped from about $1,500 a month to about $50; and by J. G. Ostby, 23 East Fourth street; P. A. Sjosellius, 1016 West First street; W. B. Logan, 701 East Fourth street; and several others whose names he could not give off hand.

Objections were frequent and the greater number of them were overruled by Judge Cant. The court took a considerable part in the examination of William Rust in order to clear matters up when they became tangled.

J. A. Sutton, formerly of the Duluth Wholesale Supply company, was the first witness of the afternoon. He had been twice expelled from the Grocers' association and testified that he had been refused goods from jobbers during his expulsion. On cross-examination, Mr. Fryberger for the defense, inquired into witness' changes in business which proved to be numerous in fourteen years; and then sought to inquire into Mr. Sutton's credit, evidently with the object of showing that he had been refused goods because his credit was poor. He asked Mr. Sutton if it was not true that during a large part of his business career his credit had been poor as he was trying to do a large business on insufficient capital. Mr. Sutton said it was not true, but that for a short time he was embarrassed. Objections were made by the plaintiff to the questions but the court allowed them to go in. On re-direct examination Mr. Sutton testified that he had been expelled from the association because he had cut below card prices in selling goods.

Burt Holcomb, secretary of the Grocers' association and local manager for the Fleischman Yeast company, took the stand after Mr. Sutton. He testified that the association keeps records, and that they are in his possession, and he can produce them. He was requested to bring these records and a copy of the constitution and by-laws of the association to court today, and agree to do so. On being questioned as to the relations of the Grocers' association with the jobbers of the city, Mr. Holcomb testified that there is no understanding, nor has there been, with the jobbers as to refusing to sell goods to expelled members of the association. Asked as to whether he, or not he, called Mr. Rust's attention to the fact that he was still selling goods to Mr. Gasser after the latter was expelled, Mr. Holcomb replied that he did not think he had.

In the matter of Sutton's expulsion, Mr. Holcomb said that Mr. Sutton had been expelled for "unmercantile conduct," and explained the statement by saying that Mr. Sutton issued circulars with his prices for certain goods and compared them with the figures of the other stores. Mr. Holcomb was asked if the constitution and by-laws of the association prohibited members selling except at the list prices, but Mr. Fryberger objected, on the ground that the constitution and by-laws are the best evidence of that; and the objection was sustained. He was then asked if the constitution and by-laws defined "unmercantile conduct," and he replied that there is nothing except in the preamble, and then added that there is nothing in the present by-laws.

"Well,, was there at the time Sutton and Gasser were expelled?" asked J. B. Arnold, Mr. Gasser's attorney.

"I don't know," said Mr. Holcomb. "The present constitution and by-laws is all the book I have."

Mr. Holcomb testified that when a new member was admitted to the association, or a member expelled therefrom, he always notified the jobbers, either by telephone, in person, or by postal card. Mr. Arnold inquired if there is anything in the rules of the association requiring the secretary to give such notice to the jobbers. Mr. Holcomb replied that there was nothing in the constitution, and no requirement for such action by the secretary, except such as came up at a meeting of the association, or at a meeting of the board of directors.

"The duties of the secretary, then, are unwritten?" asked Mr. Arnold, and Mr. Holcomb assented. A postal card, containing a notice of the expulsion of P. J. Hartnet, and which read: "Scratch Mr. P. J. Hartnet off the list," was then offered in evidence, Mr. Holcomb having identified his signature. The defense objected, on the ground that it was immaterial, but the objection was overruled.

"Are there any instructions of any kind in the rules of the association," asked Mr. Arnold, "for the sending of such notices?"

"I can't answer that said Mr. Holcomb, "I took my instructions from the Grocers' association. It is probably in the minutes."

Mr. Holcomb then identified a list of prices of the association and it was put in evidence after an objection by the defense had been overruled.

The witness was asked what was the penalty for the cutting of prices on the list and replied that the penalty was left to the board of directors of the association, it being optional with that body. He also testified that the cutting of list prices was "unmercantile conduct."

"Whom did you notify of the expulsion of M. M. Gasser in July, 1905?" witness was asked.

"All of the wholesale houses."

"Only the jobbers of this city?"

"Yes, sir, only those of this city, and the Twohy-Elmon Mercantile company of Superior."

"What was the object of notifying all of the wholesalers of Mr. Gasser's expulsion?"

"The only object was that the jobbers had asked to be notified in such cases."

"Was there no other reason?"

"No, sir, there was no other reason."

"Why did the jobbers want to know of such expulsions?"

"I don't know."

"No resolution was passed by the grocers' association to that effect, was there?"

"No, sir."

"What jobbers asked to be notified of such cases?"

"Stone-Ordean-Wells, Gowan-Peyton-Twohy, the Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company, the Twohy-Elmon Mercantile company, H. F. Davis & Company, the Duluth Universal Milling company, Gregory, Cook & Company, the Knudsen-Ferguson company, the Fitzsiminons-Derrig company and the Thomas Thompson company."

The witness was then asked who in the various companies named had made the request. In some cases he mentioned names and in other cases could not remember. Most of the requests he said, had been made a long time ago and he could not well remember so far back. He afterwards added that Mr. Coventry, the manager of the A. Booth Packing company, had also made such a request.

Mr. Holcomb was asked if he refused to sell Mr. Gasser yeast while under the ban of expulsion two years ago and replied:

"No, I don't think he asked for any."

"You have a man, I believe, who drives a wagon around the city selling the yeast to retailers. Did you notify him not to call on Gasser."

"I don't think I did."

"Do you know of any reason why you should have done so?"

"No, sir."

"Mr. Holcomb, wasn't there an understanding between the Grocers association and the jobbers that the latter were not to sell to an expelled member of the association."

"No, sir; there never was at any time."

"Why couldn't Sutton get goods when he was expelled?"

An objection was made here but was overruled and Mr. Holcomb answered.

"I don't know."

"Has there been any other reason than that of 'unmercantile conduct' for expulsion?"

"I can't recall any."

"Do you recollect at any time any person coming to you to fix up a deal, who did not want to join the association and was sent to you by some of the wholesalers to see if he could fix up a deal with you?"

Mr. Fryberger objected to this question. He said that it was patent that the wholesalers were more anxious to have grocers join the association than the grocers themselves were anxious to join, because of the benefit of the credit system. Mr. Fryberger's objection was that the question specified nobody, and it was sustained.

Mr. Arnold then asked the same question but named the person referred to in the former question as one Salome. Mr. Holcomb acknowledged that Salome came to him on such a mission.

"Did he say that he didn't have the money for joining the association?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did he say he could not buy goods without being in the association?"

"No, sir."

"How was the matter fixed up?"

"It was agreed that Salome would pay $5 down and $5 a month until he had paid up."

"Do you know who sent him to you?"

"No, sir."

"Isn't it a fact that retailors could not buy goods without being members of the association?"

"No, sir."

"Can you tell me of any dealers in the city who are not members of the association?"

"Yes, sir; Mike Amatuzio of Eleventh avenue west and Second street carries about $1,800 or $2,000 worth of groceries and does not belong to the association."

"Any others?"

"Yes; there is a man at Twentieth avenue west and Superior street—I can't think of his name; Johnson at Twentieth avenue west and Third street; and Charlie Summers across from the brewery; and some others."

"Isn't it true that they keep candy and cigars stores."

"They carry groceries."

Something of a dispute followed as to whether these should be classed as grocers or cigar and candy dealers and was not settled satisfactorily. The questioning then proceeded.

"Are there any instances where men have been obliged to quit because they were not members of the association?"

"No, sir."

"Are the five mentioned the only ones not in the association?"

"I can't say."

"Are not these principally in the cigar and candy business?"

The dispute resumed with no better success than before.

"As a matter of fact there are no strictly grocery stores in the city not members of the association, are there?"

This was objected to and overruled, and Mr. Holcomb again cited the case of Mike Amatuzio and was asked if Amatuzio delivers goods. He said that he does; as to the others, they do not have delivery wagons, but may deliver goods, for all he knows.

He testified that there are about 180 grocery stores in the city at this time, at the time of the commencement of the pending action.

• • •

This finished Mr. Holcomb's testimony, and he was followed by C. R. Rust, treasurer of the Stone-Ordean-Wells company. He was asked if the grocers' association has had much dealing with the Stone-Ordean-Wells company, and said that there was not much dealing direct, but that he had had letters and personal transactions from Mr. Holcomb. He identified the notice with regard to P. J. Hartnet as having been received by him, and when asked if he knew what it signified, he said that it meant that Mr. Hartnet was no longer a member of the grocers' association. Asked what it signified to the jobbers, Mr. Rust replied:

"It was presumed that no jobber would sell to Mr. Hartnet."

He testified further that he began receiving these notices about six or eight years ago, and had a conversation with Mr. Holcomb about Sutton's suspension. Asked as to whether or not his firm still receives such notices as were introduced in evidence, Mr. Rust said that they do not, but that notices of new members or expulsions are given either personally by Mr. Holcomb or by telephone. On direct examination Mr. Rust was asked:

"Have you refused to sell goods to non-members of the association?"

"Yes, sir."

"Name them."

"M. M. Gasser, about a year ago, and to the Duluth Wholesale Supply company, and others."

"Why did you refuse to sell these expelled members goods?"

"For motives of policy."

"Did you understand that your firm would be boycotted if it sold goods to non-members?"

Mr. Fryberger objected strongly to this as leading, and asking a conclusion of the witness, but the objection was overruled. Then Mr. Rust replied:

"I feared that we might."

Mr. Rust was asked if he ever talked with Mr. Holcomb about expelled members, and he replied that he had. Questioned as what took place in such conversations, he said that Mr. Holcomb would call on him in his office and ask him if he had received notice of the expulsion of "so-and-so," and Mr. Rust would reply to whether or not he had. Mr. Holcomb would then suggest that "such-another-house was not selling them any more," meaning of course the expelled members. Mr. Rust was asked if the jobbers had ever been threatened with boycott, but on Mr. Fryberger's objection to this was barred out for that time until it would be less leading.

Mr. Rust was then asked if he had been talked to about Gasser's expulsion by any other jobber. He said he had—by Mr. Knudsen of the Knudsen-Ferguson company. Questioned as to the conversation witness said:

"Knudsen said he thought I had better be careful about selling Gasser any goods. I told him I understood the court's injunction was still on and that we could not yet refuse to sell Mr. Gasser any goods."

Judge Cant from the bench then asked the witness if there was ever directly or indirectly a command or a hint from Holcomb that no more goods should be sold to expelled parties. Mr. Rust replied:

"Not exactly," but went on to explain that when a notice was received from Holcomb that a man has been expelled from the grocers' association, he was sold no more goods. In reply to a question as to whether the man in question was notified of the cessation of sales to him, Mr. Rust said that nobody was notified of the matter; simply the sales stopped.

In reply to another question, Mr. Rust repeated again that, "As a matter of policy we thought it best not to sell to expelled members."

"Did you ever receive from Mr. Holcomb or any member of the Grocers' association," asked Mr. Arnold, "a direct statement that in case you sold expelled members, you would be boycotted?"

The question, which had been barred before, was admitted this time, but did not bring out much, the witness denying that he ever had.

Mr. Rust was questioned as to Mr. Gasser's credit at each time he was expelled from the association, and declared it to be good. He was asked if Gasser's credit was such that it would warrant a jobber to refuse selling him. Mr. Rust replied that he did not know what others thought about it, but he did know that the Stone-Ordean-Wells company is willing to sell Mr. Gasser.

The court then inquired of Mr. Rust why it was presumed that nobody would sell non-members of the Grocers' association. Mr. Rust replied that there was no specified agreement, but that there was a tacit understanding that ex-members should not be sold by the jobbers. The court inquired closely into this understanding among jobbers and Mr. Rust asked leave to make a little broader statement than simple answers. The court directed him to go ahead and elucidate himself and Mr. Rust went on to say that in the beginning the jobbers favored the organization of the Grocers' association for the reason that it was beneficial to the jobers in the matter of credits, and as he put it, "We were helping ourselves when we were helping the retailers to stand together." He said that as to the credit part of it, the jobbers are all in favor of the association now, but matters had proceeded to a point where the jobbers had to obey the retailers, and while there was never a meeting held where such an understanding was arrived at, it was generally understood that in case a jobber sold to an expeleld member of the association, he might look for certain things to follow. Judge Cant asked:

"How do you mean when you say that there was a general understanding? Do you mean that it was common talk?"

"Yes, your honor, it was common talk. That's what I mean."

"Among whom was it common talk?" the court inquired, "Among wholesalers or retailers, or both?"

"It was common talk among both and among the officers of the association."

Mr. Fryberger then took the witness for cross-examination and the first question put was:

"Is it not a fact that no retail grocer asked you not to sell to any other man or grocer?"

"Yes, sir."

"Is it not a fact that no wholesaler ever asked you such a thing either?"

"No; the wholesalers have asked me very frequently."

Asked who, Mr. Rust replied that representatives of Twohy-Elmon in Superior and the Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company of Duluth and others had made such requests.

Mr. Fryberger then sought to inquire into the matter of "common talk," as testified to by the witness when questioned by the court, but did not produce anything new, and then asked the witness if the relations between the Grocers' association and witness' company are not pretty much strained. Mr. Rust denied this.

"Well, isn't it a fact," asked Mr. Fryberger, "that since the commencement of this action you have been losing business?"

"No, sir; on the contrary, our business has increased several thousand dollars a month in the last two or three months."

Mr. Fryberger was trying to show that Mr. Rust was prejudiced in favor of the plaintiff, and proceeded with his questioning.

"You got an opinion, did you not, from Washburn, Bailey & Mitchell as to the matter of selling Mr. Gasser goods?"

"Yes, sir."

"You went up street and showed it to several members of the Grocers' association, didn't you?"

"No, sir, not personally."

"Didn't you go to some of them—to Mr. Folz and Mr. Holcomb and tell them that you thought they had better lay down on this thing?"

"I showed Mr. Folz and Mr. Holcomb the opinion, but offered them no advice."

"Didn't Wright-Clarkson and Gowan-Peyton-Twohy regard the association as a benefit?"

"I presume so."

Haven't you heard that your firm and M. M. Gasser's firm are practically one and the same thing?"

"There is no connection between them."

This answer was stricken out as not a reply to the question given and then Mr. Rust admitted that he had heard the rumor.

"Is it not common talk?"

"Yes, it is common talk among the salesmen of other concerns who use it for a purpose."

Mr. Rust admitted that several parties will not buy from his firm at this time and presumed it was because of this rumor; but later amended his answer by saying that such is not the reason they don't buy. He said he believes the reason is that he is being boycotted is because of the fact that he is not fighting Gasser.

That practically ended Mr. Rust's testimony for the day as it was then nearly 6 o'clock. He will be finished this morning.

A NEGRO KILLS TWO IN CHICAGO

Policeman and Woman the Victims of Colored Man.

Chicago, Oct. 11.—Robert Newcome, colored, ran amuck on the South side last night, and before he was finally captured by the police, he had killed one policeman and a woman and fatally injured another man.

Early last night Newcome went to the house of Mrs. Florence Force, colored, 1255 West Sitxy-first street, and during a quarrel he shot her, killing her instantly. Robert Snow, also colored, who went to the assistance of Mrs. Force, was shot by Newcome and fatally injured.

Newcome, who was intoxicated, then went to his home at 1261 West Sixty-first street, and barricaded himself there. A squad of policemen, who had been summoned, tried to force an entrance to the house, and John Shine, a police officer, was shot and killed by Newcome.

Chief of Police Collins was then notified of the trouble, and Assistant Chief Schuettler and six detectives hurried to the place with rifles. As Assistant Chief Schuettler and his men approached Newcome's hiding place, they were met with a shower of bullets from the negro, who had secured a rifle. All the shots went wild, however, and Schuettler and his men returned the fire. During the fusillade of shots a rush was made on the house and Newcome was captured.

A large crowd attracted by the shots had by this time gathered, and an effort was made to take Newcome away from the police and lynch him. The sight of seven determined men, armed with Winchester rifles, quickly brought about a change in the plans of the mob. Newcome was then hustled into a patrol wagon and hurried from the district.

ABOLITION OF WHISKERS.

If Board of Health Man's Suggestion Is Adopted.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 11.—Dr. J. F. Kennedy, secretary of the Iowa state board of health, has gone to Washington, D. C., to attend the general international sanitary conference as representative of the United States, having been appointed by General Surgeon Wyman of the United States public health and marine corps service.

At this assembly, which is called especially to consider the bubonic plague and yellow fever, Dr. Kennedy will champion the abolishment of beards in territories where there is infection.

He became quite widely known recently by urging all Iowa doctors to shave their faces clean. He maintains germs can be carried from patients to well persons in beards.

Dr. Kennedy, who is a man of 60 years, practices his preaching, and has a smoothly shaven face.

Can't be perfect health without pure blood. Burdock Blood Bitters makes pure blood. Tones and invigorates the whole system.

STORK IS GENEROUS

To This Indiana Couple---Twins Once, Then Triplets.

Evansville, Ind., Oct. 11.—Triplets have been born to the wife of Frank Wilhelm, living on the Evansville and Princeton traction line, near this city. Two of the babies are boys and one a girl, and Wilhelm, who is a laboring man, will probably name the little ones Theodosia, Teddy and Roosevelt, in honor of the president. President Roosevelt will also be notified of the birth of the triplets.

Twenty months ago Mrs. Wilhelm presented her husband with twins. The neighbors of Wilhelm gave the family a surprise party yesterday and took the triplets enough clothes to last a year or two.

LIFE IN ELITE PART OF LONDON

Made Doubly Luxurious By Wonders of Electric Invention.

London, Oct. 11.—The wonders of electrical invention for the household are being shown here in the new apartment houses in the West end. In many of the houses the tenants can "plug in" and obtain electric current for every domestic purpose. In a number of these apartments the curious frills of electrical invention have been introduced so that a woman may curl her hair and start the bacon on the grill with no further exertion than it takes to press a button.

The lazy man heats his shaving water directly in the mug while he strops his razor, and his valet prepares the breakfast in a twinkling.

If it be a cold night the old-fashioned warming pan of Pickwickian fame, but without the fussing of a designing Mrs. Bardell, is brought to a high temperature to drive the lurking rheumatism from the cold sheets.

Heat, and plenty of it, may be obtained in the West end flats to meet all domestic needs, or if a cool breeze is wanted there are fans in every room, regulated to waft an Oriental atmosphere by passing over scented liquid, or the more practical disinfectant may be used by the same process.

In one of the new houses electricians are installing a keyboard which makes it possible for tenants to "ring in" for servants, a cab, a dressmaker, a hair dresser, or to call a policeman or sound an alarm of fire.

Y. M. C. A. Directors Consider General Drawings of New Building.

Structure Will Be Five Stories High, Covering 100 By 140 Feet.

Plans for a five-story building, to cover 100 by 140 feet, and to cost in the neighborhood of $150,000, were submitted to the Y. M. C. A. directors at a meeting last evening in the Y. M. C. A. building on East Superior street.

The plans are merely suggestive drawings of what is desired in the new building for which the association is working. They were prepared by Mr. Bevis, the secretary, who was formerly an architect.

The directors expressed their approval of the plans, and the only question raised was as to whether or not the building called for could be constructed for the amount mentioned.

In the basement of the building will be located a swimming tank 20 by 60 feet with a depth of three feet at one end and eight feet at the other. The general locker rooms will also be located there, with accommodations for 1,250 men. There will also be a Turkish bath, barber shop, casino and bowling alley.

On the first floor will be located the business offices, a large lobby, a business men's club room with 200 lockers, each with a private dressing room, and a large exercise room.

At the rear, on a large mezzanine floor, will be the boys' department quarters, with the general club rooms, secretary's room, and a number of night school class rooms. There will also be a locker room with accommodations for 250 boys.

On a second mezzanine floor immediately above, the gymnasium will be located. It will be 96 feet by 46, and adjoining it will be rooms for the physical director and his assistant, and quarters for the "Star club."

On the second floor of the building, there will be seven large parlors and club rooms, and a large assembly hall seating about 400 people. Over the gymnasium there will also be a running track, eight feet wide, and with twenty-one laps to the mile. The center will be open, giving plenty of air for the gymnasium, the ceiling being a story and a half high.

The third floor will be devoted entirely to the night school work, and the fourth floor to dormitories. On the fifth floor will be located the general dining room, 26 feet by 46 feet, and adjoining it a private dining room, and the kitchen and pantries. The remainder of the floor will be occupied by dormitories.

The plans are simply preliminary, and when the proper time arrives, an architect will be employed to elaborate on them, and prepare the detailed drawings.

WEAR COLUMBIA CLOTHES

THEY ARE THE BEST.

Columbia clothes are made by the foremost wholesale tailors in America. The Stein-Bloch and K. N. F. designers are artists, whose work no local tailor can excel. These makers are among the few who have succeeded so well in the production of high-class garments for men that to stick to your tailor is costly folly. True, you can say, "My tailor made these clothes for me," but you are out a lot of money that you might as well spend for other purposes, and it's a rare case of good luck if you get as well-tailored a garment as we can give you, or as good a fit.

In the East these wholesale tailored suits and overcoats are now worn by men who have large incomes and a larger amount of wisdom than we people of the Northwest, who spend money like sailors. If we could only prevail on some of you Custom-Tailor Men to come in and try on a suit or overcoat at a price which you can well afford to pay, we'd have easy sailing and easy selling. You are "next."

$20 or $25 if you wish. $15 or $18, if you want the best in the land for these prices. $12, $10 and less, if you think it's all you ought to spend for your new Fall Suit or Overcoat.

Brock's Union Label Clothes are sold only at this store.

PRESBYTERY IN SESSION

Duluth District Meeting Being Held at Westminster Church.

Rev. J. M. Swander of Ely Is Elected Moderator.

The Duluth Presbytery began its sessions in Westminster Presbyterian church last evening and will end the meeting today, most of the ministers and delegates going from here to Fergus Falls where the synod will meet. Rev. Jay M. Swander of Ely was elected moderator at last evening's meeting and the retiring moderator, Rev. C. W. Lowrie of Cloquet preached a sermon on "The Authority of Christ."

This morning's meeting began with devotional services led by Rev. C. E. Fulton of Mora and prayer was offered by Rev. S. F. Marsh of Duluth. Rev. Dr. Cleland of Duluth spoke of the insurance scandals now in circulation and said that ministers should insure in the Presbyterian ministers' fund which has no agents and makes no donations to political campaign funds and is run honestly. Dr. Cleland will speak before the synod at Fergus Falls on this matter.

It is likely the sessions will be through by 5 o'clock this evening.

In the matter of the job printers' strike which has been on for a week now, there is little or no change. The printers claim that only one man, an apprentice, has been acquired by the bosses.

Mr. Thwing says that the boss printers here have gotten to the point where they are on easy street again and are no longer pinched.

RAILROADS

WHO LANDED CONTRACT?

Believed McIntosh Bros. Will Build Southeastern Road.

Said to Have Lost Money on the First Contract.

While it is understood the contract for the construction of the Lake Superior & Southeastern railroad, northward from Ladysmith, Wis., to Duluth, has been let, no official announcement of who landed the contract has been made.

The general belief is that McIntosh Bros. & Co., Minneapolis railroad contractors, were successful in getting it. If the contract has really been let, as claimed, there is little doubt that it was awarded to the Minneapolis firm. It has been understood all along that they would be given the work. There are many reasons why this should be. In the first place, the firm has lost money on the contract for building the road south of Ladysmith to Owen, Wis., the division known as the Owen & Northern, or so it is believed, at least.

The season has been a bad one for railroad contractors, all the way through. Conditions in Wisconsin were particularly bad. There was so much rain as to very seriously interfere with and delay the work. The men hired to work on the road were frequently compelled to lay off on account of the weather, and there was much dissatisfaction among them. They were constantly quitting their places and seeking work elsewhere. The contractors found it difficult to keep full crews. The rain also destroyed work that had been done, making it necessary to do it over again. The water was so high along some of the streams that ties piled near the banks were washed away, further delaying the construction work.

In the face of all these obstacles, the McIntosh Bros. company plugged doggedly along with the work, taking advantage of every opportunity to push it ahead, and apparently becoming discouraged at nothing. They had a reputation to sustain. The job, thus far, adds to that reputation rather than detracts from it. It is now hoped that the line will be completed as far as Ladysmith before cold weather puts a stop to the work.

In view of all these circumstances, it is no more than natural that the railroad company should be ready and willing to award the contract for the completion of the line as far as Duluth to the Minneapolis firm, if the bids were reasonable, thus giving the company an opportunity to retrieve its losses. Another season as backward as the present one is not at all likely, and labor conditions next year will probably be better suited to the ideas of the contractors, also. The chances for making a comfortable margin of profit on the Duluth-Ladysmith extension are considered very good.

In all probability several hundred men will be employed through the winter on the heavy work between Duluth and Ladysmith, clearing the right-of-way, taking care of the cuts, etc., as was done last winter in the country below Ladysmith. By doing this the contractors will be in readiness next spring to put the construction crews directly at work, and will probably be able to complete the extension to Duluth before the end of next year.

ARE NOT PARTICULAR.

Railroad Contractors Will Hire Anything in the Shape of a Man.

"I want some men for railroad work," said a contractor this morning, entering the office of the National Employment company.

"What kind of men?" asked Mr. Richards.

"Give me anything that wears pants and can walk," said the contractor.

In effect, all the companies now trying to hire laborers give the same instructions when placing their orders. Practically all of the railroads are still crying for more men. One of the range roads has put in an order for eighty men for an extra gang. Another lines entering Duluth says it must have fifty men for an extra gang at once.

Between here and St. Paul seventy men are wanted for general work. The Edward Hines Lumber company is asking for fifty men for grading on its North Wisconsin line. The list could be followed down until all of the lines entering Duluth would be included.

"Give us men," is the cry of them all.

CONTRACTS ARE CLOSED.

Range Roads Turn In Orders For New Equipment.

The Duluth, Missabe & Northern and Duluth & Iron Range roads have awarded the contracts for the new equipment which they decided to purchase some time ago, as announced in The Herald.

The Missabe road ordered 750 new steel ore cars from the Pressed Steel Car company of Pittsburg and the Duluth & Iron Range has given the same concern a contract for furnishing 500, making 1,250 new ore cars for both roads.

Six new freight engines have been ordered from the American Locomotive company of Pittsburg for the Missabe road, which is also securing two new ten-wheel passenger engines from the Baldwin shops of Philadelphia. Ten new locomotives will be added to the equipment of the Duluth & Iron Range road, six big freight engines and four switch engines. These will probably come from the Baldwin shops. The new cars and engines will be delivered early next spring.

A SECOND LINE TO COAST.

Supposed Plans of Hill-Morgan Interests Regarding Wisconsin Central.

The Minneapolis Journal expresses a good deal of satisfaction over the announcement that the Wisconsin Central railroad system has changed hands. The change, says the Journal, is of the most vital significance to Minneapolis. Continuing, the Minneapolis paper says:

"While the interests back of the purchasers have not yet been officially announced, all preliminary indication and all the most reliable reports indicate that the Wisconsin Central has come under control of the great Hill-Morgan syndicate with the Erie at the front as the particular factor most interested.

"Of a special significance to Minneapolis is the fact that, by acquiring control of the Wisconsin Central, the Hill-Morgan interests are in position to organize and operate at once a transcontinental system extending from ocean to ocean by almost an air line.

"This is known to have been for years one of James J. Hill's dearest plans. With his characteristic farsightedness, Mr. Hill, more than ten years ago, announced that the successful routes of transportation hereafter must avoid Chicago unless the traffic they carried originated in that city or its territory, or were destined for delivery to that same district.

"His reason for this attitude lay in the fact that for years no railroad westward from New York had at any time considered a Western terminus except Chicago. Thus, all traffic from the East had to pass through the Windy City, whose terminal facilities in time became wholly inadequate to permit the handling of all the tremendous business seeking transit through that gateway. Chicago blockades are historic.

"It was some idea of this kind which prompted Mr. Hill to acquire the Burlington system in order that he might secure, not an Eastern connection for the Great Northern to Chicago, but an outlet to the Mississippi river and the Gulf of Mexico by way of St. Louis.

"The acquisition of the Wisconsin Central with its car ferry across the great lakes gives Mr. Hill another route from tide water to the West, which avoids Chicago, and which traverses a country so far north of the Burlington that it will care for an entirely different class of business. In this connection the extensive enlargement of the Great Northern's yard facilities in Minneapolis is seen in a new light."

WILL BUILD TO THE COAST.

Official Announcement of Plans of the Milwaukee Is Made.

Tacoma, Oct. 11.—Charles Pfeiffer, townsite agent for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul company, announced authoritatively yesterday that the Milwaukee road is to be built to the coast. He said denials were useless in view of the publicity given the purchase Monday of terminals involving more than $500,000. He also stated that the Milwaukee has surveyors and right-of-way agents at work in eastern Washington at the present time. Plans for the terminals in Tacoma, says Mr. Pfeiffer, include docks larger than any here at the present time. Mr. Pfeiffer leaves today for Chicago for a conference with A. J. Earling, president of the Milwaukee, who has just returned from Europe.

TO BE ANOTHER TEXAS ROAD

San Francisco, Oct. 11.—President E. P. Ripley of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, has decided to build a new piece of road, which will give San Francisco another direct rail connection with Galveston, Texas. He has just incorporated the Gulf, Santa Fe & Northwestern railroad.

The latter company is to build 350 miles of road from Brownwood northwest to Texico on the Texas & New Mexico boundary. Texico is a point on the north and south Pecos valley line of the Santa Fe. From Texico to Rio Puerco, on the Santa Fe, and California overland line thirty miles west of Albuquerque, the distance is 275 miles and a road is being built there by the Eastern Mexico road, a Santa Fe company.

By means of the new piece of road from Rio Puerco to Texico and thence north over the Pecos valley line, the Santa Fe will have a second and shorter overland line to California.

DISCONTINUE THE SERVICE.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 11.—Upon orders from Chicago headquarters the entire interurban service of the Rock Island road in Iowa will be discontinued next Saturday. A case is now pending before the Iowa railroad commissioner in which the electric interurbans are seeking to prevent the Rock Island from making low rates on their interurbans. The service from Des Moines to Winterset, Indianola and Colfax and from Cedar Rapids to Iowa City will be discontinued.

The annual election of officers of the Minnesota Baptist Education Society was also held this morning and Rev. G F. Holt of Minneapolis was re-elected president. The other officers chosen were vice president, Rev. G. H. Gamble; secretary, Rev. R. M. West; treasurer, J. F. Hill; directors, to serve until 1908, Rev. W. B. Riley, Rev. E. M. Atwood and J. H. Irish; to serve until next year, Rev. E. M. Martinson and Rev. L. A. Crandall, and Rev. J. W. Loughridge was elected to serve until 1907.

The report of the society officers and discussions of its affairs formed an important part of the session this morning and the address of R. M. West of St. Paul on "Efficient Preparatition for the Ministry" seemed to make the most favorable impression.

Rev. Mr. West has been acting as librarian of the education society's circulating library which was established last year and was elected secretary of the society today. He based his talk on the argument that a man who goes into the ministry without any training in a theological institution, in most cases is a failure as a preacher. He presented figures secured from all over the country to support his claims. The figures he presented were interesting. They showed that out of 1865 preachers, 774 were rated excellent; 897 medium and 194 were classed as failures. Out of the total of 1865, 670 went in the ministery without either seminary or college training and 105 of these were failures and only 152 were rated as first rate preachers. The figures he presented showed very satisfactory numbers in the excellent column on the board opposite the letters which indicated that they had had the advantage of either seminary or college training or both. Of course, the complete course pupils showed up the best; the college training, only, second in number of successes, and the seminary, only, third. Those who had no training whatsoever were hopelessly in the rear.

Rev. Mr. West laid great stress upon the need of education and declared that young men considering entering the ministry should take the full course if possible and either the seminary or college course in any event.

The delegates were so impressed by Rev. Mr. West's talk that Rev. Theodore Heysham suggested that it be published in the annual but Mr. West announced that it would probably appear in the Standard.

The address of the president, Rev. Mr. Holt, and the reports of the officers showed that the education society was in good condition. More money will be expended during the coming year on the circulating library, which has proven a success.

The committee on home missions was unable to report this morning but a splendid address on "Efficiency in Home Work" was delivered by Rev. Theodore Heysham, pastor of Central Baptist church, Minneapolis.

"They say that love is blind but it is false," said Dr. Heysham, "Passion is blind, but not love. A loving religion is an efficient religion and the test of efficiency in home missions is a test of the efficiency of religion in the hearts of the American people.

"There are three essentials to efficient home mission work. The first is a masterful knowledge of the nature of man and the conditions of human life. Christianity must give evidence of mind and insight must be shown through the missions because ignorance means chaos and darkness.

"Some years ago in Philadelphia, I saw a little girl bearing a placard, 'I want work for my papa.' That was certainly a pitiful sight. God pity us in our inhumanity. We should go back of economic questions and get the lost man.

"We are told that one half of the people in the United States never enter a church, Protestant or Catholic. When we think of the methods of financiers and of all the other evils, it is enough to make one's face still.

"The second essential necessary to efficiency in home missions is a masterful purpose to win that lost man, and the third is courage.

"I consider the union of the reunion of the Baptists of the North and South, after a number of years of separation, a great step in the direction of an ultimate union of all the Baptists in the world."

Dr. Heysham spoke of the work that has been done at home by Baptist missionaries, and became eloquent when he approached the subject of the education and status of the negro.

"May my right hand lose its cunning and my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth if I ever see negroes better educated than the whites, for when we give the blacks more learning than we ourselves have, we make them rulers of us. When the negroes are pushed too high, we will see what I saw in Duluth yesterday, the spectacle of a white man blacking a colored man's boots."

Dr. Frank Peterson, an eloquent speaker, gave a strong address "Efficient Beneficence" at this morning's session. Dr. Peterson urged people to give all they could toward the church and its work and deplored existence of gigantic "grafts" in high financial circles. He also gave some interesting figures about the consumption of liquor, tobacco and chewing gum during the year and compared them with amounts spent on beneficences. He declared that the nation spent $8,000,000 for chewing gum last year while only something more than seven millions was expended for missionary work.

Dr. Peterson's was one of the most important addresses of the convention and he was listened to with great interest. Mrs. S. F. Stewart told interestingly of the work on "The Canadian Boundary" and C. T. Hallowell of Northfield told of "Some Things Needful for More Efficient Work in Southern Minnesota."

The state missionaries, W. E. Wrapp of Battle Lake and H. R. McKee of Parker's Prairie, gave interesting talks. Rev. E. H. Rasmussen conducted the prayer service.

An informal luncheon was given at the St. Louis this noon for Rev. Erie B. Hulbert, dean of the divinity school of the University of Chicago. Many of the pastors at the conference attended the school or Morgan Park seminary and they, with their wives, greeted their former instructor.

This afternoon, the reports of the evangelistic committee are being heard. Six addresses on efficient evangelism were on the program and O. Bodien was to extend "Greetings From Sweden."

Rev. E. R. Pope will present the report of the state convention board this evening and G. Nygren of Duluth will talk on "Northwestern Minnesota." Sunday school work will be taken up tomorrow.

TRIED NEW TRICK.

The Lazy Poker Player Could Change the Decks Quickly.

Chicago Inter-Ocean: "There was a queer sort of a chap useter travel the river now an' again long afore the war," said Caleb Mix, the veteran bartender on board the Mississippi river packet, City of Natchez. "I never heerd nobody say who he was or where he came from, but the first we knowed about him was when he come aboard one day at Vicksburg an' took a trip down to New Orleans. An' played poker on the way.

"There didn't nobody learn what his name was, 's fur's I know, that trip, an' there didn't nobody pay no special attention to him. We seen he was playin' an' we heer'd he win a few hundred in the settin', but there wa'n't nothin' special thought. Strange men was comin' aboard constant, an' mostly all on 'em played poker when they got the chanst, an' naturally some on 'em win out.

"But when we come to New Orleans the clerk o' the boat he noticed this here stranger didn't go ashore. Just stayed in bed in his state room an' waited f'r th' boat to start up river again.

"Even that wa'n't so all-fired p'coolar, an' there wa'n't nobody askin' questions, but the clerk he did find out 't the man's name was Nathan Lobdell. An' Lobdell he went back to Vicksburg with us, an' on the way he played a little more poker an' win some, an' when we come to Vicksburg he goes ashore.

"I'd plumb forgot all about it, bein' as there wa'n't nothin' p'tickler to remember, when he come aboard again about four months later, an' went down to New Orleans again on the Bayou Belle, which were the boat I was on them days. An' he played a little poker on the way down an' win some, an' stayed in his bunk asleep till the Bayou Belle started up river, an' he played a little more poker on the way home, an' win some, and went ashore at Vicksburg.

"Well, just naturally, we all called to mind what he'd done afore, an' there was some talk about Nathan Lobdell bein' a slick article. 'Twa'n't no ways reasonable to reckon 't no man c'd win all the time playin' poker on the Mississippi boats them days, 'thouten he was a p'fessional. He were too little an' weazened-like, an' careless an' nervous in his ways like.

"Well, there didn't nobody get worked up none over it, an' we'd all kind o' forgotten Nathan Lobdell, when, about four or five months later, he came aboard again, an' did the same trick over again. Played poker down the river an' up, win both ways an' slep' all the time we was to New Orleans, an' left the boat again at Vicksburg withouten a word to nobody.

"I seen the old man were some worked up this time, f'r he stood watchin' th' gang-plank when Lobdell went ashore, an' his face was all puckered, like it most gen'ly was when he didn't like sumpin. He called me up an' says:

"'Cale, I want you to go ashore an' find out sumpin' about this here Lobdell. 'Pears like he ain't quite right, somehow. They ain't nobody but a p'fessional got no license to win money all the time, an' if he's a p'fessional I want to know it, p'tickler if he's goin' to be a reg'lar boarder on my boat.

"Well, I trailed this here Lobdell up to a little house on th' edge o' the town, where he 'peared to live, judgin' f'm the way he walked in an' th' neighbors told me he owned the place. 'Twa'n't no gre't sort of a house, an' his near neighbors was all po' white trash, such as was less thought of than niggers them days.

"'Pears he'd come to Vicksburg f'm somewheres up No'th, an' married a po' white gal an' settled down. Didn't have no business, an' didn't never do nothin' 's fur's the neighbors knowed. Just set round like they all did, on'y he 'peared to have money. An' every few months he'd go away f'r a spell.

"That didn't 'pear to make it no plainer, even if I did know what he was doin' them spells when he was away f'm home. When I told the old man, though, what I'd heered he said he understood it well enough.

"'He's just a plain crossroads gambler,' he says, 'as has got stuck on a woman, an' growed lazy. Bein' in with them po' whites he's just naturally come to be like 'em, an' hain't got snap enough to play poker, on'y when he needs the money. Just how it 'd be if he was to run up against a better player 'n what he is an' get skint I don't just see, but likely that'll happen.'

"After that we didn't see no more o' Nathan Lobdell f'r some three or four months, an' then he come aboard again. There wa'n't no feelin's ag'in p'fessionals p'tickler in them days, on'y the old man liked to know who they was, case o' trouble, as we was al'ays on the lookout for. So Nathan Lobdell he got his stateroom all right, an' went lookin' round the boat soon as we'd started, tryin' to find somebody to play poker with.

"There was three games goin' on in the saloon a'ready, an' 'peared like Lobdell couldn't find nobody else 't he cared to play with 't cared to play with him, so p'raps he'd prospected round f'r a while he come back in the saloon an' looked on first at one game and then at another, till he picked out one, an' stood there quiet an' patientlike, waitin' f'r sumchody to go broke, so's he c'd p'pose hisself f'r a setter in th' empty seat.

"I was lookin' on, some cur'ous, a'ter what th' old man had said, an' I seed 't Nathan Lobdell had chose a game where there wa'n't no p'fessinals playin'. 'Peared like that went to show 't he knowed to'able well what he was doin', but 'twan't no proof, neither, an' I kep' on watchin'.

"There was five men playin' into the game he'd picked. I knowed three on 'em for planters, but the other two was strangers f'm up the river somewheres, an' one o' these was a piker f'r fair. It were a quiet little five-dollar-limit game, but this feller 'peared to think it were desp'rit gamblin', an' he studied an' worried over his hands, an' counted his chips careful, like the money was reely important, an' the others was playin' free an' open, like they was thinkin' more o' the game nor they was o' the money.

"Pretty soon it happened, like it mostly does, 't the careful player went broke, or leastways lost all he wanted to, an' he got up. The others tired o' his sort o' play, I reckon. Anyway, there didn't none of 'em make no objection when Nathan Lobdell butted in an' said he'd play if 'twas agreeable.

"I'd been lookin' on sort o' careless up to then, but when Nathan Lobdell set in I got busy right away an' I wa'n't fur away any time a'ter that till the finish.

"He bought his $50 worth o' chips all right. There wa'n't over $90 in sight, so that were a fair start, but I noticed there was seven or eight reals afore Nathan Lobdell put up a chip more'n he had to when it was his ante.

"'Peared like he were playin' as careful as the piker had, an' the others wa'n't none too pleased, but all of a sudden he 'peared to set up an' take notice, an' him bein' on the right o' the dealer, an' everybody up to him havin' come in, he p'nisted it the limit.

"The dealer, his name was Gregory, he looked at his cards careful, an' he throwed 'em down, but the age, he was a p'tickler friend o' Gregory's named Lightbody, he made good, an' th' other stranger 't set next, he kind o' laughed, an' he says:

"'Much obliged to you, pard, f'r raisin' when you did. I didn't care about keepin' you all out on the first round, but now I'll have to go you five more.' An' he throwed in two blues.

"I looked to see Mathews, he was the third planter, lay down for a double raise, seein he hadn't raised afore, but he kind o' smiled to himself an' throwed his two in, kind o' careless an' easy, an' I made up my mind he were likely tiggerin' on lettin' the others play his hand.

"That brought it back to Lobdell an' he didn't say nothin'. Just threw in his two blues, makin' it another raise.

"Lightbody looked serious, like he had reason to, an' after he'd studied awhile he throwed his cards down, but the stranger, he tightened his lips an' raised again.

"Then it was Mathews' turn, an' he says, mighty gay, 'I reckon I'll take a hand in this here raisin' business. An' he p'nisted it five.

"Well, there wa'n't no more animation onto Nathan Lobdell's face nor there is onto a brass dog, but he throwed in his three blue chips as prompt as if he'd been reachin' f'r a piece o' watermelon. 'Peared like the stranger was kind o' rattled at that an' 'stid o' raisin' again. Like I was lookin' f'r to see him, he just made good, an' Matthews says, 'I reckon I'll see what you all draw,' an' he just made good.

"That made 'em 30 apiece in the pot, not countin' the $2 ante an' Lightbody's five after the first raise, so there was about a hundred in when they drawed cards.

"The stranger he grinned, an' he says, 'I reckon I'll play these,' an' without waitin' for to see what the others was goin' to do, he throwed a blue chip in the pot.

"Mathews, he skint his hand again, an' he says, 'These'll do me,' an' it was up to Nathan Labdell again.

"He studied considerable, an' finally he says: 'Well, if you've both got pat hands that makes a difference. Gi' me two.' An' he throwed down two cards.

"There wa'n't but one thing to think, an' that was 't he'd been playin' on a small full, an' losin' confidence in it, was makin' play for fours.

"That 'peared to cheer Mathews up some, an' he seen the stranger's five an' looked at Nathan Lobdell. You couldn't tell nothin' by lookin' at him, though. His face looked like a piece o' putty, but he put in two chips, like he had somethin'.

"The stranger he laughed, an' he says, 'I don't reckon you've got the fourth, but I'll just hist you five to see.'

"An' then Mathews give up. He told me afterward 't he'd been playin' a ten high flush, but he'd lost his enthusiasm when it come to a double raise after the draw.

"Nathan Lobdell didn't 'pear to have no enthusiasm at all, but he throwed his two chips in just the same, one on 'em bein' a five-dollar gold piece 't he fished outen his pocket, his chips bein' gone. So the stranger he looked to'able sober an' he says, 'Either you got it, or you didn't, but you play like you did. Anyway, I'll see it.' An' he made good an' showed a king full on aces.

"Then Nathan Lobdell he showed four treys.

"'O' course, there wa'n't no thought o' Gregory havin' dealt crooked, but I had an idee right then 't set me watchin' closer'n ever, an' made me pick up two or three cards outen that deck when the stranger throwed 'em on the floor an' called for a deck of another color.

"I seen they was the same pattern as them we sold on the boat, but somepin' made me think 't maybe I mought find out somepin' if I was to look at 'em t'olable close.

"Nobody else didn't seem to suspicion nothin' an' th' game went on just the same, on'y Nathan Lobdell were nigh a hundred stronger'n he had been afore that hand, an' the stranger an' Mathews both buys a hundred apiece to go on with.

"There wa'n't nothin' happened for the next three or four roundds, but I had my eye skint, an' I was watchin' p'tickler when the deal came to Gregory. Then, one time on his deal, I c'd almost swore 't I seen Nathan Lobdell change the deck when he cut 'em. Such things wa'n't done so much nor so neat on the boats them days as they has been since, an' I couldn't be certain, but I was nigh sure, an' I looked for another killin'.

"Sure enough it came. There was four good hands out this time, an there were nigh five hundred in the pot when Nathan Lobdell was called an' showed down the winnin' cards.

"I'd saw enough then, so 's 't I didn't have to look no more at the play, an' I gets out and studies them cards 't I'd picked up first an' them 't I sneaked outer the deck 't was throwed away after the last deal I's tellin' about.

"Well, I seen plain enough when I come to study 'em careful 't they was a different make o' cards f'm any 't I'd ever had for sale. You wouldn't have noticed the difference 'thouten you studied close, but I was studyin' close.

"What did I do? Well, I didn't butt in. Even as long ago as that I'd learned enough to stay out of a game o' poker when I wa'n't one o' the players, but Gregory was a man I thought considerable of, 'count o' him having did me favors more'n once, an' I got him one side after the game was over an' give him some p'nts.

"There didn't 'pear to be nothin' more 't I reely could do. 'Twa'n't no use to go to the old man, f'r his rule was 't if a man see fit to play poker it was his business to look after hisself. An' it turned out 't wa'n't necessary for to do no more'n I did.

"That wa'n't exactly the end of it. I didn't have no more to do with it, but Gregory, he were tol'able sore.

"'Tain't the money I care for, Cale," he says to me, 'but I do hate to be played for a sucker.'

"So, 'pears he had a talk with Mathews, an' then two come back on the Bayou Belle that same trip, 'stid o' stayin' down in New Orleans f'r a time like they'd reckoned on.

"An, they started a poker game on the way back, an' Nathan Lobdell was in it. His trick was a new one then, an' he played it monstrous well, but they catched him at it, an', one settin' on one side of him an' one on' tother, they grabbed him sudden an' started in for to find the extry deck o' cards.

"I was tellin' you that Nathan Lobdell were a undersized man an' very nervous; but say, it were somepin' surprisin' to see the fight that little runt put up. He fit all over the saloon an' did some good work with his knife afore they downed him at last, an' 'twas more'n them two big men c'd do to hold him.

"It didn't seem hardly right to finish it the way they did, but everybody seen if he wa'n't shot he were more'n likely to kill three or four others, so they shot him.

"Did they kill him? Well, he never played cards no more on the Bayou Belle, nor nowhere else, 's fur's I ever heer'd. An' when he lay still they found three packs o' cards hid in his clo'es. One was the deck Gregory had just passed to him f'r to cut, an' the other two was stacked for five surprisin' hands."

DOG DID IT.

Brooklyn Eagle: "It's an old saying, but it's a true one, nevertheless," said a conductor of a Gates avenue car to a reporter the other day, while the latter was smoking a stogie on the rear platform. "You can't beat the Irish. Now, the other day I had three passengers—two women, a man and a dog. The man sat alone with his dog at the farther end of the car. When I went in to collect the man's fare I noticed for the first time that some one had expectorated on the floor and I accused the man with breaking the city ordinance.

"'Phat ye talkin' about now,' he said, 'Ol ain't broke anything in the city.'

"'You spat upon the floor,' I said, 'and consequently are liable to a $500 fine.'

"'Ol'll have yez ter understand.'

"'Well,' said I, indicating the spot on the floor, 'who did that, if you didn't?'

"'Sure,' said he, 'it wuz the dog that did it.'

"The dog, eh! Well, you just tell that to the cops,' I said, determined to have the man arrested.

"'Now, don't get hasty; if you do, Ol'll break somethin' else, an' it won't be an ordinence, aither, do yez moind? Do yez see that dog sthandin' beside yez? Well, it wuz him that did it, because he's a Spitz dog, the poor baste couldn't help it.'"

HER CHAMPION.

Anna Dickinson was retained to deliver her lecture, "Breakers Ahead," under the auspices of a pretentious literary association in a small town in Illinois, says the Boston Herald. When she arrived she found the billboards announced her subject as "Bread His Head."

At the hall the twenty-four members were seated on the platform. The president escorted her to the desk and introduced her, with many apologies for her eccentricities, and declared the association would not indorse or be responsible for anything she might say.

The opening speech much embarrassed Miss Dickinson, and she said she wished the floor would open and let down the president or herself. Just then she saw a giant in a red shirt rising up in the audience. He loomed up nearly seven feet, and shouted:

"Mr. President, suppose you set down and let the gal speak for herself."

The president subsided. Miss Dickinson delivered her lecture to a delighted audience, and always held in grateful remembrance her champion in the "red shirt."

SURE CURE.

Brooklyn Eagle: "Apropos of the statement of the widow of an army surgeon that cockroaches furnish a remedy for lockjaw," said Pharmacist J. H. McGuigan of the navy yard, "I recall that years ago I used to put up prescriptions for dropsy, consisting of anti-hydropin, the name of the drug obtained from the cockroach, which is known to science as the Orientalis blatta. It was common in those days as a dropsy cure. Cantharides are bugs which provide one of the strongest of medicinal agencies, so the woman's suggestion of a cockroach cure for tetanus may not be so far fetched, after all. Anyway, it would do no harm to try it, it seems to me."

FISHING IN FRANCE.

Now is the season for fishing in France; don't imagine that fish here are the size of your trout in your clear-water lakes and rivers, says the Brooklyn Eagle. Fishing in the Seine means satisfying the passion for fishing, and catching nothing, or else one or two fish so small that it is necessary to use a magnifying glass to find out what kind they are. In the fishing season you will daily see an army of men turning their backs upon work and the beauties of Paris for five or six long hours, holding out fishing poles and lines, the latter sinking to no purpose, except to bring up an old shoe, incidentally.

MOONSHINERS.

Philadelphia Bulletin: "I have often read," said a Westerner, "of the trouble internal revenue officers experience in the South in their efforts to stop the illicit distilling of whisky. The country at large is impressed that making whisky without a license, especially corn whisky, is carried on principally in Dixieland, but it is not so.

"While I have no doubt that corn whisky is unlawfully made in great quantities down there, personal observation leads me to believe that the Middle West far exceeds the South in this illegal transaction.

"In Central Illinois, the hub of the so-called 'corn belt,' corn whisky is distilled without license by numerous farmers. They not only brew it for private use, but sell it to dealers in small towns, and realize large profits.

"The government officials seem to be ignorant of the fact, as during my lifetime in that locality I have neither known nor heard of an arrest for violating the internal revenue laws. You can stop at nearly any farm house and order a drink of 'belt rye,' as it is known, and you will be invited into the cellar, where casks of it are displayed with impunity."

MISSED THE FURROWS.

Daniel Maloney, the aeronaut who met his death recently at Santa Clara, through the overturning of his aeroplane, had never any fear of aerial accidents, says the Denver Times.

"The average aeronaut," he said one day, "is about as fit to run a flying machine as the Cecilton farmer who crossed with Captain Lampford was to sail a ship.

"This farmer, the second day out, began to dislike the motion. His appetite disappeared, he had a slight headache, and he was pale and languid.

"As he leaned over the rail disconsolately, watching with a slight shudder the rise and fall of the horizon, Captain Lampford appeared.

"'Look here, Captain Lampford,' said the farmer, 'you don't understand your business.'

"The captain smiled. 'I don't understand your business, eh?' he said. 'What is the trouble with me?'

"'Why, blame it all,' said the farmer, you ought to keep in the furrows.'"

MILWAUKEE SENSATION

Jacob Heyl Makes Flat Denial of Serious Charges.

Says He Never Had Improper Relations With His Mother-in-Law.

Milwaukee, Oct. 11.—Jacob Heyl flatly denied he ever had any improper relations with his mother-in-law, Mrs. Lizette Schandein, whom he is alleged to have influenced to the extent that she willed her millions to his wife.

He was the first witness called after the case for the contestants, Emil Schandein, and Mrs. Louis F. Frank, was closed today in Judge Carpenter's court.

Mrs. Frank was the last witness for the contestants. She was permitted to give the details of the alleged visits of her brother-in-law, Jacob Heyl, to her bed chamber.

The testimony of Mr. Heyl, following immediately upon the testimony of Mrs. Frank, created a decided stir.

In reply to a direct question by Attorney Charles F. Quarles, Mr. Heyl denied that he had at any time sustained relations with Mrs. Schandein that were unlawful or improper.

"Did you ever have any relations with her such as would not have been proper in the presence of your wife and children?" Mr. Quarles continued.

"No, sir," said Mr. Heyl.

Mr. Heyl was emphatic in his denial of the testimony given by former servants in the Schandein house.

As Mr. Heyl gave his testimony his hands were clenched, his fingers being shut tightly. His strong profile showed to advantage. His voice rang out clearly through the court room.

I "Were the rumors to the effect that you and Mrs. Schandein had improper relations circulated to your knowledge?" was the substance of a question by Mr. Quarles.

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Heyl, aggressively.

"Among other things, have you ever heard rumors to the effect that Mrs. Schandein had a natural child living in Germany?" was the import of another question.

"Yes, sir.

"Do you know to what period the rumors attached the birth of this alleged child?"

"In 1901."

Mr. Heyl then said he was in Germany with Mrs. Schandein at the time named. They were accompanied by his son, Eric Heyl, Mrs. Leonora Hilbert and by a servant.

Miss Hilbert is now Mrs. Browning.

THIRD GAME POSTPONED

Wet Grounds Prevent Meeting of the Baseball Giants.

Philadelphia, Oct. 11.—With honors even the New York national league baseball team and the Philadelphia team of the American league were scheduled to play today, the third game of the world's championship series on the local grounds. Philadelphia's victory yesterday developed the fact that the American league champions are to form and the quality shown by New York in both games has proved that the teams are so well matched as to render impossible anything like a safe prediction concerning the final result.

The New York club arrived shortly after noon. The weather at 1 o'clock was doubtful.

The game was postponed on account of wet grounds.

The President's Attempt to Eliminate Roughness From Football.

New York, Oct. 11.—Circulars will, according to the Herald, be sent in a few days to the collegiate athletic world from the football experts, who last Monday met President Roosevelt, in which it will be suggested that all brutality be eliminated from the American game.

At the annual meeting of the Football association, to be held late in the winter at Philadelphia, it is expected that the changes which have been spoken of with such force by the president will be thoroughly considered.

LIVING IN PROXIMITY

Were the Three Young Wives of Robert Benicker.

All In Same Flat Building In New York.

New York, Oct. 11.—Accused of having had three young wives living simultaneously in the same flat building in Eighteenth street, each of whom believed that she was the only one, Robert Benicker was arrested last night and arraigned in court today on a complaint made by two of them. He is 25 years old and a painter.

The woman who claims to be his first wife, Norma, 19 years old, and Emily, 20 years old, who says she is the second Mrs. Benicker, told the police that a third wife was now in Fall River, Mass., and that they two, while still ignorant of each other's relations to Benicker, were persuaded by him that the Lowell girl was his sister. They said they had both supplied the money which recently sent her back to Fall River.

The woman who says she is the first wife, Norma Benicker, told the police that after her husband left her and went to housekeeping with a second wife in Eighteenth street, she, herself, moved to the same building without knowing that Benicker was maintaining another wife there. Emily, who claims to be the other wife, corroborated this story and said furthermore, that she and Norma had been acquainted with each other before their marriage.

When they met again in the Eighteenth street house, they say they discovered that Benicker was the husband of both of them.

"POSTER GIRL" OF IOWA IS MARRIED

Miss Penn Weds Divorced Man And Former Wife Hysterical.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 11.—It was learned here that Miss Jessica Penn, known as Iowa's "poster girl" among New York theatrical people, was married secretly last June to Ralph W. Evans, a local advertising solicitor, who first started her upon her career in posing.

The announcement of the wedding has caused a sensation. Evans was only recently divorced from his wife, Grace Evans, with whom he had resided in Des Moines for several years. He has a boy, Earle Evans, who is 16 and who declares that he will never speak to his new mamma.

When the former wife learned yesterday, of the wedding last June, and proof in the form of certified copies of the St. Joseph, Mich., county record were shown her, she fainted and became hysterical. She declared that the divorce was procured under duress, and that she had understood all the time that she was to marry Evans again and go to the West to live.

Mrs. Penn refused to accept the story of the secret wedding until the proofs were handed to her, and then she was for a time in a state of collapse.

Mrs. Evans says that three years ago her husband decided to go into the calendar business and came to her to ask where he could secure the service of a pretty young girl to pose for him. The wife introduced Miss Penn, who was then a high school graduate. The first sittings were made in Des Moines. Later Evans took the girl to Chicago to pose before the leading photographers there. Soon after Miss Penn went to New York, where she remained the greater part of the time and became famous as a poster girl.

"It had not been six months after the first sitting in the Des Moines gallery, when people advised me to look out for Miss Penn and my husband," said Mrs. Evans. "I would not believe that there was any affection between them. I have never believed it until now, when the proof of the wedding comfronts me. For a long time my husband and I remained cold to each other. He admitted that it was on account of some girl, but I laughed when I told him of the reports people were circulating about him.

"Miss Penn's mother and I had a talk. She said that Evans had called upon her time and again, and that Miss Penn had been there and that everything was perfectly proper and right. I knew my husband and Miss Penn went to Chicago last June, but it was my understanding that they were simply getting more posters.

"My divorce seems to be dated before the wedding. I was never in court and never knew on what grounds I was being sued for divorce. Mr. Evans called upon me in my apartments in the Illiad late one night, and he had two lawyers with him. They talked about the trouble that I was having with my husband and said that it should be all settled up. I agreed and signed some papers which I understood would give me enough money to support my boy. I have never received a cent, and I now learn that the papers do not give the authority to collect a cent."

TERRIBLE VENGEANCE.

Ku-Klux Sealed an Informer Up In a Barrel.

An ex-Confederate soldier, who served in the Southern army with distinguished gallantry, was telling a group in the Riggs house some interesting stories of the days that followed the surrender of Lee, says the Washington Post.

"I went to Memphis to five," said he, "after Appomattox, and was one of those who helped organize the Ku-Klux Klan. I have never been ashamed of my connection with that celebrated organization, for it did a tremendous lot of good in Tennessee. Gen. N. B. Forrest, the greatest cavalry chief who ever rode into battle, was supreme commander of the 'K. K. K.,' and whenever Forrest issued an order it was obeyed to the letter. The order had a supreme court, of which Gen. Albert Pike, the illustrious Mason, was chief justice, and this court always sifted testimony for and against any accused person before punishment was inflicted. Two prominent newspaper editors of Memphis were also members of the court. The total membership of the regularly organized Ku-Klux Klans of Tennessee was not less than 72,000, and never in the history of the world were men more closely banded or more loyal to each other.

"I was a member of the 'klan' for at least five years, and my separation from it was caused by a change of residence. In that time I am positive that the sentence of death was inflicted upon but three men, which goes to show that the Ku-Klux did not mete out summary vengeance on small offenders. Nor were its members, except in rare instances, citizens of low repute. On the contrary, only men of good character were invited to join, and Gen. Forrest was particular in seeing that only those of discretion and temperate habits were made members.

"But Tennessee at the time of the existence of the Ku-Klux was in radical hands; scalawags and carpetbaggers ruled the land to its sorrow, and Parson Brownlow, then governor, had a law passed which made it a capital offense for any man to be convicted of ku-kluxing or of belonging to the order. He even imported detectives from Chicago, who were instructed to find out all about the mysterious band which sent forth its warnings in letters ornamented with skulls and crossbones and daggers, and whose doings struck terror to the hearts of white and black miscreants alike.

"One of these detectives came on to Nashville. He was a bright fellow and ambitious to make a record. Brownlow gave him his orders, and he set out to discover things by pretending to be a rabid Southerner who was keenly anxious to become a K. K. K. General Forrest learned all about the man and his plans, and gave it out that he should be taken through a mock initiation, which would reveal nothing of the real Ku-Klu secrets. After this bogus ceremony the spy was told he was eligible to a second degree, which would reveal to him many secrets. This he took, and a rough ceremony it was, but the felow went through it gamely. Then they told him that there was still one more degree—the third—which would make him a full-fledged member, with a knowledge of all the workings and mysteries of the Klan. He was warned that this third degree was full of difficulties and considerable personal hardship. Wanting to make Brownlow a full report, the spy begged to be alowed to take it. This was the climax to which events had been tending. The third degree, weired and tragical, had for its main feature the imprisonment of a man in a barrel so stalwart of construction and so securely sealed up that deliverance was impossible for the victim, and the tossing of the same into the Cumberland river.

"A few weeks later the barrel, with a badly decomposed corpse inside, was fished out of the Mississippi, and never afterward did a candidate for initation, with ulterior purposes, try to break into the Ku-Klux Klan."

THE MOON HOAX.

It Fooled the Whole World Including the Learned Scientist.

One of the most remarkable cases on record where a newspaper was itself a party to a hoax played on the public for mercenary purposes was that of the once celebrated "Moon Hoax," which occurred nearly three-quarters of a century ago, says the Indianapolis Sun. The story thus designated appeared in the New York Sun in September, 1835. The Sun was started as a penny paper in 1833, and in January, 1835, it boasted of a daily circulation of 5,000—a large circulation for that day. But it wished a larger circulation, and did not care how it got it. The Moon Hoax was devised for this purpose.

The story was written by Richard Adams Locke, a bright and versatile Englishman of the day, who was then assistant editor of the Sun. Briefly, it purported to be an account of some wonderful astronomical discoveries that had been made by Sir John Herschel with a powerful telescope at the Cape of Good Hope. The writer of the story was sufficiently well versed in astronomical lore and phraseology to give it an air of truthfulness.

The story itself purported to have been copied from a recent supplement of the Edinburgh Philosophical Journal, and was one of the most ingeniously and elaborately constructed pieces of fiction ever written. It was published as a serial in the Sun and ran through the daily issues of a whole week.

It described with great particularity the scientific preparations which had been made for the alleged discoveries. The telescope manufactured expressly for the purpose was said to have an object glass 24 feet in diameter, weighing 14,826 pounds, and having a magnifying power of 42,000 times. This magnifying power was multiplied by microscope attachment of great power. The discoveries were represented as including mountain ranges, flowing rivers with cascades, forests of trees of new and strange varieties, animals, birds and water fowls never seen on earth, etc.

One of the animals, as described by the pretended discoverer, was "of a bluish lead color, about the size of a goat, with a head and beard like him, and a single horn slightly inclined forward from the perpendicular. The female was destitute of the horn and beard, but had a much longer tail. It was gregarious and chiefly abounded on the acclivitous glades of the woods. In elegance of symmetry it rivaled the antelope, and like him it seemed an agile, sprightly creature, running with great speed and springing from the green turf with all the unaccountable antics of a young lamb or kitten."

The narrative also described a species of gray pelican, which was very numerous, and a black and white crane, both of which could be seen plunging their long necks into the water, evidently after fish.

Of animals the pretended discoverer classified nine species of mammalia and five of oviparia. Among the former were a small kind of reindeer, the elk, the moose, a horned bear and a two-legged beaver. Many varieties of beautiful birds were seen and numerous specimens of an ourang-outang far more intelligent than any on the earth. No human beings were discovered, but creatures more resembling our conception of angels. The narrative also described in scientific language some wonderful discoveries alleged to have been made regarding the geological structure of the moon, its movements, its relations to other planets, etc.

The publication of the story created a popular sensation and even stirred scientific circles. The circulation of the Sun increased from day to day until the demand could not be supplied. At the conclusion of the story it was published in pamphlet form and sold by thousands. It was translated into several foreign languages and for a little while obtained general credence in Europe.

A leading New York paper of the day said: "Sir John has added a stock of knowledge to the present age that will immortalize his name and place it high on the page of science." Another leading newspaper said it read "with unspeakable emotions of pleasure and astonishment the article containing an account of the recent discoveries of Sir John Herschel at the Cape of Good Hope."

Savants in science and the learned pundits of newspapers were all deceived. The story was told with much the same fidelity of detail and air of realism that characterized Rev. Edward Everett Hale's "Man Without a Country," which, when it first appeared in the Atlantic Monthly, was supposed by everybody to be true. There was this difference, however: one was intended to be a hoax without any other object than to fool people, while the other was intended to point a line patriotic moral.

The Moon Hoax had a great run while it lasted, but it was short lived. It was first punctured by rival newspapers, then scientists saw the absurdity of it and finally the general public became convinced it was a fake.

Edgar A. Poe wrote an article analyzing and criticising it, in which he said: "The great effect wrought on the public mind is referable first, to the novelty of the idea; secondly, to the fancy-exciting and reason-repressing character of the alleged discoveries; thirdly, to the consummate tact with which the deception was brought forth; fourthly, to the exquisite vraisemblance of the narration." The hoax was quite in Poe's line and probably he regretted that he had not written it himself.

Locke died in March, 1871. A few days after his death a New York paper said: "Twenty-five or thirty years ago the name of the author of the 'Moon Hoax' was on everybody's lips. His brilliant essay made the fortune of the Sun newspaper; cravats, soaps and hair brushes were named after him. He was a perfume in a shop window and the winning horse on the race course. Since then his popularity has so completely died away that when the death of Richard Adams Locke was announced last week it affected the general public very much as if some one had said, 'Noah is dead.' How very, very quickly a popular idol sometimes slips off his pedestal."

The "Moon Hoax" was a brilliant piece of fiction, but it did not give its author any lasting reputation.

NO WONDER.

A bishop, during the exercise of his official duties, was once quartered upon the wealthiest resident of a certain village, whose wife chanced to be away from home, says Tit-Bits.

He is a slim man, and on this occasion, when his host inquired how he slept, and hoped he had passed an agreeable night, he answered with some vehemence: "No, I did not; I passed a very disagreeable night, indeed!"

The bishop departed, and when the wife of his host returned she naturally inquired who had been to the house in her absence.

"The Bishop of P—," said her husband.

"The Bishop of P—!" exclaimed the good woman. "And where did you put him to sleep?"

"In the spare bed, of course."

"In the spare bed!" shrieked the horrified matron. "Why, I put all the silver under the mattress before I went away."

"In Central Illinois, the hub of the so-called 'corn belt,' corn whisky is distilled without license by numerous farmers. They not only brew it for private use, but sell it to dealers in small towns, and realize large profits.

"The government officials seem to be ignorant of the fact, as during my lifetime in that locality I have neither known nor heard of an arrest for violating the internal revenue laws. You can stop at nearly any farm house and order a drink of 'belt rye,' as it is known, and you will be invited into the cellar, where casks of it are displayed with impunity."

MISSED THE FURROWS.

Daniel Maloney, the aeronaut who met his death recently at Santa Clara, through the overturning of his aeroplane, had never any fear of aerial accidents, says the Denver Times.

"The average aeronaut," he said one day, "is about as ill to run a flying machine as the Cecilltown farmer who crossed with Captain Lampford was to sail a ship.

"This farmer, the second day out, began to dislike the motion. His appetite disappeared, he had a slight headache, and he was pale and languid.

"As he leaned over the rail disconsolately, watching with a slight shudder the rise and fall of the horizon, Captain Lampford appeared.

"'Look here, Captain Lampford,' said the farmer, 'you don't understand your business.'

"The captain smiled. 'I don't understand your business, eh?' he said. 'What is the trouble with me?'

"'Why, blame it all,' said the farmer, you ought to keep in the furrows.'"

MILWAUKEE SENSATION

Jacob Heyl Makes Flat Denial of Serious Charges.

Says He Never Had Improper Relations With His Mother-in-Law.

Milwaukee, Oct. 11.—Jacob Heyl flatly denied he ever had any improper relations with his mother-in-law, Mrs. Lizette Schandein, whom he is alleged to have influenced to the extent that she willed her millions to his wife.

He was the first witness called after the case for the contestants, Emil Schandein, and Mrs. Louis F. Frank, was closed today in Judge Carpenter's court.

Mrs. Frank was the last witness for the contestants. She was permitted to give the details of the alleged visits of her brother-in-law, Jacob Heyl, to her bed chamber.

The testimony of Mr. Heyl, following immediately upon the testimony of Mrs. Frank, created a decided stir.

In reply to a direct question by Attorney Charles F. Quarles, Mr. Heyl denied that he had at any time sustained relations with Mrs. Schandein that were unlawful or improper.

"Did you ever have any relations with her such as would not have been proper in the presence of your wife and children?" Mr. Quarles continued.

"No, sir," said Mr. Heyl.

Mr. Heyl was emphatic in his denial of the testimony given by former servants in the Schandein house.

As Mr. Heyl gave his testimony his hands were clenched, his fingers being shut tightly. His strong profile showed to advantage. His voice rang out clearly through the court room.

"Were the rumors to the effect that you and Mrs. Schandein had improper relations circulated to your knowledge?" was the substance of a question by Mr. Quarles.

"Yes, sir," said Mr. Heyl, aggressively.

"Among other things, have you ever heard rumors to the effect that Mrs. Schandein had a natural child living in Germany?" was the import of another question.

"Yes, sir.

"Do you know to what period the rumors attached the birth of this alleged child?"

"In 1901."

Mr. Heyl then said he was in Germany with Mrs. Schandein at the time named. They were accompanied by his son, Eric Heyl, Mrs. Leonora Hilbert and by a servant.

Miss Hilbert is now Mrs. Browning.

THIRD GAME POSTPONED

Wet Grounds Prevent Meeting of the Baseball Giants.

Philadelphia, Oct. 11.—With honors even the New York national league baseball team and the Philadelphia team of the American league were scheduled to play today, the third game of the world's championship series on the local grounds. Philadelphia's victory yesterday developed the fact that the American league champions are up to form and the quality shown by New York in both games has proved that the teams are so well matched as to render impossible anything like a safe prediction concerning the final result.

The New York club arrived shortly after noon. The weather at 1 o'clock was doubtful.

The game was postponed on account of wet grounds.

LIVING IN PROXIMITY

Were the Three Young Wives of Robert Benicker.

All In Same Flat Building In New York.

New York, Oct. 11.—Accused of having had three young wives living simultaneously in the same flat building in Eighteenth street, each of whom believed that she was the only one, Robert Benicker was arrested last night and arraigned in court today on a complaint made by two of them. He is 25 years old and a painter.

The woman who claims to be his first wife, Norma, 19 years old, and Emily, 20 years old, who says she is the second Mrs. Benicker, told the police that a third wife was now in Fall River, Mass., and that they two, while still ignorant of each other's relations to Benicker, were persuaded by him that the Lowell girl was his sister. They said they had both supplied the money, which recently sent her back to Fall River.

The woman who says she is the first wife, Norma Benicker, told the police that after her husband left her and went to housekeeping with a second wife in Eighteenth street, she, herself, moved to the same building without knowing that Benicker was maintaining another wife there. Emily, who claims to be the other wife, corroborated this story and said furthermore, that she and Norma had been acquainted with each other before their marriage.

When they met again in the Eighteenth street house, they say they discovered that Benicker was the husband of both of them.

"POSTER GIRL" OF IOWA IS MARRIED

Miss Penn Weds Divorced Man And Former Wife Hysterical.

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 11.—It was learned here that Miss Jessica Penn, known as Iowa's "poster girl" among New York theatrical people, was married secretly last June to Ralph W. Evans, a local advertising solicitor, who first started her upon her career in posing.

The announcement of the wedding has caused a sensation. Evans was only recently divorced from his wife, Grace Evans, with whom he had resided in Des Moines for several years. He has a boy, Earle Evans, who is 16 and who declares that he will never speak to his new mamma.

When the former wife learned yesterday, of the wedding last June, and proof in the form of certified copies of the St. Joseph, Mich., county record were shown her, she fainted and became hysterical. She declared that the divorce was procured under duress, and that she had understood all the time that she was to marry Evans again and go to the West to live.

Mrs. Penn refused to accept the story of the secret wedding until the proofs were handed to her, and then she was for a time in a state of collapse.

Mrs. Evans says that three years ago her husband decided to go into the calendar business and came to her to ask where he could secure the service of a pretty young girl to pose for him. The wife introduced Miss Penn, who was then a high school graduate. The first sittings were made in Des Moines. Later Evans took the girl to Chicago to pose before the leading photographers there. Soon after Miss Penn went to New York, where she remained the greater part of the time and became famous as a poster girl.

"It had not been six months after the first sitting in the Des Moines gallery when people advised me to look out for Miss Penn and my husband," said Mrs. Evans. "I would not believe that there was any affection between them. I have never believed it until now, when the proof of the wedding comfronts me. For a long time my husband and I remained cold to each other. He admitted that it was on account of some girl, but I laughed when I told him of the reports people were circulating about him.

"Miss Penn's mother and I had a talk. She said that Evans had called upon her time and again, and that Miss Penn had been there and that everything was perfectly proper and right. I knew my husband and Miss Penn went to Chicago last June, but it was my understanding that they were simply getting more posters.

"My divorce seems to be dated before the wedding. I was never in court and never knew on what grounds I was being sued for divorce. Mr. Evans called upon me in my apartments in the Iliad late one night, and had two lawyers with him. They talked about the trouble that I was having with my husband and said that it should be all settled up. I agreed and signed some papers which I understood would give me enough money to support my boy. I have never received a cent, and I now learn that the papers do not give the authority to collect a cent."

TERRIBLE VENGEANCE.

Ku-Klux Sealed an Informer Up In a Barrel.

An ex-Confederate soldier, who served in the Southern army with distinguished gallantry, was telling a group in the Riggs house some interesting stories of the days that followed the surrender of Lee, says the Washington Post.

"I went to Memphis to five," said he, "after Appomattox, and was one of those who helped organize the Ku-Klux Klan. I have never been ashamed of my connection with that celebrated organization, for it did a tremendous lot of good in Tennessee. Gen. N. B. Forrest, the greatest cavalry chief who ever rode into battle, was supreme commander of the 'K. K. K.,' and whenever Forrest issued an order it was obeyed to the letter. The order had a supreme court, of which Gen. Albert Pike, the illustrious Mason, was chief justice, and this court always sifted testimony for and against any accused person before punishment was inflicted. Two prominent newspaper editors of Memphis were also members of the court. The total membership of the regularly organized Ku-Klux Klans of Tennessee was not less than 72,000, and never in the history of the world were men more closely banded or more loyal to each other.

"I was a member of the 'klan' for at least five years, and my separation from it was caused by a change of residence. In that time I am positive that the sentence of death was inflicted upon but three men, which goes to show that the Ku-Klux did not mete out summary vengeance on small offenders. Nor were its members, except in rare instances, citizens of low repute. On the contrary, only men of good character were invited to join, and Gen. Forrest was particular in seeing that only those of discretion and temperate habits were made members.

"But Tennessee at the time of the existence of the Ku-Klux was in radical hands; scalawags and carpetbaggers ruled the land to its sorrow, and Parson Brownlow, then governor, had a law passed which made it a capital offense for any man to be convicted of ku-kluxing or of belonging to the order. He even imported detectives from Chicago, who were instructed to find out all about the mysterious band which sent forth its warnings in letters ornamented with skulls and crossbones and daggers, and whose doings struck terror to the hearts of white and black miscreants alike.

"One of these detectives came on to Nashville. He was a bright fellow and ambitious to make a record. Brownlow gave him his orders, and he set out to discover things by pretending to be a rabid Southerner who was keenly anxious to become a K. K. K. General Forrest learned all about the man and his plans, and gave it out that he should be taken through a mock initiation, which would reveal nothing of the real Ku-Klu secrets. After this bogus ceremony the spy was told he was eligible to a second degree, which would reveal to him many secrets. This he took, and a rough ceremony it was, but the felow went through it gamely. Then they told him that there was still one more degree—the third—which would make him a full-fledged member, with a knowledge of all the workings and mysteries of the Klan. He was warned that this third degree was full of difficulties and considerable personal hardship. Wanting to make Brownlow a full report, the spy begged to be alowed to take it. This was the climax to which events had been tending. The third degree, weired and tragical, had for its main feature the imprisonment of a man in a barrel so shallowt of construction and so securely sealed up that deliverance was impossible for the victim, and the tossing of the same into the Cumberland river.

"A few weeks later the barrel, with a badly decomposed corpse inside, was fished out of the Mississippi, and never afterward did a candidate for initation, with ulterior purposes, try to break into the Ku-Klux Klan."

THE MOON HOAX.

It Fooled the Whole World Including the Learned Scientist.

One of the most remarkable cases on record where a newspaper was itself a party to a hoax played on the public for mercenary purposes was that of the once celebrated "Moon Hoax," which occurred nearly three-quarters of a century ago, says the Indianapolis Sun. The story thus designated appeared in the New York Sun in September, 1835. The Sun was started as a penny paper in 1833, and in January, 1835, it boasted of a daily circulation of 8,000—a large circulation for that day. But it wished a larger circulation, and did not care how it got it. The Moon Hoax was devised for this purpose.

The story was written by Richard Adams Locke, a bright and versatile Englishman of the day, who was then assistant editor of the Sun. Briefly, it purported to be an account of some wonderful astronomical discoveries that had been made by Sir John Herschel with a powerful telescope at the Cape of Good Hope. The writer of the story was sufficiently well versed in astronomical lore and phraseology to give it an air of truthfulness.

The story itself purported to have been copied from a recent supplement of the Edinburgh Philosophical Journal, and was one of the most ingeniously and elaborately constructed pieces of fiction ever written. It was published as a serial in the Sun and run through the daily issues of a whole week.

It described with great particularity the scientific preparations which had been made for the alleged discoveries. The telescope manufactured expressly for the purpose was said to have an object glass 24 feet in diameter, weighing 14,826 pounds, and having a magnifying power of 42,000 times. This magnifying power was multiplied by microscope attachment of great power. The discoveries were represented as including mountain ranges, flowing rivers with cascades, forests of trees of new and strange varieties, animals, birds and water fowls never seen on earth, etc.

One of the animals, as described by the pretended discoverer, was "of a bluish lead color, about the size of a goat, with a head and beard like him, and a single horn slightly inclined forward from the perpendicular. The female was destitute of the horn and beard, but had a much longer tail. It was gregarious and chiefly abounded on the accilvitous glades of the woods. In elegance of symmetry it rivaled the antelope, and like him it seemed an agile, sprightly creature, running with great speed and springing from the green turf with all the unaccountable antics of a young lamb or kitten."

The narrative also described a species of gray pelican, which was very numerous, and a black and white crane, both of which could be seen plunging their long necks into the water, evidently after fish.

Of animals the pretended discoverer classified nine species of mammalia and five of ovipatia. Among the former were a small kind of reindeer, the elk, the moose, a horned bear and a two-legged beaver. Many varieties of beautiful birds were seen and numerous specimens of an ourang-outang far more intelligent than any on the earth. No human beings were discovered, but creatures more resembling our conception of angels. The narrative also described in scientific language some wonderful discoveries alleged to have been made regarding the geological structure of the moon, its movements, its relations to other planets, etc.

The publication of the story created a popular sensation and even stirred scientific circles. The circulation of the Sun increased from day to day until the demand could not be supplied. At the conclusion of the story it was published in pamphlet form and sold by thousands. It was translated into several foreign languages and for a little while obtained general credence in Europe.

A leading New York paper of the day said: "Sir John has added a stock of knowledge to the present age that will immortalize his name and place it high on the page of science." Another leading newspaper said it read "with unspeakable emotions of pleasure and astonishment the article containing an account of the recent discoveries of Sir John Herschel at the Cape of Good Hope."

Savants in science and the learned pundits of newspapers were all deceived. The story was told with much the same fidelity of detail and air of realism that characterized Rev. Edward Everett Hale's "Man Without a Country," which, when it first appeared in the Atlantic Monthly, was supposed by everybody to be true. There was this difference, however: one was intended to be a hoax without any other object than to fool people, while the other was intended to point a fine patriotic moral.

The Moon Hoax had a great run while it lasted, but it was short lived. It was first punctured by rival newspapers, then scientists saw the absurdity of it and finally the general public became convinced it was a falce.

Edgar A. Poe wrote an article analyzing and criticising it, in which he said: "The great effect wrought on the public mind is referable first, to the novelty of the idea; secondly, to the fancy-exciting and reason-repressing character of the alleged discoveries, thirdly, to the consummate tact with which the deception was brought forth; fourthly, to the exquisite vraisemblance of the narration." The hoax was quite in Poe's line and probably he regretted that he had not written it himself.

Locke died in March, 1871. A few days after his death a New York paper said: "Twenty-five or thirty years ago the name of the author of the 'Moon Hoax' was on everybody's lips. His brilliant essay made the fortune of the Sun newspaper; cravats, soaps and hair brushes were named after him. He was a perfume in a shop window and the winning horse on the race course. Since then his popularity has so completely died away that when the death of Richard Adams Locke was announced last week it affected the general public very much as if some one had said, 'Noah is dead.' How very, very quickly a popular idol sometimes slips off his pedestal."

The "Moon Hoax" was a brilliant piece of fiction, but it did not give its author any lasting reputation.

NO WONDER.

A bishop, during the exercise of his official duties, was once quartered upon the wealthiest resident of a certain village, whose wife chanced to be away from home, says Tit-Bits.

He is a slim man, and on this occasion, when his host inquired how he slept, and hoped he had passed an agreeable night, he answered with some vehemence: "No, I did not; I passed a very disagreeable night, indeed!"

The bishop departed, and when the wife of his host returned she naturally inquired who had been to the house in her absence.

"The Bishop of P—," said her husband.

"The Bishop of P—!" exclaimed the good woman. "And where did you put him to sleep?"

"In the spare bed, of course."

"In the spare bed!" shrieked the horrified matron. "Why, I put all the silver under the mattress before I went away."

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

ADVANCE CONTINUES

Wheat Again Strong With Receipts Lighter and Cables Strong.

Flax Advances One Cent With Strong Buying In Evidence.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 11.—Wheat was again firmer today, and a higher Liverpool market and small receipts in the Northwest were the causes. These led to some good buying and some covering by shorts. The car situation is holding down northwestern receipts to an almost unheard of extent. Today there were less than 150 cars in Duluth, and half of these were macaroni wheat. The Liverpool market closed ½@⅝d higher, London and Antwerp unchanged, and Paris unchanged to ¼c higher.

Duluth exporters sold considerable Manitoba wheat for export, and report excellent bids from Germany.

The December option in the Duluth market closed ⅞c higher, ⅞c higher in Chicago, Minneapolis and Kansas City, 1⅛c in New York, and 1-⅛c in St. Louis.

Corn in the Chicago market closed ½c higher for December, and unchanged in Liverpool. December oats in Chicago closed ⅜c higher.

Car receipts of wheat were 149 at Duluth against 228 last year, and at Minneapolis 456 against 560 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 605 against 788 last year. Chicago received 50 against 58 last year. Winnipeg received 301 cars, of which 6 graded No. 1 hard, 195 No. 1 northern, and 141 No. 2 northern. The total last year was 229 cars.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,094,000 bus, last year 1,296,000 bus. Shipments 473,000 bus, last year 766,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 458,000 bus.

Bradstreet reported an increase of 9,249,000 bus in the world's visible supply of wheat. East of the Rockies there was an increase of 6,459,000 bus, and in Europe and afloat an increase of 2,790,000.

Primary receipts of corn were 460,000 bus, last year 374,000 bus. Shipments 399,000 bus, last year 360,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 250,000 bus. The world's visible supply of corn decreased 1,084,000 bus.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was dull and the market firm. The December option opened ⅝c higher at 81c and advanced steadily to 81¾c at 12:40 and closed there, a gain for the day of ⅞c. The May option advanced ⅞c to 85½c and closed at 85¾c.

Cash wheat was a little firmer under the smaller receipts and No. 1 northern was at 2c over the December option.

Flax was fairly active and strong, there being some good buying, presumably for crushing interests. October opened ½c higher at 96⅞ and advanced to 98¼c, closing there. November and December opened unchanged at 98c and advanced to 99½c, closing there. May advanced 1½c to $1.03¾.

Oats advanced ⅝c and rye was unchanged.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat to arrive, No. 1 northern, 83½c; No. 2 northern, 81c. On track, No. 1 northern, 83½c; No. 2 northern, 81c. Durum, No. 1, 78c; No. 2, 75c; December, 81¾c; October, 82½c; May, 85¾c. Flax to arrive, 98½c; on track, October, 98½c; November, 99¼c; December, 99⅝c; May, $1.03¾. Oats to arrive, 27½c; on track, 27½c. Rye, 46c. Barley, 34@46c.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 149; last year, 228; corn, 1; oats, 66; rye, 3; barley, 66; flax, 78; last year, 63.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Shows Strength on an Active Demand By Shorts.

Chicago, Oct. 11.—On active demand today from shorts and commission houses the wheat market here was strong. The strength was due to higher prices for wheat at Liverpool. Smaller receipts in the Northwest helped to stimulate demand. December opened ⅝c to ⅞c up at 86c to 86¼c, and, for a time, held within the opening range. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 625 cars, against 925 cars last week, and 791 cars a year ago.

Demand continued active throughout the entire day and the market gained much strength. For December the highest point of the day was reached at 88⅝c.

The close was strong, with December up ⅜c at 88¾c.

Decreased receipts had a bullish effect on the corn market. Commission houses were fair buyers. The selling was by pit traders. December opened ½c higher at 44½c, and sold at 44½@45c. Local receipts were 134 cars, with 30 of contract grade.

Corn advanced in sympathy with the strength of wheat. December selling up to 45¼c. The market closed strong, with December up ⅝c at 45c.

Continued excellent demand from exporters influenced considerable covering by shorts in oats and caused a firm undertone. December opened ¼c to ½c higher at 28⅜c to 28¼c, and held within the opening range. Local receipts were 241 cars.

Provisions were quiet and steady. January pork was unchanged at $12.37½. Lard was off a shade at $6.80@6.82½. Ribs were up a shade at $6.45@6.47½.

Grain Gossip.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Today's market was strong throughout the little relapse shortly after the opening being easily overcome prices ¾ to⅞c higher for the day. Primary receipts are still under a year ago and world-wide continued excellent milling demand at all primary points and this at advancing prices, seems to unsettle the confidence of the short sellers and create a more general belief by the trade that the bull position of our leading elevator concern was taken only after carefully analyzing conditions here and abroad. This feeling was strengthened by the initial purchases in Duluth by Germany, and caused the trade to ponder if there was not something to the big shortage to the Russian crop. As we have been saying for some time, the situation seems to be gathering strength daily, business today was of much larger volume than for some time, and seems to indicate an awakening to the conditions as expressed by the well-posted men of the trade. We would continue buying wheat on the moderate setbacks.

Corn—This market surely had its bull clothes on today, and while not what could be called rampantly bullish, was nevertheless a big, strong, healthy market. Trade seems to be waking up to the fact that the speculative situation, aside from anything else, is out of whack. Corn has been sold on the theory that we were to have the largest crop ever grown. The sellers evidently overlooked small stocks and splendid cash demand, with an improving export demand, which latter feature gives every promise of increasing in volume. The market is gaining in strength, and the shorts are correspondingly nervous. It would take very little to bring a sharp rally.

• • •

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—The market was advanced a ½c from last night's close at the opening this morning. A strong Liverpool and slackening Northwest receipts started buying, and as the tone was distinctly nervous, several ponderous short lines were covered on the way up. It was apparent all through the trading that the market was artificial and that free movement in either direction was being restricted by some powerful influence. The big bull is known to have bought freely on the curb and is credited with selling with equal freedom during the last half hour of the present character of fluctuations. The market is excellent for conservative scalping and should be sold on the hard spots for the time being.

DECLINE IS EXTENDED

In the Stock Market Following a Speech By Vanderlip.

Closing Was Soft With Weak Tone Throughout the List.

New York, Oct. 11.—Opening prices in the stock market today followed the earlier London quotations to a higher level. The trunk lines, Union Pacific and several specialties were prominent. New York Central, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, Erie, Delaware & Hudson and Illinois Central rose large fractions, Union Pacific about a point, Wisconsin Central 1¾ and Union Bag preferred 1½. Dealings were on a light scale.

Stocks did not extend their opening gains much, although a dozen or more were brought within the range of one point advances. Buying as on yesterday ran pretty generally to dividend paying railroad stocks. New York Central, Erie, Baltimore & Ohio, Illinois Central, Northern Pacific, Chicago, Great Western, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste Marie, and Steel Foundries rose 1, Delaware & Hudson, 2¾, Reading, 1¾, Steel Foundries preferred 2, Central of Jersey 1½, and Wisconsin Central preferred 2½. There was a sale of Lackawanna at an advance of 29 points. Great Northern preferred weakened 1, and Northwestern 1½.

Trading was quiet, but prices were well maintained, and some of the high priced stocks made sensational movements. Lackawanna rose 28 to 488, a record price. Delaware & Hudson, and Central of Jersey gained 3½; Steel Foundries preferred 3, and Reading first preferred 2. One point gains were established by St. Paul, Rock Island preferred, New York, New Haven & Hartford, and Reading second preferred. Losses were Pacific Coast, Great Northern preferred and Northwestern 2. Prices receded slightly at noon. Bonds were steady.

There was no particular feature to the dealings between 12 and 1 o'clock and the market was fractionally low in spots. Reading continued to be bought heavily and Locomotive reached 90. Great Northern preferred yielded 3½.

Selling on a large scale attributed to the tone of addresses of the American Bankers' association convention converted the earlier material gains into losses of great magnitude. Trading was very lively and declines precipitated. Canadian Pacific fell 2¾ and Consolidated Gas and Atlantic Coast Line fell 2 points below yesterday's close. St. Paul, Reading, Northern Pacific and Smelting fell ½ and Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Louisville & Nashville, New York Central, Manhattan, Copper 1 and Colorado Fuel 1 to 1⅞.

There was some hasty profit-taking by bears on the break, which caused a rally, but prices ran off again to a lower average than before. Declines from last night's level ran for Great Northern preferred 5½, Pacific Coast 3¼, Northern Pacific and Northwestern 3, Louisville & Nashville and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo, 2; Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, Delaware & Huson, Wisconsin Central preferred, United States Rubber, United States Steel preferred, Republic Steel preferred, American Car, Sugar, the Metropolitan stocks and General Electric a point or more. The selling movement spent its force and the market became dull again at small rallies and the closing was moderately active and weak.

Quotations furnished by Edwards-Wood Co., Room A, Torrey building.

Stock Gossip.

Paine, Weber & Co.: Vanderlip, in his speech at Washington, says: "Should a stock market speculation start from the present high level of prices, in the face of the extraordinary demand for capital and money which crops and business alike are making, the result might easily be temporary disaster. In a gathering like this Jeremiah's songs are not pleasant, but there are some that might be sung which would not be out of harmony with true conditions. Never was there a better time to preach conservatism or, however, perhaps, was it easier to be carried away by some of the obvious features of prosperity and to forget some of the dangers which in the end will be quite as potent in shaping the ultimate result. It is no time for prudence to be cast to the wind, no time for speculative commitments which would yield disaster if temporary reverse came, no time for laxness in many of the forms of business prudence and conservatism."

• • •

Hutton to Paine, Webber & Co.: Because Vanderlip's speech issues a note of warning against speculation from present prices it does not follow that stocks should be sold indiscriminately. Looks like market going lower.

• • •

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market closed soft and with a weak tone throughout the list. The opening was buoyant and some little advance developed early in the session. The change in sentiment comes altogether from the conservative attitude of Mr. Vanderlip in his speech at the bankers' conference in Washington. It was not what the trade in general was looking for and resulted in a general selling movement, market at the close showing quite an extended decline, excepting one or two specialties, which were firmly held by the pools. As we have been saying for some days, it is well, in a market of this kind, to be content with and take moderate profits when in sight. For the present we feel this advice is still good.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 11.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of $@11 points on active covering and buying by commission houses whose clients were influenced by reports of frost in the northwestern belt and higher cables. There was heavy realizing by recent buyers at the advance, however, also some fresh selling for short account on the ground that the frost had been too light to do material damage, and the market during the early session ruled nervous and irregular, selling back to within 4 or 5 points of last night's finals.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 5 points higher; middling uplands, 10.25; middling gulf, 10.50; sales, 153 bales. Futures closed barely steady; October, 9.66; November, 9.75; December, 9.91; January, 10.00; February, 10.07; March, 10.04; April, 10.18; May, 10.22.

Copper Gossip.

Paine, Webber & Co.: The market had a decided tendency until about noon today. Mr. Vanderlip made a speech this morning at the bankers' convention, and it had been generally expected that his views would be very bullish, and would define the position of the Standard Oil party in the market. Contrary to expectations, the speech was very reserved in its character, and this fact was taken advantage of by the floor traders to raid the entire list. Only a few stocks were shaken out, nowever, and the close was dull, but firm with prices only slightly changed for the day.

WEAKNESS IN THE COPPERS

Slump In New York Market Also Affects Them.

Black Mountain stock was the feature of the local market today and it shows remarkable strength. At the close today it was at $5 bid for stock upon which $4 has been paid. This is the highest premium that has been paid for the stock.

The copper stocks felt the effect of the lower prices in New York. North Butte which had been holding during the morning at $54 and sold as high as $54.12½, fell to $53 and closed with that price bid and $53.50 asked. Total sales were 1943 shares. Bisbee stocks were weaker also. Calumet & Pittsburg fell to $38 asked after holding at $39, Lake Superior & Pittsburg to $39.50 asked after being at $40, and Pitsburg & Duluth to $27.20 asked after selling at $28. Junction also was weaker, closing at $29 bid after selling at $30.

TWO KILLED BY A TRAIN

Mother and Son Struck Down On the Great Western.

Engineer Whistled Several Times But They Paid No Heed.

St. Paul, Oct. 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Pettingill and her son David were run down and instantly killed by a Chicago-Great Western passenger train at Inver Grove, a suburb of St. Paul today. The woman and her son were standing on the Great Western tracks watching a Rock Island train going down hill and did not see the train coming toward them. The engineer of the Great Western train blew his whistle several times to warn them of their danger, but did not slacken the speed of his train, thinking they would get off the tracks. When he realized that they were not aware of the approach of the Great Western train he applied the brakes, but with a grinding of wheels both were cut down and killed. Nothing is known of the couple except their names.

Shaw had been in a very weak state for several days before his death, and yesterday his employer decided to bring him to Duluth and place him in the hospital. Mr. Shillin and John Whalen accompanied the sick man, but before the city was reached, Shaw expired in the wagon.

The man was about 50 years of age, and so far as is known, had no family. The coroner held an inquest on the body, which was taken to Durkan & Crawford's morgue, and pronounced death to be due to alcoholism.

OFFERS $100,000 REWARD FOR CONVICTION OF FIENDS

New York, Oct. 11.—Isidor Wormser, the millionaire banker, offered $100,000 reward today for the conviction of a gang of men who recently assaulted Annie Thornton, a domestic employed in his household. In court today when five men were arraigned for the assault Mr. Wormser said:

"I will give $100,000 to have the perpetrators of this dastardly crime convicted and sent to prison."

Recently on Miss Thornton's birthday Mr. Wormser gave her $50 and a holiday as a reward for several years service in his employment. That evening while passing a stable on the west side, she said she was seized by two men and dragged into the stable and that about a dozen other men joined them there. She did not escape from the stable until the next morning. Her health was seriously affected by her experience.

The five men arraigned today were held in $2,000 bail each and the police announced that they expected to arrest nine more men in connection with the assault.

ROB SHIP OWNERS.

Sea Captains Have Many Ways of Plundering.

Few persons in the general commercial community have any idea of the amount of peculation indulged in by some masters of vessels in the merchant service, to the less and detriment of the owners of these ships.

Happily for the credit of the British mercantile marine, this class of dishonesty is in a great measure confined to the captains of foreign vessels more especially sailing ships, as, owing to the long and protracted voyages to and from distant countries, there are greater facilities offered than are to be found in steamers, which naturally complete their voyages in a much shorter space of time.

Owing to a long and varied experience in this branch of shipping, says a writer in a British journal, the truth of the statement contained in this article can be vouched for.

When a ship arrives in port after a voyage she is invariably boarded by a heterogeneous mass of humanity, all intent on having a deal of some kind with the confiding mariner. You will observe the ubiquitous "land-shark," with his collection of garments of every imaginable variety, which he offers at prices which only his disinterested desire to benefit his fellow-man and philanthropic nature would permit him to accept. Then you have the washerwoman, whose sole desire it is to impress those weather-beaten toilers of the deep with that delectable maxim, "cleanliness is next to godliness." Blacksmiths, shoemakers, stocking knitters, mock jewelry venders, laborers and others help to swell the motley crowd.

The ship broker's clerk and the ship chandler's representative are also in attendance; in fact, they are the most important personages with whom (after the custom house officers) the captain has to deal. It is with the connivance of the ship chandler that the malpractices referred to are carried out.

After the necessary formalities of reporting the ship in the custom house have been carried out by the captain, with the assistance of the ship broker, he visits the merchant or consignee, inspects a bill of lading, and, finding it in order, makes arrangements with the stevedore for discharging the cargo. He then places the first mate in charge and proceeds to take advatage of the leisure time now at his disposal to enjoy himself, see any sights which may prove interesting, and pay occasional visits to the theaters and music halls.

The shipchandler or his representative makes as a rule an obliging guide, and invariably proves a most hospitable host. In the office he is careful to keep a good supply of spirits, cigars and kindred luxuries, so that even the tedium of business is relieved of its monotony, but whether the captain will have to pay "hotel price" for these comforts in the long run is another question.

When a period of from four to five weeks has elapsed, the vessel being discharged, the captain proceeds to take in either cargo or ballast, as the case may be. It becomes the next duty to order stores and equipment for the outward voyage, and it is in this transaction that the owner is mulcted.

The captain's enjoyment and experience of shore life, especially if he should prove a thirsty soul, together with a laudable desire to purchase presents for his relatives and friends at home, will have depleted his purse to a considerable extent, and he feels it incumbent to reimburse himself for this extravagance. But how is this to be accomplished? Easily enough.

As soon as the stores, etc., which he has ordered have been put on board, he has the account prepared, which comprises generally tierces of salt beef, barrels of pork, boiled and roast beef and mutton in tins, soups, fruit, and vegetables in tins, flour, rice, barley, peas, beans, sugar, marraroni, molasses, ship's biscuits, butter or margarine for the crew, and bonded stores, consisting of tea, raw coffee, tobacco, cigars, whisky, rum, brandy and gin. The cheaper qualities of tobacco, such as shag and plug, are sold by the captain to the crew at about double the price paid for it, and the amount deducted from their wages when they reach port. Then follows equipment: Manila rope, comprising running gear, hauling lines, hawsers, mooring ropes, etc., tarred hemp, lanyard rope, ratline, spunyarn, marline, seaming and roping twine, sail, repairing and tarpaulin canvas, steel wire rope, seizing wire, nails, oakum, tar, paint, oils, varnish, blocks and many other commodities essential for a ship's outfit.

Now comes the most interesting portion of the narrative. In addition to the stores actually supplied, there are dove-tailed into the account a number of articles which have not been delivered, and which it would be impossible to trace at a subsequent period. A list of these stories is added to the ship's account, for which the captain takes credit in full out of monies received for freight. This often represents a rather large sum in excess of the requirements of the ship, and for which the owner receives no consideration.

An accounut is prepared in which are included the goods not supplied, duly receipted and handed to the captain, who in due course forwards it to the owner. A copy of the bogus account is held by the ship chandler in case of any request being made subsequently by the owner for a duplicate.

Of course, this swidle is not worked very frequently, as most owners are wide-awake nowadays and check all stores very carefully. But I have myself seen it brought off several times. Perhaps the publication of this article may prevent it being successful in future, as, of course, the vast majority of captains and officers are men of the highest honor, and would never dream of having a hand in any such practices.

LESSON IN ADVERSITY.

George Stephenson, inventor of the steam locomotive and the founder of railways, was the son of a fireman at the Wylam colliery, England, says the Chicago Journal. His father was a steady, honest workman, without great ability or great ambitions. The first employment that George Stephenson secured was the herding of cows. He later became a driver of the horses working the colliery gin. At the age of 14 he was assistant to his father at the Dewley colliery. At 15 he was a fireman. At 17 he was a "plugman" in the colliery.

Stephenson was 18 before he began to learn to read and to write. He then attended a night school. In 1801 he became a brakeman, and in his leisure time he studied and mended boots. When he was 21 he married. A year later his first wife died.

At this time Stephenson's prospects were so gloomy he contemplated emigration. His father became ill, and Stephenson had to care for both his parents. He was drawn for the militia and had to secure the money to pay a substitute. In 1808 he went to work on one of the engines in the Killingsworth pit.

Every Saturday he took his engine to pieces in order to learn its mechanism. Here he began his inventions, first the safety lamp for miners, later progressing to those that made him one of the greatest men of his time.

BOY ICHTHYOLOGIST.

Mrs. T. De Witt Talmage was regarding, on one of the Atlantic City piers, the multitude of strange fish that swam in their illuminated tanks of glass, says the Los Angeles Times.

"These fish," she said, smiling, "remind me of an incident that a young Wellesley girl narrated to me last month.

"She said she had been teaching a class of little boys on the East side. A boy rose in the class one morning to be questioned on the subject of fish, and she said to him:

"'Where do fish live?'

"'In water,' the boy answered.

"'Salt or fresh water?'

"'Both.'

"'Very good. And now do you think that you can give me the names of twelve salt water fish?'

"'Sure. Six whales, four sharks and two porpoises.'"

STOCK-HOLDERS' MEETING OF THE CALUMET & SONORA MINING COMPANY.—

The annual meeting of the Stockholders of the Calumet & Sonora Mining Company was held at the office of the company, Nos. 610-611 First National Bank Building, Tuesday, October 10th. The stockholders elected a Board of Directors consisting of

Marcus L. Fay,
H. V. Eva,
Charles W. Ericson,
James W. Norton,
J. E. Cooley,
W. D. Underhill,
H. L. Fenimer.

The Directors met soon after the Stockholders' Meeting and elected J. E. Cooley, President, Marcus L. Fay of Virginia Vice President, Charles W. Ericson Treasurer and H. V. Eva Secretary.

As President Cooley and Vice-President Fay were absent from the city, it was thought wise to adjourn the Directors' Meeting until Monday, October 16th.

During August last, J. W. Norton and J. E. Cooley visited the company's property, which adjoins the mines of the Green Consolidated Company at Cananea, Mexico. The property of the Calumet & Sonora Mining Company consists of three claims of about 175 acres of land. Mr. Cooley and Mr. Norton have great faith in the property and believe that the Calumet & Sonora Mining Company's property is equal to any in that very rich mining district. Neither one would consent to be elected a director or officer until they had examined the company's property.

The future plans of the company will be fully mapped out and decided upon at the adjourned Directors' Meeting.

The Czar—I hope you won't hang around this show of mine and interrupt the performance.

BERLIN DOCTOR SAYS A GIRL'S BITE IS WORSE THAN DEADLY SNAKE'S

Students at Wesleyan University Hear a Startling Announcement.

Saliva of Girl Would Send Person to Quick Death.

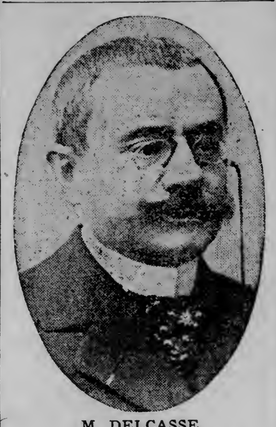

Fatal Results May Follow Chewing of Fingers By Babies.

New York, Oct. 12.—Prof. W. D. Miller, of the university of Berlin, sent shivers down the backs of the students at Wesleyan yesterday, when he announced in a lecture that the bite of a girl would often bring a quicker and more horrible death than the bite of a serpent, says a dispatch to the Herald from Middletown, Conn.

Prof. Miller, who has made a special study of the bacteria of the mouth, said that only a short time ago he experiment on a girl in Germany, and found that an arrow dipped in saliva from her mouth would send its victim into death throes more terrible than if dipped in the venom of the most deadly snake.

Prof. Miller said that there was a lesson in this for dentists.

M. DELCASSE,
Who Has Retired From the French Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

GERMANY IS DISPLEASED

With Disclosures of Incidents Previous To Delcasse's Retirement.

Great Britain Will Probably Deny Alleged Offers of Aid.

Berlin, Oct. 12.—Although no positive official declarations have been made on the subject of the Paris Matin's disclosure of what took place immediately before the retirement of M. Delcasse from the ministry of foreign affairs, inspired paragraphs indicate that they have produced a most unpleasant effect among the members of the German government. The manner in which the statements attributed to M. Delcasse were received in England is far from satisfactory and their prompt repudiation in an informal manner by the British government was what the German government desired.

It is expected that when questioned on the matter the British government will deny in parliament the Matin's specific utterances about British offers of military aid.

The British government, it is learned, gave Germany satisfactory assurances last June that no offensive or defensive alliance existed between Great Britain and France. The one thing obvious to the German public is that hope of political co-operation between Germany and France must for the time be given up.

MILITARY MANEUVERS

Will Be Held By Chinese Troops For First Time.

Pekin, Oct. 12.—An imperial edict has been issued establishing a new board dealing with police matters which have hitherto been left in the hands of local officials of the various provinces. They will henceforth be regulated from the central department.

Much curiosity is felt regarding the forthcoming Chinese military maneuvres. These will be conducted in the neighborhood of Paotinfung, and will continue from Oct. 23 to Oct. 26. They will be held on entirely modern lines, and upwards of 40,000 men of all arms will be in line.

These maneuvres will be the first of the kind ever held in China. Yuan Shai Kai, the commander-in-chief of the Chinese army, has issued a proclamation, calling on the troops to do their best and avoid making themselves a laughing stock in the eyes of foreigners.

MOB OF 1,000 LYNCHES NEGRO AT ELKTON, KY.

Elkton, Ky., Oct. 12.—Shortly after midnight a mob of about 1,000, supposed to be from Trenton, took Frank Leavell, a one-legged negro, from jail and lynched him in a nearby wood.

Leavell was arrested on the charge of attempting to enter the room of a young lady at Trenton last Saturday night. He confessed.

BRITISH REPAIR SHIP ASSISTANCE IS ASHORE.

Gibraltar, Oct. 12.—The British repair ship Assistance is ashore in Tel-tuan bay, Morocco. Warships, steamers and lighters have gone from here to her aid. A heavy gale endangers the position of the vessel.

The Assistance is fitted with a foundry, machine tools, etc., carries a crew of 262 men and mounts ten 3-pounder quick firing guns.

DENISON TO RECEIVE A HIGH DECORATION.

Seattle, Oct. 12.—"H. V. Denison, the American legal adviser of the Japanese war office, is to receive high decoration from the emperor for his services at the Portsmouth peace conference."

This is the statement made to the Post-Intelligencer correspondent, by Shaw Nishimura, who is on his way from Tokio to Montreal, where he represents the Japan Central Tea Traders' association.

FIREMEN ARE PUNISHED.

Liverpool, Oct. 12.—The thirty-three firemen of the White Star liner Oceanic who were arrested after her arrival here on the charge of conspiring to disobey the captain's orders during the voyage from New York were each sentenced today to a week's imprisonment at hard labor.

LUTHERANS BEGIN THIRTIETH CONFERENCE.

Milwaukee, Oct. 12.—Nearly 200 ministers and lay delegates representing twelve synods of the Evangelical Lutheran church of North America were present today when the thirtieth annual convention of the general council opened at the Church of Redeemer in this city. The opening service was devotional in nature, holy communion being administered, followed by an address by Rev. Theodore Schmauk, president of the convention. A Schmauk, president of the convention. At this meeting strong efforts will be made to promote the English branch of the church, which is thought to be adopted to evangelistic work among the younger people.

WOMEN CONTINUE GOLF TOURNAMENT.

New York, Oct. 12.—Play in the Woman's National Golf Championship tournament was continued on the links of the Morris County Golf club, at Convent station, N. J., today, in bright and cool weather. A brisk northwest wind blew across the links with sufficient force to baffle the efforts of the golfers in their long game. Today's play consisted of the third round of 18-hole match play.

MEETING OF GRAND TRUNK.

London, Oct. 12.—At a semi-annual meeting of shareholders of the Grand Trunk road today the report of the board of directors was unanimously adopted. The president, Sir Charles Rivers Wilson, spoke most encouragingly of the prospects, particularly in respect to the Pacific extension of the Grand Trunk.

MAN IS FITTED WITH NEW EYELIDS

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 12.—A most remarkable surgical operation has been performed at Mount Carmel hospital, by which a man was given a new set of lower eyelids, and an examination made today for the first time since the work was done promises that it will be entirely successful.

Last February L. W. Kerr was burned about the face and head, and his lower eyelids were lost. Some time ago an attempt was made to replace them, but was unsuccessful. Last Saturday another trial was made. The new lids were formed by grafting skin from Kerr's arm. Mr. Kerr's eyes have not suffered from the operation.

NEW YORK REPUBLICAN ENDS LIFE RATHER THAN FACE A CRIMINAL TRIAL

Armitage Mathews, Secretary of County Republican Committee, Jumps From His Window.

Was a Prominent Politician and Close Friend of Former Governor Black and Abe Gruber.

New York, Oct. 12.—Rather than face trial on the indictments charging him with fraudulently taking money from the Weissel estate, Armitage Mathews, lawyer and secretary of the county Republican committee, committed suicide today by jumping from a window in his apartment to a stone-paved court yard. He struck on his head, fracturing the skull, and died in a short time. Mathews, who was a young man, had advanced rapidly both in the practice of his profession and in politics. He was a friend of Former Governor Black and of Abraham Gruber, and they were loyal to him in his trouble, acting as legal advisers, and doing all they could to aid him to obtain the change of venue from this county, for which he applied. The change of venue was denied yesterday, and trial of the case was set for today, before Justice Davy, in the criminal branch of the supreme court.

Early this morning Mathews received a special delivery letter. After reading it his housekeeper heard him go to a bathroom and open a window. A few seconds later he jumped to his death. Several tenants in a house in the rear of Mathews' apartment saw him jump. A doctor was hurriedly summoned, but could do nothing, and Mathews died in a few minutes.

Mathews was indicted last May on charges of conspiracy and grand larceny, growing out of the Weissel estate, of which David Rothschild, wrecker of the Federal bank, was administrator. Rothschild, John W. Wooten and Lawyer Samuel I. Ferguson were all indicted with Mathews on the same charges. Rothschild was already serving a long term in state's prison for wrecking the Federal bank, and Wooten was convicted in June and sentenced to nine years and five months in Sing Sing. Wooten was kept in the Toombs as a possible important witness against Mathews. Ferguson was also expected to be a witness for the prosecution of Mathews.

Mathews was the local representative of the Bankers' Surety company of Cleveland, which was on Rothschild's bond for $400,000 as administrator of the Weissel estate. It was agreed by the four accused men, according to the indictment, that Rothschild was to have sole possession of the estate and that whatever money he borrowed on it was to be shared by his associates.

Mathews at one time was an assistant district attorney. He served three terms as a member of the board of aldermen. Two years ago he was made secretary of the county Republican committee. After Rothschild was convicted and sent to Sing Sing prison, he drew up on bits of papers a series of statements, in which he accused Mathews of having a share in the looting of the Weissel estate. Eventually the statements reached District Attorney Jerome, and Rothschild was brought to New York to testify against Mathews.

BUOYANCY IN PIG IRON

In All Parts of Country and Prices Have Advanced.

Blast Furnace Returns Show Increase In September Production.

New York, Oct. 12.—The Iron Age today says: Our monthly blast furnace returns show that production in September, in spite of the fact that it was a short month, was 1,898,873 gross tons in August, and 1,741,935 tons in tons in August, and 1,741,953 tons in July. Returns from all the steel companies make their pig iron product 1,262,033 tons in September against 1,186,050 tons in August, an increase in spite of the fact that the Pittsburg district produced only 449,632 tons in September, as compared with 488,119 tons in August. The returns indicate that the merchant furnaces did not do as well in September as expected, their production having been 657,623 tons, while they made 636,840 tons in August.

The capacity at work has increased in September and stood, on Oct. 1, at 445,468 tons per week, as contrasted with 412,563 tons on Sept. 1.

There has been a good deal of buoyancy in the pig iron markets in all parts of the country, and prices have been further advanced. In the West the International Harvester company has purchased between 45,000 and 50,000 tons. 20,000 tons from an Alabama interest, 7,000 tons from Virginia producers and the balance from Northern furnaces. Three cast iron pipe concerns have taken very close to 50,000 tons between them, and there has been some very good buying by the general foundry trade, a Pittsburg melter taking 11,000 tons.

Quite a number of Eastern open hearth plants are negotiating for additional quantities of basic iron. While the buying of Bessemer and basic iron in the Central West has been rather light during the past week, it is known that two large steel interests are figuring on the purchase of some large blocks for the first six months of next year.

Some further goodly orders have come to the rail mills, including 45,000 tons additional from the Northern Pacific, 35,000 tons from the Great Northern, 29,000 tons from the Minneapolis & St. Louis, and 13,000 tons from the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient. Manufacturers of frogs and switches have ordered between 10,000 and 12,000 tons. A good deal of business is pending in bridge material, fully 60,000 tons being under negotiation.

In the Eastern skelp trade an order for 5,000 tons, the first for many months, is regarded as the harbinger of better times. The lighter lines are active and in good shape, and even the tin plate trade is showing signs of renewed life. Reports from Europe continue very encouraging.

POLITICAL STATUS

Of Korea Will Be Decided at Coming Jap Conference.

Seoul, Korea, Oct. 12.—Japanese Minister Hayashi started for Tokio today for the purpose of consulting the government and elder statesmen. Minister Hayashi recently recommended the declaration of a Japanese protectorate over Korea as the only means of making effectual Japanese projects in Korea. It is probable that the coming conference will definitely decide the political status of Korea. The local Japanese believe that eventually all the foreign legations will be withdrawn from Seoul, and that the diplomatic business of Korea will be handled altogether in Tokio.

EX-SPEAKER HENDERSON MAY DIE AT ANY MOMENT

Members of His Family Are Constantly at Bedside, But He May Live For Months.

Dubuque, Iowa, Oct. 12.—There is very little change in the condition of ex-Speaker David B. Henderson, although his death may come at any time. Members of his family are constantly at his bedside in his quarters at the Hotel Julien.

Dr. J. S. Hancock, who recently took charge of his case, is of the opinion that death may come at any time, or the patient may yet live six months or more. A sudden rush of blood to the head, he said, might kill him instantly. Trained nurses are constantly with him, the ex-speaker being in such a weakened condition that he is barely able to move.

THE RHODE ISLAND DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION WILL BE HARMONIOUS

Providence, R. I., Oct. 12.—With no important contests for nominations and little difference of opinion as to the platform to be adopted, the Democratic state convention in this city today opened with every promise of harmony. The plank in the platform upon which chief emphasis would be laid was expected to be a declaration in favor of a reapportionment of the legislative representation.

It was anticipated that Lucius F. C. Garvin, governor for two terms up to last January, would be nominated for that office again today by acclamation. For lieutenant governor the nomince seemed likely to be either J. Clark Tucker of Narragansett or Col. Patrick Hayes of Pawtucket. The other nominations were expected to be:

For secretary of state, Frank E Fitzsimmons of Lincoln; for general treasurer, Albert H. Olney of Providence; for attorney general, Thomas A. Carroll of Providence.

THERE WERE FORTY-FIVE DEATHS FROM FOOTBALL IN FIVE YEARS

New York, Oct. 12.—Forty-five deaths and hundreds of serious injuries is the record of football for the last five years, according to a canvass made by the Herald, the result of which is printed today. In almost every instance the death or injury was due directly to the heavy mass plays against which, the Herald says, President Roosevelt and the country at large are protesting so strongly.

Sixteen died as a result of internal injuries, four from broken necks, six from concussion of the brain, eight from broken backs, three from paralysis, two from heart failure, one from lockjaw, one from blood poisoning, due to a cut received in a game, one from hemorrhages and two from meningitis, induced by spinal injuries suffered in play. The injuries included ten legs and fourteen collar bones broken and four skulls fractured.

SERIOUS EXPLOSION ON TORPEDO BOAT

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 12.—Michael Marray, chief water tender and Patrick Saulsberry, second class fireman, on the United States torpedo boat Stockton, are at the Norfolk naval hospital seriously scalded as the result of an accident on the Stockton while that vessel was out from this yard on a few days' cruise.

The men were in the fire room when a tube blew out and a draft from above caused the men to be both scalded by the dry steam which enveloped them and burned by the fire from the boiler which was forced out from below. Marray's condition is most serious and there are fears that he cannot survive. The Stockton was but little injured by the accident.

NO CLEW TO EXPRESS CLERK OR $101,000

Pittsburg, Oct. 12.—The authorities are as much in the dark today as they have been since the disappearance of Edward G. Cunliffe, the Adams Express money clerk, and the $101,000, which he is charged with having taken. A conference was held today in the office of the superintendent of the Pittsburg detectives, at which the officials of private detective agencies participated, and it was said that a new plan of operation has been decided upon, demonstrating that previous clews were of no importance. It was announced after the meeting that a supreme effort will be made to arrest the fugitive, but the details of this proposed effort were not made known. Reports are being received in this city from different parts of the country that the missing man has been seen, but none are given credence. Of the numerous clews already advanced, a majority of them have been investigated without results. The robbery, notwithstanding the simple manner in which it was executed, is pronounced by the police officials one of the most puzzling on record.

SIMPSON IS WEAKER.

Wichita, Kas., Oct. 12.—Ex-Congressman Jerry Simpson, who is ill at a local hospital, passed a restless night, and his condition showed no improvement early today. A choking spell has weakened him, and he takes nourishment with difficulty.

DISCOVERY OF MAN'S HEAD ON THE STREET REVEALS A MURDER

Thomas F. Corcoran Shot In Face and His Body Dismembered.

Arms and Legs Were Found Hidden In a Suit Case.

Elevator Runner Named Bauer Charged With Awful Deed.

New York, Oct. 12.—The finding of a man's head in East Eighteenth street, near Avenue C, early today, resulted in the discovery of an unusually revolting murder, the victim of which was Thomas F. Corcoran. Corcoran was killed probably last night, in the house, No. 149 Third avenue. After the picking up of the head, the other portions of the body were found cut to pieces in the Third avenue house. The arms below the elbows, and the legs below the knees, had been packed in a suit case, and the torso and remaining portions of the arms and legs were hidden in a clothes hamper in a room occupied by Frederick Bauer, an elevator runner. Bauer was arrested.

The point at which the head was found is more than a quarter of a mile away from 149 Third avenue. The head was wrapped in the Sunday supplement of a German newspaper and a blue and white shirt. The murder was discovered through a story told by George Lanole, who had a room adjoining Bauer's, and who rushed to a police station today, saying that he had lain awake for hours listening to noises which, he thought, proceeded from Bauer's room. He said that late last night he heard at least two men quarreling in the adjoining room. He heard a shot, and the sound of some one falling to the floor. Then he went to sleep. About 2:30 this morning, Lanole said he was awakened by strange noises in the room where the shot had been heard. Twice a man opened the door and went out, and Lanole, after lying awake listening for some time, decided that some of the sounds he heard were the noises of bones being broken. This suspicion caused him to notify the police.

Bauer was found entering his room by the police and said to them: "I found my room like this when I awoke this morning."

He said that he had brought two men to his room last night, one a soldier. Bauer fell asleep while these men talked; he said, and when he awoke the soldier was gone leaving the other's body as the police found it. The police found that Bauer's socks, the right arm of his undershirt and the right arm of an outer shirt were covered with blood. A badly nicked razor was found on top of a trunk in Bauer's room and a revolver with one chamber empty was also found in the room.

Bauer, who is 39 years old, is employed as an elevator man at the Union Square hotel, and when he went to work today he was sent home because of extreme nervousness. An examination of Corcoran's head showed that he had been shot in the face.

The police make the allegation that it was a crime of degeneracy. Corcoran came here from Ireland several years ago and made his home in this city with a married sister. He was a ticket chopper on the elevated railroad.

LUKE E. WRIGHT,
Governor General of the Philippines, Who is Dissatisfied With Conditions and Will Resign in December.

WRIGHT IS TO RESIGN

Governor General of the Philippines Not Satisfied With Conditions

President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft Have Successor Selected.

Washington, Oct. 12.—By reason of what appears to be dissatisfaction with the situation in the Philippines, Luke E. Wright, governor general of the Philippines will retire from that position about the first of December. Gen. Wright is expected to arrive in the United States during that month and is entitled to six months leave of absence, prior to the formal relinquishment of his labors as governor general. It is understood that he expects to return to Nashville, Tenn. to resume the practice of law. President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft, it is believed have decided upon the successor to Gen. Wright, but no intimation has been permitted to become public as to his identity. It can be stated reasonably, definitely, that Gen. Wright's successor will not be a man now connected with the commission.

COLDER WEATHER AIDS FIGHT AGAINST FEVER.

New Orleans, Oct. 12.—Still colder weather, the mercury going to 58 at New Orleans and under 40 in many other parts of the state, with frost in the middle section of the state, today increased the probability of the early extinction of yellow fever throughout Louisiana and Mississippi, the two states which have been infected since August last.

In New Orleans the report for the preceding twenty-four hours was considered by the marine hospital authorities the best since July.

BUT TWO SCOTCH BANKS FAIL IN HALF A CENTURY

Scotland Banker Tells Americans How They Conduct Business There.

Washington, Oct. 12.—Junkets in all directions around Washington and a program of oratory and business confronted the thousands of members of the American Bankers' association in convention here today. Work was done first and then the bright sunshine and crisp fall air were enjoyed. After the session in the Columbia theater which occupied the morning, the bankers divided according to personal inclination. Some witnessed the exhibition drill of the cavalry at Fort Myer, while others avail themselves of the many tourist excursions of the city.

The program of the convention today, included first a discussion of practical banking questions by the convention. The discussion was limited to thirty minutes and speeches to five minutes. Prof. Joseph French Johnson, dean of the New York University School of Commerce, accounts and finance, told the convention of the advantages of commercial education; the Scotch system of banking was explained by Mr. Robert Blyth, general manager of the Union bank of Scotland; Mr. Walker Hill, president Mechanics-American National bank, St. Louis discussed practical benefits of membership in the American Bankers' association. The general end of business was discussed upon the call of sections north, south, east and west.

An interesting history of the Scotch systems of banking was presented to the convention by Robert Blyth, general manager of the Union Bank of Scotland, located at Glasgow. The first Scotch bank was established in 1695. Today there are but ten banks in Scotland, seven doing nine-tenths of the business. The chief characteristic of the Scotch system is the right of banks to issue the one-pound note, as the result of which Scotland retains today her paper currency almost to the exclusion of metal currency, while the reverse is true in England.

Mr. Blyth maintained that it was the one-pound note that enabled the net work of branch banks to be maintained in Scotland, and that encouraged the savings of the poorer classes. With the English five-pound notes and her metallic currency, he said, these branch banks could not have been maintained because of the phohibitive cost. The aggregate deposits of the ten Scotch banks reach $500,000,000.

Another distinctive feature of the Scotch system is its cash credit account, wherein a trader or manufacturer is enabled to borrow from the banks temporarily by executing a bond to which he gets the signature of two or more friends along with his own. The bank accepts the bonds and honors checks up to the amount named in it, obviating the pledging of securities. Interest is not charged except on the amount drawn. The uniform interest, discount and commission charged by the ten Scotch banks is a distinctive feature. During the last half century there have been but two bank failures in Scotland.

LUTHERANS BEGIN THIRTIETH CONFERENCE.

Milwaukee, Oct. 12.—Nearly 200 ministers and lay delegates representing twelve synods of the Evangelical Lutheran church of North America were present today when the thirtieth annual convention of the general council opened at the Church of Redeemer in this city. The opening service was devotional in nature, holy communion being administered, followed by an address by Rev. Theodore Schmauk, president of the convention. A Schmauk, president of the convention. At this meeting strong efforts will be made to promote the English branch of the church, which is thought to be adopted to evangelistic work among the younger people.

WOMEN CONTINUE GOLF TOURNAMENT.

New York, Oct. 12.—Play in the Woman's National Golf Championship tournament was continued on the links of the Morris County Golf club, at Convent station, N. J., today, in bright and cool weather. A brisk northwest wind blew across the links with sufficient force to baffle the efforts of the golfers in their long game. Today's play consisted of the third round of 18-hole match play.

MEETING OF GRAND TRUNK.

London, Oct. 12.—At a semi-annual meeting of shareholders of the Grand Trunk road today the report of the board of directors was unanimously adopted. The president, Sir Charles Rivers Wilson, spoke most encouragingly of the prospects, particularly in respect to the Pacific extension of the Grand Trunk.

MAN IS FITTED WITH NEW EYELIDS

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 12.—A most remarkable surgical operation has been performed at Mount Carmel hospital, by which a man was given a new set of lower eyelids, and an examination made today for the first time since the work was done promises that it will be entirely successful.

Last February L. W. Kerr was burned about the face and head, and his lower eyelids were lost. Some time ago an attempt was made to replace them, but was unsuccessful. Last Saturday another trial was made. The new lids were formed by grafting skin from Kerr's arm. Mr. Kerr's eyes have not suffered from the operation.

NEW YORK REPUBLICAN ENDS LIFE RATHER THAN FACE A CRIMINAL TRIAL

Armitage Mathews, Secretary of County Republican Committee, Jumps From His Window.

Was a Prominent Politician and Close Friend of Former Governor Black and Abe Gruber.

New York, Oct. 12.—Rather than face trial on the indictments charging him with fraudulently taking money from the Weissel estate, Armitage Mathews, lawyer and secretary of the county Republican committee, committed suicide today by jumping from a window in his apartment to a stone-paved court yard. He struck on his head, fracturing the skull, and died in a short time. Mathews, who was a young man, had advanced rapidly both in the practice of his profession and in politics. He was a friend of Former Governor Black and of Abraham Gruber, and they were loyal to him in his trouble, acting as legal advisers, and doing all they could to aid him to obtain the change of venue from this county, for which he applied. The change of venue was denied yesterday, and trial of the case was set for today, before Justice Davy, in the criminal branch of the supreme court.

Early this morning Mathews received a special delivery letter. After reading it his housekeeper heard him go to a bathroom and open a window. A few seconds later he jumped to his death. Several tenants in a house in the rear of Mathews' apartment saw him jump. A doctor was hurriedly summoned, but could do nothing, and Mathews died in a few minutes.

Mathews was indicted last May on charges of conspiracy and grand larceny, growing out of the Weissel estate, of which David Rothschild, wrecker of the Federal bank, was administrator. Rothschild, John W. Wooten and Lawyer Samuel I. Ferguson were all indicted with Mathews on the same charges. Rothschild was already serving a long term in state's prison for wrecking the Federal bank, and Wooten was convicted in June and sentenced to ning years and five months in Sing Sing. Wooten was kept in the Toombs as a possible important witness against Mathews. Ferguson was also expected to be a witness for the prosecution of Mathews.

Mathews was the local representative of the Bankers' Surety company of Cleveland, which was on Rothschild's bond for $400,000 as administrator of the Weissel estate. It was agreed by the four accused men, according to the indictment, that Rothschild was to have sole possession of the estate and that whatever money he borrowed on it was to be shared by his associates.

Mathews at one time was an assistant district attorney. He served three terms as a member of the board of aldermen. Two years ago he was made secretary of the county Republican committee. After Rothschild was convicted and sent to Sing Sing prison, he drew up on bits of papers a series of statements, in which he accused Mathews of having a share in the looting of the Weissel estate. Eventually the statements reached District Attorney Jerome, and Rothschild was brought to New York to testify against Mathews.

BUOYANCY IN PIG IRON

In All Parts of Country and Prices Have Advanced.

Blast Furnace Returns Show Increase In September Production.

New York, Oct. 12.—The Iron Age today says: Our monthly blast furnace returns show that production in September, in spite of the fact that it was a short month, was 1,898,873 gross tons in August, and 1,741,935 tons in tons in August, and 1,741,953 tons in July. Returns from all the steel companies make their pig iron product 1,262,033 tons in September against 1,186,050 tons in August, an increase in spite of the fact that the Pittsburg district produced only 449,632 tons in September, as compared with 488,119 tons in August. The returns indicate that the merchant furnaces did not do as well in September as expected, their production having been 657,623 tons, while they made 636,840 tons in August.

The capacity at work has increased in September and stood, on Oct. 1, at 445,468 tons per week, as contrasted with 412,563 tons on Sept. 1.

There has been a good deal of buoyancy in the pig iron markets in all parts of the country, and prices have been further advanced. In the West the International Harvester company has purchased between 45,000 and 50,000 tons. 20,000 tons from an Alabama interest, 7,000 tons from Virginia producers and the balance from Northern furnaces. Three east iron pipe concerns have taken very close to 50,000 tons between them, and there has been some very good buying by the general foundry trade, a Pittsburg melter taking 11,000 tons.

Quite a number of Eastern open hearth plants are negotiating for additional quantities of basic iron. While the buying of Bessemer and basic iron in the Central West has been rather light during the past week, it is known that two large steel interests are figuring on the purchase of some large blocks for the first six months of next year.

Some further goodly orders have come to the rail mills, including 45,000 tons additional from the Northern Pacific, 35,000 tons from the Great Northern, 25,000 tons from the Minneapolis & St. Louis, and 13,000 tons from the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient. Manufacturers of frogs and switches have ordered between 10,000 and 12,000 tons. A good deal of business is pending in bridge material, fully 60,000 tons being under negotiation.

In the Eastern skelp trade an order for 5,000 tons, the first for many months, is regarded as the harbinger of better times. The lighter lines are active and in good shape, and even the tin plate trade is showing signs of renewed life. Reports from Europe continue very encouraging.

POLITICAL STATUS

Of Korea Will Be Decided at Coming Jap Conference.

Seoul, Korea, Oct. 12.—Japanese Minister Hayashi started for Tokio today for the purpose of consulting the government and elder statesmen. Minister Hayashi recently recommended the declaration of a Japanese protectorate over Korea as the only means of making effectual Japanese projects in Korea. It is probable that the coming conference will definitely decide the political status of Korea. The local Japanese believe that eventually all the foreign legations will be withdrawn from Seoul, and that the diplomatic business of Korea will be handled altogether in Tokio.

EX-SPEAKER HENDERSON MAY DIE AT ANY MOMENT

Members of His Family Are Constantly at Bedside, But He May Live For Months.

Dubuque, Iowa, Oct. 12.—There is very little change in the condition of ex-Speaker David B. Henderson, although his death may come at any time. Members of his family are constantly at his bedside in his quarters at the Hotel Julien.

Dr. J. S. Hancock, who recently took charge of his case, is of the opinion that death may come at any time, or the patient may yet live six months or more. A sudden rush of blood to the head, he said, might kill him instantly. Trained nurses are constantly with him, the ex-speaker being in such a weakened condition that he is barely able to move.

THE RHODE ISLAND DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION WILL BE HARMONIOUS

Providence, R. I., Oct. 12.—With no important contests for nominations and little difference of opinion as to the platform to be adopted, the Democratic state convention in this city today opened with every promise of harmony. The plank in the platform upon which chief emphasis would be laid was expected to be a declaration in favor of a reapportionment of the legislative representation.

It was anticipated that Lucius F. C. Garvin, governer for two terms up to last January, would be nominated for that office again today by acclamation. For lieutenant governor the nomince seemed likely to be either J. Clark Tucker of Narragansett or Col. Patrick Hayes of Pawtucket. The other nominations were expected to be:

For secretary of state, Frank E Fitzsimmons of Lincoln; for general treasurer, Albert H. Olney of Providence; for attorney general, Thomas A. Carroll of Providence.

THERE WERE FORTY-FIVE DEATHS FROM FOOTBALL IN FIVE YEARS

New York, Oct. 12.—Forty-five deaths and hundreds of serious injuries is the record of football for the last five years, according to a canvass made by the Herald, the result of which is printed today. In almost every instance the death or injury was due directly to the heavy mass plays against which, the Herald says, President Roosevelt and the country at large are protesting so strongly.

Sixteen died as a result of internal injuries, four from broken necks, six from concussion of the brain, eight from broken backs, three from paralysis, two from heart failure, one from lockjaw, one from blood poisoning, due to a cut received in a game, one from hemorrhages and two from meningitis, induced by spinal injuries suffered in play. The injuries included ten legs and fourteen collar bones broken and four skulls fractured.

SERIOUS EXPLOSION ON TORPEDO BOAT

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 12.—Michael Marray, chief water tender and Patrick Saulsberry, second class fireman, on the United States torpedo boat Stockton, are at the Norfolk naval hospital seriously scalded as the result of an accident on the Stockton while that vessel was out from this yard on a few days' cruise.

The men were in the fire room when a tube blew out and a draft from above caused the men to be both scalded by the dry steam which enveloped them and burned by the fire from the boiler which was forced out from below. Marray's condition is most serious and there are fears that he cannot survive. The Stockton was but little injured by the accident.

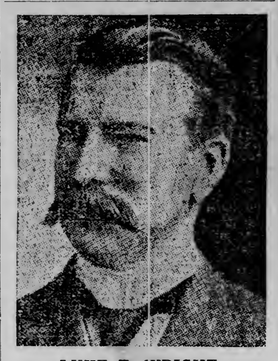

NO CLEW TO EXPRESS CLERK OR $101,000

Pittsburg, Oct. 12.—The authorities are as much in the dark today as they have been since the disappearance of Edward G. Cunliffe, the Adams Express money clerk, and the $101,000, which he is charged with having taken. A conference was held today in the office of the superintendent of the Pittsburg detectives, at which the officials of private detective agencies participated, and it was said that a new plan of operation has been decided upon, demonstrating that previous clews were of no importance. It was announced after the meeting that a supreme effort will be made to arrest the fugitive, but the details of this proposed effort were not made known. Reports are being received in this city from different parts of the country that the missing man has been seen, but none are given credence. Of the numerous clews already advanced, a majority of them have been investigated without results. The robbery, notwithstanding the simple manner in which it was executed, is pronounced by the police officials one of the most puzzling on record.

SIMPSON IS WEAKER.

Wichita, Kas., Oct. 12.—Ex-Congressman Jerry Simpson, who is ill at a local hospital, passed a restless night, and his condition showed no improvement early today. A choking spell has weakened him, and he takes nourishment with difficulty.

DISCOVERY OF MAN'S HEAD ON THE STREET REVEALS A MURDER

LUKE E. WRIGHT,
Governor General of the Philippines, Who is Dissatisfied With Conditions and Will Resign in December.

Thomas F. Corcoran Shot In Face and His Body Dismembered.

Arms and Legs Were Found Hidden In a Suit Case.

Elevator Runner Named Bauer Charged With Awful Deed.

New York, Oct. 12.—The finding of a man's head in East Eighteenth street, near Avenue C, early today, resulted in the discovery of an unusually revolting murder, the victim of which was Thomas F. Corcoran. Corcoran was killed probably last night, in the house, No. 149 Third avenue. After the picking up of the head, the other portions of the body were found cut to pieces in the Third avenue house. The arms below the elbows, and the legs below the knees, had been packed in a suit case, and the torso and remaining portions of the arms and legs were hidden in a clothes hamper in a room occupied by Frederick Bauer, an elevator runner. Bauer was arrested.

The point at which the head was found is more than a quarter of a mile away from 149 Third avenue. The head was wrapped in the Sunday supplement of a German newspaper and a blue and white shirt. The murder was discovered through a story told by George Lanole, who had a room adjoining Bauer's, and who rushed to a police station today, saying that he had lain awake for hours listening to noises which, he thought, proceeded from Bauer's room. He said that late last night he heard at least two men quarreling in the adjoining room. He heard a shot, and the sound of some one falling to the floor. Then he went to sleep. About 2:30 this morning, Lanole said he was awakened by strange noises in the room where the shot had been heard. Twice a man opened the door and went out, and Lanole, after lying awake listening for some time, decided that some of the sounds he heard were the noises of bones being broken. This suspicion caused him to notify the police.

Bauer was found entering his room by the police and said to them: "I found my room like this when I awoke this morning."

He said that he had brought two men to his room last night, one a soldier. Bauer fell asleep while these men talked; he said, and when he awoke the soldier was gone leaving the other's body as the police found it. The police found that Bauer's socks, the right arm of his undershirt and the right arm of an outer shirt were covered with blood. A badly nicked razor was found on top of a trunk in Bauer's room and a revolver with one chamber empty was also found in the room.

Bauer, who is 39 years old, is employed as an elevator man at the Union Square hotel, and when he went to work today he was sent home because of extreme nervousness. An examination of Corcoran's head showed that he had been shot in the face.

The police make the allegation that it was a crime of degeneracy. Corcoran came here from Ireland several years ago and made his home in this city with a married sister. He was a ticket chopper on the elevated railroad.

WRIGHT IS TO RESIGN

Governor General of the Philippines Not Satisfied With Conditions

President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft Have Successor Selected.

Washington, Oct. 12.—By reason of what appears to be dissatisfaction with the situation in the Philippines, Luke E. Wright, governor general of the Philippines will retire from that position about the first of December. Gen. Wright is expected to arrive in the United States during that month and is entitled to six months leave of absence, prior to the formal relinquishment of his labors as governor general. It is understood that he expects to return to Nashville, Tenn. to resume the practice of law. President Roosevelt and Secretary Taft, it is believed have decided upon the successor to Gen. Wright, but no intimation has been permitted to become public as to his identity. It can be stated reasonably, definitely, that Gen. Wright's successor will not be a man now connected with the commission.

COLDER WEATHER AIDS FIGHT AGAINST FEVER.

New Orleans, Oct. 12.—Still colder weather, the mercury going to 55 at New Orleans and under 40 in many other parts of the state, with frost in the middle section of the state, today increased the probability of the early extinction of yellow fever throughout Louisiana and Mississippi, the two states which have been infected since August last.

In New Orleans the report for the preceding twenty-four hours was considered by the marine hospital authorities the best since July.

BUT TWO SCOTCH BANKS FAIL IN HALF A CENTURY

Scotland Banker Tells Americans How They Conduct Business There.

Washington, Oct. 12.—Junkets in all directions around Washington and a program of oratory and business confronted the thousands of members of the American Bankers' association in convention here today. Work was done first and then the bright sunshine and crisp fall air were enjoyed. After the session in the Columbia theater which occupied the morning, the bankers divided according to personal inclination. Some witnessed the exhibition drill of the cavalry at Fort Myer, while others avail themselves of the many tourist excursions of the city.

The program of the convention today included first a discussion of practical banking questions by the convention. The discussion was limited to thirty minutes and speeches to five minutes. Prof. Joseph French Johnson, dean of the New York University School of Commerce, accounts and finance, told the convention of the advantages of commercial education; the Scotch system of banking was explained by Mr. Robert Blyth, general manager of the Union bank of Scotland; Mr. Walker Hill, president Mechanics-American National bank, St. Louis discussed practical benefits of membership in the American Bankers' association. The general end of business was discussed upon the call of sections north, south, east and west.

An interesting history of the Scotch systems of banking was presented to the convention by Robert Blyth, general manager of the Union Bank of Scotland, located at Glasgow. The first Scotch bank was established in 1695. Today there are but ten banks in Scotland, seven doing nine-tenths of the business. The chief characteristic of the Scotch system is the right of banks to issue the one-pound note, as the result of which Scotland retains today her paper currency almost to the exclusion of metal currency, while the reverse is true in England.

Mr. Blyth maintained that it was the one-pound note that enabled the net work of branch banks to be maintained in Scotland, and that encouraged the savings of the poorer classes. With the English five-pound notes and her metallic currency, he said, these branch banks could not have been maintained because of the phohibitive cost. The aggregate deposits of the ten Scotch banks reach $500,000,000.

Another distinctive feature of the Scotch system is its cash credit account, wherein a trader or manufacturer is enabled to borrow from the banks temporarily by executing a bond to which he gets the signature of two or more friends along with his own. The bank accepts the bonds and honors checks up to the amount named in it, obviating the pledging of securities. Interest is not charged except on the amount drawn. The uniform interest, discount and commission charged by the ten Scotch banks is a distinctive feature. During the last half century there have been but two bank failures in Scotland.

A Little Tale of

A Bobtailed Car and A Bobtailed Garment

Remember that once upon a time bobtailed street cars were in common use throughout the United States, even in the large cities?

Funny looking things. Dinky. If you saw one now it would undoubtedly make you smile. You simply could not help it, could you?

Well, sir, that's the way we feel when we see a bobtailed sack coat on a man.

The short coat is a thing of the past. A year ago it was stylish, but now it is 'way out of date.

The right length for the sack coat now is thirty-one inches. Please remember that. Thirty-one inches. And some are even longer than that.

The models of our men's suits for fall and winter are cut in the RIGHT length, the RIGHT style, the RIGHT way. They have the new shoulders, the new lapels, the new everything. Come and see them. The patterns are beautiful.

HEAVY FROST IN ALABAMA

Cold Weather Also Reported From Many Other Localities.

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 12—There was a heavy frost here and all over North Alabama last night. Cool weather continues today, and it is expected that quarantines in this section will be raised at once. The statement was made by state health officers yesterday that if frost fell last night the quarantines would be promptly lifted.

Pittsburg, Oct. 12.—The first snow of the season was reported today from various parts of Western Pennsylvania. An inch of snow fell in the mountains, and at Greenville, Pa., a heavy snow fell for five hours, causing hundreds of trees to break down under its weight. Exceedingly chilly weather is reported all over the western part of the state.

Des Moines, Oct. 12.—A killing frost was reported last night from every section of the state. The frost will do no damage, except to late vegetables. The grain crops are safe. In this city the mercury dropped to 39 deg., the coldest point in the state.

Bloomington, Ill., Oct. 12.—Central Illinois was visited by the first heavy frost of the year last night, and all smaller vegetation was killed. The thermometer reached freezing point, a drop of over 50 deg. in two days.

The Japs Are Expert Gunners.

Most of the recent fighting in the Sea of Japan was at a distance of five miles and with a heavy sea, yet the Japs succeeded in sinking nearly all of the Russian ships. The size of the navy is not nearly so important as having good men behind the guns. The claims made by many medicines are not very important unless they are backed by a substantial record of cures. Such is the case with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. During its 52 years' experience it has cured hundreds of persons who suffered from dyspepsia, indigestion, costiveness, headache, bloating, heartburn, biliousness, insomnia, kidney troubles or malaria, fever and ague when other remedies failed. There is no reason why it should not benefit you as well. Try a bottle today and let it prove its merit.

FOR CONSTIPATION

PARLIAMENTARY TILT IN BAPTIST MEETING

Discussion of Question of Advisors For Young Pastors.

Lively Time Had Over Report of Resolutions Committee.

One little recommendation by the resolutions committee caused a lengthy and heated discussion and murmurs of "legislation," "lobbying" and "untruth" which made this morning's the liveliest as well as the longest session of the Baptist state convention, which is being held in Pilgrim Congregational church.

For an hour, the arguments continued and grew warmer all the time. Some of those present would liked to have remained all the afternoon, considering the question and present arguments for their side, but as the Commercial club had arranged to give the delegates a steamboat ride this afternoon and as a meeting of the convention board was to be held, it was finally decided, after a vote had been taken, to adjourn before 1:30, and to vote the troublesome resolution before that time.

The resolution, a portion of the resolutions committee's report, was read by Rev. Theodore Heysham chairman and recommended that the church associations appoint standing committees of five to consider with and advise candidates for the ministry before they are ordained.

Rev. W. B. Riley, pastor of the First Baptist church of Minneapolis, immediately arose and protested vigorously against this as it was read, and suggested an amendment which would do away with a standing committee and provide for a new committee to advise in each case, some of the members of which were to be selected by the candidate himself.

Dr. Riley's amendment aroused Rev. R. M. West of St. Paul who is one of the fathers of the movement for better educated pastors in the Baptist church pulpits. Rev. Mr. West declared that if the candidates were allowed to choose their own advisors, the advice would be of no consequence and declared that he had seen the spectacle of a Presbyterian church prospering far more than a Baptist church nearby because the Presbyterian house of worship was manned by one who had been properly fitted for his work while the Baptist preacher, although a bright man, had gone into the ministry unprepared and had not succeeded.

Dr. Riley then declared that the passage of the resolution suggested by the committee would mean that something not wanted by the Minneapolis association would be foisted upon it. He declared that an attempt had been made in former years to pass this through the convention and intimated that Mr. West and others had planned to thrust it through this time.

Another speaker arose and suggested that Rev. Mr. West was ashamed of the Baptist preachers, and Dr. Riley told Rev. West that he need not worry about the Presbyterians prospering more than the Baptists as the last figures regarding the two denominations showed the Baptists away ahead.

Dr. Heysham arose and impressed upon Dr. Riley the need of uttering the truth and informed him that the committee's report did not force matters at all and that the associations could thrust the suggestion aside if they chose.

A dozen arose about this time and President Carey Emerson was sorely perplexed as to which had the floor. Arguments and suggestions were offered on all sides and from every point of view. Rev. Mr. West told Dr. Riley and the others present that he had no ulterior motive in securing the adoption of this report and that there was nothing binding about it anyway.

Dr. Riley offered to strike out the clause in his amendment providing for selection of his advisors by the candidate. He did not recall making a statement which Dr. Heysham credited to him. Dr. Heysham declared that his honor had been impeached during the arguments about this part of the committee report, but the convention by a vote of 58 to 27, decided to adopt the original recommendation, made by the committee and read by Dr. Heysham, without any amendments, so he considered himself vindicated and the convention adjourned in good humor after the parliamentary tilts and with great appetites for luncheon.

The hour became so late that all the recommendations of the resolutions committee were not considered and they will come up tomorrow. Resolutions of appreciation of the missionary work, the good work of Pillsbury academy and the summer assembly and thanking the newspapers for their courtesy toward the delegates, were passed.

Lengthy discussion was also held over the report of the summer assembly committee, read by the chairman, Dr. G. F. Holt. The committee recommended the formation of a corporation to take charge of the land and property of the summer assembly at Mound, Lake Minnetonka. The members of the committee felt that a corporation was needed to properly look after the valuable property owned by the Baptists on the assembly grounds.

Many criticisms were made of this recommendations by some of the delegates, however, who expressed the opinion that the formation of the stock company would take the assembly property and its management away from the convention and place it in the hands of a few.

After some discussion, it was decided that a hasty adoption of this recommendation would not be proper and to leave the matter in the hands of a committee of seven to be appointed by the convention board and four of which were to be holders of property on the assembly grounds. If the committee is ready to do so, a report will be made to the conveniton tomorrow evening and if not, the matter will be held over another year.

Dr. Holt's report showed that the assembly was a grand success this year, there being considerable profit after all the expenses were paid. The hotel was a profitable venture and considerable money was spent in improvements and the purchase of additional goods such as dishes, cots and tents.

The banner for the best Sunday school attendance during the year was presented to a representative of the Baptist Sunday sschool at Bemidji, whose record is better than that of any other school in the state. The tabernacle school in Minneapolis was second and the Rochester school third.

The debate on the question, "Resolved that the Sunday school should be financially supported by the church," proved most interesting. A. J. Hoag made the arguments for the affirmative and A. Bousfield made the arguments for the negative. All those present were permitted to interpolate arguments for either side before a final vote was taken on the question. The final vote showed, however, that the majority of those present felt that the Sunday schools should be supported by the church and be linked as closely with the church as possible.

Rev. E. N. Martinson of Mankato was to have spoken on "Culture For Service," but he took for his topic instead "The Need of Trained Teachers in the Sunday Schools." He made a strong argument in favor of more teachers' meetings, and declared that half of the teachers who instructed the young in the Sunday schools were not competent to teach anyone, as they could not interpret the Bible properly themselves. He urged the instruction of the teachers along modern ideas as well as the scholars.

Rev. E. R. Pope explained why the Sunday school commission had been organized, and Rev. E. Fagenstrom gave a very eloquent and forceful address on "Worship in the Sunday Schools."

The report of the committee on Bible and Sunday school work was adopted as read by the chairman, E. M. Hulett.

The luncheon given yesterday afternoon at the St. Louis in honor of Dr. Erle B. Hulbert, dean of the divinity school of the University of Chicago, was attended by twenty-eight persons and was a most enjoyable affair. Rev. Alexander Milne, pastor of Pilgrim Congregational church, and Mrs. Milne were present, as honored guests. Dr. Hulbert responded to a toast, as did Rev. Mr. Milne and Dr. L. A. Crandall, pastor of Calvary church, Minneapolis, Rev. E. R. Pope was toastmaster.

This afternoon, the delegates and others in attendance at the convention were given a steamboat ride on the bay and up the river as the guests of the Commercial club. The convention board held a session this afternoon. This evening, Rev. W. B. Riley, pastor of the First Baptist church of Minneapolis, will deliver an address on "The Efficient Church" and Rev. S. T. Ford of Chicago will talk on "Human Agencies and Spiritual Forces." Solos will be sung by Grayce Frances Turner and Mrs. C. B. Gilbert. Tomorrow will be the last day of the convention and the morning session will be called to order at 8:45. The final committee reports will be heard in the morning and in the afternoon, the affairs of Pillsbury academy and the Baptist Young People will be taken up.

The principal address Friday evening will be delivered by Rev. S. T. Ford, who will talk on "Crystallized Visions."

HEYL DENIES ALL CHARGES

Of a Sensational Nature That Were Brought Against Him.

Milwaukee, Oct. 12.—Jacob Heyl, charged with using undue influence upon his mother-in-law, Mrs. Schandein, concluded his testimony on his own behalf today. James G. Flanders is conducting the cross-examination. On direct examination Charles Quarles questioned Heyl relative to every charge made against him. Practically all of the sensational charges were denied.

Mr. Heyl admitted, however, that he entered the room of his sister-in-law, Ella Frank, when she was in her teens, but declared that he was under the influence of liquor. He denied that he had influenced Mrs. Schandein in the making of the 1903 will or any other testament. The 1896 agreement, by which Mr. Heyl received one-half of the increment of the Schandein estate after the death of Mrs. Schandein, was gone over in detail. Mr. Heyl declared that he objected to the terms proposed by Mrs. Schandein. He thought she wanted to give him too much. But she insisted that one-half would have been the share of the Heyl family at the death of Mr. Schandein had not all of the property been left to her, so Mr. Heyl said he consented to work for her on the terms proposed.

After a few preliminary questions, Mr. Flanders took up the charges of Eva Kretzehmer. Her deposition was barely touched upon, however. Mr. Heyl said that after the death of his wife, Mrs. Kretzehmer brought him coffee in the morning and took care of his rooms.

"What conversation did you have concerning the contents of the 1903 will before it was executed? Mr. Quarles asked.

"She said in a general way she was going to make another will. She asked for certain figures from the books that led me to infer something. There was no specific conversation about the will."

"Did you ever make any requests concerning any provisions in any will?"

"I asked her not to remember myself or Eric before he was of suitable age. I did not want the boy to be spoiled by knowledge of a large estate coming to him."

HOLDS KEY IN ENGLAND

Chamberlain Watched By All and Ready For a Contest.

Political Lines Tightly Drawn Between the British Parties.

London, Oct. 12.—"Decidedly mixed" expresses the political situation in the United Kingdom today.

Mr. Chamberlain, as usual, appears to be the key to the situation, and his return to England and the effects of his Bristol speech, under the anspices of the Liberal Unionist association, are being closely watched by all parties; for, whether one likes it or not, Mr. Chamberlain, though perhaps not the strong man in a popular sense, is nevertheless a man whose movements are watched with the greatest interest—greater, perhaps, than if he were a prime minister himself, during the declining days of his life.

Meanwhile, Mr. Balfour is ordering his arrangements as though he fully expected to be the prime minister next year. The decision rests, perhaps, not with Mr. Balfour, but perhaps it does rest with Mr. Chamberlain. The result of the Elgin burgh's election, instead of weakening, strengthens the position Mr. Chamberlain has taken up. He has told the Conservative leaders that they are destined to defeat, and every day that passes only increases the magnitude of the disaster that is to overwhelm them, and no useful object can be served by further provocation of the country. But if there is anything that Mr. Balfour dearly loves to do, it is to provoke his antagonists. One has only to watch him in the halls of parliament to understand the refinement of "cruelty to animals," and to appreciate what bull-baiting and bear-baiting must have meant to the poor unfortunates who were tantalized before men were supposed to have turned refined and civilized. Mr. Balfour's methods are unique. Twirling a monocle, with a smile on his face, he will say the most cutting, the most sarcastic and the most wicked things; but when you come to analyze his phrases, you conclude that, after all, it is not what the man has said, but the manner in which he has said it, that makes you want to take a shotgun or a meat ax to him—that is, if you belong to the opposition.

Mr. Chamberlain has only to state on the platform the views to be put before the Tory party meeting, however, and the prime minister can no longer persist in his clinging to office. Mr. Chamberlain, who believes that when in the opposition he can wipe out Mr. Balfour, is naturally anxious for the arrival of the hour when the process, so interesting to watch, can be begun. It by no means follows, however, that it will be successful, for in the bout of finesse and trickery, in which the leaders of all the parties have indulged during the past year, the advantage has certainly lain with Mr. Balfour.

It is clear that the Curzon-Kitchener squabble is at the beginning of the beginning stage, not the beginning of the end. Now that these two strong men have taken to attacking each other in public it may also be taken for granted that the trouble will not be allowed to rest there. It is well known, of course, that the present conflict is only the culmination of a long and bitter antagonism between the military and civil officials in India, and now that matters have been brought to a head it is expected that others will take a hand in the fight. Already the two services are forming themselves into factions around their chiefs, and with two such distinguished examples before them they are not likely to be over-nice in their regard for the susceptibilities of others. When one considers the thousand and one ways in which the military and civil administrations must dovetail into each other it is not difficult to see the state of things that this must lead to. Were Lord Kitchener a man of real capacity and independence he might perhaps succeed in softening the asperities of the situation, but being, as everybody knows, wrapped up in his own methods, anything that he may say or do is calculated to make matters worse rather than better. As for Lord Minto, he is only a puppet in the hands of Kitchener. And in any event he is not likely to reach India for some time to come. Meanwhile the rival factions will have full sway to indulge their love of each other.

There seems hardly any doubt that this squabble is worrying Mr. Balfour more than all of the other evils that he has had to contend with during the past year. Nobody believes that after the disclosures of the Kitchener-Curzon row Mr. Balfour could survive more than a month were parliament in session. It is impossible to see how he could hope to meet successfully a vote o nthe address dealing with Lord Curzon's resignation and the events that have preceded it and followed it.

As it is, the British public is left in a most uncomfortable position of doubt as to which of the empire builders, Curzon or Kitchener, is telling the truth. For, put in plain English, that is what the dispute amounts to. Here are two sets of facts perfectly within the cognizance of the two men, yet in regard to nine out of eleven points one of them flatly contradicts the other. Of course they are both far too gentlemanly to accuse each other of lying, but when one reads that this statement is denied, and that that is "insorrect," that another is "seriously misrepresented," while others again were "never made," the plain man will have no difficulty of forming his own conclusions as to the impression intended to be conveyed. Of the actual merits of the dispute it will, of course, be impossible to judge. Not even will the production of the official documents clear up the points in dispute regarding the Indian empire of Great Britain.

The effect which all the circumstances connected with this Indian squabble has caused on the mind of the Unionist rank and file has been most remarkable. The whole thing seems to have brought home to them—as nothing has ever brought home to them—the absolute inability of the government as at present constituted to cope with the questions that has arisen. Mr. Brodrick, as might have been expected, is being made the special target of their resentment. But the feeling is not by any means confined to him, for it is recognized that the prime minister who retains him in office and the cabinet who indorse his actions are equally responsible. But even Mr. Brodrick's blundering might have been borne with were it not that on top of it comes this further spectacle of the viceroy and the commander-in-chief at each other's throats in India. On all sides one hears expressions to the effect that Unionist disaster at the polls would be far better, even for the party, than this muddle and fight.

WILL GO BACK TO REFORMATORY

Parole of Uno Kinannen Revoked For Disorderly Conduct.

As the outcome of his arrest for disorderly conduct last week, Uno Kinnanen will be sent back to St. Cloud for violating his parole.

Kinannen was arrested by the police, on complaint of his wife. It was claimed by his wife that he appeared at the Boston restuarant, where she is employed as a dish-washer, and threatened her with a potato knife because she refused to quit her work and go home with him.

He was booked up on a charge of disorderly conduct, and forfeited his bail in the municipal court.

The affair came to the ears of the authorities at the St. Cloud reformatory, and they sent word to the police this morning to arrest Kinannen on the charge of violating his parole.

Kinannen was sent to the reformatory about three years ago from Carlton on the charge of assault, and released this spring.

He was taken into custody by Capt. Resche again this afternoon and will be sent back to St. Cloud.

In this day and age when beauties undreamed of are brought out in photographs, scarce any new departure comes in the nature of a surprise. So far have the improvements in this work gone that one hesitates much before putting oneself into the hands of an up-to-date photographer.

And the trouble is that he will produce a too good looking picture. It is not that the majority of people object to being made good looking and if one might keep the pictures simply to look at and bolster up one's belief in one's own charms, all might be well, out—and here's where the rub comes—pictures are taken presumably for distribution, among friends of course, but for distribution nevertheless, and to show a good looking picture, touched and retouched by the obliging photographer, who belives doubtless that a nice falsehood does lots better pictorially, than the whole truth, and then have one's friends exclaim incredulously "Why, this isn't you is it?" Comfortable feeling that.

The art has come to that stage, however, where it becomes a most fascinating guessing game to arrive at the originals of some of the pictures that are supposed to be photographs. The true artist, who for mercenary reasons acts as photographer, discovers beauties that the poser has never discovered in spite of the years which she has devoted to holding the mirror up to nature, and studying her "points" from seemingly every point of advantage. These wonderful creations which are being produced making regular society beauties out of one's commonplace friends have become an everyday affair and seplas and etchings and other new and startling effects in photographs pass by unnoticed.

In one of the Superior street windows, is displayed a card for mounting baby pictures that is new to many. The card is one of the regular large size white embossed cards. But the novel and really delightful feature is the figure of a stork stamped in white on the card. It stands on one leg in typical stork fashion and from its bill is suspended a balance in which the photograph of the baby is pasted. The idea is a pleasing one and the picture of a brand new baby mounted on one of these cards make a delightful announcement to the friends of the baby's parents of the newcomer's arrival.

WILL BE SINCERELY MISSED.

Lady Curzon's Departure From India Will Be Regretted There.

A rose of roses bright,
A vision of embodied light.

Thus an Indian poet described Lady Curzon of Kedleston, wife of the retiring viceroy of India, and now that she has stepped down from the height which she has graced for five years the natives of the vast, mysterious country over which her husband ruled are doubtless mourning over the setting of one of the brightest stars that ever appeared in their firmament. Perhaps no vice-queen of India has ever been so well loved as the former Mary Leiter of Chicago, for none has been so well known.

It was part of Lord Curzon's policy to know the people of India, and to establish cordial relations between them and their English rulers, and to this end he traveled through his Indian empire more extensively than any viceroy had ever done before. On all these tours Lady Curzon accompanied him. They visited remote native states, where no British viceroy, much less a vice-queen, had ever been seen before. Wherever they went Lady Cuzson received deputations of women and school children, and never failed to establish the most friendly relations with the wives and families of the native rulers.

At Calcutta and at their summer home in Simla the Curzons pursued the same policy of friendliness toward the natives, and in all these efforts the viceroy was ably seconded by his beautiful American wife.

Lady Curzon will probably welcome the change from the position of vice-queen to the ordinary life of an English peeress. The splendor of the Indian throne outrivals that of England, and Lord Curzon has aimed to increase that splendor, knowing its effect on the Oriental imagination. Amid all this splendor, Lady Curzon reigned serenely, and as though to the manner born, but at times it was more than flesh and blood could endure, and then she would find an opportunity to slip away from some stately function to her chamber, says an exchange.

The Marchioness of Dufferin has given some idea of the strain of the social season at Simla, and her duties must have been much lighter than Lady Curzon's. "I think it may amuse you," she wrote, "to see the statistics I have made out. During our season in the country we had twelve big dinners, the guests irrespective of our household being from twenty-five to fifty in number; twenty-nine small dinners, one state ball, one children's fancy dress ball, six dances of about 250 people each, two garden parties and two evening parties. The total number of entertainments was fifty-four, the total number of dinner guests 614."

The viceroy's wife is also expected to outrival every one in the dispensation of charity, and in addition to the ordinary objects of philanthropy Lady Curzon had one of India's terrible famines to deal with. The Dufferin Medical mission for supplying doctors of their own sex to the women of India interested her particularly, and when Queen Victoria died, she planned an enlargement of the work as a Victoria memorial. She obtained the co-operation of the native princesses, and the sum of $150,000 was raised for the endowment of Victoria scholarships for the training of Indian women as midwives.

Lady Curzon, as every one knows, is the daughter of Levi Z. Leiter of Chicago. She married the Hon. George Nathaniel Curzon in 1895, and at the time it seemed an unambitious match for one who had been so much courted and admired as she. The initiated knew, however, that she had a more brilliant future before her than if she had chosen one of her titled suitors. The event has proved the wisdom of her choice, and no one doubts that additional honors are still awaiting her, though she must now for a time, at least, resign the title of her excellency.

BROWNING CLASS.

Rev. J. W. Powell Delivers Introductory Lecture of New Series.

The first meeting of the Morning Browning class of the Twentieth Century club was held this morning, at the library and the large number of women present exhibited the eagerness with which this course of study is undertaken with the Rev. John W. Powell as leader and director. The class was one formed during last year and six lectures were delivered by Mr. Powell on Browning and the reading of several of the shorter and simpler poems occupied the attention of the class. This year a deeper study will be undertaken and the lecture this morning was an introduction to the course. The subjects of the ten lectures in the course are as follows:

I.—Browning, Man and Poet.
Five lectures on "The Ring and the Book."
II.—a. Introductory.
III.—b. Guido.
IV.—c. Caponsacchi.
V.—d. Pompilia.
VI.—e. The Pope.
VII.—Transcriptions from the Greek.
a. "Balaustion's Adventure."
b. "Aristophane Apology."
VIII.—"Christmas Eve and Easter Day."
IX.—Philosophical Monodramas.
"Paracelsus" and "Sordello."
X.—The Message of Browning to Today.

In his talk this morning, on Browning as a man and as a poet Mr. Powell said in part:

"I am glad that we are to have this opportunity of studying Robert Browning together and I will speak of him to you not as a reader and lecturer of the poet but as a Christian minister. I know that the need of the generation is for a larger inspiration and faith, for a deeper hold on the ideals and larger understanding of the things unseen and Robert Browning is a great revealer of things unseen. the greatest prophet of the Twentieth century. He seems to have had an instinctive understanding of the thought and feeling of the time, and, although at the time he wrote he was perhaps often not understood, he speaks deeply and to the heart of the people of this later time.

"I am not going to talk about him as a literary critic but as a preacher and I want you to get acquainted with him, not to become Browingites, but to know him; not to accpt everything he has written as infallible, but to study and understand how he went down through the heart of matters and understood and wrote of the eternal realities of life. Browning has no word for the idle, the indolent or the superficial. But if life means something to you, if the lift an dreach of the ideal of life appeal to you, if its tragedy and sin has touched you, Browning more than any other can carry you into an understanding of life.

"It is impossible to disassociate a man entirely from his work, and the influence in which Browning was raised had much to do with his productions. He came from the great multitude of the English middle class, and as some one has said, English society is like a glass of beer, the froth on top, the dregs at the bottom, and the real stuff in the middle. Browning was removed from the temptations of the fashionable world, and did not encounter the struggles of real poverty. His childhood was passed in a home of noble Puritan influence, lofty culture and sweetest delicacy. He was a high-strung, impulsive boy, and eager to learn. In his youth he was an admirer of Shelley, and in his early youth was a professing atheist, and practicing vegetarian. Neither one, however, seems to have struck in, for in his first published work, 'Pauline,' he had pushed through the facts of life and reached the light beyond. The philosophy of life, which he presents in a mature and finished manner in his later works, is all suggested in 'Pauline.'"

The story of Browning's courtship and marriage to Elizabeth Barrett was beautifully told, and the influence of his love on his work and life, and the years of his life with her, related. Mr. Powell spoke of the work of the poet, and urged the members of the class to read the poet at first hand.

"After a twenty or thirty-years' study of the poet," he said, "you may be ready for the commentaries. I have no patience with this hair-splitting discussion over a construction of a statement which is perfectly plain and simple. Browning is regarded as the thirty-third degree by many, and lots of you were ashamed to tell your friends that you were coming to a Browning class. Many people would as soon be seen with a copy of the Bible under their arms as a copy of Browning. His so-called obscurity is due often to the subtlety of the poet's mind and the encyclopaedic scope of his knowledge. He was an omnivorous reader, and he remembered what he read. Consequently we constantly encounter in his works allusions to classic events, or obscure, fourteenth century gentlemen, about whom most people have never heard. But if they never know, it matters little, the thought is there, and in most cases perfectly patent to the thoughtful reader."

Have You Elevator Manners?

Step all the way back.
Face the door.
Don't wear a murderous quill in your hat.
Say at which floor you wish to stop, so the boy won't have to reverse his machine for you.
Don't be so occupied with looking in the mirror that you forget what floor you want to get off at.
Don't tell your private affairs. An elevator is as public as a trolley car, only more so.
Don't push, don't scowl and say mean things. If you object to being shoved up against you ought to take the stairway.
Wait your turn to get in and wait your turn to get out. In short, behave like a gentleman or a lady toward the elevator, and you will find it a pretty good method of transportation, says the Chicago Journal.

JIU JITSU GIRL THROWS A FLIRT

Japanese Maiden Tosses Masher And Bumps Him On Pavement.

New York, Oct. 12.—The possibility of jiu-jitsu as a cure for flirts was demonstrated in Harlem by a dainty Japanese maiden, named Miss Sota. The angry Miss Sota used only the strange art of her native land, a section of the pavement and a well-dressed stranger, who afterward gave his name as J. F. McCullum.

Miss Sota has been in this country only six months. She is about five feet in height and weighs 100 pounds. She was standing in front of a Japanese art store, watching the stream of shoppers, when fate led McCullum her way.

McCullum is five feet ten inches in height and weighs about 180 pounds. He lifted his hat to the pretty Japanese girl, and followed that by a killing wink. Then he tripped to her side and—something happened.

The little woman clutched his coat lapel with one jeweled hand. With the other she seized his wrist, there was a swish and McCullum's heels described a parabola over Miss Sato's head.

McCullum was then arrested. He said he had mistaken Miss Sato for a Japanese girl acquaintance, but he was locked up.

WOMAN SAT ON THE JAP.

She Was Not Afraid of Any Old "Jew Jessup"

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 12.—A Japanese cook tried his jiu jitsu on fat Mary Henderson with unhappy results.

Mary Henderson is a colored woman, who is always having a burden of troubles. She went to one of her customers in Budlong avenue to see if they wanted some washing done. She met a new Oriental cook in the kitchen.

With her natural scorn for a heathen, she did not give a satisfactory account of herself.

"You want my job. You try for knock me," screamed the suspicious Jap.

"He tried to work his old Jew Jessup on me," said Mrs. Henderson to the city prosecutor. "But Ah was down in Ocean Park and seen when that man was killed. When he come fo' me with his fancy twists I fixed him."

"What did you do?" asked the prosecutor.

"I frew him down and sat on 'im," said Mary with solemnity.

WOOED FOR FIVE YEARS.

Miss Nina Arbuthnot Now Asks For Heavy Damages.

Centerville, Iowa, Oct. 12.—With the charge that for five years William Cottern called upon her, made love, kissed her frequently and held her in his arms and called her "darling," Miss Nina Arbuthnot has brought suit in the district court for breach of promise. The proceedings followed immediately the marriage of Cottern to Miss Ethel Courtright.

"And these attentions were not all or any part of them without complete understanding," says Miss Arbuthnot in her petition. "On Jan. 1, 1902, Cottern proposed marriage, and the proposal was accepted. The defendant, however, by various means succeeded in postponing the wedding from time to time. On Sept. 16, after a lover's quarrel, he again renewed his protestations of love, and it was agreed that the wedding was to occur Oct. 7, and the plaintiff made ready for said wedding, including the purchase of a trousseau."

Miss Arbuthnot states that as a result of Cottern's attentions she was deprived of the society of other young men for five years and had little opportunity to make a desirable marriage contract. She asks $10,000 damages.

PASTOR'S CLOTHES

Stolen and He Donned Hunting Suit to Preach.

Sioux City, Iowa, Oct. 12.—Rev. Elmer H. Shafer, pastor of the Methodist church at Dakota City, Neb., was in Sioux City yesterday to secure some trousers which the police had recovered for him. Rev. Mr. Shafer had to deliver his Sunday sermon in a hunting suit because burglars had visited the parsonage during the night and had taken his entire wardrobe. A skirmish of the neighborhood failed to locate a single pair of trousers which would fit the pastor, who is six foot three inches tall. Finally the hunting suit was resorted to. In addition to the clothing, valuable watches and other articles amounting to about $100 were stolen.

SON FINDS HIS FATHER

With Other Ties After Separation of Twenty-Five Years.

Norwegian at Grand Forks Faces Parent Who Deserted Family.

Grand Forks, N. D., Oct. 12.—A man with two wives, one living in Norway and the other in Roseau county, Minn., and the father of two children by each wife, a son and a daughter in both families, came face to face with the son he left in Norway twenty-five years ago, in a law office in Grand Forks yesterday.

Before the conference adjourned the man gave his son over $1,500 in cash for the family abandoned in Norway, and he will now endeavor to keep the story from his family in Minnnseota.

Jens Melum came to Grand Forks county twenty-five years ago from Norway and settled on a farm a few miles south of Grand Forks. For the first two years he wrote regularly to his wife in Norway, then the letters stopped suddenly, and as the years rolled on Mrs. Melum decided that her husband had died in the new country, and her son and daughter, who are twins, were brought up in the belief that their father was dead. When he left Norway the family lived on a farm, which was encumbered. Mrs. Melum and the children succeeded, by hard work, in clearing the farm of debt, and today they are in comfortable circumstances. The husband prospered in this country, and married about nineteen years ago. A son and daughter were born, and he gave them the same name as the twin boy and girl across the ocean.

Some years ago the man sold his farm, moved into Roseau county, and settled on a claim.

In the meantime other residents of the same community had moved from Norway to North Dakota, and Melum was at once recognized. Word was sent back to the little family that the husband and father was living here, and was the head of another family.

Three years ago Carl Melum came to Michigan, where he remained until a few weeks ago. Owing to a strike in the Michigan mines, he was thrown out of employment, and wrote to a friend at Rugby, this state, asking about the chances for a livelihood in North Dakota. He was advised to come at once, and in the letter his friend told him that he had met his father but a few days before, and that he was living near Crookston.

Carl Melum reached Grand Forks yesterday and found his way to the law office of J. A. Sorley. He asked the attorney if he knew his father, and gave him all the particulars that he knew of the marriage in Norway. He told of an unsuccessful search he had made in the vicinity of Crookston, and asked the attorney to find his father.

By a strange coincidence Sorley met Jens Melum a few hours later in the day and invited him to his office, where he told him of the visit of his son. Melum stoutly denied that he had ever married in Norway, but finally weakened and admitted that he had abandoned a family there. Knowing that the son intended to go to Rugby, Sorley went to the station to intercept him, the father agreeing to remain in the city over night. Without the knowledge of the attorney Melum also visited the station, although the boy he had left in Norway was only 2 years old, he had no difficulty in recognizing the young man of 27 years as his son. He asked a number of questions, and finally announced that he was his father. The greeting between father and son was not as warm as it might have been had conditions been different, but the elder man took charge of the younger and together they returned to the attorney. Jens Melum was given to understand that he stood as a bigamist. He seemed hardly to appreciate the situation, but was willing to divide his worldly goods, and $1,500 was decided upon as an equitable allowance. He will continue his journey to Rugby. Jens Melum will return to his family in Minnesota, and what might have proved a predicament for the older man has, for the time at least, been amicably settled, and while he may have two families, the later one will continue along in the same way as before the son found a father and the second family, with the exception that there will be a healthy addition to the family bank account. At all events there will be no criminal prosecution.

BOTH SIDES AIR VIEWS

Boss Printers and Strikers Ask Public to Feel Muscles.

Each Side Professes to Be Confident of Complete Victory.

The members of the uluth Typothetae, which is the boss printers' association, held a meeting last evening in the office of O. F. Collier to meet and listen to Mr. Clark of the West Publishing company and Mr. Bigelow of Brown & Bigelow of St. Paul, who claim that the strike is won by the boss printers there and came up to give the Duluth bosses the benefit of their experience.

After the meeting, John Christie, one of the leading members of the Typothetae, gave out the statement that the Typothetae has declared permanently for open shops and that job offices will hereafter be non-union in Duluth. The Typothetae claims that it was unfair of the union not to wait until Jan 1 to start the fight but also declare that the union will be very very sorry for it before the affair is done with.

He says that even should the union surrender and agree to the old scale, the members of the Typothetae would not sign as they will refuse to run unlonized shops any more. He claims the bosses have all the printers they need and are getting along first-rate.

On the other hand the union men claim that only three men all told have been obtained by the bosses and that two of these are incompetent printers. The union men issued the following statement yesterday:

"At the end of the first week of the strike, which is today, our ranks remain unbroken. Out of the nineteen men and seven apprentices who walked out a week ago, four have found employment and all of the men feel confident of success whether it be one week or two months hence. Since the strike started, the employers have been unable to secure competent help sufficient to handle more than 1 per cent of the work previously done for them. This, together with the established fact that help cannot be procured in the country towns, strengthens the belief of the union that success is only a matter of a short time.

"The efforts of the union have been directed, principally in the matter of label agitation which has been as successful as could be desired. Strong support has been promised by some of the churches and more is expected before many days.

"At the meeting of the Federated Trades assembly to be held Friday night, a full discussion of the matter will come up when there will be a fresh impetus given to the work by other organizations which have pledged their moral and financial support if needed. Their moral support will be acceptable but their financial aid will not be needed. We are fully prepared to meet the situation for an indefinite period."

CLAIMS GHEEN RUINED GIRL

Axel Helstrom of Tower Makes Serious Charge Against Lumberman.

Stephen H. Gheen, a wealthy lumberman residing at Tower, has been sued in district court for $20,000 damages by Axel N. Helstrom, who resides at the head of Lake Vermilion, and who claims that Gheen enticed and ruined his 17-year-old daughter, Jennie. The amount named is asked by the father to compensate the family for the disgrace that has come to it, and the loss of respect of the people in the neighborhood.

Mr. Helstrom claims that Mr. Gheen is worth at least $40,000, that he is 40 years old, a married man, and an influential man in his locality. He says his daughter is the eldest child of a family of ten and that she serves the meals.

Indications of the alleged intimacy between the girl and Gheen are claimed to have been discovered last June when Mrs. Helstrom, the mother, is alleged to have been made ill by the disclosure and her health is claimed to have been permanently injured by reason of her mental suffering.

The case is likely to be tried during the November term.

GRIGGS CHOSEN BY ACCLAMATION

Virginia Boy Elected President of University Junior Class.

Minneapolis, Oct. 12.—Richard Griggs of Virginia, Minn., was yesterday chosen president of the university junior class. Griggs is a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity, but the opposition expected from the barb element of the class did not develop, and his choice was made by acclamation.

The most interesting feature of the afternoon was the choice of a class secretary, a position always given to a girl member of the class. There were three candidates: The Misses Rose Marie Schaller, Grace Weitzel and Irene Dunn. Miss Schaller, the Hastings girl, who christened the battleship Minnnesota, was finally chosen. For vice president, Jim Kremer of football fame, was chosen by a majority of one vote over Harold Porter. W. G. Coapman was unanimously elected treasurer, and Claude Randall and James Josephson were selected sergeants-at-arms.

CONTRACT FOR FEEDING EMPLOYES ANNULED.

Panama, Oct. 12.—The last action of the Panama canal commission before sailing from Colon for New York was the annulment of the contract awarded to J. E. Markel of Omaha, Neb., for feeding and caring for the employes of the canal. The reason for this action is that Chief Engineer Stevens, through the department of materials and supplies under Messrs. Jackson and Smith, is handling the commissaries successfully, rendering unnecessary the arrangements with Mr. Markel. Protests made by the employes against the arrangement, it is believed, also influenced the decision.

THE STAGE

TONIGHT'S ATTRACTION.

METROPOLITAN—"The Tiger Lilies."

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Friday and Saturday, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

"MRS. WIGGS."

"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" has become one of the classic figures of American humor, and her appearance on the stage in the dramatization of Mrs. Rice's book of that name, and "Lovey Mary," has met with a responsc from theater-goers that shows even more than the phenomenal sale of the works the tremendous hold which the delightful mother of Asia, Australia and Europena has taken on the popular imagination. Hardly less keen is the delight in Miss Hazy, Lovey Mary and Mr. Stubbins. Mrs. Wiggs is the center of a galaxy of unforgettable types racy of the soil and honestly American. With the same company and equipment which made the run of 150 performances, the success of last season at the Savoy theater in New York, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" will visit the Lyceum tomorrow and Saturday, with her droll retinue. Mrs. Wiggs is decidedly worth while and she makes the simple life the most delightful thing in the world.

ACQUIREMENT OF STRENGTH

Laveen, Physical Culture Marvel, Tells of His Course of Life.

Sam LaVeen, of LaVeen and Cross, the physical culture marvels who are at the Metropolitan this week with "The Tiger Lilies," has been the topic of much conversation since he arrived in the city and the general impression seems to be that the little athlete is muscle bound and stiff, like many professional strong men. But he is not and is as agile as a boy despite his remarkable development.

"Many people have asked me what rules I go by in becoming strong and muscular," said Mr. LaVeen this morning. "My system is one of physical culture, pure and simple. I aim to develop every part of the body equally, beginning with gentle forms of exercise and gradually work into the stronger methods. As much exercise as possible should be had in the open air as there is nothing like it to build up the body.

"Above all, when one begins such a course, it should be continued regularly. If people would only begin slowly and keep it up, they would tire of the exercises so easily.

"As to diet, one's best guide is his own stomach and common sense. For myself, I believe in cereals and eat fruit freely and very little meat."

Mr. LaVeen takes great care of himself and refuses to lift heavy weights or perform the ordinary strong arm feats. He thinks they would not be beneficial.

WILL BE HELD FOR MONOPOLY

Indictments of Packers For Conspiracy May Be Found Insufficient.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—The hearing of arguments on the demurrers to the indictments returned by the federal grand jury against five of the big packing concerns and seventeen of their employes was closed late yesterday afternoon, and if Judge Humphrey, before whom the arguments have been made, retains his present expression of the case, one-half of the indictments charging the packers with conspiracy in restraint of trade will be sustained and the remaining counts overruled. When it was announced that the case had been closed, Judge Humphrey said:

"As it now looks to the court the odd numbered counts are sufficient and the even numbered counts insufficient. The argument has been so clear, that is my present expression. But there may be a change in my mind before I give my decision. I will faithfully read the authorities cited by the attorneys on either side. When I am ready to render my decision I will notify the district attorney and the attorneys for the defendants."

The odd numbered indictments which may be considered insufficient by the court charge conspiracy among the defendants in restraint of trade.

The even numbered counts charge a monopoly.

The first count in the indictment is not to be considered in the decision of Judge Humphrey, as to that count the packers are to plead not guilty and go to trial immediately.

THREE MEN GET SENTENCES

Dugal, Castunguay and Long Plead Guilty to Indictment.

Paul Dugal, who pleaded guilty of grand larceny in the second degree, was yesterday afternoon sentenced by Judge Cant to the state reformatory at St. Cloud. Dugal broke into Capt. George Flynn's shack near the city and appropriated some saws and camp supplies.

Joseph Castunguay, indicted for forgery in the second degree and who pleaded guilty to the charge of passing a bogus check on Charles Starkweather, last July, was sentenced to the state penitentiary on the reformatory plan.

Joseph Long, indicted for grand larceny in the second degree, pleaded guilty and was also sent to the penitentiary on the reformatory plan. Long broke into Robinson's barber shop in the Manhattan building and stole a quantity of razors. He was apprehended in Superior a few hours after the theft was committed.

WIDOW OF LATE ABNER M'KINLEY QUIETLY WEDS.

Baltimore, Oct. 12.—Mrs. Annie E. McKinley, widow of the late Abner McKinley, was married here very privately on Monday, last, to Capt. John B. Allen of Tampa, Fla. So quietly was the ceremony performed, that it is impossible to learn either where it took place or who the officiating minister was. On Sunday, Mrs. McKinley and Miss Anna Belden of New York, registered at a hotel here as did also Capt. Allen and Spencer C. Weeks of Brooklyn, N. Y. The marriage license was issued on Monday, Mr. Weeks being the applicant. It authorized the marriage of John B. Allen, widower, 55, of Tampa, Fla., and Annie E. McKinley, widow, 40, of New York. Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party left the hotel, and are now, it is said, in Virginia, where Mr. and Mrs. Allen will spend their honeymoon.

Gaetano Costa, a butcher, 40 years old, was murdered at 10 o'clock Wednesday night in his shop on Fourth avenue, Brooklyn. Costa was alone in his shop when the murderer entered, and no witnesses to the fight have been found. The murder is believed by officers to be the work of the "Black Hand." No arrests have been made.

A HUMANE MOTHER.

Mr. Sato of the Japanese peace commission, praised in Portsmouth the pleasant and stimulating coolness of the American summer, says the Los Angeles Times.

"Oh, yes, here in Portsmouth our Augusts are pleasant enough," a correspondent said; "but you should visit Philadelphia or St. Louis at this season. Then your idea of our summers would be different."

"We have hot summers in Japan!" said Mr. Sato. "We have hot weather stories there, too. For instance:

"A philanthropic Japanese rode through the streets one scorching day when a beggar woman accosted him, holding a baby in her arms.

"'Kind sir,' she said, 'will you not give a copper coin to your servant, who is in sore need?'

"'Yes, gladly,' said the gentleman, and he took out a handful of small change.

"But just as he was about to give to the woman, he chanced to look closely at her baby, and behold, it was only a great doll.

"'Why,' he cried, 'that baby is a fraud, a sham.'

"'Yes, your honor,' said the woman humbly. 'It was so hot I left the real one home today.'"

FITS MANY

To Leave Off Coffee and Use Postum.

Postum Coffee shows its great nourishing power in many ways.

"I was nursing my baby six months ago," writes a young matron, "and I found that tea and coffee did not agree with me. I grew nervous and weak, my appetite was not good, and besides, baby was cross and fretful. He didn't seem to get proper nourishment from my milk, and friends said: 'You must wean him, he is starving.'

"I gave up tea and coffee and tried cocoa, chocolate and milk instead, but still baby didn't seem to thrive. At last, on the advice of a friend, I began to use Postum Coffee, and I can truly say that the effect was wonderful! Both baby and I began to improve in appetite, spirits and flesh immediately. In three months my boy weighed twenty pounds and he is as good a baby as a mother could wish to have. My drinking Postum did it.

"I cannot recommend Postum Food Coffee too highly to nursing mothers. It is better in flavor than the other coffee and is far superior in nutritive qualities, supplying just what the child must have, as no other food can do." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason—explained in the quaint little book, "The Road to Wellville," in each pkg.

SCOTTY TO SHOW MINE NOT A MYTH

Cowboy Croesus Bringing Load of Death Valley Gold.

San Barnardino, Cal., Oct. 12.—Walter Scott, the Death Valley miner, is coming out of Death Valley with several buros laden with gold ore from his mine. This is the report of two of his scouts, who have arrived from Barstow, some distance ahead of "Scotty," and nobody in Barstow doubts the truth of the report.

"Scotty" left for Death Valley a couple of weeks ago, taking with him several scouts and much ammunition, the party being heavily armed. They said then that they would give a warm time to the party of prospectors who left for Death Valley some days before if they were found in the neighborhood of the mine, for which the strangers were looking with Indian trailers.

"Scotty was incensed at the reports that his mine was a myth, and swore he would prove its reality when he came back. The scouts say "Scotty" will hardly enter Barstow with all the gold he is bringing, in spite of the fact that his party are all good shots and well armed. He will cash some of the treasure and bring in enough to convince skeptics.

CHICO CIGARS MAKE FRIENDS.

Boyce Says They are Now the Largest Sellers in His Cigar Case.

Give a man a Wadsworth Bros.' Chico and you make a friend for life, and at the same time show that you are a smoker of good cigars.

S. F. Boyce, who is the local agent for this brand, says he never before introduced a cigar to his trade that gave such general satisfaction as the Chico, and although he has had them for only a short time they are today the largest seller in his cigar case. It is quality that has made this sale, and that keeps increasing it from day to day.

"A man who first tried a Chico yesterday," says Mr. Boyce, "will come in today and get some more and we are sure that he will continue a friend to Chicos."

They are made with a long, clear, Havana filler of the best quality tobacco, burn freely with a pleasant, mild fragrance, and although they sell for but five cents are equal to most fifteen cent cigars, and superior to a great many of the ten-centers. If you like a good cigar from imported tobacco, call at Boyce's drug store for a Chico.

RAILROADS

EAST ALSO AFFECTED

Car Shortage Interferes With Coal and Ore Shipments.

Lake Fleets Delayed—Wisconsin Central Officials Visit Duluth.

The shortage of rolling stock is felt as bad in the coal trade in the East as it is in the grain trade in the Northwest. Unless the Eastern roads take quite a brace very soon the fear is expressed that the Eastern shippers will be far behind on their orders at the upper lake ports. There is a good demand for coal in the Northwest, but the railroads are unable to bring the product of the mines forward to the lake, and the indications are that the season will close with a shortage of coal at Duluth and the upper lake distributing points.

The threatened congestion and shortage prevailing at present all over the country are due to one of the most remarkable revivals of business and commerce ever experienced by railroad men. Every class of business is said to be shipping greater tonnage than ever before. Owing to the great demand for cars caused by the increased tonnage on their own lines railroads are refusing to let their equipment leave their own rails, as is the case with the Great Northern and Northern Pacific in the West and the New York Central lines, the Baltimore & Ohio and the Pennsylvania in the East.

The shortage of cars on the grain-carrying roads continues very pronounced. It is said that the Western roads could use between 2,000 and 3,000 grain cars in excess of the present supply. One road alone is short 1,000 cars. The grain firms in Chicago and Buffalo, because of the car shortage, are unable to secure a movement of all the grain offered.

As a result of this tie-up of grain in Chicago, there are between 8,000,000 and 9,000,000 bushels of grain in that city that cannot be moved, and the elevator capacity will soon be exhausted. Railroad officials say that this is due to the fact that it is impossible to secure empty cars returning from the East, the westbound tonnage filling all the cars.

Under normal conditions the railroads have plenty of empties to send back to the West. At present there few, if any empties returning from the East, and consequently there is a big grain congestion at Chicago and Buffalo, notwithstanding that lake traffic is still in full swing.

Another feature of the situation is that much time has been lost by the lake fleets during the last two weeks on account of the scarcity of cars. This week no improvement has been noted in the situation.

A large number of ore carriers were held at the lower lake ports last week on account of the car shortage on the roads that operate betwene Lake Erie and the valleys. Vessels that have ore for this shipment, and a large portion of the business is handled in that manner, have to wait until the cars are ready for them. There has been a large amount of ore afloat at Lake Erie ports the last week or two, and many of the vessels have been delayed in discharging their cargoes.

ON A TOUR OF INSPECTION.

A Party of Wisconsin Central Officials Pay Visit to Duluth.

A party of Wisconsin Central railway officials were at the Head of the Lakes for a short time this morning. They arrived in Superior on a special train last evening, and this morning made a hurried inspection of the terminal properties of the Lake Superior & Southeastern road, controlled by the Wisconsin Central, in Duluth and Superior, leaving for St. Paul at 10 a. m. Their stay in Duluth was very brief.

In the party were Newman Erb of New York, one of the new directors of the road, Messrs. Kleybolte and Bradford, also directors from New York; H. Morris, general counsel; E. F. Potter of Milwaukee, general superintendent; Burt Johnson of Milwaukee, general freight agent; L. A. Van Valkenberg of Abbotsford, Wis., superintendent; R. Toombs of Milwaukee, comptroller and auditor; C. N. Kalk, chief engineer of Milwaukee, and C. M. Morris of Superior, attorney for the road.

Mr. Erb is a well known figure in Eastern railway circles, and is the man who is said to have engineered the reported deal, whereby there was a change of ownership of the Wisconsin Central. The visit of the officials is said to have been of no special significance, other than to inspect the properties of the road at the Head of the Lakes. They had nothing to say regarding the plans of the road, further than what has already been published.

Railroad Notes.

It is reported unofficial that V. C. Russell, city ticket agent of the Wisconsin Central road in Minneapolis, will become Northwestern passenger agent of the Michigan Central road at St. Paul, in place of W. L. Wyand, who recently resigned, and that Mr. Russell's successor will be Frank Towne, now city ticket agent of the New York Central lines in Minneapolis.

A direct denial that the Great Northern interests have secured control of the Wisconsin Central road through the change of directors effected at the annual meeting of the Central, Tuesday, was made yesterday by Vice President Louis Hill of the Great Northern. Mr. Hill said he did not know what interests had gained control of the Wisconsin Central.

The Great Northern road has just acquired forty acres of land, and options have been secured on 140 acres more, at Minneapolis, just outside the city limits, near the west shore of Cedar Lake. It is said the company will build shops there.

PUBLIC OPINION BEST SUPERVISOR

To Control the Management of Great Life Insurance Companies.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—"There is a supervision of insurance more important than that of state and federal laws. It is the supervision of public opinion. Of all institutions, the insurance company most depends upon public sentiment for its very existence." This was the opening sentence of an address today by James M. Beck of New York, to the Fire Underwriters' association of the Northwest, in session in this city.

"No one pretends," he went on, "that the present insurance system, either in theory or practical administration, is incapable of improvement. It was not perfect, and never will be perfect, as long as the human mind is progressive. The people, in their sober, second thought, will perceive that many of the conceded evils of the insurance system are due to conditions for which the insurance companies are not responsible.

"The New York investigation will be of incalculable value if it brings the American people to a full realization of the system of federated anarchy under which, so far as insurance is concerned, we are living, and to which the worst evils developed by the investigating committee are primary attributable.

"Let those who complain of the large sums expended by insurance companies to defeat oppressive legislation remember that the insurance companies rarely spend a dollar to secure favorable legislation. They ask no appropriation, they claim no right of way. Let our stern moralists visit their greatest condemnation upon the legislative highwaymen who hold up these great business interests, and, above all, upon an indifferent people, who clothe these highwaymen with the power to hold up their victims."

Cattleman Battle Bribed to Give Evidence In Watt Case.

London, Oct. 12.—Today's proceedings in the case of Hugh Watt, the former member of parliament who is charged with attempting to bribe a private detective named Marshall to assist him in murdering Watt's wife, were marked by the sensational withdrawal by the cattleman, Norman Battle, of the evidence which he gave Sept. 22.

On that occasion Battle declared that he overheard a conversation between Marshall and another man in which Marshall was threatened. Battle today said his real name was Lightfoot and that Watt, who was accompanied by a man describing himself as an equerry of King Edward met the witness in Hyde Park, Aug. 24 and informed him that the king wished the case to be withdrawn. At Watt's dictation Battle (or Lightfoot) wrote a letter to Watt's lawyer saying he could clear Watt. The latter also dictated the evidence which the witness gave Sept. 22. Battle added that he had received about $200, from Watt and the equerry was advised to go to Canada and was promised $25,000 and a government position for life.

ADVERTISEMENT LEADS

To The Arrest of Two Criminals In Europe.

Antwerp, Oct. 12.—The police believe that they are on the track of one of the most daring and dangerous gangs of criminals in Europe. The discovery dates from a wrongly delivered letter to a merchant in this city. This merchant inserted a business advertisement in one of the local papers, asking that replies be addressed at a number at the newspaper office. By mistake the newspaper clerk gave him a letter addressed to a number very similar to his own. To his amazement the merchant found that the letter concerned a murder committed in Paris.

The writer complained that, although the murder had been duly performed, the proceeds were not at all such as he had been led to expect. He added instructions as to further robberies with violence designed for the near future.

The merchant gave the letter to the police, and they, working quietly, arrested at the same moment the man who wrote the letter and the man to whom it was addressed—one in Paris, the other in Antwerp.

Further investigation has shown that the men were members of a formidable gang of professional thieves, who never hesitated to murder their victims when such a course seemed desirable. The gang of assassins appears to be international in plan and scope, having agents throughout France, Belgium, Holland and, it is believed, also in Great Britain.

WEST DULUTH

APPEAL FOR YOUNG MEN

Made By Rev. C. P. Bates of Hibbing at Presbytery Meeting.

Sessions Ended—Ministers Go to Synod at Fergus Falls.

The Duluth presbytery, which has been meeting in Westminster Presbyterian church, in West Duluth, closed its meetings last evening after quite a successful gathering. Most of the members of the presbytery left this morning for Fergus Falls to attend the meeting of the synod, which will take place there tomorrow. Rev. S. M. Marsh of Duluth and Elder S. A. Blair of Lakeside were elected delegates to the next general assembly, which will take place at Des Moines, Iowa, next May. Rev. Jay M. Swander of Ely was elected alternate for Mr. Marsh.

The matter of meeting place the next time the presbytery gathers was left to the moderator, Rev. J. M. Swander of Ely. He invited the clergymen and elders to Ely, but no decision was made. Recommendations were made by committees to build churches at Little Fork and Bruno, but no action was taken at this time. Rev. Peter Knudsen of New Duluth and Elder J. P. Wier of West Duluth, delegates to the last general assembly at Winona Lake, Ind., made reports on the assembly.

At the evening meeting, Rev. Mr. Bates of Hibbing spoke on "Young Men" most interestingly, and Rev. Mr. Neff of Virginia spoke of church work on the ranges. Rev. Mr. Sharpless of Duluth also spoke briefly.

The address made by Mr. Bates on "Young Men" was an unexpected feature of the presbytery meeting. Mr. Bates is engaged in pastoral work in Hibbing, but uses his energies outside of the church work as well. He has been endeavoring with all his might to establish a young men's club in that range city, in lieu of a Y. M. C. A., and has made strenuous efforts to obtain money, not only in Hibbing, but elsewhere from those interested in the protection and development of young men. Mr. Bates has done splendid work in Hibbing among young men, and has met with considerable success. He hopes to bring about a successful culmination of his desire before long.

Last evening he made an address that was not only interesting, but quite affecting. The assemblage at the Westminster church, last evening's being an open meeting, was visibly moved by the appeal he made in behalf of young men. He has a keen realization of the temptations and pitfalls which beset the young man with no place but saloons and similar places where he can find amusement, and because, from clearness of knowledge comes clearness of imparting that knowledge, he, last evening, presented his position to the meeting in a manner which made his hearers realize to a great extent the condition which he is fighting. The speech for the occasion was remarkable, and it is believed will bear fruit in the very near future.

WEDDING PARTY STOOD IN THREE COUNTIES.

New Orleans, Oct. 12.—The marriage of Miss Sarah Adams of Brookhaven, Miss., daughter of a Methodist minister, to Aubrey Toler of Gloster, Miss., shows some of the absurdities of the cross-country yellow-fever quarantines of Mississippi.

The marriage took place near Auburn, where the counties of Pike, Amite and Lincoln meet.

As these counties have quarantines against each other, it was impossible for the bridegroom to come to Brookhaven for his bride, and impossible for her to have her parents attend the wedding at Gloster.

All these difficulties were overcome by having the ceremony at the county lines. The bridegroom stood in Amite county, the bride in Lincoln county and the minister in Pike county.

LATE DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Large Trout Weighing Fifty-four Pounds Caught In Lake Michigan.

Manistique—What is believed to be the largest trout ever caught in Lake Michigan and brought to this port has been secured by the tug Burgher of the Coffey fleet, from nets set in the waters off Barque Point. It was necessary to use gaff hooks in order to land the big fish on the deck of the tug. The trout weighed fifty-four pounds and measured as follows: Length, four feet; circumference, two feet seven and a quarter inches; depth, twelve inches, and six and a half inches through from side to side. The tail at the widest point was just a foot across.

Iron Mountain—The question of issuing $30,000 of bonds for municipal improvement purposes will be the issue at a special election to be held at Iron River, Oct. 25. Of the amount it is proposed to raise, $10,000 is for the improvement of the waterworks and $20,000 for the establishment of an electric lighting plant.

Sault Ste. Marie—Joseph Lalonde commenced suit today against the trans-St. Marys Traction company for $20,000 damages, for injuries received in a street car accident. Lalonde sustained injuries that will make him a cripple for life. Both legs were smashed.

Calumet—James Thomas, aged 24, committed suicide Tuesday night while under the influence of liquor. It is alleged that he quarreled with his brother, Wesley, who exchanged shots with him. James then went upstairs and shot himself. He leaves a young wife.

Houghton—Otto Lilliquist was arrested yesterday, charged with stabbing August Helnals at a lumber camp near Kenton, Sunday. The injured man bled to death before he received medical attention. The stabbing occurred in a drunken quarrel.

Negaunee—Gustaf Sarae died from the result of injuries received while hunting on Sunday, when he accidentally shot himself. Thomas Spencer of this town was run over and killed by a passenger train while stealing a ride. His mangled body was found today.

Menominee—The big $200,000 paper mill here was partially destroyed by fire just before midnight, Wednesday, the loss amounting to over $100,000, partially covered by insurance. The fire started from the friction of a pulley rubbing on a beam in the pulp room. The flames spread through the pulp mill like powder flashes, men at work barely escaping with their lives, jumping through windows, losing coats, watches and other effects.

Escanaba—Eugene Dubar, a top dock worker, was crushed to death on top of No. 6 ore dock at Escanaba. As near as can be learned Dubar stood in the narrow space between two trains and unlocked a clamp or bar that opened the bottom of a car that opened the bottom of a car to allow the ore to drop into the pockets. One train was moving slowly and Dubar was caught between the trains. His body was rolled and crushed and fell into one of the pockets. He was aged 26 and is survived by a daughter aged 4 years.

A small blaze was discovered in the ventilator shaft of the dry kiln at the big plant of the Escanaba Woodenware company, and with one of the heaviest gales that have swept over Escanaba this year coming at nearly the same time, the fire threatened to develop into a dangerous blaze. Both companies of the fire department were called out, but when they arrived on the scene the blaze was under control. The damage was nominal.

St. Ignace—Joe Claus of St. Ignace met with a peculiar but fortunately not dangerous accident in the railroad yards there. He was on a car that while being shunted broke its brake chain. The car got away and bumped heavily into some empties. The impact tossed Claus ten feet in the air. He fell on his head on the ground and was badly stunned. No bones were broken, the worst injury being a severe shaking up. The car suffered most, being considerably damaged.

DULUTH'S BEAR FAME.

Between the aerial bridge and the bears, Duluth seems to be in a fair way to become famous. These exceptional exhibits appear to have struck the popular fancy all over the country, and all the uncommon merits of Duluth as a city, merits of most estimable sort, have not done so much as they have done, their failure being apparently due to their conventionality. Showing, perhaps, that the average man is so jaded with sensations nowadays that it takes things very much out of the ordinary to cause him to take particular notice.

Paragraphers the country over have lately taken occasion to make remarks about Duluth, dealing generally with the bears, and curiously enough about 75 per cent of those mentioning the subject are certain to bring in President Roosevelt and to express sorrow for him because his engagements will not permit his doing a little bear shooting out of the hotel windows in Duluth. Others profess to be very solicitous about the safety of the residents of Duluth, surrounded as they are by such hordes of ferocious animals. One paper wanted to know what was the matter with the town fence, that the bears could get in so easily. Others said Duluth was fortunate it was just the wild kind of bears, and not the Wall street kind, that were doing the raiding.

Some of the fame, it now appears, is due to a habit some Duluthians have fallen into of "kidding" their home papers about the situation here. For instance, somebody has sent The Herald a copy of the Chatham, N. Y., Semi-Weekly Courier, in which one E. C. B., who evidently used to go swimming in the millpond at Chatham, has a letter more or less facetiously telling the folks back home about Duluth and the bears. The bear stories he given the home paper are true, so far as The Herald knows, but apparently a little twist of humor in the letter has given the Chatham editor an idea there may be a joke concealed somewhere. At any rate, he seems inclined to treat the situation more or less hilariously in his editorial columns. Perhaps it was this touch from "E. C. B." that unseated the editor's powers of belief:

> Moose and deer come into the city in the same way. It is a little early in the season yet, but they never fail. When man can sit on his front porch with a rifle and knock over a bear and make himself a good fur coat there ought not to be much of a hoot over hard times.

The Chatham editor, always loyal to the home folks, even when they stray so far from Chatham as Duluth, uses up more than a stickful of space to assure his readers of his implicit faith in the veracity of "E. C. B." Yet reading between the lines one can plainly see in his editorial utterances a pained impression that in wandering so far from Chatham the Duluth correspondent has also been wandering from the paths of upright veracity.

The Herald has not the pleasure of "E. C. B.'s" acquantance, but in order that he—or she—may be set right with the folks at home, it takes this opportunity of saying that in a general way the statements are correct.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIP.

It is the habit of some people to busy themselves worrying over things that do not matter much, often things that are purely imaginary, when by worrying—if they must worry—over things that are worth while they might accomplish something useful.

Just now the president's proposed trip to New Orleans is worrying many people, apparently. First they worried over the danger of exposure to yellow fever, forgetting that by the time of the president's visit frost will have put an end to the scourge, for this season at least.

Then they began worrying because the president proposed to make the trip on board a man-of-war, and because the boat would have to go beyond the three-mile limit in making the trip, and that therefore the president would be leaving the country during his term of office. This, they assumed, would violate the provisions of the constitution.

A New Orleans lawyer has attempted to reassure these professional worriers by explaining that an American man-of-war is, constructively, floating American territory, and that even if the president's boat did go beyond the three-mile limit, so long as he remained aboard he would still, constructively, be in the United States.

When as a matter of fact, even if the boat should chance to touch at a foreign port, and the president should step ashore to look over the town, the constitution would live through it. In fact, it would not be violated in the slightest degree. The constitution does not confine the president to home territory during his term of office, in spite of a very widespread belief to the contrary.

The practice of having the presidents stay at home is one of custom, not of law; of precedent, not of precept. Theoretically, the country is supposed to need its president every hour, and so far no president has attacked precedent so far as to go outside of the country during his term of office. President Roosevelt, however, seems to adore precedent less than some, and it is by no means inconceivable that at some time during his term he may take occasion to pay a little call on Mexico or Canada. If he does, the country will still live, and the constitution will remain intact.

A SILLY STATEMENT.

It is ridiculously funny, sometimes, to note the grave manner in which some statesmen pronounce the most ridiculous propositions, apparently with the idea that they are going to be taken seriously by the people.

Representative Dalzell of Pennsylvania, one of the high priests of the standpat wing of the Republican party, has lately come down to the front of the stage, assumed an attitude in the limelight, and gravely informed the president that his enormous vote last year was due to the fact that the people of the country approved the policy of his party and wanted no disturbing change.

In other words, the personal popularity of Theodore Roosevelt had nothing whatever to do with it, and the president's prodigious popular pluralities were due purely to the fact that the people recognized that their great prosperity was due to the Dingley tariff law, and that they registered their vote in this pronounced manner to indicate their desire that none of the schedules of that law be disturbed. That is not quite what Mr. Dalzell said, but it is exactly what he seeks to convey.

Whether he expects the people to believe this ingenious interpretation of their motives last year or not, or whether he thinks he can make the president believe it and thus convert him to the standpat policy, The Herald does not know. What it does know, however, is that his statement is a ridiculous misstatement, and that everybody is aware that in the election last year Theodore Roosevelt overlapped his party on every side. Millions of voters cast their ballots for him last November with hardly a thought of the party that claimed him as its candidate. Had he been the candidate of the Prohibition party or the People's party, under the same circumstances, the votes would have been cast for him just the same—all but those of Mr. Dalzell and others similarly situated.

And this is true also: That in spite of Mr. Dalzell's attempt to make out that the people voted as they did because they wished no change, they voted as they did because of the president's personal popularity, because of their faith in his integrity and firmness of purpose; and no small part of their feeling toward him arose from the common knowledge that he believed in the tariff as a thing to help the people and not to rob them with, and that he advocated changing it to make it work that way.

THE FOOL JOKER.

Practical joking and punning go hand in hand as products of the wit of low intellects. Occasionally, in moments of lightness, able minds have descended to both. But the descent is dangerous, and the test comes in the effects. Practical joking that does injury to the victim, if it is only injury to his feelings, is of a very low order of humor, and deserves the punishment it sometimes, but too seldom, receives.

For example, two very cunning young men in New York a few days ago conceived the happy idea of calling up a common friend and alarming him by the news that his store had been burglarized, and that he had suffered a severe loss. In order to make the story stick, the young men assumed to be speaking from police headquarters.

The owner of the store, agitated as might have been expected and as the instigators of the alarm had counted upon, dashed out in a pouring rain, leaving his family worrying over his loss, of course, and made his way to the store. He found it all right, and his first sensation was one of intense relief. Then, following quickly upon that emotion, came resentment against those who had made a fool of him in this manner.

It happened that the telephone company was able to tell him who had telephoned. The result was that almost before the two jokers had ceased laughing merrily over their noble exploit, they were arrested, and the experience of being hauled to the police court was amply sufficient to quench whatever joy they may have had left over their little joke. It is a pleasure to record that in the end they were the victims of their own joke, and that the intended victim had the comfort of seeing them severely reprimanded and fined for their actions.

This is the way most practical jokes should turn out. Too few of them turn out that way. There are many practical jokes that are harmless, and while they indicate no great mental powers in their originators, so long as they are harmless and leave no ill effects they can be forgiven.

But the sort of practical joker that will expose an associate to ridicule or risk, the sort that will playfully pull a chair from beneath a person about to sit down, inflicting upon him lifelong disability from spine injury, the sort that will risk a friend's person, self-respect or feelings for amusement, deserves squelching on every possible occasion.

HOTEL GOSSIP

"In all the years I have been in the West I have never seen ducks and brant more plentiful in the Dakotas than they are this year," said C. H. Steffen of Minneapolis at the Lenox. "While the season has been so wet that it grently affected the chicken crop, the water appears to have had just the opposite effect on water fowl. They are more plentiful than they have been for years. Two friends of mine were out one day last week and in two hours they killed 159 ducks. That is a fact.

"The usual number of outsiders are going into the Dakotas this year to hunt the birds. Scores come in from the East every season. The sport they will find will make up for any disappointments they have met with in the past. The geese are not coming along in very great numbers just yet, but they will be numerous later on."

* * *

Ghost stories and presentiments were the subjects of conversation in the lobby of the Lenox hotel one evening recently. Several stories, humorous and otherwise, were told. D. M. Baker of Minneapolis related a queer experience he met with in the West several years ago, while traveling with a party of friends on a Denver & Rio Grande train.

"I am not at all superstitious, and, as a general thing, I place little confidence in tales about spirits of the departed," said Mr. Baker. "Neither did I place any confidence in presentiments until the event I am about to tell you about occurred.

"There were several of us on our way to the Pacific coast. On the night in question we had berths in the same car. We occupied our time during the evening in the usual way of passengers on an overland train, smoking, chatting and playing cards. As the night advanced the party grew smaller, as, one by one, the fellows went to bed. I retired a little before 11 o'clock, and it wasn't long before I was sound asleep.

"About 2 o'clock in the morning I awoke with a start. A voice seemed to be calling me. 'Get off the train,' it said. I rubbed my eyes, and while I was trying to figure out just where I was the voice repeated the words, telling me to get off the train. I was really in a dazed condition, and only half awake. Just then the train began to move. It had stopped for a minute at a station.

"Hardly realizing what I did, I grabbed my clothes, ran to the end of the car and jumped onto the depot platform. When I came to my senses the lights of the train were disappearing around a bend. No building was in sight, aside from the depot. There a light was shining from the window. I entered and surprised the operator with my strange appearance, for, of course, I had had no time to dress. I told him just how I came to be there, and then laughed with him at my own foolishness.

"He pointed out a cot, and for a second time that night I went to bed. Before morning a report came over the wires to the effect that the train I had left had run into a washout twenty miles farther on and had been badly wrecked. Every person in the car I deserted was more or less injured, and five were killed. It is not for me to explain the thing. Maybe it was a dream and maybe it wasn't. Anyway, I wasn't in the wreck. To me that is the most interesting part of the story."

"The average laboring man is a good deal better off in Northern Minnesota than he would be if he were on the Pacific coast," said A. I. Cleveland of St. Paul at the St. Louis. "Out there, there is a lot of work to be done, but there are more men than is necessary to do it. Here there is a lot of work to be done, and, it apears, there are not enough men to do it. This results in better wages. On the coast the surplus of men has just the opposite effect.

"For three or four years past, laboring men have been flocking there to the coast. They have been flocking there a good deal longer than that, as matter of fact, but it is only during the past four or five years that the excess in the labor supply has become so marked. This year the conditions are worse than ever. This fact is due to the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland. Men went to Portland from all over the country to find employment, and hundreds of them were, of course, unable to get it.

"They streamed into Portland from all along the Pacific coast, and many of them came from points to the East. The North Pacific coast alone had a sufficiency of idle workmen to satisfy the management of the fair, but the people outside did not seem to be aware of this. They went to Portland with the expectation of finding profitable employment, only to meet with disappointment.

"Now there are a great number of men stranded in Washington and Oregon, taking any kind of employment that offers, and accepting any wages the employers want to give them. For some time past the wages have been none too high in these two states, owing to the numbers coming in from the East, and now the labor market is utterly demoralized. A good deal better wages are paid right around Duluth, where the contractors are unable to get enough men to do the work required. The difference in the daily wage ranges from 50 cents to a dollar and more for common labor."

"The speeding of automobiles has come to be such a nuisance in Chicago that even the ministers are making an effort to put a stop to scorching," said Ralph Parker of Chicago at the St. Louis. "The whole trouble lies in a lax enforcement of the law. The patrolmen are most of them all right, and make the necessary arrests, but they are not upheld by the park board and the police court judges. Every time a scorcher is arrested he is either let go or fined a very small amount. The patrolman is upheld so very weakly, in fact, that his arrests become fewer and fewer.

"One of the ministers, made wrathy over the injuring of a woman member of his congregation, has petitioned the park board for a more stringent enforcement of the law. A fine of $5, $10 or even $25 looks small to most people who are able to own an automobile, especially the big kind that do the damage. There should be a heavier fine and a jail sentence, and the minister embodies this in his petition."

THE WEATHER

Now that nature has had its little spell of sulks, this morning brought the kind of fall weather that is normal and natural, and that brings an added zest to the joy of living. Days like this you will notice yourself stepping out with a quicker, firmer tread, and that feeling of exuberance enters into your work as well. It is the finest season of the year, in many respects, and with the exception of a northeaster or two, perhaps, and occasional spells of cold and possibly snow flurries, there should be six weeks or more of it.

Though it did not feel as cold last night as it did the night before, the thermometer reached a lower level, dropping to 31 deg., a point below the freezing level, and the highest temperature reached yesterday was 42 deg.

The outlook for tonight and tomorrow, as presented by the weather man, is good. Says he of conditions:

"The lake region disturbance has moved to New England states, causing light to copious rains in the lake region, Ohio valley and North Atlantic states. The passage of the Rocky mountain high pressure area to the Mississippi valley caused decidedly cooler weather in Eastern states and light to killing frosts from the Ohio valley north and northwest. The Alberta depression shows increased strength and has advanced to Assiniboia, attended by warmer weather over the Rocky mountains and Eastern slopes, and rain in Oregon and Washington. Present indications favor generally fair weather in this vicinity tonight and Friday, and higher temperature tonight."

Following were the lowest temperatures recorded during the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning, as reported by the weather bureau:

Minnesota—Generally fair tonight and Friday. Warmer tonight.

The Other Check.

London World: A Franciscan monk a few years ago in Ireland was accosted by a blackguard who thrust a lighted cigar-end into the friar's mouth. On the latter resenting the act the hooligan hit the worthy father on the cheek, who thereupon turned the other and requested to be hit again. A second blow was calmly received by him, when he said: "I have done my duty," and immediately proceeded to give the scoundrel a tremendous thrashing.

Why They Remained Calm.

Washington Post: "Ordinarily my experience has been that bears were not flurried when I suddenly came upon them," says the president in a magazine article. The bears probably failed to recognize him in his hunting costume.

Getting Himself Disliked.

Kansas City Journal: Already quite a number of intellectual and gentlemanly equal suffragists regret that they ever cast their husbands' votes for G. Cleveland.

Such a Foolishness.

Louisville Courier-Journal: Do you usually wear a straw hat in summer?

Yes.

You wear it because you prefer it in warm weather?

Yes.

Are you wearing your straw hat this warm weather in September? Did you wear it yesterday?

No?

Would a straw hat be any more comfortable on a warm 28th of July than on a warm 28th of September?

But you have heard that it is not the thing to wear a straw hat after the 15th of September?

Confidentially, now, don't you think yourself considerable of a coward?

Wise Little Robert Reed.

"I would not be a billionaire,"
Said little Robert Reed.
"To tempt me let nobody dare.
I wouldn't. No, indeed.

"They'd watch me when at early morn
I walked amid the dew.
They'd criticise with cruel scorn
My clothing, old and new.

"If I should hoard my wealth they'd blame
My avarice each day.
And they would chide me, just the same,
For giving it away.

"To poverty I'll stoutly cling
With unremitting care,
For oh, it is a horrid thing
To be a billionaire!"

—Washington Star.

The Sly Celestial.

New York Herald: "When I was tending bar out West," said a Ninth avenue drink mixer, "a Chink came in one day and took a bottle out of his wide sleeve.

"'Gimme,' he says, 'blandy. Half a dolla.'

"I filled his bottle for him and he put it up his sleeve again and felt in his pocket for the money. All of a sudden he frowned.

"'No got money,' he says. 'You wait. Hold bottle. Me fetchee money. Excuse.'

"And he handed back the bottle to me and hurried off, full of apologies.

"This Chink, though never returned. So the next day I started to pour his brandy back into the demijohn again.

"'By crinus,' I said, 'the Chink shifted flasks on me.'

"The bottle he had handed back contained nothin' but cold tea."

Jap Smoke Rings.

Chicago Chronicle: According to accounts the Japanese are experts in smoke rings, and in Japan it is considered no uncommon trick to blow three rings of smoke in succession, the second traveling through the first and third through both. Some stage performers become so expert in smoke-blowing that they are not only able to multiply the number of rings thus formed, but actually form Japanese characters representing words and even sentences. One Japanese juggler, it is declared, proposed to his wife by forming the characters representing his avowal of love through a thin stream of smoke.

TWENTY YEARS AGO.

Taken from the Columns of The Herald of this date in 1885.

John McKinzie, who was lately first assistant wheat inspector, is now traveling buyer of Leavens & Fuller, in the wheat regions.

Judge Neil McLachlan has received a visit from his brother-in-law.

The Rev. Albert Edelbrook of St. John's college, St. Cloud, was in town Sunday and preached in the Catholic church.

Mr. Patten of the electric light company spells his name with an "e". Village Engineer Patton uses an "o". It is Mr. Patten who is at the head of the financial committee of the Y. M. C. A. The resemblance of the names causes confusion.

A. J. Sawyer has returned home.

Thomas Cullyford left by the Omaha train today for Chicago.

Isaac P. Beck left today for Philadelphia. He will be away about a month.

San Yick, the Chinaman, announced his removal from the burned building on Minnesota Point on a placard which read: "I am to go."

W. B. Silvey has gone out to do leveling for the Duluth & Northen railroad engineering party which is now in the field. Mr. Silvey was formerly engaged on government harbor work and has also been employed in Dakota.

It has been learned that T. P. Brooke, the Minneapolis musician, has decided to remove to Duluth and will be here some time next week. Steps will be immediately taken to arrange a first-class band and orchestra and set on foot several plans for the general advancement of musical interests.

Probably no article that was ever written about Duluth has had a wider circulation and been more extensively copied than that written by Thomas Dowse to be read before the waterway convention.

Since Ignatius Donnelly visited Duluth and delivered his speech here at the agricultural fair, he has apparently taken a great interest in the place. In a letter to the St. Paul Globe, he advocates an extra session of the legislature if for no other reason than to legislate upon the railroad question for th ebenefit of Southern Minnesota and Duluth. He thinks the legislature should compel the St. Paul & Duluth railroad to carry wheat from St. Paul to Duluth for 5 cents per bushel.

The commission to locate the third hospital for the insane will not visit Duluth next week, but they will come later and Duluth should take steps at once to obtain a suitable site to offer the commission.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

C. D. I. in Cass Lake Times: The only antiseptic for slander poison is silence.

Ely Miner: Those who are everlastingly kicking on the proposition that it costs more to live now than it used to should remember that it is worth more to live now than it used to be. It must also be remembered that it is worth considerable extra to be permitted to live in this grand old state of ours.

Long Prairie Democrat: Every enterprise that benefits the town benefits every man in it. If your neighbor starts a new scheme to help along don't jump on it with both feet just because you did not happen to think of it first. Aid him to boost it. It will help you, too.

Roseau Region: The recent meeting of the drainage league at Crookston did more for the cause of drainage than all the lobbyists could do in ten years. Jump hard on that lobbying proposition, boys of the north; it's not needed.

Grand Marais Herald: The statement attributed to Col. Watterson that "a first-class man cannot go to congress on $5,000 a year" suggests the query: Are congressmen not first-class men, or are they doing what they cannot afford?

Red Wing Republican: The pressing matter is the tariff. Once let the people believe that their patient hope would be disappointed, once let them become convinced that the Republican party will never revise the tariff, and the party is in danger of defeat.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: "For next governor of Minnesota—a Roosevelt Republican," says the Northfield News. That is a very popular qualification enjoyed by every Republican and by at least half the Democrats in Minnesota.

Le Sueur Sentinel: While some of our Republican contemporaries are making all sorts of fun of the "Democratic state board of equalization," the people at large are experiencing a feeling of acute satisfaction as they note how they hit the big corporations who have not been paying their share of the taxes. Of course all the corporations squeal, but the board keeps right on raising their assessments. Do our Republican friends want to line themselves up with these big tax dodgers?

Detroit Record: It is said that the Gulf stream is getting near the United States. Everything is coming this way.

Virginia Virginian: And it is barely possible that after all Miss Mabel Evans did not get much when she secured the lease to the famous "Virginia Sliver."

Better Train Service.

Virginia Virginian: The business men of the range, and especially of Virginia, should bestir themselves and bring all possible pressure to bear to bring about better train service. There is reason to believe that if a concerted effort is made at both ends of the line it could be brought about. The officials of the Missabe road are all obliging and reasonable men and will no doubt do everything in their power to please patrons of the line when they find out what the majority desire.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: There is hardly any way to learn swearing like having the rheumatism.

Because a man is engaged is not a sign he has no sense in every other way.

It is almost impossible for a man to have so much money that his family can't spend it for him.

Either a woman is likely to scratch you when she is smiling at you or smile at you when she is scratching you.

The trouble with putting anybody in your family on an allowance is you have to give her twice as much more to let you off from increasing it.

Jokes a Hundred Years Old.

New York Globe: The following are taken from almanacs printed in 1798:

Two men were riding from Slupton to Burford. Seeing a miller riding in front of them on his sacks, they went forward, one on each side of the miller. One asked him: "Miller, which art thou, a knave or a fool?" "Really," replied the miller, "I don't know which I am the most, but I think I am between both."

An Englishman and an Irishman were condemned for piracy. For that crime they are generally executed near some river. The Englishman was to suffer first, but by some accident the rope slipped and he fell into the water. The Irishman begged that the rope be tied fast to him, "for," he said, "if it should slip I would surely drown, for I cannot swim."

A young man lately made a justice of the peace was asked by another what he would do with a man who committed suicide. The 'squire answered with much magisterial gravity: "He must be confined to the state prison at hard labor for life."

A soldier lately come over with Gen. Moore was asked if he had met with much hospitality in Holland. "Oh, yes," he replied. "I met with far too much of it. I was in the hospital nearly all the time I was there."

An Irish student was once asked what was meant by posthumous works. "They are such works," said Paddy, "as a man would write after he is dead."

The father of Crebillion one day said to him in a passion: "There are two things I heartily wish were not mine—my tragedy of Catiline and you." He answered: "Don't fret yourself, father, for they say neither of us is yours."

Uncle Sam Soliloquizes.

Immigration is vexation,
Taxation is as bad.
The rule of the Free doth puzzle me—
And the Trusts all drive me mad.

—Life.

The Miserable Wretch.

Washington Post: A man has been arrested at Clyde, N. Y., for eating grass. Some folks are slow to learn that the grass belongs to the beef trust.

PASSING PLEASANTRIES.

Detroit Free Press: "Mrs. Blank has always said she was afraid to travel and now she is going to California. I wonder how it happens?"

"Someone gave her a pass."

Philadelphia Press: "Did I understand you to say that all rum selling has been stopped in your town?"

"Not at all. I merely said it was strictly prohibited."

Washington Star: "What do you think of these investigations?"

"Well," answered the life insurance solicitor, "it shows how things even up. The directors are now getting some of the sarcasm and abuse that we agents used to have to stand."

Houston Post: "How did your wife come to die?"

"She was taken suddenly sick."

"Yes?"

"And the neighbors sent for me and for the doctor."

"Well?"

"Well, the doctor got there first."

Chicago Record-Herald: "I see that the mayor of Grand Rapids, Mich., has refused to accept an increase of salary."

"Say, couldn't some insurance company get the business by hiring him as its president?"

Cleveland Leader: "He makes love to summer girls in the winter time and to winter girls in the summer."

"What's the idea?"

"Thinks they come a little cheaper when they're out of season."

Chicago Journal: "You can't imagine," said the musical young woman, "how distressing it is when a singer realizes that she has lost her voice."

"Perhaps not," replied the plain man, "but I've got a fair idea how distressing it is when she doesn't realize it."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Willie, will you tell your sister I am here?"

"She knows you're here. She told me to say she wasn't home, but I knew you wouldn't give me a dime if I told you that."

Willie got the dime.

Binks the Inconspicuous.

Tit-Bits: There is a telephone in their residence, and as it is used principally by Mrs. Binks and her friends it is, perhaps, natural that it should be identified solely with Mrs. Binks, and that Mr. Binks—well, Mr. Binks answered when the bell rang a few nights ago, and this is the conversation that took place:

"Hallo!"

"Well?"

"Is this Mrs. Binks?"

"No."

"I mean is this Mrs. Bink's telephone?"

"No; it's the company's."

"Well, is this Mrs. Bink's house?"

"I don't know. I'm beginning to think that perhaps it is."

"What?"

"Yes, I suppose it is. Every one seems to think it is, anyway."

"Is Mrs. Bink's daughter there?"

"No."

"Well, who is this?"

"Oh, this is only Mrs. Bink's husband, the father of Mrs. Bink's daughter, the man who lives in Mrs. Bink's house, and occasionally drives Mrs. Bink's horses. She got him with the house, you know."

"Oh, she did?"

"Yes, she did."

"Rough on Mrs. Bink's, isn't it?"

That telephone will probably be taken out of the house.

Shaw and His Whiskers.

Chris Hawthorne in Pittsburg Dispatch: George Bernard Shaw may say what he likes about Americans, but the fact remains that he has the most unparalleled set of whiskers which ever grew out of the lower part of a man's face. A recent critic remarked: "There are many things for which a man may not be censured, but his whiskers are his own fault." Shaw has a set which diffuses itself all over his collar and shoulders and makes it impossible to determine whether he wears a collar and shirt. Lately he has sent out pictures of his upper front elevation to American press agents and not one of them could be printed on account of the foliage. This is so luxuriant that it would be necessary to break a column rule to get it all in the paper. If he cultivated his vines downward instead of east and west he would have a show.

They Are Prepared.

Washington Post: That London scientist who predicts that the human race will eventually die of thirst evidently does not know the precautions that Louisville, Peoria, Milwaukee, St. Louis and Cincinnati have already taken against such a possible calamity.

LETTERS TO HIS MOTHER PROVE ALIBI FOR SON

Roy Dixon of West Duluth Cleared of Murder Charge.

His Story Is Confirmed By His Letters Home.

The welcome news that her son had been acquitted of all suspicion of having been connected with a brutal murder committed last June in California, through the evidence of letters written her, was brought to Mrs. E. Dixon of 217 Fifty-ninth avenue west, by Chief Troyer this morning.

Word was received about two weeks ago from James A. Keys of Solano county, California, that a man who gave his name as Roy Dixon had been arrested on suspecion of having murdered an unknown man, whose body was found last June.

The mutilated corpse was discovered on June 8, and a number of suspects were taken into custody on suspicion of having been connected with the murder. One of the suspects, who managed to clear himself, implicated Dixon, saying that he had seen Dixon with the murdered man but a short time before the body was found.

Dixon was immediately arrested and held on suspecion. He told a straight story to the officers, and stated that his mother was living at 217 Fifty-ninth avenue south, West Duluth.

The sheriff immediately wrote Chief Troyer concerning the matter, and asked him to confirm the man's story if possible.

Detective Terry was detailed on the case, and the answers given by Mrs. Dixon to his questions completely cleared the young man of all suspicion. Mrs. Dixon was able to prove by letters from her son that he was not in the place where the crime was committed at the time, and an alibi was thus established.

The evidence of Mrs. Dixon was immediately forwarded to California, and this morning Chief Troyer received a reply to his letter, stating that the young man would be at once released from custody. The sheriff also sent his humble apologies to the mother of the young man for the mental anguish that had been occasioned by her son's arrest and the inquiries made by the Duluth police.

The letter further stated that the young man was about to leave for the East when arrested, and that he now expected to return to Duluth next spring. He will come East at once, however, and will probably spend the winter in either Ogden or Salt Lake, Utah.

As soon as the letter was received the police lost no time in sending the welcome news to the young man's mother.

ANOTHER ESTIMATE

Lake Avenue Viaduct Can Be Temporarily Repaired For $5,000.

Action Will Be Postponed Pending Decision Of District Court.

While no steps toward improving the Lake avenue viaduct are likely to be taken before the suit now pending in the district court is disposed of, the city engineer has prepared an estimate of the cost of repairing the bridge in a temporary manner, in addition to his former estimate, which had in view permanent repairs.

By using wooden beams to replace the corroded steel girders, it will be possible to place the bridge in a condition where it will be safe for traffic for several years to come, at an expenditure of less than $5,000.

It is estimated by the engineers in the employ of the city, that the steel beams have been weakened to the extent of forty per cent by rust and corrosion, and the estimate of $5,000 is sufficient to cover the cost of strengthening them to that extent, with the addition of wooden supports.

The two main spans will be reinforced by the use of angle irons. The spans are huge steel beams between seven and eight feet in width. The plan of the engineer is to divide them into panels and reinforce them with the use of angle irons, forming a Warren truss bridge. This would make the two main supports of the bridge perfectly safe for all kinds of travel, and the addition of the wooden beams to other parts of the structure, would make it serviceable for several years to come.

The estimated cost for this work is a trifle under $5,000, whereas the former estimate, which provided for the use of new steel structural work, was more than $12,000.

The estimate will be submitted to the council, but no action is likely to be taken until the case in the district court is disposed of. It will settle the question as to whether the city or the railroad company will have to stand the cost of the repairs.

Pioneer Engineer Visits Duluth.

William Roope of Seattle, Wash., arrived today, to visit his brother-in-law, Alexander Hamilton, deputy clerk of district court, and other relatives. Mr. Roope is one of the oldest locomotive engineers on the Great Northern road and took the first engine for that company to the Pacific coast. The Great Northern line was not at that time completed and he ran the locomotive from St. Paul, with some cars of freight to Winnipeg and via the Canadian Pacific line to the coast.

IN NEED OF MORE MONEY

Rush of Work In the Engineer's Department Exhausts Fund.

All Records For Volume of Work Broken This Year.

Because of the greatly increased amount of work which has devolved on the engineering department this year, the city engineer will probably be compelled to ask the council for an additional appropriation, in order to properly carry on the inspection of the work now under way.

At the last meeting of the council, Alderman Wilson called for a report from the city engineer, on the manner the West Superior street work is being inspected, and asking him if he had sufficient funds to make the inspection according to his own ideas of what was necessary. The alderman stated that this is the first time the tar macadam pavement will be tried on a business street, and he urged the importance of a very rigid inspection. The engineer is now preparing a report in answer to the request of Alderman Wilson.

A statement of the present condition of the fund of the department shows that there will not be a sufficient amount of money to carry on the inspection properly during the remaining months of the year.

The engineering department has this year broken all records in the amount of work inspected and estimated. There have been three large contracts, amounting to nearly $200,000, which alone aggregate nearly as much work as the total for last year. These contracts were for the paving of West Superior street, the paving of First street, and the construction of the reservoir in West Duluth. Estimates, plans and detailed specifications for all of these had to be drawn up, and the work had then to be carefully inspected. In addition, there were small contracts, aggregating more than $100,000, and estimates were prepared for work not undertaken to the amount of nearly $1,000,000.

The department also inspected over 150 bridges in the city during the year, and had the general oversight of all sewer and sidewalk construction.

This rush of work has left but a small balance in the fund, although, in proportion to the amount of work done, the cost of maintaining the department has been considerably less than last year, and in order to properly carry on the inspection of West Superior street, and the new reservoir in West Duluth, a small additional appropriation will be necessary.

WANTS NO WOMEN BROUGHT IN CASE

Counsel For Capt. Carter Objects to Introducing Testimony.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—Objection was made today by counsel for Capt. Oberlin M. Carter to the introduction of testimony showing Carter's alleged relationship with certain women before he was implicated in the alleged contract frauds against the government. Attorney Stone declared he had previously notified the government lawyers that he would instruct the witness to refuse to answer questions concerning women in the case. "If this is to be made a woman case," said Attorney Stone, "you will have to go to the court for a ruling. I make no objection to questions concerning a woman without character but I will object to dragging in the names of women whom we consider of good character unless the court so orders."

GOT SHIFT ON OFFICER

Prisoner Says Policeman Wanted the Beer He Stole.

Petty Larceny Case Furnishes Fun For Court Officials.

"One bottle wouldn't jar three of us very bad," said Patrick Bowes, as he swung one of his loosely-hung limbs on to a chair in the municipal court this morning, and twirled his hat on his finger.

"You see, judge, the officer was sore because he didn't get the beer himself. That's right. That's what's the matter."

The insinuation made by the police was, that Patrick had purloined a bottle of beer from a woodsman in the Union depot.

"He took it from under a seat where the owner put it," said Capt. Resche. "The officer saw him take it and made him put it back. Then as soon as the officer's back was turned, he took it again, and the officer brought him in."

"The officer was just sore because we got the shift on him," drawled the prisoner. "He wanted it himself."

"Were you drunk?" asked Judge Windom.

"Well, now, Your Honor, one bottle wouldn't jar three of us very bad would it? There were two others besides myself.

"Sure, that's right," he affirmed as a smile spread over the face of the court officials.

"I didn't steal it. I just took it. I didn't put it under my coat, but held it right out in my hand, that way. Sure I did. That's the way I carried it."

Once more the prisoner seemed to think the smile on the face of the judge denoted incredulity.

"Why I knew the fellow I took it from, judge. Sure, I knew him well."

"Have you ever been arrested before?" asked Judge Windom.

"Never been in a place like this in my life before," said the prisoner, and stopped twirling his hat to add emphasis.

"Well, we'll make it about $2 and costs, this time," said Judge Windom. "It doesn't seem to be a case that demands any great severity. I don't believe he had any intention of stealing the beer."

"No, that's right, judge," interposed the prisoner. "I took it."

"Sit down," said the court officer, and the prisoner subsided.

WITNESS FAINTS ON THE STAND

Aged Defendant In Divorce Case Affected By Weak Heart.

While William Howenstene, defendant in a divorce action brought by Caroline Howenstene was on the witness stand in Judge Dibell's room this morning, he fainted away and would have fallen to the floor had not assistance been at hand. Mr. Howenstene was removed from the stand and a physician was called, but he regained consciousness before medical aid reached him. The fainting attack was said to have resulted from weak heart action which Mr. Howenstene has had since an injury received from a bad fall last winter.

The present trial before Judge Dibell is on the merits of the claims made by Mrs. Howenstene, a common law wife, who charges cruelty and abuse to such an extent that she had to leave her home. Her husband, filed a cross-bill in which he charged adultery, the case being tried on that charge before a jury this term of court and resulting in a verdict in favor of Mrs. Howenstein. The court is now to decide whether she is entitled to a decree of divorce and, if so how much alimony Howenstein should pay.

CAPTAIN AND FOUR KILLED

In a Mutiny on Board the Schooner Harry A. Berwynd.

Wilmington, N. C., Oct. 12.—The murder of Captain Rummill and four of his crew of the four-master schooner his crew of the four-masted schooner the vessel was bound from Mobile to Philadelphia, is the story told in a special to the Star from Southport last night.

The schooner Blanche H. King, Captain Taylor, bound from Brunswick, Ga., to Philadelphia, put into Southport yesterday afternoon bringing in irons three negroes, all that remained of the crew of the Harry A. Berwynd. The captain, mate, cook and an engineer who did hoisting work aboard the latter vessel, apparently had been killed in the mutiny and their bodies thrown overboard and the body of a fourth sailor, a negro, was found lying on deck, where he too had been killed.

The Berwynd left Mobile, Sept. 23, and was sighted early yesterday morning thirty miles off the Cape Fear bar by Captain Taylor, whose attention was attracted by the reckless manner in which the ill fated vessel was being steered, her course threatening to run down his own vessel Captain Taylor and crew boarded the vessel and placed the negroes in irons, bringing the two vessels off the bar, when one of them was towed in by Wilmington tugs.

The tugs took hold of the schooner, but a gale was prevailing outside. The Berwynd being from a territory against which this city is quarantined for yellow fever, the three negroes taken from there are held at quarantine so arrangements can be made for their detention by the federal authorities.

An Awful Cough Cured.

"Two years ago our little girl had a touch of pneumonia, which left her with an awful cough. She had spells of coughing, just like one with the whooping cough and some thought she would not get well at all. We got a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which acted like a charm. She stopped coughing and got stout and fat," writes Mrs. Ora Bussard, Brubaker, Ill. This remedy is for sale by all leading druggists.

DR. PATTON TO LECTURE HERE

Ministers Address the People of Duluth Concerning His Coming.

The ministers of the city who are interested in bringing Dr. Francis L. Patton of Princeton university here to lecture have addressed the following to the people of Duluth:

"In the present crisis of philosophic and religious thought, we believe the Duluth public peculiarly fortunate at the prospect of a course of lectures on 'Fundamental Christianity,' by President Francis L. Patton, D.D., LL.D., of Princeton, N. J. President Patton is one of a half dozen men, college presidents and professors, profusely conversant with philosophy, ancient and modern. What is better, he is able to present the subject in a fascinating and popular manner, that creates enthusiasm on the unlearned as well as the learned. Great crowds greet him in our largest cities, and the Chautauqua assembly halls are crowded with profited and delighted listeners. President Patton is in no sense an evangelist, but an instructor, who so charms the hearer of his first lecture that he must return to hear the entire course. The design of this lecture is not a commercial return, but to provide the Duluth public with an intellectual and spiritual feast. They will be delivered Nov. 6-10, in the First Presbyterian church. If this is overcrowded, in the First M. E. church. The popular price is $1 for the course.

POPE ASKS FOR FUNDS

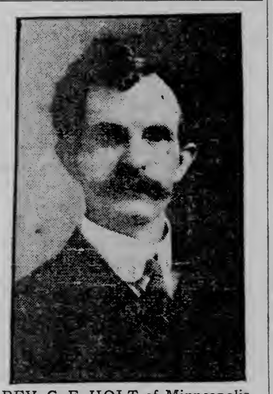

Declares the Dead Ought Not to Support Baptists.

Would See Employment of Special Evangelist In Minnesota.

Rev. E. R. Pope, corresponding secretary of the Baptist state convention board, made a strong plea for more funds with which to send missionaries in new territory, at the session of the annual convention last evening. It was decided to raise the amount necessary to send an evangelist into the field as the need of such has been long felt.

In the report of the convention board, read by Mr. Pope, it developed that the bulk of the revenue with which the state mission work is carried on comes from the estates of deceased members of the churches who provide for annuities.

Secretary Pope made this the topic of a rather warm discourse, deploring that the fact that the church work of today was supported by the dead. He urged the Baptists to give more and declared there was need of a sure source of revenue; that the churches should give more every year; give it promptly and that it should be decided upon how much the missions were to have and this entire branch of the work should be conducted in a more business-like manner.

REV. G. F. HOLT of Minneapolis, Re-elected President of Minnesota Baptist Education Society.

He declared that the inviting fields for successful missionary work should not be passed by and mentioned among other places, Warroad, Staples, Long Prairie and Sauk Center as Baptist communities without pastors.

"Ought we to 'pass by' this question of work in Northern Minnesota? We certainly ought not to," declared Rev. Mr. Pope. He also recommended the establishment of a loan fund for the building of parsonages in connection with the mission churches.

Following is Secretary Pope's report in part:

"Last year the theme of the state convention was 'Growth.' This year it is 'Efficiency.' The topics are closely related. Go into the wilds of Minnesota. Gaze on the lofty trees, see the thick and tangled underbrush, look at the rank and luxuriant grasses, admire the profusion of beauteous flowers. Growth is everywhere; yet it is to little purpose. Go to the same place once more. Most of the trees are gone, the underbrush is no more, the grasses are now grass. Its beauty, though restrained, still remains. Possibly more has been done, the farm has displaced the forest; the richness of the soil has been made tributary to man. The beauty has been marred in some degree, but the real purpose has been served and efficiency promoted. Even in nature for highest efficiency, growth must be restrained and directed. The visible harvest of the year's mission work may be reckoned as follows: Six new churches have been organized, six houses of worship dedicated, 213 people have been baptized, (a gain of 17 per cent over last year,) the mission churches report $2,663.77 raised for beneficence, and $25,639.08 for all purposes. Some debts have been reduced or paid, and substantial improvements added to the equipment. Mission work is unlike farming, you cannot stop at a fixed time, gather up the year's work, and say this is what has been done. Here sowing and reaping go on together, and the real outcome is not known for many a day, if at all. The workers here are laborers together with God,' and toil on in faith believing the harvest is sure in God's own time.

"What of the receipts? Are they enough to pay all expenditures? It is impossible to say; but if the churches increase just a little in their offerings, the deficit will be small.

"Where has this money come from? The Home Mission society has continued its valuable help, $2,200 being the year's grant for mission purposes. We greatly appreciate this liberal assistance. Without this co-operation the missionaries' salaries would be woefully in arrears, and the whole work seriously curtailed. The Pillsbury fund has yielded $455.07 of interest; $275 has been received as the net proceeds from sale of properties at Adrian and Fairfax. The following amounts (much larger than usual) have come from legacies:

From estate of A. B. Lewis	$4,025
From estate of Mrs. Ruth Hampton	320
From estate of Miss Mry E. Mc-Clurg	210
From estate of Mrs. S. P. Butler	500
Total	$5,155

"Of these legacies $4,275 was applied on the deficit, and $880 used for this year's account. The special subscriptions at the convention amounted to a little over $2,000; before the treasurer's books closed $483 of this was paid; during the year to this time $1,217 have been received. From miscellaneous sources, collections of district missionaries, printing associational minutes, etc., in round numbers $1,000 has come in. There remains, then, about $10,000 of the $16,250 to be given by the Baptist churches and people of the state during the year.

"We would call special attention to the fact that the direct gifts from churches and individuals are entirely insufficient to meet the necessary demands. Without the large amounts received from our departed friends, the financial condition would be very critical and the work seriously imperilled. Some measure should be taken both to increase our revenues and make them more regular, or the work should be placed on an altogether different standard by retrenchment in many directions.

"Efficiency is our topic. Surely we may justly claim some measure of this; but greater is to be desired. Questions arise continually as to the comparative efficiency of district missionary and the pastor's work, where shall emphasis be put on the old or the new regions of the state; shall aid be given to fewer fields with greater amounts, or to more fields with smaller amounts? All these and many others your board strives to answer conscientiously with such wisdom as it has. There is need of the fullest support and most fervent prayer by Minnesota Baptists in this great work.

"The efficient farmer is never satisfied; he longs for the next forty or eighty acres to enlarge his borders. In our work there is rightful call for enlargement. Minnesota's population is now 1,956,000, a gain of 200,000 in five years. Baptists number 22,185, a gain of 2,039 in the same time. There are 59 cities of over 2,000 inhabitants each in our state; 20 of them have no Baptist church, and 8 others have no English-speaking Baptist church in them. There are 135 cities and villages between 1,000 and 2,000 population; the great majority of these have no church of our faith. There are 112 villages of 500 to 1,000 people each; from far the most of these we are absent. Enough has been said to show there is much land to be possessed.'

"Some particular calls may be noted. The committee planning next year's work had before it $18,000 of applications, the extreme limit was set at $15,000.

"A state evangelist should be appointed to plan and conduct a more vigorous evangelistic campaign. This is the next step. With a generous offer of the Home Mission society to pay one-half the expense, $600 to $700 would accomplish this.

"In Southeastern Minnesota a grant of like amount would care for four or six fields that are likely to die, a circuit could be established and a man put at work.

"The tremendous strides of Northern Minnesota, present many difficult questions. We are derelict in duty if we pass by the many open doors, refusing to listen to the calls of need

"Brethren and sisters we are grateful to many expressions of deep interest, for tokens of substantial confidence, for instances of real denial. Yet we are persuaded that the full measure of the ability of the Baptists of Minnesota for this great fundamental work of state missions has not been reached, nor the full measure of our obligations discharged.

"To recognize opportunity is well; to consider each opportunity an obligation is better; to meet our obligations to God and our fellow to the utmost of our ability, this is the best of all; that is our longing and our petition for Minnesota Baptists. May you grant the desire and answer the petition in the fear of God."

About $200 was pledged last evening to pay the expenses of a special evangelist, who is to work in the state under the direction of the board. G. Nygren of Duluth, told of the missionary work that has been done by the Baptists in "Northern Minnesota."

He declared that the people in that part of the state were enthusiastic church-goers and that they had too few chances of attending divine worship. He urged the expenditure of more money in the erection of mission churches and the employment of missionaries. Four strong addresses on "Efficient Evangelism," were heard at the session yesterday afternoon. Rev. R. N. Martin of St. Paul took up the question of "Its Aim;" Rev. E. M. Atwood of Little Falls, the question of "Its Methods;" Rev. W. T. S. Spriggs of Montevideo, the question of "Its Instruments," and Rev. O. A. Williams of Minneapolis, "Its Results." O. Bodien extended the "Greetings of Sweden."

LUNATIC VOTES, POET CANNOT

Instances of Fatuous Folly of British Registration Laws.

London, Oct. 12.—Some of the absurdities and inconsistencies of the British registration laws, by which the rights of citizenship to vote are determined, have been strikingly shown this week by the decisions reached in several cases that have come before the revision courts. How entirely they ignore all considerations of intellectual fitness has been revealed in the disfranchisement of Algernon Charles Swinburne, the famous poet, on a technicality. Mr. Swinburne has for some thirty years lived in a house at Putney with his friend, Mr. Watts-Dunton. The evidence submitted showed that he pays half of the rent and half of the household expenses. But Mr. Watts-Dunton's name alone appears in the agreement between landlord and tenant. On that ground the revising barrister held that he could recognize only the legal tenant and Mr. Swinburne, therefore, was not entitled to a vote. The greatest literary figure in England is thus classified with paupers and deprived of the rights of a British citizen.

As though to make clear the paradoxical character the registration laws and the depths of assinine folly which they sanction, at Gulgate, a few days later, the legal solon there presiding sagely and solemnly granted a vote to a lunatic on the ground that a private paying lunatic "must be considered as a person able to return to his occupation at will." Thus, while the greatest poet of the English-speaking world is deprived of his vote, the lunatic is not only allowed to vote, but has it thrust upon him by that whimsical harlequin, the law.

Wandsworth furnished another exhibition of comical legal fatuity. A man burdened with the queer patronymic of Halfpenny occupies a house, the rent of which is in the borough of Wandsworth and the other half in the adjoining borough of Battersea. When he retires to his couch for the night his head is in Wandsworth and his legs in Battersea. He has already been granted a vote in Battersea, but not satisfied with that, he claimed also a vote in Wandsworth. The official to whose discriminating judgment the matter had been referred held that it had been an error to enfranchise his legs, but that decision having been recorded, it would have to stand. Such a blunder, however, he gravely declared, would not justify him in disfranchising Mr. Halfpenny's head. And so he received two votes as though he held two freeholds in separate constituencies.

At Clapton the right to a vote of the notorious Smyth-Piggott, the self-styled Messiah, was contested on the ground that he no longer occupied the house there which is leased in his name, having transferred his residence to the iniquitous Abode of Love in Somersetshire. But as he was still responsible for the rent of the Clapton domicile, the revising barrister ruled that he was entitled to vote in respect to it.

At Filongeley five aged Wesleyan ministers, occupying cottages belonging to some beneficent trust, and for which they paid only a nominal rent of a penny a week, were disfranchised on the ground that the cottages were practically almshouses and their occupants were in the same category as paupers. At Kensington several workingmen were deprived of their votes because during the hard times of last winter they had been employed on relief work. Under English law recipients of outdoor relief, without discrimination, are disfranchised. It is a penalty for poverty which many workingmen bitterly resent.

When a Liberal government comes into power it is expected that it will do something to simplify the ridiculous British registration laws and sweep away the cobwebs spun by legal spiders across the doors of the polling booths. And some day probably the system will be further simplified by the adoption of a system of manhood suffrage without regard to property qualifications.

VERY LONG JOURNEYS

Of Two Bronze Cents That Are Held As Curios.

Started In 1863, They Have Been Turning Up Ever Since.

East Orrington, Me., Oct. 12.—There are two bronze cents, which bear the mint stamp of 1863, that have traveled over most of this country. Their journeying began when the Twenty-sixth Maine regiment was encamped before Port Hudson in August, 1863.

One day Humphrey Pinhorn and Albert George, privates in Company F, received as part of their pay a number of new bronze cents which were still bright. Wishing to test the truth of several stories they had heard, the two soldiers stamped their initials and the data on two cents and turned them over to the sutler in exchange for goods.

The term of enlistment of the members of the regiment expired soon after the fall of Port Hudson and the two soldiers went back to their homes in East Orrington, where they have resided most of the time.

In the summer of 1868, when Mr. George was in Portland as a member of a campaign marching club from Eastern Maine, he purchased a daily paper at a news-stand and received in change a bronze cent dated 1863 and bearing the initials H. P. He took the coin back to his friend, who stamped the date Aug. 30, 1868, on the face and sent it going once more.

In February, 1869, Mr. George sold some lard to a store in Bangor and took in payment a bronze cent marked A. G., 1863, which was the one he had spent in front of Port Hudson. He stamped it with the new date and passed it along.

The following March Mr. Pinhorn saw a customer at a blacksmith shop pass a marked cent to the blacksmith, and on asking to examine it he found it was the one belonging to Mr. George. He at once purchased it and gave it to Mr. George, who stamped a new date on the surface and passed it along.

Nothing more was heard from the coins until the following June when Mr. Pinhorn received a cent bearing the stamp of H. P. from a friend in San Francisco, who said he had read the story about the wandering coins in a Grand Army paper, and chancing to receive the identical coin soon after, he had taken the liberty to return it to its rightful owner. In October, 1871, Mr. George received the H. P. cent while making change in the postoffice at Bucksport, Me., and returned it to Mr. Pinhorn, who affixed another date and passed it along again.

The George cent was received by a Grand Army man in Westbrook, Me., in January, 1872, who, knowing the story, mailed it back to its owner. Again it was stamped with a date and sent on its travels. It returned again in July of the same year, having been sent from Dover, Me.

While Mr. George was calling at the home of Mr. Pinhorn for the purpose of showing the wandering cent a meat cart drove up to the door, and in making change for what was purchased the butcher gave Mr. Pinhorn the cent that was marked H. P. By this time the tale of the traveling cent had been published in several newspapers, resulting in having both coins returned as often as once a month.

The owners wishing to avoid publicity as much as possible, both coins were enclosed in an envelope and sent to a seedman in Detroit, Mich., for the apparent purpose of paying postage on a seed catalogue. Seven months later Mr. Pinhorn received the H. P. cent from an old soldier in St. Louis, who had read the newspaper accounts of the experiment and hoped to forward the movement.

From then on until early in 1876 the Pinhorn cent was recovered five times, once by mail from Worcester, Mass., twice by friends who had taken it in business transactions, once by Mr. George, who had received it from a friend in Bangor, Me., and once by Mr. Pinhorn himself, who took it at a store in Holden, Me.

The newspapers, having learned revised versions of the story, printed full particulars, and computed Mr. Pinhorn to send his cent to Buffalo, N. Y., in the hope of losing it. For the next ten years nothing was heard of the Pinhorn cent, though the published accounts had led to the discovery of the George cent in New Orleans, within a few miles of the place where the cents made their first start.

Not caring to gain publicity through the papers Mr. George sent his cent to a cousin living in Natick, Mass., giving her instructions to pass it without revealing the facts. In November, 1884, when Mr. George's cousin was in Boston he received the Pinhorn cent from a news stand in return for a dime which he had given for a paper which told of Grover Cleveland's election as president of the United States.

In spite of precautions taken to keep the fact quiet, the story was printed in a Boston evening paper, which resulted in Mr. Pinhorn feeling himself compelled to send his cent, in company with another one, to Philadelphia for the purpose of getting a catalogue of live stock, advertised by a dealer. Meantime, the George cent returned in 1887 and was taken by Mr. George from an Orrington trader. After this Mr. George passed the coin in Bangor, getting it back by mail from Mobile, Ala., in 1895. The George cent was not discovered again until 1904, when Mr. George received it by mail from his cousin in Boston, who had taken it among other change in the ordinary way of trade.

Having proved to his own satisfaction that the coin could not be lost Mr. George put his cent in a drawer of his desk, where it remained until September 21, 1905, when Mr. Pinhorn walked into the George home and held out a battered cent, saying:

"It is no use, Albert, we can never die poor while these things are moving about the country. Here is my cent, which I received by rural free delivery from a Grand Army man in Dover, Del., who remembered the story he had read in a Washington paper he had read more that thirty years ago, and sent it home to me, conveying in his letter the hope that I was sound as the cent and hoping I would live as long. Let us now take our two cents and put them at interest in a savings bank, and when they amount to $500,000 our money will build a big library for East Orrington.

Both cents are now resting in a drawer in Mr. George's desk.

PRANK PLAYED BY SMALL BOY

Did Not Draw Lottery Numbers Fairly and Consequences Serious.

London, Oct. 12.—The legal advisers of the city of Paris have been placed in an awkward predicament by the prank of a small charity-school boy who, at the last lottery drawing, was selected, according to custom to draw the numbers from the wheel of fortune.

These numbers are in metal cylinders and the small boy in question was found by a schoolmaster to have abstracted two cylinders. At the time of the discovery one cylinder was found to contain the number of a lottery bond issued in 1869 while the other was empty.

The possible consequences are bewildering. The whole of the last drawing becomes illegal. As a result of the drawing, 14,000 bonds, issued at $80 each, but which for some years have been seventeen above par, were redeemed at par. Some of the bonds also carried prizes with the numbers, the highest of which was $20,000.

Obviously the abstraction of two numbers upset the whole course of events. The city may be sued by the owner of the known number abstracted and also by the owners of all other bonds not redeemed before the last drawing. As the second number was destroyed and is not known, any of the now outstanding 124,880 bonds might have won the $20,000 prize.

Moreover, the compulsory redemption of 14,000 bonds at par means a lose to each holder, who may sue the city for the quotation value of these stock, because it is impossible to prove that any one of those numbers would have come out had the boy played fair.

The only complete remedy would be the entire cancellation of the last drawing, the actual cost of which to the city would have been $120,000.

A CITY ELECTION IN MODEL FASHION

Proposed By Republicans and Democrats of Tipton, Ind.

Tipton, Ind., Oct. 12.—There is every indication that the coming municipal election here will be run in a model manner. Several days ago the Republican city chairman, Attorney J. F. Pyke, met the Democratic city chairman, Editor J. O. Behymer of the Tipton Times, and they came to an agreement that they would put on foot a movement to purify the ballot so far as was in their power. With that end in view, they each appointed a committee of six leading citizens, who were politicians, and instructed them to hold a conference and plan ways and means by which the movement might be carried to a successful termination.

When the matter had been discussed among the party workers of both political faiths and the committee met to formulate plans the members of each committee were so enthusiastic that when one side proposed certain reforms the other would go them one beter until the following is the substance of the several propositions agreed upon:

That the campaign fund shall consist of only a sufficient amount of money to pay the legitimate expenses of the campaign, such as hall rent, music, pay of poll takers, printing, pay of poll book holders and challengers at the polls. Candidates are prohibited from even entering a saloon for any purpose; all treating on their part or the part of any one in their behalf is barred, even to the giving of a cigar, and no effort is to be made to get out the vote of either party further than mere persuasion. No conveyances or runners are to be employed, except in cases of known disability, physically, on the part of the voter. No swearing in votes, where names are not on the poll books, will be permitted. On the day of the election the candidates of both parties are to assemble at a given place at 6 o'clock in the morning and will march to the poling places and when all have voted they will return to the public square, but they must keep together until the polls close in the evening. One hundred citizens on both sides have signed the agreement and formed themselves into a detective association for the purpose of taking the names of all violators and will report the same to the prosecuting attorney. For the purpose of prosecuting offenders a sufficient fund has been raised and a Democratic attorney will assist the Republican prosecutor, C. W. Mount, in prosecuting all offenders.

The interest in the outcome of the election among all classes is intense, the Republicans standing for rigid law enforcement, while the Democrats have declared for a wide-open policy. It is the first time in the history of the city when these issues have been squarely joined.

Wounds, Bruises and Burns.

By applying an antiseptic dressing to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, they may be healed without maturation and in about one-third the time required by the old treatment. This is the greatest discovery and triumph of modern surgery. Chamberlain's Pain Balm acts on this same principle. It is an antiseptic and when applied to such injuries causes them to heal very quickly. It also allays the pain and soreness and prevents any danger of blood poisoning. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money, not to mention the inconvenience and suffering such injuries entail. For sale by all leading druggists.

If you are earning too little, advertise for a better position. You don't need any further "pull" to secure the right market for your services than is afforded by the right kind of a want ad.

WHAT JOY THEY BRING TO EVERY HOME

as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

Syrup of Figs has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs, obtained, by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.

ARE EVENLY MATCHED

Little to Choose Between American and National League Teams.

Post Season Games to Date About Equally Divided.

STANDING.

National—		American—
New York	1	Philadelphia	1
St. Louis	2	St. Louis	1
Boston	1	Boston	2
Chicago	1	Chicago	0
Total	5	Total	4

The post-season series between the big league teams has been about equally divided up to the present time, the National league teams having won five victories to the four victories won by the American league teams.

The New York and Philadelphia series is a stand-off, each team having won one game. The score in each game was the same, 3 to 0. In the two games New York secured sixteen hits and made three errors, while the Athletics made ten hits and two errors.

The St. Louis Nationals have been having the better of their argument, and have won two games out of the three played. This was to be expected, however, as the St. Louis Americans trailed all the other teams in the league, while the Nationals were sixth in the National league standing.

In the three games the Nationals have scored 16 runs, 25 hits and 2 errors to the Americans' 10 runs, 16 hits and 5 errors.

The Boston Americans have had the better of the series with the Nationals up to the present time, and have won two victories out of the three played. Last year's champion American league team should not find much trouble in disposing of the National league team from the same city. The Americans finished fourth in their league, while the Nationals were seventh.

The Chicago series, which promised to be of such interest, has been disappointing up to the present time, on account of the weather. Only one game has been played, this one being taken by the Nationals by the score of 5 to 4. The thermometer was down to the freezing point for this game, and fast ball was out of the question.

Up to the present time, therefore, it is impossible for even the most ardent supporter of either league to back up his views by the outcome of the post-season games, as they have been too equally divided to give either league the preference.

Yesterday's Results.

NATIONALS, 5; WHITE SOX, 4.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—The first game of the post season series for the local championship between the two Chicago major league teams went to the Nationals by the score of 5 to 4. Errors by the American league players at opportune moments for their opponents, cut a prominent figure in the runs counted by the Nationals. With the thermometer registering near freezing point, less than 5,000 persons were in attendance. Score:

		R.	H.	E.
Nationals	00210200 0—5	7	0
Americans	00000400 0—4	8	3

Batteries—Lundgren and Kling; Owen and Sullivan.

BOSTON AMERICANS WIN.

Boston, Oct. 12.—The local American league team yesterday won the third game of the series with the local Nationals, 4 to 1. Threatening weather kept the crowd down to 2,222. The series now stands 2 to 1, in favor of the American league team. Score:

		R.	H.	E.
Americans	01010003 x—5	9	2
National	10000000 0—1	4	2

Batteries—Harris and Armbruster; Wilhelm and Needham. Umpires—O'Loughlin and Emslie.

ST. LOUIS NATIONALS WIN.

St. Louis, Oct. 12.—The local Nationals yesterday won the third game of the inter league series of seven games, giving them the odd contest of those so far decided. Attendance, 900. Score:

		R.	H.	E.
Nationals	00401000 4—9	11	0
Americans	10000000 0—1	4	4

Batteries—Taylor and Grady; Sudhoff, Pelty and Spencer.

TWO OF BIG FOUR ARE SCORED ON

Harvard and Princeton Lines Crossed By Second Class Teams.

Both the Harvard and Princeton goal lines were crossed yesterday by teams from the smaller Eastern colleges, Bates scoring on Harvard and Lehigh on Princeton.

The score against Harvard was more or less a fluke, the touchdown being made by Capt. Kendall of the Bates eleven, after a 70-yard sprint. Princeton, on the other hand, made a poor showing, and was at times outplayed by Lehigh.

The results of yesterday's games were as follows:

HARVARD, 34; BATES, 6.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 12.—Although Harvard defeated Bates on Soldiers' field yesterday afternoon without difficulty, the visitors had the distinction of crossing the crimson goal line for the first time this season, the final score being 34 to 6. Bates' touchdown was made by Capt. Kendall, who received the ball on a double pass and sprinted seventy yards during which time he threw off both Starr and Wendell, and just crawled over the line as Nesmith tackled him from behind.

PRINCETON, 29; LEHIGH, 6.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 12.—Princeton defeated Lehigh in a ragged game of football by the score of 29 to 6, allowing her goal line to be crossed for the first time this season. The Princeton men played poorly until nearly the end of the contest and at times were outclassed by the Pennsylvanians.

PENNSY, 38; FRANKLIN, 0.

Philadelphia, Oct. 12.—The University of Pennsylvania foohball team defeated Franklin and Marshall college on Franklin field yesterday by the score of 38 to 0. A heavy rain fell throughout the contest

YALE, 29; SPRINGFIELD, 0.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 12.—Yale defeated Springfield Training school eleven yesterday, 29 to 0. Yale used twenty-four men in the game.

TO KEEP ORDER AT ALL FIRES

Officers From Headquarters Are Detailed to This Duty.

In response to the request of the board of fire commissioners, Chief Troyer yesterday issued orders to the police officers to make special efforts to keep crowds away from burning buildings and from obstructing the firemen in the performance of their duties.

The officers from headquarters are instructed to proceed to all fires in the business section of the city, taking the patrol wagon and a sufficient number of patrolmen to insure the maintaining of proper order at the scene of the fire.

Similar orders have been issued on former occasions to the officers, but the manner in which spectators obstructed the firemen at a little blaze in Suffel's shoe store recently, was the cause of the repetition.

DEFENDS CIGARETTES.

Doctor Says They Are No More Harmful Than Other Tobacco.

Indianapolis, Oct. 12.—The feature of yesterday's session of the annual convention of the Mississippi Valley Medical association was a defense of the cigarette by Dr. William B. Fletcher of this city, who declared that years of observation had convinced him that cigarettes were no more harmful than any other form of tobacco, tea or coffee.

Dr. Fletcher's treatment of the subject created a mild sensation among the 200 physicians present and during the discussion which followed several eminent members of the profession agreed with Dr. Fletcher that an unreasonable amount of prejudice exists against the cigarette, which they contended, has been a "scapegoat" in order to cover some personal vice of the smoker.

Among those who supported Dr. Fletcher in his views were Dr. A. E. Sterne of this city; Dr. Conner of Detroit; Dr. Millikin of St. Louis, and Dr. Singer Brown of Chicago.

ASSOCIATION MEMBERS ARE CROSS EXAMINED

Several Are Questioned Closely as to Methods of Organization.

Wholesale Dealers Give Further Testimony as to Selling Policy.

On the redemption of testimony in the Gasser case, yesterday afternoon several members of the Retail Grocers' association were called for cross-examination under the statutes, by Mr. Arnold, who sought to draw out admissions that there was some sort of an understanding, if no actual agreement, between the association and the jobbers that the latter were not to sell goods to expelled members of the association or persons who were not members.

In one instance, that of Dennis O'Leary, the testimony was that unless a person belonged to the association he could not get supplies from the wholesale house. Mr. O'Leary did not claim that he had been refused himself, but that he had been told by other expelled members that such was the case. Mr. O'Leary, although a member of the association at the present time, admitted that he did not have much use for it. He claimed, however, that he was on fairly good terms with the other members.

George E. Randall was the first witness called during the afternoon session.

Mr. Randall testified that he is not in business now but was in the grocery business a year ago last March. He bought out another man named Kohagen who said he was a member of the association. Mr. Randall attempted to buy goods from Stone-Ordean-Wells company. He talked with Mr. Rust and was asked if he was a member of the association. Mr. Rust, witness said, would not sell him any goods unless he agreed to make appliction for membership right away, which he did.

Mr. Randall also testified that he had a talk with Mr. Crow of Gowan-Peyton-Twohy company relative to buying some goods of his concern.

The substance of the conversation was that he could not get any goods until he joined the association.

Mr. Randall was excused a few minutes while Secretary Holcomb was questioned as to Kohagen's membership in the association. He said that at the time Kohagen sold out he was not a member and had not been for two months.

Mr. Arnold offered to prove that at the time Kohagen sold out to Randall he told the latter he could not buy goods unless he became a member of the association. This question was ruled out.

George J. Everest was next called for the plaintiff, for cross-examination under the statutes. Mr. Everest is treasurer of the Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company. He said Mr. Wright, the credit man, is out of town.

He produced a number of postal cards from the Retail Grocers' association. His attention was called to various notices for identification and were accepted.

"Did your company receive notices of all the members elected and expelled from the Retail Grocers' association?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"I don't know."

"It did to a large extent?"

"I guess it did. The notices are here."

"What was the policy of your company about selling goods to an expelled member?"

"We sold and sell now to those who are not members."

"Have you sold to expelled members?"

"I am not the credit man and can't tell."

"Whatever the credit man did was pursuant to policy of the company?"

"If they O'K'd an order it was filled, if not it was not filled."

"Did you personally refuse to sell to anybody not a member of the association?"

"No, sir."

"Did you ever notify any other wholesale house by 'phone that they were continuing to sell to persons not members of the association?"

"I don't remember."

"Ever have any conversation to that effect with Mr. Rust?"

"No, sir, I don't remember it."

Witness said that in the absence of the credit man the responsibility of giving credits falls on him. His attention was called to two receipts from Mr. Holcomb for money paid by the Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company. These referred to the 1-cent tax on sugar.

Objection was made to these exhibits by Mr. Fryberger and was sustained.

"When your company received one of these notices what did it mean?"

"It notified us that some one had joined or left the association."

"Did it have reference to the sale of goods by your company?"

"I don't think so?"

Mr. Everest identified a letter from the Grocers' association, which was offered in evidence by Mr. Arnold. It referred to some matters to come up at a meeting of the association.

"Was there a member of your company present at that meeting?"

"There was not."

H. B. Knudsen of Knudsen-Ferguson Fruit company was called for cross-examination under the statutes. He testified that he is president of the local produce exchange and admitted having a conversation with Mr. Rust about selling goods to Mr. Gasser after he was expelled from the association.

"What was that conversation?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"I asked Mr. Rust what he intended to do. He said, he did not know. He said he would sell him at least for the present. I did not tell him what I would do. I said I intended to run my own business and if I thought that selling Mr. Gasser or anybody else would injure my business I would quit selling. I told Mr. Gasser that, too."

"Did you ever refuse to sell anybody expelled from the association?"

"Yes, I have.

"Name them."

"I did refuse Mr. Hartnett because he never bought of us much and he came to us when he was in trouble."

"Anybody else?"

"Not to my recollection."

"Did you refuse Mr. Sutton?"

"Yes."

"After he had been expelled?"

"I don't remember. He was another of those fellows who came to me after getting in trouble and couldn't buy anywhere else."

"Ever refuse anybody else expelled?"

"I don't remember."

"Ever refuse to sell to anybody who had not joined?"

"I don't remember, but I presume I would have done so if I thought it was to my interest. There was a lot of fellows we refused to sell to for several reasons."

"Did you make it a practice to refuse to sell to parties unless they became members of the association?"

"No, sir, I did not until I saw that it would injure my business."

"Then it would injure your business to sell to anybody not a member of the association?"

"Well, I don't know—I think so."

"Do you now believe so?"

"I don't know."

"Conditions have changed since this action was started?"

"I don't think they have."

"Do you receive notices of election of new members to the association?"

"I have heard of such, never seen them."

"Are you a member of the Retail Grocers' association?"

"No, sir."

"How many of its meetings have you attended?"

"One or two or three a year. Some times the jobbers attend a social session."

"Ever talk with Holcomb about the expulsion of a member?"

"Yes, sir."

"What was said?"

"He told me they were no longer members of the association."

"Can you recall any instance or name?"

"No, sir."

"Do you keep a list of the members of the association sent out by Holcomb?"

"I don't know, we have a list of grocers made out by our stenographer."

Mr. Knudsen was given some of the postal card notices. He said he had never, to his knowledge, received any such notices. Mr. Nolan and Mr. Ferguson, he said, look after those notices. Mr. Nolan, is the company's credit man.

Burt Holcomb was recalled for further cross-examination by Mr. Arnold. His attention was called to the records stating the expulsion of Mr Hartnett. The record was dated July 1, 1905. It stated that the meeting had been called by Mr. Fryberger to amend the by-laws to make them conform to the state laws. The association then went into regular session, and voted to expell P. J. Hartnett for unmercantile conduct.

"Referring to this 'unmercantile conduct,' what did that consist of?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"Advertising in newspapers the way he did."

"By trying to make out others were charging exorbitant prices, and people could save money in buying from him. That was my impression."

"Do you know of any resolution of the association defining 'unmercantile conduct?'"

"No, sir."

"That was left with no definite understanding as to what it meant?"

Mr. Fryberger's objection was overruled.

"When a man cut the card prices it was considered unmercantile conduct. Also the doing of anything in an underhanded way to get trade away from competitors."

"What do you mean by an underhanded way?"

"I don't know of any definition. All of the expulsions, except in Hartnett's case, were for cutting prices."

"Can you make me a list of the expulsions?"

"Yes, sir."

"Is there any record of articles on this card list?"

"I never kept any list."

Witness named a number of articles that have been in the list, package coffees, kerosene oil, Quaker Oats and others were mentioned.

Mr. Fryberger objected to anything more along this line of testimony on the ground it had nothing to do with the case, but was overruled.

Mr. Holcomb said that the sale of articles mentioned constituted about 60 per cent of the grocery business.

Mr. Holcomb could not remember whether he instructed his man to quit calling on Mr. Gasser to sell him a brand of yeast. If he did, witness said it was done for policy. He told his man that Mr. Gasser had been expelled from the association.

"Was it your policy as agent for the yeast to refuse to sell to persons not members of the association?"

"No, sir. I have sold right along to parties who are not members of the association." He named several of these.

"Was Hartnett expelled early in 1905."

"I think he was."

"Did you sell him yeast afterward?"

"Yes, sir."

"Was D. O'Leary expelled about a year ago?"

"I don't think he was expelled."

"Harry Hill?"

"Yes, for cutting prices."

"Did you continue to sell him?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you send those notices to any other persons besides wholesalers and commission men?"

"No, sir."

Mr. Holcomb said more notices were given by phone than by card. He sent these notices because requested to do so.

Dennis O'Leary, a local grocer, was called for cross-examination under the statutes. Mr. O'Leary said he has been in business five years and a member of the association that long. He was never expelled, but was fined once by the association, the fine being remitted. He never had trouble getting goods when under the fine.

"Did you have trouble before joining the association," asked Mr. Arnold.

"It was understood I was to join."

"To whom did you apply?"

"I told Wright-Clarkson I had paid my money and would join the association the next week."

"Do you know what the understanding was between the retailers and wholesalers with reference to selling goods to persons not members of the association?"

"I do not know what the understanding was. I know a man not in good standing could not buy goods."

"Did you have a talk with Secretary Holcomb of the association relative to this?"

"No."

"Ever talk with him about these notices sent the wholesalers?"

"No, sir."

"Do you know whether wholesalers refused to sell any persons not members of the association on that account?"

"I know that wholesalers refused to sell to people for not being members—that is sure."

"Do you know whether commission men refused?"

"I know a man that was refused by one of the commission houses."

"Did you have a talk with any of the wholesalers with reference to not selling goods to persons not members of the association?"

"No, sir."

"Ever talk with them about, Mr. Gasser."

"No."

"Did you ever purchase any goods from Gowan-Peyton-Twohy company to be delivered to Mr. Gasser since his expulsion?"

"I don't know when he was expelled."

"July 1, 1905, was the date."

"Then I bought goods for him."

"Did you talk with the wholesalers with reference to those purchases?"

"No, sir."

"What goods did you purchase?"

"Gold Medal flour."

"Did they refuse to sell to you previously because you had delivered to Mr. Gasser?"

"They refused to sell me flour."

"This particular brand of flour?"

"Yes, sir."

"Any reason given?"

"No reason."

"Did they refuse to deliver you any other article of merchandise?"

"No, that is all I asked for."

Witness questioned by Mr. Fryberger.

"Mr. O'Leary did you sneak into Gowan-Peyton-Twohy's and buy that flour when you knew they wouldn't sell Gasser direct?"

Objection by Mr. Arnold was overruled.

"I don't think so."

"They found out what you did with the flour?"

"Yes, sir."

Witness said he did not trade much with Gowan-Peyton-Twohy. He admitted he does not believe in the Retail Grocers' association.

Mr. O'Leary said he gave Wright-Clarkson company "a nice little piece of business."

"Mr. O'Leary, from your own personal knowledge you never saw any wholesaler refuse to sell any person because not a member of the association?"

"No, sir."

"What you know you heard."

"Yes, sir."

Mr. Fryberger moved to strike out witness' testimony. Granted.

Mr. Arnold asked if it was not common knowledge that wholesalers would not sell when a person was not in the association, that there was an understanding between the retailers and wholesalers.

Mr. O'Leary said it was his understanding.

Judge Cant asked how he got that understanding and witness said from expelled members of the association who said they could not get goods.

"Was there any talk in the meetings about it," asked Judge Cant.

"No."

"Did you ever attend the meeting?"

"A few of them."

Mr. Fryberger asked that the answers to the court's questions be stricken out. Granted.

"Did you work for Sutton & McCabe?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"Yes."

"Were they refused goods?"

"No."

C. R. Wilcocks was called. He is a grocery clerk employed by M. M. Gasser & Company. He recollected Mr. Gasser's expulsion from the association. He said Fitzsimmons-Derrig company refused to sell him goods for Gasser, but gave no reason for the refusal. He went to the concern to buy raspberries and was told to see Mr. Fitzsimmons. The latter said he would rather he, Wilcocks would buy the berries elsewhere. He said he had been buying goods right along of Fitzsimmons-Derrig before the expulsion of Mr. Gasser.

"Did any of the commission men sell you conditionally that Gasser be reinstated?" asked Mr. Arnold.

Objection sustained.

"Did any commission men sell you that way?"

"Yes, sir."

"Who?"

"Knudsen-Ferguson company."

"What were the conditions?"

He said the stuff had already been purchased and Knudsen said if Mr. Gasser was thrown out finally he would not sell him goods.

Cross-examinationed by Mr. Fryberger, Mr. Wilcocks said Mr. Gasser's expulsion at that time lasted five or six days. He said he bought goods ahead for fear he could not get a supply when Mr. Gasser was put out of the association.

Questioned by Mr. Phelps, witness said the event referred to took place in June, 1904. He could not say that any of the commission houses have since refused to sell Mr. Gasser goods. At the time the conversation was had with Mr. Knudsen Mr. Gasser had not been expelled, but expected to be.

W. B. Logan, treasurer of the grocers' association, was called for cross-examination under the statutes. He has been a member of the association since its organization. He claimed no knowledge of an association between the jobbers and commission men, except the produce exchange. As treasurer he denied having any dealings with the exchange, but has had dealings with individual members. He denied getting any receipts from the produce exchange the past year, except donations for programs for the annual picnic. He said his last years' report does not show an item purporting to be a donation to the association from the produce exchange. He denied any understanding between the association and wholesalers that in the event of expulsion any member could not buy goods in Duluth.

"Do you know of your own knowledge whether such was the condition?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"I do not."

"Who represented the association in dealings with jobbers?"

"Our secretary, if anybody."

"Is this a voluntary membership?"

"Yes, sir."

"Any committee appointed to act between the wholesalers and retailers of the city to consider questions arising between them?"

"I don't know of any."

"Do you know of any resolution passed for the mailing of notices of expulsion or acceptance of members?"

"I don't think there was one passed."

"Then it is one of the unwritten rules of the association?"

"We did it because the jobbers requested it."

A motion to strike out was granted, and the question was repeated.

"I do not know of any rule."

"Is your organization one which persons not members are not permitted to attend?"

"We never refused anybody admittance."

"Are you a member of the price committee?"

"I was a member until the card was taken off. We have had no price card since Judge Dibell's decision."

Witness denied any understanding between retailers and wholesalers that Mr. Sutton could not get goods when expelled. Mr. Logan said it was no concern of the retailers what the wholesalers did in such a case.

Andrew Borgen, one of the defendant grocers, was called for cross-examination. He did not remember how long he belonged to the association, nor whether an expelled member can or cannot get goods. He said he rarely attended the meetings. He lived up to the price card, his prices being higher than those on the card before he adopted it. He volunteered the information that he has been in the grocery business thirty-four years without any trouble, and believed he could continue in business longer without "any brushing up."

Adjournment was taken until 9:30 o'clock this morning.

BIGAMIST THOUGHT TO BE HIDING IN DULUTH

Believed to Have Fled Here With His Second Wife.

Confesses Guilt In Letter to First Wife at Crookston.

Crookston, Minn., Oct. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Although he is the father of seven children, the eldest of whom is 17 years of age, Thomas Hutchins of this city is a confessed bigamist, according to a letter written to his first wife from St. Cloud.

Stories concerning the alleged second marriage of Hutchins have been circulating in St. Cloud and Crookston for some time past, but Mrs. Hutchins has resolutely refused to believe all such rumors, until she received a letter from her husband today, in which he admits his second marriage.

His second wife, was a prominent St. Cloud girl, whom he married in Superior, last May. Her name was Lilly Melquist.

The letter, received by his first wife, was as follows:

"I am happy now, Matilda, with the dearest woman on earth, and I don't want you to bother me. Remember the happiness we have had together in the past years, and keep quiet about your faithless husband for his sake, your own and that of the children, particularly Aleck, who is now approaching manhood. Do not let him be followed through life by the shame of his foolhardy parent."

Mrs. Hutchins was so enraged at the tone of the letter, that she promptly consulted the authorities, and today telegraphic information was forwarded to the Duluth and Superior police, and requests made to arrest the man if found. It is suspected that he has gone to one of those cities.

Hutchins is a private detective, and worked on the famous Dahl murder case. He has been employed by Congressman Halvor Steenerson for some months past, collecting information for evidence in a damage case.

He met Miss Melquest while engaged on the Dahl murder, in the woods north of Bemidji, and they were married in Superior. She is the daughter of a prominent East side family in St. Cloud.

Stories concerning the affair were originally circulated in St. Cloud, but the first Mrs. Hutchins refused to credit them, and believed in her husband's fidelity until she received his letter today. Its heartless tone, and the brazen flaunting of his new love enraged her beyond endurance, and she promptly took steps to have him arrested and punished for his crime.

If the Duluth and Superior police have heard anything concerning the case, they refuse to make it public until after the arrest has been made. Inquiries were made at headquarters concerning the foregoing message from Crookston, but knowledge of the affair was denied. Either the telegram calling for the arrest of Hutchins has not yet been received, or the officers are unwilling to give out any information that would result in Hutchins being warned, and making his escape before he can be located.

TO HOLD UP THEIR PAY

Civil Service Commission Will Carry on Its Fight.

Refuse to Sign Payrolls of Clerks Illegally Appointed.

"We intend to see this thing through, and hold up the pay of all men in the employ of the city who have not passed the civil service examination, and who should, according to the charter, come under the civil service regulations," said A. A. Fider of the board of civil service commissioners this afternoon.

"Since the Gearhart case came to light, we have heard that there are several other men employed in the water and light department who have not passed the civil service examination. They can't all be cashiers, and the secretary of the board has been instructed to go over the payrolls carefully and mark off all the names of those who have failed to take a civil service examination. We will then refuse to certify to their payrolls and the matter will be brought to a head.

"In the Gearhart case the manager of the water department explained matters by saying that Mr. Gearhart was handling money, and was therefore not under our rules. But all the others, who we hear have failed to pass the examination, can't be cashiers also.

"It works a grave injustice to those who have taken the civil service examinations, and it makes these examinations little better than a farce. We have a list now of seven or eight men who have successfully passed the examination and are eligible for the position of clerk in the water and light department, but they have been passed over entirely, and if our information is correct, others have been chosen to fill vacancies, who never took the civil service examinations.

"The civil service regulations should either be enforced strictly, or the entire system abolished, as otherwise it develops into a farce."

AN ASTONISHED SCOT

Cannot Return Here Because He Is Not a Citizen and Is Poor.

Immigrant Inspector William H. Dean returned on the steamer Huronic the other day one M. McFadgen, a Scotsman who has lived in Duluth and Superior for many years but who failed to take out his citizenship papers. McFadgen gave his occupation as laborer, his age 55 years, said he has no relatives here, and the immigrant inspector concluded that he was in danger of becoming a public charge as he seemed to be unwell and not well fixed financially.

McFadgen landed in New York in 1875 and has lived in the United States ever since until a short time ago when he went to Port Arthur to visit friends. He was very much astonished to learn that he could not return into this country and protested vigorously, but the immigrant inspector said he had to do his duty and sent him back.

NORTH BUTTE UNCHANGED

Trading Heavy and Stock Holds Steady—Bisbees Quiet.

Reports from Boston say there is steady liquidation in North Butte and the action of the market would seem to confirm it for today the stock made no gain while other Boston stocks were generally higher and there were 3,205 shares traded in. On the other hand it is steadily bought, for prices hold remarkably. It opened at $55.50, advanced to $54 and then fell off to $53 bid and $53.50 asked at the close.

Bisbee stocks were all about the same as yesterday, there being no changes of any importance. Black Mountain gold mining stock is remarkably strong and was at $5.75 bid all morning and closed there. The stock is said to be very hard to get, very little coming out.

NEW YORK HAS CINCH

On the Third Championship Game With the Athletics.

Nine Runs to Nothing at End of Ninth Inning.

Philadelphia, Oct. 12.—The postponement, yesterday, because of rain, of the third game of the world's championship baseball series, between the New York National League club and the Philadelphia American club, has increased interest in the game. There is much speculation as to what effect the day's rest will have upon the pitchers. It is conceded that the Philadelphia pitchers had much harder work towards the end of the American league season than was the case with the New Yorks. The National league champions won the pennant with little effort, while the tension of the Philadelphias was not relaxed until last Friday. It is recognized that the pitchers hold the key to the situation. Otherwise there is little choice between the clubs, man for man, in fielding, batting and team work. The weather today is cold and partly cloudy.

The batting order follows:

New York: Bresnahan, c; Browne, r f; Donlin, c f; McGann, 1 b; Mertes, l f; Dahlen, ss; Devlin, 3 b; Mathewson, p; Gilbert, 2 b.

Philadelphia—Hartzell, l f; Lord, c f; Davis, 1 b; L. Cross, 3 b; Seybold, r f; Murphy, 2 b; M. Cross, ss; Schreck, c; Coakley, p.

Umpires—Sheridan and O'Day.

When play began there were about 11,000 present.

First inning, New York—Bresnahan hit. Browne fouled. Donlin singled to right, Bresnahan going to third. McGann singled to center scoring Bresnahan, Donlin taking third. Murphy fumbled Mertes' grounder, Donlin scoring. Dahlen walked, filling the bases. Devlin hit to Coakley, who threw McGann out at the plate. Schreck threw to Davis to head off Devlin completing a double play. Two runs.

First inning, Philadelphia—Devlin fumbled Hartzell's grounder and Hartzell stole second; Lord fanned trying to bunt. Davis hit to Mathewson and Hartzell was caught by Dahlen between bases. McGann retired L. Cross. No runs.

Second inning, New York—Gilbert out, L. Cross to Davis. Mathewson out to Davis, unassisted, Bresnahan lined to L. Cross. No runs.

Second inning, Philadelphia—Seybold walked; Murphy forced Seybold at second, Devlin to Gilbert. Murphy out trying steal, Brenahan to Dahlen. M. Cross struck out. No runs.

Third inning, New York—Browne fanned. Devlin out, M. Cross to Davis. McGann safe on Hartzell's muff of a fly. Mertes flied to M. Cross. No runs.

Third inning, Philadelphia—Schreck flied to Donlin. Coakley fanned. Hartzell flied to Mertes. No runs.

Fourth inning, New York—Dahlen flied to Hartzell. Devlin popped to Davis. Gilbert out, Coakley to Davis. No runs.

Fourth inning, Philadelphia — Lord struck out. Davis out, Mathewson to McGann. L. Cross flied to Donlin. No runs.

Fifth inning, New York—Mathewson out, M. Cross to Davis. Bresnahan walked. Browne singled to right, Bresnahan going to third and Browne to second on the throw to catch Bresnahan at third. Donlin was purposely walked, filling bases. Murphy fumbled McGann's easy grounder, Bresnahan scoring. Mertes singled to right, scoring Browne. Dahlen forced Mertes at second, Donlin scoring. Dahlen stole second while Coakley held the ball. Devlin singled, scoring McGann; Dahlen going to third. Devlin stole second, Dahlen scoring on the play. Gilbert ended the inning by flying to Lord. Five runs.

Fifth inning, Philadelphia—Seybold out to Donlin. Murphy out, Devlin to McGann. M. Cross singled, Schreck flied to Donlin. No runs.

Sixth inning, New York—Powers now catching for Philadelphia. Mathewson singled to right. Bresnahan fouled to Powers. Browne flied to Seybold, who doubled up Mathewson on it at first. No runs.

Sixth inning, Philadelphia—Coakley out, Bresnahan to McGann. Hartzell struck out. Lord out, Devlin to McGann. No runs.

Seventh inning, New York—Donlin out, Murphy to Davis. McGann reached first on a scratch hit. McGann out trying to steal second, Powers to M. Cross. Mertes walked and was thrown out trying to steal. No runs.

Seventh inning, Philadelphia—Davis singled to left. L. Cross fouled to Bresnahan and Davis tried to go to second on the play. He was thrown out Bresnahan to Dahlen. Seybold singled to center. Murphy grounded to McGann. No runs.

Eighth inning, New York—Dahlen flied to Lord, Devlin flied to M. Cross. Gilbert struck out. No runs.

Eighth inning, Philadelphia—M. Cross fanned. Powers out, Devlin to McGann. Coakley hit by pitched ball. Hartzell out, McGann to Mathewson. No runs.

Ninth inning, New York—Mathewson out, Murphy to Davis. Bresnahan flied to Hartzell. Growne singled to right and stole second. Donlin walked and both worked a double steal. McGann doubled to center, scoring Browne and Donlin. McGann caught napping off second, Powers to M. Cross. Two runs.

Ninth inning, second half, Philadelphia—Lord fanned. Davis out, Devlin to McCann. L. Cross singled to left. Seybold struck out. No runs.

Total score: New York, 9-9-1; Philadelphia, 0-4-3.

A YOUNG WOMAN OF PARTS

By Edgar White.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Miss Flossie Carter, our new assistant bookkeeper and accountant, was hardly up to a connoisseur's standard of beauty, but she was pleasant—very pleasant. Hitherto the book work had been done by men. Old Armstrong, who had been superintendent of that department until his hair had nearly grown white at it, came near revolting when he was introduced to the bright-haired young woman whom had come to help him toil. She was a good worker—for a while. Armstrong said she could keep books, and that it was the only time he ever saw a woman who could. She often came into the office about quitting time, and we had conceived little chats together. She was pretty well posted on the theater, and knew all sorts of odd little places about town where one could get a dainty supper and not be bothered by the many eyes. She kindly offered to lead me to a cozy cafe of the sort one evening, and I telephoned out to my wife, Mercedes, that business engagements would prevent my returning home till somewhat later than usual. The waiters seemed to know Flossie, and she addressed them by their first names. After supper we strolled up Broadway, and as Flossie had no particular engagement for the evening we went to the theater.

She was capital company and I thoroughly enjoyed her quaint witticisms. Some overly educated folk might have denominated them slang, but I never objected to young people expressing themselves naturally; we got old soon enough. I offered to see Flossie home, but she said it was quite a way out, and if I would kindly put a call she would arrive right side up at her "roosting place." She was very effusive in thanking me for her pleasant evening.

I never found out exactly when Mercedes took a hand at the cards, but when the time came for her to play I knew it. Mercedes is a remarkable woman. She doesn't get excited and go into fits when a horse runs away with her. She is one of the sort who goes quietly at a thing and sees it through. She ought to have been married to a preacher or a scientist of some sort, instead of a commonplace business man like myself.

One day I dropped into the office and found Flossie and Mercedes engaged in conversation—that is, Flossie was sitting on my desk dangling her feet below, and talking in her usual friendly, good-natured way. Mercedes was sitting quietly in my chair, listening as if interested. She arose when I entered and bowed courteously to me. If an earthquake should occur I don't believe Mercedes would forget her manners. Flossie, who was chewing gum, nodded familiarly to me and went on with her talk. As I escorted Mercedes to the street, at the conclusion of her visit, I asked her what she thought of Miss Carter.

"She's a charming girl," she said. "I've invited her out to a little party we're going to have Thursday evening. Will you be too busy to join us"

I never can fathom those serene brown eyes when they looked me snuare in the face, as they always did. It occurred to me that the safe thing to say was that business, unfortunately, would prevent my coming home that evening.

When I went back into the office I asged Flossie if she had accepted Mercedes' invitation.

"Sure thing," replied the young lady, "you don't suppose I'd pass up a snap like that. Are you in?"

Somehow Flossie's little mannerisms didn't seem quite as captivating that day as usual, which I attributed to my own indisposition. When Thursday came she notified old Armstrong that he would have to worry along without her that afternoon, as she had "an invite to a blow-out at the boss's, and it will keep me hustling to get my tresses kinked in time."

I spent the evening in the office, wondering what was happening out home. I arrived home about 2 a. m. and found Mercedes awaiting me in the drawing room. She was attired in the loveliest coctume I had ever seen and her transparent face and dark brown eyes glowed with pleasure.

"You have had a nice evening, my dear?" I suggested.

"Indeed we have, and I am very sorry you were not with us. Mr. and Mrs. Westmoreland were very much disappointed."

"Westmoreland!" I gasped, "was he here?"

"Certainly."

Westmoreland was one of the merchant princes whose good will was worth thousands of dollars to our firm, and I would have waded through blood and fire to show him a courtesy. My absence was a fatal error.

"Who else?" I asked gloomily.

"Miss Carter."

"She came, did she."

"Certainly, and she assisted me very much in entertaining. She sings quite—er—I mean she is very willing to sing. You don't have to urge her like you do some girls. And she's not a bit embarrassed in company."

I believed that. Going down on the trolley next day I happened to be the seat mate of George Hastley, an intelligent young man, whose name was becoming known to the exchange.

"I was out to your house last night, John," he said.

"Yes?"

"I met a young woman friend of your wife's; she's quite a singer."

I looked at him sideways, but there wasn' the ghost of a smile on his clear-cut features. I knew who he meant. There was a pause, and then his face lit up as if he was going to say something, but he checked himself.

I ran across Westmoreland that miserable day, and he nodded stiffly. Charles Billingsley the traffic manager of a big Southern railroad, sat near me at lunch, and, hitching his chair over to mine, remarked:

"My wife and I had a pleasant time at your house last evening; sorry you weren't there."

I told him I was too, and I meant it. How in the world did it happen that Mercedes knew so well the identical men whose friendship I was most anxious to cultivate?

"There was a light-haired young woman there," the traffic manager went on, "who seemed to be very sociable."

"Yes?" I said encouragingly.

"She was quite pleasant—very pleasant, indeed." Then he looked at the ceiling and smilingly added: "And she sings very readily; has quite a hepertoire. She seems to be a young woman of parts."

There he stopped and all of my subtle questioning was ineffectual. He wouldn't add a word.

I went around to Hastley's office in a desperate mood. He was busy, but when he saw the state of mind I was in he excused himself from his friends and led the way into his private den.

"George," I said, coming right up to the battle line, "I've met some dozen people today who were guests at our home last night, and they all smile as if hiding something. Now, I'm going to have the truth from somebody, if compelled to commit murder to get it. For the sake of old friendship tell me just what occurred."

He saw it was in deadly earnest. For a moment he sat looking meditatively out of the window and tapping his fingers on the desk.

"John," he began, as an amused smile played up his countenance; "there's nothing so serious about it; I never thought it was causing you worry. The guests were introduced to Miss Carter, who had her hair frizzed out like an Albino woman and dressed as a chorus girl. Some young man asked her to play on the piano and sing. For two mortal hours she had the whole neighborhood disturbed by her rag-time melodies. The youngsters thought it fun to ask her to sing another song as soon as she finished one, and she was more than willing. She drank most too much wine at supper, and volunteered a high kicking performance in the front drawing room afterward. Some of the boys said she wore tights for the occasion. She got so sociable that she called Westmoreland 'Ducky' and insisted on teaching Billingsley, the railroad man, how to dance the high kick. Wonder where in the Sam Hill your wife picked her up? They're so different."

Looking back over the matter it gives me pleasure to recall that I did not allow Mercedes to rest under the imputation a second, but shouldered the entire blame for Flossie's breaking into society myself.

Mercedes doesn't have to sympathize with me any more over "excessive work" down town.

Style and Price!

It is not always a question of one's willingness to do things—but more often their ability to do them!

Makers of clothes get out many styles suitable for many sections of the country.

It then depends upon the buyers' ability to discern between the desirable and the undesirable!

This is an illustration of one of our models in long coat suits, in handsome materials and perfect fitting at $35.00.

That takes good judgment, good taste—a knowledge of materials and workmanship, and a knowledge of values!

Experience is a very important factor in deciding all of these. Good taste another. Ask yourself the question, "where can I find these elements combined? What store offers these advantages to me?"

GIDDING'S, since the day it opened its doors, has commanded the attention of the best-dressed and most-discriminating women of Duluth. Why?

Because it has always combined these elements in the things they sell.

Their garments, furs and other wearables are not only fashionable, but are always in good taste!

WHETHER A COAT AT $8.75—
A TAILORED SUIT AT $15.00—
A FUR SCARF AT $5.00—
A TAILORED SKIRT AT $5.00—
A WAIST AT $1.00—

Or one of the many other things sold, the same character and individuality is in evidence!

That's why Gidding's has, in so short a time, become one of the most important stores of the West.

High-class, fashionable things always—but at prices that any woman who cares for quality can afford to pay!

DECLINE SLIGHTLY

Wheat Opens Lower, Advances And Toward Close Recedes.

Flax Buying Strong and Market Has Another Advance.

Duluth Board of Trade, Oct. 12.—The wheat market opened weaker and without any apparent cause, for receipts were not heavy, and cables were firmer. It rallied later, but toward the close again turned weaker, and closing prices were a little lower than yesterday. The weather is good and the cash demand showing better tendencies. Liverpool was unchanged to ¼d higher, London ¼d higher, Berlin ⅝c higher, Budapest 1¼c higher, and Paris ¼@⅜c lower.

The December option fell ⅛c in Duluth, ⅛c in Minneapolis and New York, ¼-⅜c in Chicago, ⅛-¼c in St. Louis, and ⅜c in Kansas City.

Argentine shipments for the week are estimated at 800,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed unchanged to ¼d higher, and December corn in the Chicago market was ⅛c lower. December oats in Chicago closed a shade lower.

Car receipts of wheat were 210 at Duluth, against 127 last year, and at Minneapolis 444 against 575 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 654 against 705 last year. Chicago received 28 against 122 last year. Winnipeg received 348 cars, of which 1 graded No. 1 hard, 208 No. 1 northern, and 88 No. 2 northern. The total last year was 208 cars.

Primary receipts of wheat were 957,000 bus, last year 1,100,000 bus. Shipments 386,000 bus, last year 473,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 126,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 396,000 bus, last year 585,000 bus. Shipments 235,000 bus, last year 311,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 181,000 bus.

Trading in wheat in the Duluth market was very light. The December option opened ¼c lower at 81¾c, and advanced steadily to 81¾c shortly after the noon hour and then weakened and closed at 81⅝c, a decline of ⅛c. The May option opened ⅛c lower at 88¼c, and advanced to 85⅝c, but fell again and closed ⅛c lower at 85¼c.

Cash wheat was somewhat firmer and for a time during the morning was selling at about 2¼c over December for No. 1 northern, though at the close it was at about 2c over.

Flax was fairly active and strong. The offerings are not especially heavy and the buying is strong. Receipts were large, 127 cars at Duluth and 71 at Minneapolis. October opened ¼c higher at 98¾c, fell to 98⅛c and then rallied, closing ½c up at 99c. November opened ⅛c higher at 99¼c, fell to 99c and closed at 99⅛c, a gain of ⅜c. December opened ¾c higher at 99⅛c, fell to 98c and rallied to 99⅛c; it closed at 99¼c, a gain of ⅛c. May was the firmest, although no stronger than any during the early part of the day. It opened ¼c higher at $1.03⅛, fell to $1.02⅜ and then at the close jumped to $1.03⅝, a gain of ⅜c.

Oats declined ¼c.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Clear Weather In Northwest Has Weakening Effect on Wheat.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—Clear weather in the Northwest had a weakening effect today on wheat here. Notwithstanding higher prices at Liverpool, pit traders were quite free sellers, and with comparatively small demand prices eased off somewhat. December opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 86¼c to 86⅜c, and declined to 85⅝c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 682 cars, against 1,035 cars last week, and 827 cars a year ago.

On fair demand from commission houses the market rallied a trifle, December advancing to 86⅝@⅞c. Strength of cash markets was a bullish influence. The market, however, closed rather easy, with December off ¼@⅜ at 86⅛c.

As a result of the excellent weather for the movement of the new crop, sentiment in the corn pit was bearish. Pit traders were the chief sellers. December opened unchanged to ⅛c higher at 45c to 45⅛c, and sold off to 44⅞c. Local receipts were 134 cars, with 40 of contract grade.

The market was steady the remainder of the day, December closing ⅛c lower at 44⅞c.

Weakness of wheat and corn caused an easier tone in the oats. Commission houses were moderate sellers. December opened unchanged to ⅛c up at 28⅞c to 29c, and sold off to 28¾c. Local receipts were 225 cars.

Provisions were steady as a result of a 5 cent advance in the price of live hogs. January pork was up 2½@5c at $12.50. Lard was unchanged at $6.87½. Ribs were up a shade at $6.50@6.52½.

"SAM'L OF POSEN" CURTIS

Deserts Stranded Players and Dodges Officers In Australia.

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 12.—The members of the Great American Novelty company, with which M. B. Curtis of "Sam'l of Posen" memory undertook to separate a fortune from the tight-fisted New Zealanders, are dropping in by successive South Sea liners touching at this port, each one with a new edition of the general hard-luck story, and breathing a sigh of relief at the brightened prospect of at least being able to walk, with home as the objective.

"Australia's no good for us," is the universal comment of the saddened ones. Then the tale of woe gushes forth in a torrent. The last detachment of the stranded actors and actorines arrived by the Miowera, having been picked up by the Canadian liner at Suva, Fiji, to which point they were borne by the Taviuni. Although they were lamentably short of money, they were long on experience. And they all had an intense longing to renew acquaintance with Mr. Curtis. When the Taviuni left Auckland, they say, the dock was literally black with sheriffs and sheriffs' officers, all looking for Curtis, too. The steamer was delayed three hours, while all hands searched in vain. Those arriving here on the Miowera included Princess Chinquilla of the Cheyennes and Maj. Newell, "the cowboy juggler." Reno, the magician, and E. L. Barbour, who is the princess' husband, or prince consort, had just enough money to reach Honolulu, where they were dropped to hustle for passage money to the next stopping point. The Great American Novelty company played their first date at Auckland, and Curtis received $800 as the company shares of the receipts. But it is alleged that he paid no wages and no bills. The hotel men were as desirous of meeting him as were the members of his company. Then the sheriffs developed a longing for his acquaintance. But none of them had found him when the artists and artistes left.

THE GREAT NORTHERN RE-ELECTS OFFICIALS

New York, Oct. 12.—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Great Northern Railroad company was held here today. Out of a total of 1,250,000 shares, 949,000 shares were voted. These directors, whose terms expired, were re-elected for three years: J. J. Hill, Frederick W. Weyerhauser and Louis W. Hill. The board will meet to organize in a few days. No changes are looked for.

IRREGULAR RECOVERY

In Stocks Which Opened Weak and Feverish In Tone.

Net Changes as a Rule Fractional at the Closing.

New York, Oct. 12.—The majority of stocks opened a fraction lower than last night on a moderate volume of dealings, but St. Paul and the Pacifics were conspicuous exceptions. A number of other prominent stocks were also higher. St. Paul opened up ⅝ and the general list showed evidence of support immediately after the opening. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie fell 1¼.

Stocks were sold heavily and the market declined with some precipitancy after the list had risen to a good fraction above yesterday's close. Pressure was of a general character and widely distributed. Great Northern preferred declined 3. Denver & Rio Grande preferred, Chicago Great Western preferred "A," Pittsburg Coal 2 to 2⅝; Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred, Illinois Central, Northern Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Reading, Delaware & Hudson, Canadian Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, Northwestern, Tennessee Coal, Colorado Fuel, Smelting, Sugar and United States Rubber 1 to 1½. Chicago Terminal preferred made an early rise of 2¾ and Locomotive and Steel Foundries also rose 1.

When the selling pressure subsided prices were bid up again, Reading and Copper rising to a fraction above yesterday's close. The general recovery was not complete and trading fell into semi-stagnation. There were gains by Chicago Terminal preferred of 4⅜, the common and Wisconsin Central 1 and Lead preferred 1½. American Smelt sold at a decline of 10 points. Bonds were irregular at noon.

Interest in the market abated considerably after the rally and business fell off to normal proportions. Wisconsin Central preferred yielded 2¾, Wisconsin Central gained about as much and the preferred 1½.

Offerings, while scanty, were in excess of the demand, and prices were shaded slightly. Consolidated Gas improved 1, Colorado & Southern second preferred sagged 1, St. Joseph & Grand Island first preferred 1½, and Reading ran off again to the lowest.

Prices hardened again, St. Paul getting back to the best. Pacific Mail was lifted 1¾ on buying, Brooklyn Transit and Pacific Coast gained 1¼, Canada Southern, Delaware & Hudson, M. & St. L. and United States Rubber preferred 1. Trading came practically to a stop. The close was fairly steady but almost lifeless.

Quotations furnished by Edwards-Wood Co., Room A, Torrey building.

Copper Gossip.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The warning which Mr. Vanderlip gave yesterday seems to have been generally observed and trading today was greatly restricted all through the list. There is no great pressure to sell, but on the other hand buyers are cautious not to extend themselves until money gets easier. The offerings of Greene was very good toward the close, one house taking several thousand shares with New York appearing as a seller. The feeling is still bullish on Allouez and the stock is scarce. North Butte is being steadily liquidated, the selling coming first from one house and then from another.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Oct. 12.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 1 point to a decline of 3 points, or just about as due on cables. The weather map showed frost of 2 points, and there were a number of private wires reporting light to heavy frosts, more or less general in the northeastern or central belts. Temperatures, however, were considered too high to kill the plant except in a few comparatively unimportant localities, and after the opening there was heavy selling, which resulted in a loss of 13@15 points early.

Spot closed quiet, 15 points lower. Middling uplands, 10.10; ditto gulf, 10.05. Sales, 58,225 bales. Futures closed steady. October, 9.54; November, 9.64; December, 9.76; January, 9.86; February, 9.95; March, 10.01; April, 10.05; May, 10.10.

New York Money.

New York, Oct. 12.—Money on call, 5¼@6; closing bid 5¾, offered at 6. Time money firm; sixty days and ninety days, 5@5½; six months, 4¾@5; prime mercantile paper, 5@5¼ per cent. Sterling exchange firm, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.85.60 for demand and at $4.82.20@25 for sixty days; posted rates, $4.82½@4.83 and $4.86@4.88½; commercial bills, $4.81¾@4.81⅞. Bar silver, 69¾c; Mexican dollars, 47¼c. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds irregular.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul.—Barrett & Zimmerman's report: Horse trade slow; receipts lighter than for the past two weeks; few outside buyers in the market for loggers and drafters; slight fall off in the local demand for expressers, drivers and wagon horses; receipts of fair quality; prime offerings keep an even tone with a drop in the medium and common classes. The following prices do not clear the market:

Drafters, extra	$180@200
Drafters, choice	165@180
Drafters, common to good	140@165
Farm mares, extra	140@170
Farm mares, common to choice	100@140
Expressers, extra	160@180
Expressers, common to choice	110@160
Mules	75@150

PLUM DENIED BY THE PRESIDENT

Refuses to Give Sherman Place on Commerce Commission.

Washington, Oct. 12.—Senator Shelby M. Cullom learned from the lips of President Roosevelt that the vacancy on the interstate commerce commission to result from the resignation of Joseph Fifer will be filled from Washington and not Springfield, Ill.

Lawrence Y. Sherman, the president informed the senator, who a week ago openly regarded this commissionship as a humiliating commodity to perpetuate the rule of the present federal crowd of machine politicians in Illinois, will not even be considered in connection with the place. The prospective vacant place, it was stated, had been offered to a man on the Pacific coast, whose name was not divulged.

To make more pronounced the rebuke of the senator's assumption that the position was his to do with as he pleased, and as if to emphasize his opinion of the action of the marshals, collector, postmasters, postmasters and small fry generally who worked upon the lieutenant governor and told him "they" would put him on one of the most important commissions under the government if he would join with them in support of Cullom's re-election. President Roosevelt refused to hold out any hope of considering Sherman even in the event of another vacancy.

Whether the president's decision to appoint a man from another state to succeed Fifer be due entirely to the tactics employed by the Cullom-Hopkins-Lorimer-Jamieson combination in Illinois or not, politicians point to the fact that recognition has until now been given to the latter state on the commission from the time of its creation.

Senator Cullom told the president that at the time he became aware of ex-Governor Fifer's intention to retire he thought occurred to him that Mr. Sherman would be a good man for his place. The Illinois colony at the capital now is wondering what Sherman will do or say as a result of the fiasco to which he lent himself.

Senator Cullom was accompanied by Representative Rodenberg of East St. Louis on his call at the White House. They gave the president hearty assurances of co-operation in putting through a bill to correct the abuses of railroads, saying that the sentiment of the people of the West is strongly with him in the position he has taken on the railroad rate question.

PAPER MAKERS DEFY THE COURT

Refuse To Answer Questions and Are Adjudged In Contempt.

St. Paul, Oct. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—C. J. McNair, B. G. Nelson and A. S. Pollard who were recently ordered by Judge Vandeventer to answer certain questions which might be asked of them and to produce the books of their respective paper mills before Special Examiner Taylor of the United States district court, today refused to comply with the order and were adjudged in contempt of court. The matter will be disposed of by Judge Vandeventer this afternoon, and an appeal from the final order of the court will undoubtedly be taken to the supreme court of the United States. In the meantime they are under $1,500 bonds each.

Their testimony was wanted in connection with the suit of the United States against the General Paper company, an action to dissolve a paper mill combination which is alleged to be working in restraint of interstate commerce in paper.

HOTTENTOTS ARE READY TO FIGHT

Capture Camp, Kill Five and Send Rest To Van Trotha.

Capetown, Oct. 12.—Morengo and Morris, chiefs of the rebellious Hottentots of German Southwest Africa, have captured Jerusalem camp, between Warmbad and Scuit drift, after severe fighting, during which Lieut. Surmand and five men were killed and eight men were wounded. The Hottentots sustained no losses, and captured all the stock and stores. Several Germans were made prisoners, but after being disarmed, were allowed to return to Lieut. Von Trotha, commander of the German forces, with a letter from Morengo, saying that the Hottentots were now in a position to take the offensive, and would fight to the finish. The German garrison at Kliplaats, hearing that Morengo was in the vicinity, burned their stores, deserted their post and returned to Descondesdam. The garrison at Nkaas has been strengthened by 900 men and a battery of artillery.

Grain Shippers Buck on Three and Quarter Cents.

Vessel Men Complain of Delay at Buffalo as Reason.

Vesselmen are again trying to stiffen the rate on grain to Buffalo and are asking 3¼c. Shippers are refusing for the time being at least to pay it and are not offering more than 3 cents.

Vesselmen claim there is so much delay experienced at the Buffalo end that they cannot afford to take the grain for less than 3¼ cents. Not a great deal of grain is pressing for shipment, but on the other hand not a great deal of tonnage is offered.

PHELPS USED SUASION ON THE INDEPENDENTS

Wholesaler Tells How He Induced Grocers To Join Retail Association.

Gasser Injunction Case Adjourned Until Saturday For Attorneys' Convenience.

At the opening of court, this morning, for a continuation of the Gasser injunction case against the Retail Grocers' association, the attorneys in the action reached an agreement among themselves to adjourn the case from this evening until Saturday morning. After that it is expected to push the action through to completion as soon as possible. Mr. Fryberger stated that he had to appear before the state supreme court tomorrow and Mr. Crassweller said he had planned to take a ten days' trip away from the city with his family. He agreed to postpone the trip if the case were taken up Saturday and finished as soon afterward as possible. Mr. Arnold said he had about twenty-five more witnesses to testify. Some doubt was expressed after hearing this, whether the case could be completed in another three days.

The main feature of this morning's session was the testimony of Charles W. Phelps, secretary of the Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company. Mr. Phelps indicated by his answers that he has worked zealously for the upbuilding of the membership of the Grocers' association in the way of attempting to induce independent grocers to join. He testified that when argumentative persuasion failed he would refrain from calling on the grocers he was after, but that he never refused to take an order if that grocer met him and gave it, or sent it to the house. Mr. Phelps denied that his house discriminates against members or non-members of the association, but claimed that discrimination is exercised in the way of credits.

James P. Haverson, a News-Tribune reporter who attended several of the meetings of the Grocers' association, was called to testify to a meeting held June 29, in the written account of which James Wilton, a member is reported to have declared that the association was a trust and that the members knew it and that he would get out of it. Mr. Haverson remembered being at the meeting, but his recollection of the proceedings was very indistinct for the reason that it occurred some time ago, his copy was turned in late, the story being written in a hurry to get it in the paper. He said he had attended so many other meetings in the course of his work that the various events were not fixed in mind as he had no special reason for attempting to remember them.

Thomas Tidball, a grocery clerk employed by M. M. Gasser & Company, testified that he was buyer of fruits and vegetables for Mr. Gasser when the latter was expelled from the association. He claimed he attempted to buy goods at that time from Fendell & Swope. One of his orders was not filled and when he asked Mr. Swope the reason the latter said he was sorry, but could not fill it for fear that the other grocers would go back on him if he did. Previous to this instance Fendell & Swoope had not refused to sell him goods.

F. J. Hartnett, another grocer, was called for cross-examination under the statutes. Mr. Fryberger objected to his testimony, for the reason that he has filed a separate answer. Judge Cant sustained the objection and Mr. Hartnett was called as a witness for the defendant. Mr. Hartnett said he had been a member of the association up to a short time after Mr. Gasser went out. He joined the association eight years ago.

"Were you expelled from the association?"

"Yes."

"When."

"Twice. The first time about six years ago, after a dispute over dues."

"Did you try to get goods from wholesalers and jobbers?"

"Yes, sir."

"To whom did you apply?"

"I can't remember just now."

"Did you have trouble obtaining goods?"

"Yes."

"Do you know why?"

"Yes."

"Why was it?"

Objection to question sustained.

"To whom did you apply?"

"Mr. Holcomb, the yeast man, refused to call on me. The commission men almost as a whole."

"Was any reason expressed?"

"Yes."

"By whom?"

"By Knudsen-Ferguson."

"What was it."

"That I did not belong to the association."

"Did Mr. Holcomb refuse to sell you yeast?"

"Yes."

"Were you able to get it?"

"Yes; I bought it from a baker."

"Is Fleishmann yeast necessary to conduct a retail grocery business."

"It is."

"Had Mr. Holcomb sold you yeast before your expulsion?"

"He did."

"When did he cease?"

"Immediately following my expulsion."

"Why were you expelled?"

Objection to question sustained.

"When you were reinstated what was done with reference to the sales?"

"They all sold me just the same as before."

"Have any trouble afterward?"

"No, sir."

"What was the date of subsequent expulsion?"

"Some time in the latter part of June or in July."

"Were you expelled before that?"

"I was fined."

"Could you get any goods then?"

"No."

"Did you pay your fine?"

"Yes."

"Have any further trouble obtaining goods?"

"No."

"About what time were you expelled last?"

"About two weeks later than Mr. Gasser."

"Know why?"

"I wasn't at the meeting."

"Were you able to obtain goods after the last expulsion?"

"Knudsen-Ferguson refused to sell me goods."

"Did Gowan-Peyton-Twohy company refuse?"

"No, sir."

"Any other wholesalers?"

"No, sir."

"Were you attended any meetings of the association?"

"I have."

"Do you know of an understanding between jobbers and retailers that none but members of the association could buy goods?"

Objection to question sustained.

"Was any thing said with reference to whether or not non-members could get goods from the jobbers at any meeting you attended?"

"Yes, about two years ago."

"Who made the statement?"

"Mr. Knudsen."

"What was said."

"He made a speech about the grocers' and produce exchange standing together, something along that line. There was talk of standing by the association. The buying of butter came up. Some of the grocers objected to my buying from Bridgeman & Russell. I said the produce exchange did not handle butter, and they jumped all over me."

On motion of Mr. Fryberger this answer was stricken out.

"Was anything said at any of these meetings about non-members not getting goods?" asked the court.

"The general talk was about parties being fined and cut off from getting goods."

"At what meetings were such statements made?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"I have no particular date."

"Were you present at the meeting of June 29?"

"I have paid no attention to the meetings."

"This was the meeting when the Gasser suit was discussed."

"I was there."

"What did Wilton say?"

"He said the association was a trust and could not deny it, and he said something about withdrawing."

"Did he give any reason for not withdrawing?"

"I am not certain."

"Do you remember whether anything was said about non-members not getting goods from jobbers?"

"No."

Cross-examined by Mr. Fryberger.

"Do you know of any reason why Mr. Knudson refused to sell you in the past six years?"

"No, sir."

"You went through bankruptcy?"

"Yes."

"And the Michigan street men and wholesalers were defeated out of some of their pay?"

"Yes, they had a loss."

"You did not apply to Wright-Clarksen in the past year for goods?"

"Yes."

"Paid cash?"

"No, sir."

"Ask Gowan-Peyton-Twohy or Stone-Ordean-Wells?"

"No, sir."

"You have been buying in Superior?"

"Yes, sir."

"On credit?"

"Yes. What goods I buy one month, I pay for by the 20th of next month."

"Within the last six years have you been refused goods by Stone-Ordean-Wells, when you had the money to buy?"

"No, sir."

Mr. Hartnett said the Thomas Thompson company refused to sell him goods last summer, and that six years ago Twohy-Elmon and Knudsen-Ferguson refused him goods. He believed his credit was good at that time.

"Isn't it a fact when a man is out of the association it injures his credit?" asked Mr. Fryberger.

"I don't know about the credit part."

Mr. Phelps cross-examined Mr. Hartnett as to the commission houses that refused to sell him goods last spring. He said he tried to buy some fruit after he refused to pay his fine, but could not get any, that he was told to "straighten up with the association." He finally admitted that none of the commission men absolutely refused to sell him goods. He admitted that his fine was remitted after he paid it.

Examined again by Mr. Arnold, Mr. Hartnett said that when he refused to pay his fine, Holcomb and others of the association went down on Michigan street and "headed him off" from buying any goods. At the next meeting of the association Mr. Hartnett says by a vote of 7 to 5 it was voted to refund his fine.

Mr. Hartnett testified that he was present at several meetings when the secretary was notified to send notices to the wholesalers, but could not recall any special instance. He remembered being at meetings when members were expelled and motions were passed instructing the secretary to notify the jobbers of the action taken. On cross-examination Mr. Hartnett admitted that it was a customary thing for the secretary to notify the jobbers. He could not tell who was at the meeting, who made the motion or who voted for it. He denied that his feeling is hostile to the association now. He also denied that he ever went to a wholesale house and requested it not to sell to any person. Said he gets his yeast supply from Mr. Gasser.

H. A. Moore, city order clerk for Gowan-Peyton-Twohy company, testified that his house sold Mr. Gasser goods up to about the time he was expelled from the association, that refusal was made after that time. Further testimony by Mr. Moore was excluded on motion of Mr. Fryberger on the ground that he is not an officer or a manager of the company.

Charles A. Phelps, city salesman and secretary of the Wright-Clarkson Mercantile company was called for cross-examination by Mr. Arnold.

"Do you know A. W. Arter?"

"I know him."

"Have any conversation with him about Mr. Gasser?"

"Yes, sir."

"State what it was."

"When Arter came here in the interest of Kirk & Co. he had charge of an advertising crew. He asked me how everything was. I told him some conditions were bad. Some of the grocers were cutting prices, that Mr. Gasser was cutting prices on Santa Claus soap. He asked if prices were being cut on any of his soap. I told him I did not know, but if it was true I would not sell Mr. Gasser as prices were likely to be slashed. After he had been around he told me Mr. Gasser was cutting prices on one of his soaps."

"Did you do any business with Mr. Gasser during the past year?"

"Yes, sir. Mr. Gasser has bought some goods of Wright-Clarkson company."

"What was the manner of his buying goods?"

"He had bought goods on credit. He did the buying personally."

"When Gasser was expelled, what was your policy?"

"The morning Mr. Gasser's ad came out cutting prices we refused to sell him goods any longer on credit."

"How long before this had you been selling him goods on credit?"

"I don't know. He had been buying about every month."

"You stopped when he was expelled?"

"No, sir, when he began advertising cut prices. This was previous to his expulsion."

"Has your company refused to sell goods to any person expelled from the association?"

"If so, it was on account of their credit, not because of their expulsion."

"Do you recollect any time in the last five or six years when any member was expelled and Stone-Ordean-Wells continued to sell them goods?"

"I don't recollect."

"Do you remember your company notifying Stone-Ordean-Wells that any member of the association had been expelled?

"No, sir."

"Did your company receive notice of M. M. Gasser's expulsion from the association?"

"I presume I knew of it at the time."

"Why are you notified?"

"Because it is to our interest to know who are members and who are not. We believe it is beneficial to our interests to have them members of the association?"

"That is the policy of your house?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you ever request a list of new members and those expelled?"

"We always wanted such a list."

"Did you ever refuse to sell any person not a member of the association?"

"No, sir. We always requested grocers coming to us to join the association, explaining to them the advantages."

"Name some."

"D. O'Leary. I cannot call to mind any others."

"Do you have any different policy in sale of goods to members and non-members of the association?"

"I can't say that the company does."

"Do you have any rules with reference to extension of credit to retail grocers?"

"Yes, sir."

"Does it make any difference whether the buyer is a member or not of the association?"

"It depends on his credit."

"Do you mean to say that in years past and at present it makes no difference in the sale of goods whether a person is a member of the association or not?" asked the court.

"Yes, sir. So far as I was personally concerned I have resorted to all reasonable methods to induce a buyer to join the association."

"Do you mean your efforts have gone farther than argument?"

"After setting forth the advantages, if he did not see fit to join, it is possible I refrained from calling on him. I would not refuse his order if he gave one."

"What are these advantages?"

"If the grocers get close together and get acquainted with each other, I have tried to explain that by laying aside selfishness and prejudice it would be beneficial to them. The grocers get together, talk over their customers, credits, and have more confidence in each other."

"But you have declined to call on men because they disagreed with you on the proposition of the association."

"I don't know where I have stopped calling on them. I might have missed a trip, maybe two trips."

"If there are any real benefits from the association, as no doubt there are, cannot a man be enlightened on the benefits to join without forcing him in?"

Mr. Phelps said he knew of no instance where a man could not get goods because not a member of the association.

"Then you mean to say, given a condition where a man's credit is not considered, he would receive as much attention from these houses whether he belonged to the association or not?"

"I would make it a point to call on a man expelled and argue with him on the benefits and try to get him to go back."

"Mr. Arnold asked if he knew where any member was expelled for interference with the credit system of the association, and Mr. Phelps said he did not.

"Do you know the reason why most of the members have been expelled on account of cutting the list prices of the association?" asked Mr. Arnold.

Mr. Fryberger objected, claiming that it is conceded in all but one case.

"There was a method in the efforts of the wholesalers in trying to get a man into the association?"

"I can't speak for the others."

"Do you recollect Harry Hill?"

"Yes, sir."

"The time he was expelled?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you cease business with him after his expulsion?"

"I don't think we did."

Mr. Arnold called attention to others alleged to have been expelled from the association. Some of these Mr. Phelps did not recollect at all. He remembered D. O'Leary's start in the grocery business and talked with him, but denied that he refused to sell O'Leary goods unless he became a member of the association.

Mr. Phelps admitted talking the Gasser action over with Henry Folz. They talked about Mr. Gasser's cutting prices, advertising, and wondered if it would do him any good. Witness said he might have told Mr. Folz that he would not sell Mr. Gasser any more goods except for cash. He testified that he might have talked the matter over with other grocers.

Adjournment was taken until 2 p. m.

PRACTICAL JOKE

Results in a Mexican Customs Official Becoming Insane.

City of Mexico, Oct. 12.—William Curtis, for the past several years collector of customs at the port of Tampico, has been brought to this city insane, due to receipt of a telegram announcing that he had won $100,000. The telegram was sent to him by a friend in this city as a practical joke.

Some time ago Curtis, through a friend here, purchased a lottery ticket. On the day of the drawing the friend sent him a telegram telling him that he had captured the capital prize. When Curtis read the telegram he fainted, and when he regained consciousness his mind was unbalanced. He left his work, went to the docks and attempted to buy all the steamers then in port. Later he tried to negotiate with the Mexican Central railway officials for the purchase of the terminal at Tampico.

His friends finally took him in charge and brought him to this capital. He is now in a private asylum.
